Joseph Burnett and daughter, Miss Evie, were in Clanton Thursday.

J. H. Ray and wife and Mrs. M. J. Townsend were in town Thursday.

H. J. Dobbs was in Clanton Thursday.

Tom Miller and W. F. Teel were pleasant visitors Friday.

H. W. Varden and Manley Smith were in Clanton Friday.

J. J. Maddox was a welcome caller Friday.

W. H. Gillespie, J. N. Dennis and H. Z. Barnes were in Clanton Saturday.

Tom Collins, of Calera, spent Monday and Tuesday in Clanton.

The Misses Rosalie and Gertie May Moore returned Monday accompanied by Miss Georgia Thompson, of Prattville.

W. J. Patterson, wife and baby were in Clanton Monday.

M. A. Killgon was in town Friday.

P. J. Massey spent a few days here visiting home folks. Mr. Massey is in the L. and N. office at Andalusia.

E. B. Popwell and W. J. Williams were in Clanton Monday.

J. H. Middleton, of Birmingham, was here the forepart of this week visiting his parents.

Attorney A. C. Smith is entertaining his brother-in-law, Mr. Calloway, of Wetumpka, also his son.

R. G. Hall was in town Tuesday.

G. W. Williams, of Tyus, was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

J. J. Maddox and son, J. Dewey Maddox, were in town Wednesday.

A. H. Glasscock and J. L. Thomas, of Jemison, attended the Rural Carriers' Convention in Birmingham Tuesday.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

A. A. Tenley and Miss Sallie Hill. Andrew Gillard and Miss Bessie Hilger. Lawrence Peters and Miss Sophia Persons. R. A. Peters and Miss Sallie Edwards. G. W. Callahan and Miss Emma Ellison. F. J. Parker and Miss Myrtle Martin. Lewis Dennis and Miss Mattie Pearce. H. B. Robinson and Miss Fannie Belle Parrish. W. J. Bryant and Miss Ethel Stewart.

FIRE.

W. M. Wilson's house in Clanton was destroyed by fire about 1 p. m. July 4th. The house was a total loss, the flames when discovered having such headway that they could not be checked, and all that was saved from the flames was the furnishing in the front rooms. Miss Alpha Smitherman and Mrs. Wash Wilson were sitting on the front piazza at the time and did not know of the fire until warned by shouts from the street. Almost everybody was at the barbecue on the outskirts of town, and by the time the mass of people reached the scene the destruction was complete. Eye witnesses say the fire was tremendously hot, the house being built of heart lumber. The wind, which was from the west, aided by the many workers, kept the barn and stock safe. Mr. Wilson's loss is between $3,000 and $4,000 which is partially covered by insurance in the British-America Assurance Company to the amount of $1,800.

FREE BARBECUE.

There will be a free barbecue at Tyus on the line between Autauga and Chilton counties on July 22, 1905. Come everybody, and let's enjoy the day together.

Committee.
G. W. Williams.
T. J. Cox.
C. E. Boone.
J. H. Sturge.

tf

ROUND-UP FARMERS' INSTITUTE. FARMERS' SUMMER SCHOOL.

At Auburn, Ala., July 25 to August 2, 1905.

Experts will give lectures and practical demonstrations, 10 to 12 hours every day, on the following: Truck Gardening; Fruits; Fungus and Insect Diseases; Fertilizing, Culture, Varieties and Diseases of Cotton; Fertilizing and Cultivating Sugar Cane; Syrup Making and Syrup Selling; Cattle, Horses, Mules, Sheep, Hogs and Poultry; Diseases of Live Stock; Principles of Breeding; Feeds and Feeding; Soils and Soil Improvement; Soil Improving Plants, Terracing; Rotation of Crops; Fertilizers, Commercial and Home-made; Hay Crops and Hay Making; Storage, Dairy and Live-Stock Barns and Houses; Farm Machinery and Farm Labor; Corn Judging, and many other real and interesting farm topics will be discussed.

Reduced rates on railroads. Three good meals and a bed for 50 cents per day. Auburn is high and healthy; good water and pure air.

Special Prizes: (1) $15 for the first best 10 ears of corn; $10 for the second best 10 ears of corn; $5 for the third best 10 ears of corn.

(2) $10 for the person who makes the best average in scoring live stock; $5 for second best; $3 for third best.

C. A. CARY,
tf. Director of Farmers' Institute.

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

NOTICE!

There is $11,000.00 in the stock of Chilton Warehouse and Manufacturing Company in the treasury of the company, which the board of directors has authorized me to sell to the farmers of Chilton County, if they wish to invest with us. Other parties are desirous of taking this stock, but the farmers have the first choice. Please call on me at an early date for full particulars, etc.

L. H. Reynolds,
tf Secy-Treas.

ATTENTION, FARMERS!

On Saturday, July 8, a meeting will be held at Thorsby to sign articles of incorporation and to perfect the organization of a Warehouse, Cotton Gin and Fertilizer Company, with headquarters at Thorsby. It is to be a company of the farmers and controned by the farmers, but others than farmers may subscribe for shares and hold stock.

The object of the company is to promote the interests of the farmers in storing and selling cotton seed and cotton, and to reduce the price of fertilizer to the farmers, and especially to the stockholders.

The capital stock will be $25,000, divided into 1,000 shares of $25 each. On each share subscribed for the shareholder will be required to pay $5 at the time of signing the articles of incorporation and probably $5 later when required by the board of directors. It is thought that not over $10 or possibly $15 per share need be paid in, unless the business should be extended in the future to other objects than those enumerated above.

Come to Thorsby and subscribe for at least one share of stock, and get your neighbor to do likewise. Be sure to be at the meeting. Ten o'clock Saturday, June 8.

J. BICE,
G. H. GERALD,
P. K. VILLADSEN, tf Committee.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Commissioner's Court,
June Term, 1905.

By order of the court of County Commissioners, notice is hereby given that the book of assessment of taxes for Chilton county for the year 1905 has been prepared and is now on file in this office ready for inspection, and that the Court of County Commissioners will be in session on Monday, the 10th day of July, 1905, at the court house in Clanton for the purpose of examining said book and the Tax Assessors returns, and correcting any errors that may be found therein.

This June 14, 1905.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

6-15-05 tf

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

NOTICE!

The black Jack "Jim" known as the Davis Jack will stand this season, commencing March 27th and 28th at John Jones' sawmill, beat 10, and every two weeks at the same place during the season. Remainder of time at my place.

J. M. WILLIS,
Clanton, R. F. D. No 1.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

Notice, No. 26601.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., May 19, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on July 7, 1905, viz.: William L. Burnett, Homestead entry, No. 33807, for the N 1-2 of Ne 1-4, N 1-2 of Nw 1-4, Section 6, Tp. 23n R 15 e.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Moses Brewer, Richard M. Porter, James L. Burnett, Charles H. Lowery, all of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
Register.

5-25-04 6t

NOTICE!

THE NORTHCUT JACK, one of the best in the country, is at my place 2 1-2 miles west of Thorsby.

tf. T. M. Driver.

DANISH CADETS DROWNED

Training Schooner, the Georg-Stage, Sunk by British Steamship.

HIT WHILE NEAR COPENHAGEN

Seventy-nine Boys Aboard — Fifty-seven Rescued and Twenty-two Drowned — Steamship Said to Have Changed Its Course Without Warning — Schooner Formerly Was Merchant Vessel.

Copenhagen, Denmark. — A serious disaster occurred at night near here, when the Danish cadet trading schooner, Georg-Stage, was sunk by the British steamship Ancona. The Georg-Stage sank in one and one-half minutes. Twenty-two cadets were drowned and fifty-seven rescued.

The boys were all in their bunks at the time of the disaster. The night was overcast, but it was not so dark that objects could not be seen at some distance.

The Ancona was considerably damaged along her water line.

First Officer Myhre was in command of the Georg-Stage and saw the Ancona approaching. He is certain the steamer changed her course without warning, or there would have been no collision.

The Ancona's bow struck the training ship's side and crashed into it seven feet, bringing down the Georg-Stage's masts and rigging.

The wreckage so choked the gangways that many of the cadets could not gain the decks and, trapped below, were drowned.

Those boys who were not imprisoned by wreckage jumped on board the Ancona and helped to get out her lifeboats.

Myhre jumped overboard and helped to save many cadets.

The Copenhagen port authorities have placed an embargo on the Ancona, which will remain here until the collision is inquired into.

The Georg-Stage was a schooner, 206 tons register, 103 feet long. She was a training vessel for the mercantile marine and was owned by a private firm of Copenhagen.

STOP BETTING AT DELMAR.

Sheriff and Deputies Occupy Ring and Make One Arrest.

St. Louis, Mo.—Owing to the action of county officers in arresting Charles Cella, a member of the Central Turf Association, during the first race at Delmar, there were no official odds on the last five races, and the only bets made were between individuals.

For the first time since the anti-betting law went into effect on June 17 the betting ring was deserted by the members of the Central Turf Association, who are behind the plan to make bets on the races in a manner not contrary to the law.

Sheriff Harpel, of St. Louis County, accompanied by several deputies, took possession of the betting ring just before the horses went to the post in the first race, but only the one arrest was made. Cella was later held under $1000 bond to answer a charge of violating the anti-betting law.

Governor Folk, in an interview earlier in the day, had declared that either the Missouri National Guard or the St. Louis Police Department would be directed within the next twenty-four hours to raid the bookmakers at Delmar race track.

The Governor has discovered that Section 14 of the St. Louis charter gives the city of St. Louis the same powers in the county as in the city.

TRAIN SMASHES LOADED CAR.

Two Dead, Ten Injured in Baltimore Grade-Crossing Accident.

Baltimore, Md.—Two persons were killed almost instantly and others were injured as the result of a collision between a loaded trolley car and a freight train at a grade crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 11 o'clock at night. Laura Scarborough, a negro woman, thirty-five years old, was killed instantly, and Mrs. Sarah Cromwell died in a hospital of her injuries. The others injured were Mrs. Mary Kirchenberg, Edward Ulrich, Francis S. Skirvan, Oliver Price, Mary Kasel, Thomas E. Mason, George Drescher, Charles Brebeck, Sarah Jones, Oliver Cromwell and George S. Mann.

The accident is the third since the Riverview resort was opened for the season. The trolley track is crossed several times by tracks of both the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads. The trolley car had thirty-eight passengers aboard. It had nearly crossed the track when the last box car on the freight train backed into it and overturned the trolley car. Lights went out, and a panic ensued. Most of the victims were pinned under the trolley car, and it was some time before they were extricated.

CANAL CHIEF WALLACE OUT.

Engineer Resigns Under Pressure From the President.

New York City.—J. F. Wallace, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, at a salary of $30,000 a year, has resigned his position under pressure from President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft.

Cruiser Charleston Ready.

The protected cruiser Charleston, which was to have its speed trials, reached Provincetown, Mass.

Arrested as Kidnapers.

Fifteen employes of an American circus were arrested at Grand Mere, Quebec, charged with kidnaping a young French girl at Roberval, and shooting another girl at Chambord.

Congressman Buckman Wins.

Congressman Buckman, of Minnesota, won at St. Paul a victory against his State, which had sued for nearly $70,000, alleged to be due for illegal timber cutting.

Academic
Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President

Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer

We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WITH

The Union

FOR

$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.

If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address

The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

1011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

E. M. PINCKARD & CO.

General Merchandise and Cotton Buyers

CLANTON, - - - - - - ALABAMA.

The Stage And the Second Self

By Gustav Kobbe.

ON THE stage the actor is two persons. He is the character he interprets, but, at the same time, he himself controls that character and tells it what to do. This ability to merge oneself in a character, yet keep partly aloof from it, so as to be able to guide it, this contradictory dual personality, psychologically so interesting, accounts for the swiftness with which an actor can step from the society of friends in his dressing-room to the stage and be in character. . . . .

To me the swift merging of the actor's self into a role always has formed one of the most interesting things to be observed about the profession. I have seen John Drew, while conversing with a friend in French in his dressing-room, on being summoned by the call-boy, plunge from a conversation in a foreign tongue into an English speaking role; Nat Goodwin jump from a funny story in the wings into the most sentimental scene of "When We Were Twenty-One;" Henrietta Crosman run from a discussion of her next season's route to make her famous leap through the window in "Mistress Nell;" Caive, behind the scenes, mischievously knock off Plancon's Toreador hat, stand back and laugh, and then go on or her Carmen death scenes. . . . Actors rarely are ill, and often die in harness at a good old age. These characteristics of the profession are considered due to the fact that every night the actor gets out of himself, away from his own humors—leads another life. Then, too, many professionals who have given the matter thought believe that the audience, like a composite personality, projects itself over the footlights, inspiring and rejuvenating the actor with magnetic potency. This is but one more of those mysterious influences which cross the footlights in one direction or another and which contribute to the make-up of that wheel within a wheel, that character within a character, that person within a person, the actor's second self. "Wireless?" Actor and audience have been signalling to each other across the footlights for centuries.—The Delineator.

IN ORDER to place eleven young men of Yale in the field against Princeton and Harvard last autumn $26,996.06 was spent, or more than two thousand dollars a head. To fit eight youths to row against Harvard, a test of twenty minutes, cost Yale $16,626.85, or two thousand dollars a head, not counting the coxswain. This is boat-racing at a cost of the best part of a thousand dollars a minute.

The football men were equipped with the greatest possible care. Their shoes alone cost $1189, a bill for foot-gear which would indicate to the rank outsider that a team of centipedes were in training. Uniforms and the armor of the foot ball warrior cost $3,735.52, or nearly a hundred dollars for each of the squad. Hotel bills and meals away from the training table cost the Yale treasury $5,360.42. Carriage hire involved an outlay of $794. The base ball squad required $2,378.13 worth of merchandise and sporting goods, or about one hundred dollars' worth of uniforms and shoes per man.

Twenty years ago Yale football cost $2,792.36, and there were great elevens even in those days. Today this would not pay for uniforms and other wearing gear.—Outing.

IN STRICT CONFIDENCE.

Women Obtain Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Help.

She Has Guided Thousands to Health.—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Fred Seydel.

It is a great satisfaction for a woman to feel that she can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only, a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and above all, a woman who has had more experience in treating female ills than any living person.

Over one hundred thousand cases of female diseases come before Mrs. Pinkham every year, some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day.

Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence of women, and every testimonial letter published is done so with the written consent or request of the writer, in order that other sick women may be benefited as they have been.

Mrs. Fred Seydel, of 412 North 54th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Over a year ago I wrote you a letter asking advice, as I had female ills and could not carry a child to maturity. I received your kind letter of instructions and followed your advice. I am not only a well woman in consequence, but have a beautiful baby girl. I wish every suffering woman in the land would write you for advice, as you have done so much for me."

Just as surely as Mrs. Seydel was cured, will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman suffering from any form of female ills.

No other medicine in all the world has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Therefore no prudent woman will accept any substitute which a druggist may offer.

If you are sick, write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and always helpful.

BOYS AND GIRLS

wanted in every locality in the United States to take subscriptions for liberal cash commissions to

ADAMS'S MAGAZINE

(A whole year for 10 cents)

The best and cheapest monthly home magazine in the world, containing 32 pages, 11x14 inches, of selected reading matter of unusual interest in every home. Liberal commission to solicitors. Send postal card for full particulars and subscription blank book AT ONCE.

ADAMS'S MAGAZINE, 131 W. 24th St., N. Y. City

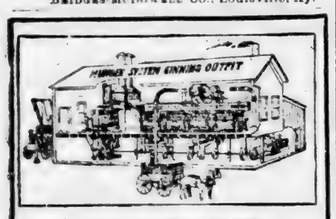
10 CENTS BUYS A PACKAGE

ECONOMY BLUE

Makes Full Quart Best Wash Bluing

15 years on the market. Ask dealer, or we will send by mail package upon receipt of 10c. in stamps and your dealer's name.

BRIDGES-McDOWELL CO., Louisville, Ky.



You want only the best

Cotton Gin Machinery

Ask any experienced Ginner about

Pratt, Eagle, Smith Winship, Munger

We would like to show you what thousands of its long customers say. Write for catalog and testimonial booklet.

Continental Gin Co

Charlotte, N. C., Atlanta, Ga. Birmingham, Ala. Memphis, Tenn., Dallas, Tex.

DYSPEPSIA

TRADE MARK SICK HEADACHE,

CONSTIPATION

PROMPTLY AND PERMANENTLY CURED WITH

Crab Orchard Water.

A Century's Experience. With Successful Results, is the Best Testimonial.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

Crab Orchard Water Co., Louisville, Ky.

Dropsy CURED Gives Quick Relief.

Removes all swelling in 5 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 10 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

Why?

Why, when buying a book, are we influenced by the author's name? Why by an artist's if we purchase a picture?

Why do wise buyers insist upon having a reliable name on nearly everything they purchase?

It is because the name attached is the safeguard of the buyer — a protection against the palming off of inferior articles.

This "name guarantee" we all look for in the most important things we buy, and what can be more important than our food?

Everybody knows that all intelligent housekeepers are very particular about the buying of things to eat and drink, and nobody realizes it more than the up-to-date grocer, who caters to the wants of his customers.

For instance, every real grocer knows the reason for the universal popularity of LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees. He knows that its uniform purity and high quality have made it welcome in millions of American homes for over a quarter of a century.

Realizing this he cannot but hand it out cheerfully when asked for it. He knows that the people accept the package as a guarantee of the contents.

Yet there may be a few grocers left who do not recognize that the buyer—not the seller—has the right of choice, and they may want to sell their loose coffee (who knows what it is, or where it came from?) instead of LION COFFEE, which the customer asks for, and the merits of which both know.

In such cases the wisest advice is: "Change your dealer."

The United States produced $84,551,300 in gold in 1904.

UNSIGHTLY BALD SPOT

Caused by Sores on Neck—Merciless Itching For Two Years Made Him Wild—Another Cure by Cuticura.

"For two years my neck was covered with sores, the humor spreading to my hair, which fell out, leaving an unsightly bald spot, and the soreness, inflammation and merciless itching made me wild. Friends advised Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after a few applications the torment subsided, to my great joy. The sores soon disappeared, and my hair grew again, as thick and healthy as ever. I shall always recommend Cuticura. (Signed) H. J. Spalding, 104 W. 104th St., N. Y. City."

Latest Wireless Record.

The Cunard steamship Campania, on arrival at Queenstown on May 13th, reported that on May 8th a wireless long distance record was established. Messages were received direct from the Marconi station at Poldhu, Cornwall, a distance of 2,200 miles. It is stated that the previous record was about 2,000 miles.

A New Turkish Order.

Turkey's government has issued an order to its custom authorities not to admit any foreign goods which bear the mark or design of a star. It is supposed that the reason for this is that the representation of a star is a part of the Turkish coat of arms.

Iceland possesses a large number of trees, although it is only credited with having one. The climate and soil are by no means unfavorable to tree growing, and evidence exists to show that Iceland was once covered with trees.

Cures Eczema, Itching Humors.

Especially for old, chronic cases take Botanic Blood Balm. It gives a healthy blood supply to the affected parts, heals all the sores, eruption scales, scales; stops the awful itching and burning of eczema, swellings, suppurating, watery sores, etc. Druggists $1 per large bottle, 3 bottles $2.50, 6 bottles $5.00, express prepaid. Sample free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

There are 107,978 Indians in Canada according to the census of 1904.

An Ex-Chief Justice's Opinion.

Judge O. E. Lochrane, of Georgia, in a letter to Dr. Biggers, states that he never suffers himself to be without a bottle of Dr. Biggers' Huckleberry Cordial for the relief of all bowel troubles, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, etc.

Sold by all Druggists, 25 and 50c. bottle.

Avery & Company

SUCCESSORS TO AVERY & McMILLAN,

51-53 South Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga.

—ALL KINDS OF—

MACHINERY

Reliable Frick Engines. Boilers, all Sizes. Wheat Separators.

BEST IMPROVED SAW MILL ON EARTH. Large Engines and Boilers supplied promptly. Shingle Mills, Corn Mills, Circular Saws, Saw Teeth, Patent Dogs, Steam Governors, Full line Engines & Mill Supplies. Send for free Catalogue.

BUSINESS EDUCATION

134 SCHOLARSHIPS FREE

Clip this notice and present or send it to

DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

MONTGOMERY, ATLANTA, NASHVILLE, KNOXVILLE OR FT. WORTH and you will receive booklet containing almost 200 mis-spelled words explaining that we give away, ABSOLUTELY FREE, 134 scholarships to those finding most mis-spelled words in the booklet. Most instructive contest ever conducted. Booklet contains hundreds of letters from bankers and business men giving reasons why you should attend one of D. P. B. C. Those who fail to get free scholarship will, as explained in booklet, get 10 cents for each mis-spelled word found. Let us tell you all about our great educational contest and our GREAT SUMMER DISCOUNT.

The first number of a new quarterly journal, the Burial Reformer, has been issued in London. Its special mission is to prevent premature burial.

For taking a match in a Welch coal pit, a collier was sentenced to two months' imprisonment.

SOUTHERN FARM NOTES.

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO THE PLANTER, STOCKMAN AND TRUCK GROWER.

A Pig Hospital.

A correspondent of The Southern Ruralist tell his methods with pigs as follows:

With a large herd of Berkshires it is necessary to have a hospital where you can place those that get hurt or need treatment for scours, whooping cough, constipation and other ailments that pigs are subject to just as are members of the human family. The hospital should have several wards so that each trouble can be treated after its kind, but in each ward there should be a low, flat box kept supplied with charcoal, ashes, salt and a little lime, for more pigs are troubled with indigestion just as people, than with any other trouble and the above prescription is a fine alterative and does more to strengthen and improve the digestive organs than anything I have ever tried. Pigs, like some people, will sometimes gorge their stomachs and thereby thwart digestion and be "off their feed" for weeks, hence it is very important to feed a pig only as much as he will clean up at once, but he should be fed four to six times a day according to the age and digestion. Never, under any circumstances, feed pigs under ten weeks of age sour milk, nor should their dams have it, for it is certain to bring on scours. After they are three months old there is nothing better for them than milk with white shorts. Bran is fine for cows and matured hogs, but not fit for pigs. An old doctor, and a mighty good one, who had retired to his farm, and lived adjacent to me, told me thirty-five years ago that he had found out what gave pigs the blind staggers, set them crazy and often killed them, and that it was nothing more than jimpson seed that they would eat in the fall of the year after they had finished up the wheat stubble and succulent bites of clover, then why let the miserable weed go to seed? Pull it up by the roots when the ground is moist, do this every season for two years and you are done with it.

Pigs are sometimes farrowed with but one opening in rear and that intended for the discharge of water but strange to say that one opening acts for the discharge of both liquid and solid, and I have had such pigs to be the finest and most thrifty of the litter, but of course they are only fit for the pork barrel and should never be allowed to mate with the boar.

The first case I ever had of this I shipped the pig, which was a very handsome one, to a doctor, and his close observance of such things soon brought to light the trouble which he reported very promptly and to which I responded at once with another pig, and told him to eat the first one at my expense. I have a case of this kind now, from an imported sow, by an imported boar, in the fattening pen, and he, she or it is the most voracious "growingist" thing you ever saw. It is a common thing for one testicle only to be visible. I had a case lately where neither was visible and a decided depression occurred where there should have been just the reverse, but when he was butchered they both were formed and fully two inches from their natural position. Sows are nearly always bred entirely too young, this early breeding diminishes the size of the dam and also of her progeny. A sow should never be bred under ten months of age, and it is much better to wait until she is twelve months old and well matured, then, and only then, can you expect to get best results.

This talk about practically starving a sow for one, two or three weeks just after farrowing is all wrong; there is none of them that would not be improved, and their pigs too, by moderate feeding of shorts and bran mixed with greasy water, commencing eighteen or twenty-four hours after farrowing. A sow would become so nervous and ravenous as to trample to death and possibly eat her young if starved as some recommended. Of course you should commence with one-fourth feed first three days and then gradually increase it for ten days, after which time give her all she will clean up four times a day. After just two weeks, in cold weather, you can let her have a moderate ration of corn night and morning. About the third week her pigs will begin to nibble at this. I write this from thirty-five years' experience. I have told you before in this paper how to get the pigs to eat mush at about four weeks of age.

Cholera or Swine Fever.

During these times when science is heading a fast-moving procession of advancement, and unexplored subjects being made paramount issues among the leading scientists of our country, it is well that the Southern breeders get into the "band wagon" and accept those discoveries that will tend to keep down diseases and thus save their herds. Along the medical line, especially, has the advancement been very noticable. Of course these discoveries are largely for the benefit of the human and not the hog. This is a rule which works only one way—some people are like the hog, but the hog is not like some people. Some few practical discoveries I have made in regard to diseases of the hog which may be of value to the Southern breeders, are as follows:

Several years ago when a hog was taken sick the people rapidly came to the conclusion that the disease was cholera, now it is swine fever or pneumonia. If you will study the disease you will find they are the same. Swine fever or pneumonia is just a forerunner of the dreaded cholera. Hogs are affected in a dozen different ways. The disease very seldom comes in the summer, the first symptoms appearing generally with the first cold spell in the fall, and is caused by the hog first taking cold. They sometimes run at the nose, while others will refuse to eat. Others will swell up in the joints and get down so they can't walk, some will have such high fevers that the hair will come out and they will simply dry up on foot; some will have blind staggers and die with fits and some will lose their ears. This can all be avoided if you will begin right and at the proper time. Your herd should be given your attention at all times. You should have a nice, warm place for them to go at will and sleep, but be sure you do not let too many bed together.

During my experiences along this line a large number of farmers have called on me for assistance when the disease broke out in their herds. In each instance, I have found the fault to be with the owners, in not having suitable accommodations for their stock. Most of them have their hogs in a large lot with only the "pale blue" sky for shelter. Keep them clear of vermin, give them good food and the profits you will reap will be surprising.

Several years ago our country abounded with thick forest trees which furnished shelter for our stock, but the woodman's axe has robbed the lazy breeder of this commodity and he must seek shelter or suffer the consequences. A hog that has a good, warm shelter, with nice clean bedding of straw, will live and thrive off just half the food that would be required to keep the hog which runs at large and goes to sleep when the sun goes down, and is forced to back up against a cold, Northern blizard. I have often been asked the question how I made my hogs grow so fast. The secret of my success is simply the above remedy. No man can have a nice herd and see them about once a week. I have had hogs to die just adjoining my premises and would never have a sick one.

I do not deny that swine fever or pneumonia has not appeared in my herd; it has, but by close attention I have been very successful, losing only a few small pigs. I doctor my small pigs through their dams. A sow that is in pig at the time she has swine fever or pneumonia will stand the disease better than the other hogs, but their pigs will nearly always come dead, with no hair; she will carry them, however, to the full time.

Every breeder has a remedy, which he rightfully thinks is the best. The remedy, however, is not the most important. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Study this and make it practical; you will profit. More hogs die to-day from lack of attention than any other cause. I trust what I have written will be of practical benefit to some breeders.—Thomas B. Carney, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Mock Orange on Home Grounds.

What sort of a home is it that does not have a mock orange or syringa bush? Lilacs and mock orange are the two flowers that do most to fill the whole world with fragrance and make June the most intoxicating month in the year. If you want the most fragrant variety of mock orange get the old-fashioned kind. A much showier, but less fragrant kind, has flowers an inch and three-quarters across, and of a purer white. It is also a more graceful bush; the old kind is rather stiff.

Pruning Grapevines.

The pruning of grapevines consists in cutting back the right amount of the current season's growth—the amount which experience says a grape of a certain habit of growth and certain amount of individual vigor should respond to properly. The pruning of grapes is a simple matter when their habit of growth is understood. We prune either to check or stimulate vigor, to encourage fruit production, or, on the other hand, to discourage it.—The Garden Magazine.

A portion of the wall which was built around old London by the Romans is now being destroyed by builders.

Charged With Forgery.

Birmingham, Ala.—James Wright, white, is under arrest charged with forgery. Friends of his presented a bond to the sheriff's office and suspicion was aroused that the signatures on the bond were not exactly correct. It was ascertained, according to information given out, that the names on the bond were not signed by the parties supposed to have signed them, and an additional charge of forgery has been preferred against Wright.

New Minister Arrives.

Pekin.—M. Pokotiloff, who succeeds the late Paul Lesser as Russian minister to Pekin, has arrived here. M. Pokotiloff was formerly a director of the Russian-Chinese bank, and has had many years' experience in China.

Senator Bacon Meets Sultan.

Constantinople.—The sultan of Turkey in private audience received Mr. Leishman, the American minister, who presented Senator Bacon, of Georgia.

Household Matters

Stuffed Flank Steak.

Have your dealer reserve for you a nice thick flank steak without scoring it, but instead have him make a pocket in it by splitting it through the centre to within an inch of the edge on the three sides. Fill the pocket with a meat stuffing or a bread stuffing made as for poultry, and sew the opening together. Sprinkle the meat with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Put some drippings into a baking pan, let it get hot, put in the meat and bake in a hot oven. After about ten minutes add a cupful of hot water, cover and cook in a slower oven from an hour to an hour and a half, basting frequently. Serve with the thickened gravy in the pan.—What to Eat.

Orange Cake.

An orange layer cake can be prepared as follows: Beat to a cream the yolks of four eggs and a cupful of sugar. Add three-fourths of a cupful of sour cream and then one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour which has been sifted, with half a teaspoonful of soda, several times. Grate in enough of the yellow part of an orange to give the cake a strong orange flavor. Bake in rather thick layers. When cool spread upon one sheet, or upon two, if there were three layers, a thick coating of orange pulp. Cover the top layer with an icing made with powdered sugar moistened with orange juice and grated rind of an orange. A little lemon may also be added. Decorate with a few bits of candied orange peel. Place the cake aside until the icing has become firm and then serve. It will keep several days.

Quince Cake.

A good cake that can be used as a dessert is the following quince cake; it is very rich: First make a simple sponge cake. Spread the cake in two even layers, each about half an inch thick. Let it bake slowly, so as to keep it tender and moist, until it is done. When cold spread each of the layers with quince jelly and cover one with whipped cream that has been stiffened with a little melted gelatine. The whipped cream may be flavored with quince by adding a tablespoonful of hot melted quince jelly to the soaked gelatine. When this cream is spread on one cake lay it aside and spread on the other a meringue, and bake it slowly for about fifteen or twenty minutes, or until it is a light brown. The edges of the cake should be covered with the meringue so that it will not become dry in the oven. After the meringue has become cold pile the layer of the cake which is covered by it on top of the other layer containing the jelly and cream. This is an ornamental cake, and nice for dessert, served cold on a crystal platter.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

Useful Hints.

Brush pie crust with cream to insure rich brown color.

A new method of blanching almonds is to soak them over night in cold water.

Watch the nap in sweeping a carpet, in order to bring the design out to advantage.

The milk of a beef loaf or farci can be replaced by tomato sauce or catsup for a change.

Whip cream in a pitcher. It whips more quickly than in an open bowl with less spatter.

Some babies are partial to warm water and others to cold; if one is refused try the other.

A few drops of kerosene added to the starch makes ironing easier and lends a gloss to the linen.

Roast a bird with the breast down the greater part of the time; the flesh will then remain more juicy.

Outer leaves of lettuce, which are not attractive for salad, can be boiled or steamed and served as greens.

Mayonnaise dressing is less tiresome to make when beaten with a rotary egg beater instead of stirred with a spoon.

Hot water and soap generally remove grease spots. If fixed by long standing, use ether, chloroform or naphtha.

Flies hate the odor of kerosene, it is said, and if the outside of a screen door be rubbed with the oil, the opening of the door will not be followed by an inrush of the winged pests.

Baking powder tins should not be recklessly thrown away. They are useful in a number of ways, as for example, moulding small jellies, creams or rice desserts.

The appearance of meat-pie crusts, and in fact almost any pastry is much improved by brushing with a mixture made by beating the yolk of an egg in two tablespoonfuls of milk.

Perhaps it is not generally known that leftovers from a gelatine dish can be remoulded. The jelly should be warmed just enough to melt, poured into a mould, and placed on ice.

Gen. Buller's Horse.

General Buller has had brought from South Africa the horse that carried him through the Boer war, and it will spend the rest of its days at the general's home, in Devonshire, England. It was shot in the neck in one of the battles.

Marketing Potato Crops.

In line with the class[illegible] oyster shippers, cited by Pr[illegible] Hadley of Yale Univ[illegible] on Railroad Transp[illegible] of the Aroostook [illegible] brought by President [illegible] Boston & Maine Railroad [illegible] Senate Committee on [illegible] merce. Nothing could [illegible] a railroad works [illegible] the localities which it [illegible]

A main dependence [illegible] the Aroostook [illegible] crop, aggregating [illegible] ten million bushels [illegible] ket largely in Boston, [illegible] thickly settled [illegible] land. The competi[illegible] transportation from M[illegible] along the New England [illegible] railroad freight rates [illegible] tos always at a very [illegible]

Potatoes are also a [illegible] put of the truck farms [illegible] their normal market [illegible] and through Detroit a[illegible] other communities of [illegible]

Not many years [illegible] rains brought a few [illegible] potatoes from the M[illegible] normal rates and [illegible] have been a glut of the [illegible] kets and the potatoes [illegible] fed on the farms. The [illegible] growers the railroads [illegible] made unprecedented [illegible] potatoes to every [illegible] even carrying them [illegible] to a place so remote as [illegible] Aroostook growers [illegible] Price on their potato[illegible] could not dispose of the[illegible] Boston & Maine Ra[illegible] already low rate, was [illegible] means of these low ra[illegible] sible low prices, the [illegible] both Michigan and M[illegible] marketed. Everybody [illegible] and that year every[illegible] potatoes he wanted.

While the Michigan [illegible] rates that would have [illegible] the railroads, had to [illegible] the movement of all [illegible] times, to all places, the [illegible] patrons to find markets [illegible] Boston & Maine Railroad [illegible] crease in its revenue [illegible] but it enabled the A[illegible] to market their crop and [illegible] obtain money which [illegible] the varied supplies which [illegible] roads brought to them. [illegible] of rates were subj[illegible] adjustment such [illegible] action could never [illegible] because it is well [illegible] rate be once [illegible] company it cannot [illegible] the red tape of Gover[illegible] ure. If the Michigan [illegible] Boston & Maine Ra[illegible] subjected to Governm[illegible] they would have [illegible] up their rates as do [illegible] France and Englan[illegible] der Governmental [illegible] the potatoes rot.—E[illegible]

What Horses Will Eat.

Many horsemen have found that the addition of a pound of fine quality moist brown sugar to a horse's chaff and corn doubles its working producing power. When no other food is obtainable a few pounds of flour mixed with enough water to make them barely drinkable, have great staying powers, but few horses would taste it however hungry, unless they had at some previous time been made accustomed to it. Horses, when there was little grass, have habitually fed on the mining camps of fresh, salted meats. It is even more certain that a horse would touch flesh unless he had at time accustomed to it. During the early times of the Western gold diggings, when gold was being found in large quantities and horse feed was high, the grass, was not procurable, and many of the rich claim holders fed their horses used in their work on the finest bread sooner than suffer delay, even unleavened, is better for horses than raw flour and water, which takes time to prepare and is not always available on an emergency when a horse is much more likely to be [illegible] pore it is not uncommon for [illegible] be given a loaf of bread soaked in a bottle of beer, which they eat greedily. In Iceland horses are said to frequently feed on fish, and often eat meat, fruit, bread and the like, and even [illegible] able quantity with [illegible]

Where Wolves Are Numerous.

According to [illegible] hers, wolves are [illegible] this year than [illegible] claimed that the [illegible] more numerous at [illegible] and have even [illegible] alone in the Ne[illegible]

The only explan[illegible] attitude of the ani[illegible] deer than usual have [illegible] weeks this season [illegible] sire only the heads of [illegible] and leave the carcass [illegible] This is accounted for [illegible] humane attitude of [illegible] because throughout [illegible] in the woods during [illegible] less opportunity was [illegible] the big game.—St. P[illegible]

A ship is probably [illegible] the rigging costs so much [illegible] ways keeps a man [illegible]

The Yield of Coal.

The United St[illegible] 000,000 metric tons [illegible] (1903), worth [illegible] 00) and costing [illegible] billion dollars.

No other country [illegible] much. Great Britain [illegible] 000,000 tons, worth [illegible] her total production is nearly [illegible] dred million tons below our [illegible]

Germany produced in 1904 [illegible] 000 tons of coal, coke and lig[illegible] the strike lowered production [illegible] what.

Marketing Potato Crops.

In line with the classic case of ... shippers ...ected by Prof. ... Holder of Yale University in his ... Investigation is the ... by Professor Tuttle of ... & Maine Railroad before ... Committee on Interstate C... Notice ... letter shows ... of work in the interest ... in which it serves ...

... of the farmers ... is the po... ... eight ... find a ... the adja... of New ... heap w... Maine took ... coast ... these po... ... Connecticut ... Chicago ... region. ... ...

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Clerk Bound Over.

Birmingham, Ala.—S. F. Bissett, the clerk at the general delivery window of the postoffice, who was arrested Tuesday on a charge of taking money from the mails, was Thursday bound over by Commissioner Alex C. Birch to await the action of the grand jury. He made the required bond of $1,500.

Assistant United States Attorney Steele was present at the hearing and argued against Bissett, who was defended by A. L. Brennen. Postoffice Inspector R. E. Barry and W. E. Griffith, a clerk in the postoffice, testified as to the sending of the decoy letter.

Inspector Barry said that Bissett had been suspected of taking money from the mail, and to confirm this suspicion he and Mr. Griffith addressed a letter to "Mrs. Mary Thompson, Birmingham, Ala.," containing three $1 bills. The numbers of the bills were taken and were later identified by the inspector as the ones taken from Bissett. The letter containing the money was postmarked Atlanta, Ga., and was put in the general delivery window early Tuesday afternoon. It was discovered later that the letter was missing, and Bissett was arrested in front of the store of the Rankin-Tuck Paint Company on Second avenue.

Clerk W. E. Griffith corroborated the testimony of Inspector Barry, and added that Bissett approached him after the occurrence and requested that he give him any assistance he could.

Attempted Criminal Assault.

Bessemer, Ala.—A dark yellow negro with a thin mustache, height about five feet six inches, weight 140 pounds wearing black slouch hat, dark coat and pants, a white shirt and canvas shoes attempted a brutal assault upon Myrtle Cox, the 12-year-old daughter of W. Cox, near Woodward Friday morning at 9 o'clock. The little girl was en route from Brighton to her home when the negro approached her, hitting her over the head with a pistol and choking her almost into insensibility. The mother of the girl responded to her cries and frightened the negro away. The attempted assault took place near the point where the Woodward railway crosses the Louisville and Nashville.

In a few minutes the whole neighborhood was alarmed and in forty minutes a large posse had collected and [illegible] bloodhounds, which had been secured, were placed on the trail of the negro. They at once took up the scent, but after following it to a pool of water a few yards away lost it and all effort to recover the trail proved fruitless. [illegible] was hooted in the direction of the negro quarters near the premises of the Woodward Co.

Conductor Killed.

Selma, Ala.—Information reached the city Friday of the killing near Cuba of Conductor A. H. McEachin, of the Southern railway, on duty on a logging road between that place and Bellamy, where is located the Allison Lumber Company. The place of the killing is about four miles from Coatopa. The remains of Mr. McEachin passed through Selma en route for Anniston via Birmingham. McEachin was greatly liked by the men on the road, and his death was learned with great sorrow. A delegation of railroad conductors from Selma was appointed to accompany the remains to their resting place at Anniston.

Three Are Drowned.

Scottsboro, Ala.—While attempting to cross Crow creek, near this place, that was badly swollen from the continuous rains, Philip Hill, Henry Martin and a little daughter of Martin, aged 10 years, were drowned, also two mules that were hitched to the wagon and the horse Hill was driving. The creek is spanned by a bridge and the water was running over the bridge, but these parties undertook to drive across anyway, and drove off the side into the deep water. One girl was rescued by Miss Parton, who swam and brought her out. The bodies of the [illegible] and little girl have not been found.

Lived in Three States.

Wetumpka, Ala.—Mrs. Betsy Harvel is dead near here. Mrs. Harvel had the unusual distinction of having lived in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, though she resided all her life on the same farm, the land having been at different times located in the three states named.

Heavy Liabilities.

Birmingham, Ala.—H. W. Bernheim filed papers of voluntary bankruptcy in the office of the clerk of the federal court Saturday. He places his liabilities at $60,186.10, with no assets.

Will Discontinue Schools.

Huntsville, Ala.—The Madison county school board has decided that only one school will be maintained in each of the school districts of the county. In districts that had two schools the trustees are required to decide upon one and discontinue the other; and the board expresses the opinion that this measure will give the schools the full benefit of the appropriations. When possible, the district schools will have more than one teacher.

Safe Robbers Successful.

Benton, Ala.—Thursday night occurred the robbery of the safe of the mercantile firm of Carlisle & Co., successors to E. E. Curtis. The robbery was not discovered until the store was opened Friday morning, when the door of the safe was found across the room from the safe itself, and every indication presented the appearance of expert safe blowers. There was about $75 or $100 in the safe, which was secured by the burglars, but they overlooked a much larger sum in their anxiety that they might have discovered.

Ashville, Ala.—Mr. Oscar Clark and Miss Ester Nunnally, of Ashville, were married Sunday afternoon.

Though married in fun they are now wondering in all seriousness how they are to become single again, since the marriage was legal in every respect, being performed by an ordained minister with marriage license filled out and properly signed.

It seems the young people had been discussing matrimony in a rather disinterested way until it was suggested they have a mock marriage.

Mr. Clark asked the young lady if she would not embark with him on life's matrimonial sea, to which she consented, and together they went in search of the judge, and having secured license they further proceeded to find the minister and in the shadow of the church they stood hand in hand, and without questions or ceremony they were pronounced man and wife.

Tried to Wreck Train.

Opelika, Ala.—An attempt was made Friday night by unknown parties to wreck the Central of Georgia train operating between here and Americus, Ga. Crossties had been placed on the track about eight miles from the city, but owing to a steep grade near the train was necessarily slowed up at that place, and, as the ties had not been securely placed, they were pushed off the track by the engine.

Injunction Dissolved.

Lafayette, Ala.—Acting Chancellor Oscar Lewis, of Tuskegee, rendered a decision late Thursday night in the injunction proceeding to prevent the Lafayette railway from dismantling its tracks, dissolving the injunction, which virtually means that the work of tearing up the track can proceed.

Personal Encounter.

Birmingham, Ala.—L. W. Johns and E. Erswell, two well-known citizens of Birmingham, had a personal difficulty Thursday afternoon on Third avenue, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, in which both men were more or less injured. Mr. Erswell is said to be severely bruised and cut about the face, while Mr. Johns suffered several [illegible] bruises.

Another Furnace for Tuscaloosa.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The old Hardy Clements homestead near the station of Vance, on the Alabama Great Southern railroad, has been sold by Mrs. M P. Marloe to the Big Sandy Iron Company, a very wealthy company composed of northern financiers. The price paid for the land was $60,000. It is said that this is one of the best pieces of iron land in this section, and that a very large and up-to-date furnace will be built at some point between Vance and the Warrior river some time within the near future. W. P. Pinkard, who represented the company, has returned to Birmingham. The coming of this, another furnace, is but the beginning of Tuscaloosa's wonderful growth.

Preparing for Lock Opening.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The lock celebration on the Fourth of July continues to be the all-absorbing topic here. The committee has arranged for a splendid barbecue at Riverview, which will be free to every one. The celebration will take place at Lock 13, ten miles north of this place. The boats are to transfer all those who will attend without charge. They will be gaily decorated with bunting and national flags and will seat 1,200 people.

Dan Card Hanged.

Clayton, Ala.—Dan Card, the negro who killed Mr. Robert Arrington near Solomon's Mill, this county, was hanged here Friday. The execution took place in the jail, and although an immense concourse of people filled the jail yard and blocked the street in front of the jail, everything passed off in a quiet and orderly manner.

At 10:50 o'clock Card was placed beside the trap and prayer was offered by R. T. Schell, pastor of the negro Baptist church. At a signal he then took his stand on the trap, which fell at 11 o'clock exactly, and in ten minutes he was pronounced dead.

Saw Mill Man Injured.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. D. York, who runs the lath saw at the saw mill of the Kyle Lumber Company, was very badly hurt Friday by a slab being caught in the machinery and thrown forward with considerable force, striking him on the cheek and also on the collar bone. While no bones were broken he was badly bruised up and it will be several weeks before he is able to be out at his post again.

SEC'Y. HAY IS DEAD.

After a Short Illness, he passes Away at his Summer Home.

WAS SICK ONLY A SHORT TIME.

Slept Peacefully Until Only a Very Short Time Before the Fatal Summons Came.

Newbury, N. H.—John Hay, secretary of state, died Saturday at his summer home, "The Fells," on the shore of Lake Sunapee. The hour of his passing was 12:25 o'clock that morning. The last moments of the statesman were peaceful and the end came almost without a struggle.

The suddenness of it all was staggering. At the hour of 12 all was quiet. In another moment nurses and physicians found themselves summoned to find their distinguished patient dead. There had been a collapse. Twenty-five minutes later all was over. So swiftly had the end come that the dying man passed away unattended by any of the members of his family save his wife. The others a son and a daughter, were summoned, but they reached the beside only to find him dead. Friday was the most comfortable day since his illness began a week ago. He was to sit up Saturday. The patient had bidden his wife and physicians good night at 10 o'clock Friday night. An hour later he was sleeping quietly. Almost at the stroke of 12 the secretary was seized with a turn. He called for the family and a nurse responded.

Household Aroused.

The sick man was breathing with great difficulty. Dr. Scudder was speedily summoned and it required but a glance for him to determine that the end was but minutes away. The household was aroused. The wife reached her husband as he was breathing his last. The son, Clarence E. Hay, and the daughter, Mrs. James A. Wadsworth, of Genesee, N. Y., hurried into the sick room, but they were too late.

Death was caused by pulmonary embolysm, according to Dr. Scudder. The patient did not suffer greatly in his last moments. Aside from great difficulty in breathing there was no struggle. Stimulants were ineffective. The secretary lapsed into unconsciousness and seemed to fall asleep at last.

Bulletin Issued.

The consternation of the household was complete. After two hours the physician was driven to the village, where half a dozen telegrams were dispatched. The first went to President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay. The second was addressed to the state department at Washington. Others were sent to friends of the family.

The bulletin announcing the death read as follows:

"Secretary of State John Hay died at 12:25 this morning. The signs immediately preceding his death were those of pulmonary embolysm. Mr. Hay's condition during all of Friday had been entirely satisfactory.

(Signed.)

"CHARLES L. SCUDDER, M. D.
"FRED'K T. MURPHY, M. D."

Grew Ill in the Spring.

The illness which so weakened Mr. Hay's physical powers as to bring about death made itself noticeable about last March. Tired and worn from the strain of overwork, he was ordered by his physicians to make a trip abroad in order to obtain special treatment and a complete rest.

Last Saturday evening he arrived at his summer home here, accompanied by his son, Clarence. Mrs. Hay had preceded him.

Contracted Slight Cold.

The journey fatigued the secretary, however, and furthermore while traveling he contracted a slight cold. When Mr. Hay suddenly collapsed on the afternoon of the following day, his wife and son became greatly alarmed.

At first an operation was determined upon, but with the administration of powerful medicines some relief came and it was soon found that an operation could be avoided. By Monday the doctors were able to announce that Mr. Hay's condition was not at all serious, and that with a few days' absolute rest he would undoubtedly again take up outdoor life. It was the ruling of the physicians, however, that the secretary should remain in bed for a period of a few days, in order to avoid all chances of augmenting the cold.

Steadily Improving.

Dr. Scudder returned to Boston Monday evening, leaving Dr. Murphy in charge of the patient.

The next day Secretary Hay was not so well. A nurse was summoned from Boston and Dr. Scudder returned. However, the secretary's illness was not deemed so severe as to call for the presence of members of his family.

Peacefully Asleep.

There was nothing, Dr. Scudder declared, to cause anxiety when he reached the bedside, and after bidding his wife and doctors a cheerful goodnight, the secretary fell into an untroubled and restful sleep. The nurse watching by his beside, felt assured that the patient was on the sure road to recovery. At midnight and in a moment of time this was all changed. Mr. Hay awoke with breathing labored and quick. In tones choked and feeble, so unlike those of a few hours before that the nurse could scarcely believe Mr. Hay was speaking, the sick man murmured almost in a whisper [illegible] "come." The trained sense of the nurse detected alarming symptoms. She hurried for Dr. Scudder who was in the next room. The doctor's first glance confirmed the nurse's fears.

Heroic remedies were applied. They were futile. Then a summons went to Mrs. Hay. The wife was soon at her husband's bedside. She gently clasped his hand. The patient's eyes were dull. It was seen that he was unconscious. The moment of dissolution arrived so quickly that the son and daughter had not time to reach the room.

England's Esteem.

London.—The death of Secretary of State John Hay called out many evidences of the affectionate esteem in which he was held in this country. Immediately after the news was conveyed to the American embassy, the flag was hung at half-mast, and as soon as the secretary's death became known to the public a steady stream of diplomatic officials and personal friends of the secretary of state called there to pay their regrets. All the papers pay tributes to Mr. Hay as an American patriot, and as a friend to England, by whose death society, politics and literature are sensibly poorer.

The long obituary notices contain nothing but glowing tributes to the conspicuous ability which the deceased statesman showed in all the fields of his activity and special references to his untiring promotion of the friendship between the United States and Great Britain.

Ambassador Reid has cancelled all his immediate engagements in consequence of the death of his chief. Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, on behalf of the British government, has cabled an expression of sincere sympathy with the government in the death of Secretary Hay.

Paris Profoundly Shocked.

Paris.—The death of Secretary Hay caused a profound shock in official and diplomatic quarters here. Premier Rouvier was among the first to learn the news and he sent a dispatch expressing his deep regret and condolence. Ambassador McCormick, General Porter and the officials of the American embassy, consulate and the American colony joined in expressions of grief, and tributes of respect for the dead statesman.

Germany's Recognition.

Berlin.—Secretary Hay's reputation was nearly as high in Germany as in the United States, and the fullest recognition is given of his liberal views of the rights of other states, of his clear-sighted policies and of his judicious conduct of international affairs. Great regret is expressed at the foreign office at the death of a statesman who was always a friend of Germany, and whom German statesmen trusted fully.

The First Statesman.

Lenox, Mass.—Sir Mortimer Durand, British ambassador to the United States, said of Secretary of State Hay today:

"I am deeply shocked and grieved to hear the news. Outside of America Mr. Hay was regarded as the first of living statesmen. His death is a loss to the world."

Eight Mobbed.

Watkinsville, Ga.—Seven prisoners were taken from the jail here and shot to death by a mob of masked white men, within 200 yards of the center of the town.

Eight men were carried to the scene of the lynching, but one miraculously escaped death by falling to the ground when the volley was fired, and feigning that he had been killed, saved himself.

Pennsylvania Train Wrecked.

Cleveland, O.—The eastbound passenger train on the Cleveland and Pittsburg branch of the Pennsylvania road was derailed and wrecked near Atwater, causing the death of C. M. Turnhall, of Cleveland, and Engineer Baldwin, while a dozen or more persons were more or less injured. A section gang was making repairs on the track and it is said had a rail removed. A flagman was sent out, but for some reason he failed to stop the flyer, and the wreck followed.

Bouligan May Resign.

St. Petersburg.—The resignation of Minister of the Interior Bouligan is regarded as impending. He probably will be succeeded by Count Ignatieff, former governor of Kieff.

More Yellow Fever.

Washington, D. C.—Governor Magoon of Panama reported two additional cases of yellow fever, Giovanni E. Janicelli, a non-employe, in Panama, and William Harvey, an American employe, at Colon.

Cruiser Goes to Libau.

London, Eng.—It is said the Russian auxiliary cruiser Dneiper has left Jibutil for Libau without coaling.

Fort Grant to Be Abandoned.

Washington, D. C.—Fort Grant, established many years ago to guard the southern and eastern boundaries of the San Carlos Indian reservation in Arizona, is to be abandoned as a military post because of the peaceful character of the Indians.

Kishineff.—All hotels here are filled with persons from Odessa, thousands of whom are leaving that city in panic.

MINOR EVENTS OF THE WEEK

WASHINGTON.

Russia and Japan agreed to open the peace conference between August 1 and 10.

Morgan H. Beach, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, tendered his resignation and it was accepted, to take effect August 31.

For the first time in the history of the Government, Congress will not be asked at the next session to make good any deficits. A law was passed last winter providing punishment for officers who made any contracts or obligations for future payments in excess of appropriations. The act is being strictly observed in every department.

The foreign diplomats called upon Secretary Hay to congratulate him on his return to his duties and his recovery from his recent illness.

President Roosevelt has named Colonel Winfield S. Egerly, of the Second Cavalry, now in Philippines, a brigadier general.

The Navy Department changed the name of the Great Lakes cruiser Michigan to Wolverine.

Ambassador Reid has cancelled all his immediate engagements in consequence of the death of his chief. Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, on behalf of the British government, has cabled an expression of sincere sympathy with the government in the death of Secretary Hay.

OUR ADOPTED ISLANDS.

Governor Carter, of the Hawaiian Islands, mailed his resignation to President Roosevelt from Honolulu. He has been in cable correspondence with the President regarding his retirement and has received permission to go to Washington, D. C., for a personal interview.

The three editors of the Renacimiento, in Manila, the most influential Filipino organ, have been arrested on the charge of libeling Col. Baker of the constabulary, whom they charged with cruelty in the Cavite campaign. The three men are the survivers of a set of agitators who followed Aguinaldo with a portable press on which they printed a revolutionary organ.

A. M. Brown, the Republican nominee, has been elected sheriff of Oahu County, Hawaiian Islands.

Enrique Dugahob, leader of the insurrection movement in the Island of Samar, was killed, together with thirty-nine of his followers, on June 4, according to advices just received from Manila.

DOMESTIC.

Train robbers made an unsuccessful attempt near Puyalup, Wash., to hold up the North Coast limited, but were frightened away before getting at the express safe.

Murder in the first degree was the verdict in New York City against Edward Pekarz, who in April beat to death aged Sarah Rosenberg.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals of Indian Territory held the tribal tax of the Choctaw nation collectible.

The American Dental Trade Association, at Frontenac, N. Y., elected W. M. Herriatt, of Indianapolis, Ind., as president.

Trouble over Pattie Rogers led to the fatal shooting at Raleigh, N. C., of Deputy United States Marshal John Dockery by Policeman Isaac Rogers, the girl's father.

After killing her twelve-year-old daughter, Mrs. Alois Shields, despondent over a long illness, committed suicide at Findlay, O.

The New York City Health Department's report shows 2000 babies are born every week in New York.

The charge of embezzlement against George F. Clewell, former Secretary and Treasurer of the Federal Trust Company, at Cleveland, Ohio, was not sustained, and he was acquitted.

The property of the International Packing Company, at Chicago, Ill., has been ordered sold under foreclosure to satisfy claims of $3,977,000.

A system of child slavery was revealed in Chicago, Ill., the children being used as kitchen drudges.

Alterations to be made to the new Hall of Records in New York City will cost nearly $1,500,000.

Experts believe the gas gusher recently struck at Butler, O., will be the greatest producer in the world, over 1,000,000 feet a day being sent out now under tremendous pressure.

A posse of miners chasing Jack Plummer, who had killed a fellow-miner, came up to him near Macon, Mo., and riddled him with bullets when he refused to surrender.

A society to be known as the Sons of the G. A. R. has been formed at Denver, Col., to perpetuate the name of the Grand Army.

Affairs of the People's Home Purchasing Company came to an end at Paducah, Ky., by the arrest of its active head, J. S. Bordeaux, charged with violating the State banking laws.

FOREIGN.

The British House of Commons, at London, England, rejected a proposed vote of censure on the Balfour Ministry in connection with the army stores scandal by a majority of seventy-four.

A report comes from Frankfort, says a special cable dispatch, that the crown of Norway has been offered to Count Elamer Louvay.

Thorsby, Alabama
Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

Commercial Club OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and [illegible] information furnished who desire to locate

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman,
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.

Thorsby Winery —Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props.

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST.

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOES

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wishart
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

VOL. III.

SUITABLE PROSECUTIONS F

Fabricks Has Proof Insurance Chiefs Speculated With Trust Funds.

CRIMINAL ACTION IS LIKELY

Probers Unearth Evidence That Policy Holders' Money Has Been Used In Wild Wall Street Deals—Grand Jury To Begin Work—May Uncover Criminality in Shipbuilding Fiasco.

New York City Law breaking of officials of the Equitable Life Assurance Society are being attacked from all sides. District Attorney Jerome has already put the Equitable crooks into the hands of the Grand Jury, which will first begun what will be a history making session. Some high financiers will soon face jail. Gage E. Tarbell is now pushing on the criminal action against his associates.

In swearing in the July Grand Jury Part I, of General Sessions, Judge Warren W. Foster took occasion to announce that this particular Grand Jury would probably be called upon to give much of extra time and attention to the very important investigation of the Equitable Society's affairs) now on foot in the District Attorney's office.

It is said that the Grand Jury will probe into the United States Shipbuilding Company scandal. This was linked up with the Equitable's affairs through the Mercantile Trust Company. That the shipbuilding graft may develop criminal ends is evident because of the recent restitution of funds back in it, including $190,000 to Mrs. E. E. Wood.

Attorney-General Mayer is expected speedily to begin the prosecution of all men who acted as directors in the Equitable without holding five shares of stock. This was in violation of the law. Mr. Mayer had his attention called to this by Senator Brackett. The penalty for the offense is a fine of $5,000. Only about ten of the men who have acted as directors in the Equitable recently, it is said, are innocent of any charge.

The receivership proceeding now counts the Equitable. A big New York law firm is preparing to go into court to take this action to safeguard the rights of the policy holders.

Proof of speculation on margins by officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society with the funds of the policy holders is in the hands of Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks, so it is announced, and is soon to be made the basis of criminal actions.

Judge Foster's significant charge to the Grand Jury makes clear that the criminal aspects of Equitable affairs will come under immediate scrutiny, and the preparation of evidence by Mr. Hendricks will expedite the jury's work.

Coupled with this announcement, which staggered financiers and insurance men, was the further assertion that no time would be lost in bringing such criminal proceedings against those who had used the money of the policy holders to dabble in the most dangerous sort of Wall Street speculation. It is not known that any of the money so invested was lost, but, it is said, that makes no difference in the legal status of those who made such a misuse of the Equitable's funds for their own enjoyment. Superintendent Hendricks, it is said, will insist that both Attorney-General Mayer and District Attorney Jerome shall proceed against everybody involved and push the cases against them vigorously.

BOB TORE A MAN TO PIECES.

Spectators at a Bullfight Avenged the Death of a Matador.

The City of Mexico.—One of the most horrible tragedies ever enacted in a bull ring in Mexico is reported from the city of Durango. An intoxicated spectator, who was responsible for the death of Silverio Chico, a famous matador, was literally torn to pieces by a bull.

The sixth and last bull of the exhibition proved to be particularly large and fierce, and the cleverness of Chico in "dressing" the animal gained him great applause. Just as he lunged forward, the sword penetrating the heart of the animal, the intoxicated spectator hurled a piece of iron pipe. It struck the matador on the head, and he fell insensible in front of the bull. The enraged animal gored him six times before he fell over dead.

As soon as the people realized what had happened there was a rush for the matador. He was thrown into the ring, where his head and limbs were severed from his body and then hacked and cut to bits.

THE POLICY HOLDER'S RISK.

Health Must Be Good When Insurance Takes Effect, Says Court.

Boston.—The Massachusetts Supreme Court has upheld the condition in a policy of life insurance that the insured must be in sound health on the date the policy takes effect. The fact that the insured had no knowledge of poor [illegible] on of health or that he had no intention to deceive the company thereby [illegible] would immaterial as regards the [illegible] on of the company's liability.

The case was that of Elizabeth A. Carter against the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York. A lower court gave the plaintiff a verdict for $605 under a policy on her husband. The verdict was set aside and a new trial ordered.

y, Alabama
ss Directory.

VE,

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information fur[illegible] to parties who desire to lo[illegible] the South

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen.

ORE

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

WEEK

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman.
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.

Thorsby Winery
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOES

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wishart
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., JULY 13 1905 NO. 16

ITABLE PROSECUTIONS

ork Has Proof Insurance Chiefs Speculated With Trust Funds.

INAL ACTION IS LIKELY

Probers Unearth Evidence That Police Robbers' Money Has Been Used in Wild Wall Street Deals—Grand Jury to Begin Work—May Uncover Criminality in Shipbuilding Fiasco.

New York City.—Law breaking officials of the Equitable Life Assurance Society are being attacked from all sides. District Attorney Jerome has put the Equitable crimes into the hands of the Grand Jury, which will begin what will be a history-making session. Some high financiers may soon face jail. Gage E. Tarbell is pushing the criminal action against those men.

Appearing in the July Grand Jury part 1, of General Sessions, Judge Edgar W. Foster took occasion to announce that this particular Grand Jury will probably be called upon to give much extra time and attention to the important investigation of the Equitable Society's affairs now on foot in the District Attorney's office.

It is said that the Grand Jury will delve into the United States Shipbuilding Company scandal. This was tied up with the Equitable's affairs through the Mercantile Trust Company. That the shipbuilding graft may have criminal ends is evident because of the recent restitution of funds to it, including $190,000 to Mrs. H. E. Wood.

Attorney-General Mayer is expected shortly to begin the prosecution of all directors who acted as directors in the Equitable without holding five shares of stock. This was in violation of the law. Mr. Mayer had his attention called to this by Senator Brackett. The penalty for the offense is a fine of not more than $5000. Only about ten of the men who acted as directors in the Equitable recently, it is said, are innocent of wrongdoing.

A receivership proceeding now contemplated by the Equitable. A big New York firm is preparing to go into court to take this action to safeguard the interests of the policy holders.

The proof of speculation on margins by officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society with the funds of the policyholders is in the hands of Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks, so it is announced, and is soon to be made the basis of criminal actions.

Judge Foster's significant charge to the Grand Jury makes clear that the various aspects of Equitable affairs will be under immediate scrutiny. With the preparation of evidence by Superintendent Hendricks will expedite the jury's work.

Coupled with this announcement, that staggered financiers and insurance men was the further assertion that no time would be lost in bringing criminal proceedings against those who had used the money of the policyholders to dabble in the most dangerous sort of Wall Street speculation. It is known that any of the money so misused was lost, but, it is said, that makes no difference in the legal status of those who made such a misuse of Equitable's funds for their own enrichment. Superintendent Hendricks, it is said, will insist that both Attorney-General Mayer and District Attorney Jerome shall proceed against those involved and push the cases against them vigorously.

BULL TORE A MAN TO PIECES.

Spectators at a Bullfight Avenged the Death of a Matador.

City of Mexico.—One of the most horrible tragedies ever enacted in a bull ring in Mexico is reported from the city of Durango. An intoxicated spectator who was responsible for the death of Saverio Chico, a famous matador, was literally torn to pieces by the bull.

The last bull of the exhibition proved to be particularly large and strong, and the cleverness of Chico in handling the animal gained him great applause. Just as he lunged forward, however, penetrating the heart of the animal, the intoxicated spectator hurled a section of iron pipe. It struck the bull on the head, and he fell instantly dead. Before the people realized what had happened there was a rush for the bull. He was thrown into the ring, and his horns and limbs were severed hurriedly and then hacked and

THE POLICY HOLDER'S RISK.

Must Be Good When Insurance Policy Takes Effect, Says Court.

The Massachusetts Supreme court has upheld the condition in a policy of insurance that the insured must be in sound health on the day the policy takes effect. The fact that the insured had no knowledge of any condition of health or that he intended to deceive the company is immaterial as regards the validity of the policy. The decision was that of Elizabeth A. Perkins against the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York. The lower court gave the plaintiff a verdict for $500 under a policy on her husband's life. The verdict was set aside and a new trial ordered.

FATAL STORMS IN TEXAS

Tornado, Lightning and Downpour Cause Great Damage.

Seven Children Numbered Among the Dead—Many Houses and Public Buildings Wrecked.

Nocona, Texas.—A tornado and thunderstorm passed a few miles west and south of here, killing fifteen persons, injuring forty or fifty and destroying a number of houses. Nine were killed at Montague.

Reports from the storm swept district give the following list of dead: Mrs. C. C. Shackelford, Miss Shackelford, Mrs. S. L. Tumbleson and three children, Mrs. Mary Lester and four children, Caleb White, Irb Williams, Mrs. Irb Williams and Frank Eakin.

Among the seriously injured are Miss Nannie Austin, J. J. Woodson, Frank Woodson, four children of Z. W. Shackelford and a child of Mrs. Lester.

Many farmhouses were swept away. The schoolhouse, three miles west of here, was damaged. The Baptist and Methodist churches at Belcher were considerably damaged. The Methodist Church at Montague was wrecked and the Court House damaged.

The Dixey schoolhouse, six miles west of here, was blown away bodily. Large hailstones fell here, breaking many windows.

Crops in the path of the tornado were destroyed.

Nocona is on a spur line of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad, 417 miles from Gainesville, in Northern Texas.

At Montague fifteen dwellings as well as four stores were demolished. Hundreds of head of stock were killed outright by the wind.

INFANT BLOWN INTO A LAKE.

Brewer Hupfel's Grandson Drowned—Wind Struck Baby Carriage.

Newburgh, N. Y.—The twenty months old grandson of A. G. Hupfel, the New York brewer, was drowned in the lake on the Hupfel estate near here. It was fastened in its carriage, which was blown into the lake.

The child, Anlon G. Brandon, son of Frank Brandon, was a pet of his grandfather. It had been sent out with its nurse for an airing. The nurse had strapped the baby in its carriage so that it should not crawl out. The child went to sleep after a while, and, leaving the carriage near the edge of the lake, the nurse went away for a few moments.

When she returned the carriage and baby had disappeared. The nurse searched frantically all around the nearby roads, thinking some one might have rolled the carriage away. She never suspected that the baby and carriage had disappeared into the lake.

She finally notified the child's parents and all the help on the estate were turned out to search for the baby. The nurse showed where she had left the baby carriage standing, and the marks of the wheels showed where it had gone to. The hood of the carriage had been up and acted as a shield to catch the wind.

Men were put to work to drag the lake, and it was not long before they found the carriage. The baby was still in it. The child had been dead some little time.

PHILANTHROPIST ENDS LIFE.

R. D. MacGonigle, Deserted by Friends When Money Is Gone, Takes Poison.

Pittsburg, Pa.—R. D. MacGonigle, millionaire gas man, famous all over the country as an author, lecturer and philanthropist, killed himself in the Hotel Lincoln. He had given away the bulk of his fortune in charity and then lost the remaining $300,000. Recently his friends deserted him, and the blow drove him to death.

MacGonigle was last seen alive when he went to his room early in the evening. He appeared to be in the best of spirits at that time. When he failed to leave his room next morning the door was forced open, and he was found dead in his room, an empty vial on the dresser having contained a solution of chloral.

Mr. MacGonigle was fifty-three years old, and a few years ago his fortune was estimated at several million dollars. He was the founder of the Allegheny Light Company, afterward absorbed by the Philadelphia Company.

He devoted almost his entire life to charity. He founded the Kingsley House, the Pittsburg Golf Club, the Pittsburg Country Club and the Duquesne Riding Club, which holds the Pittsburg Horse Show.

PATIENTS DROWN IN HOSPITAL.

Over 900 Guanajuato Flood Victims—Property Loss, $2,000,000.

Guanajuato, Mexico.—Gov. Obregon estimates the loss of life from the recent cloudburst and consequent flood at over 900.

The hospital was flooded so quickly that the patients there were drowned. The magnificent Juarez Theatre was flooded to the floor of the first balcony, and soldiers who had taken refuge there had to climb to the upper balcony to save themselves. The property loss is now estimated at $2,000,000.

President at Hay's Funeral.

President Roosevelt attended the funeral of John Hay in Cleveland and took a train for home immediately afterward.

THE POTEMKINE A PIRATE

Mutineers Issued Proclamation Declaring War on All Russian Ships.

OFFICIAL STORY OF TROUBLE

The Potemkine Issued Notice to Powers That She Would Attack All Vessels of the Czar—Must Join Mutineers or Risk a Sinking — Rebel Battleship Seized Coal From an Italian Collier.

Odessa, Russia.—The mutineers on the battleship Kniaz Potemkine declared war on the Russian marine. With a desperation born of necessity she seized an Italian collier and replenished her empty coal bunkers; and with a boldness that passes belief she issued a proclamation of war on all Russian vessels refusing to join the cause of mutiny.

Meanwhile the spirit of mutiny spread to the merchant marine. A transport crew near Sebastopol mutinied and murdered its officers, and all Russia has been fervidly called upon by the ever-active revolutionaries to rise in a general revolution.

The Government story of the events at Odessa, as published in the Official Messenger, has been in great part already covered in the statements made in official quarters and cabled to the United States since the commencement of the outbreak. After detailing the activity of the Socialist Revolutionary Committee in stirring up the strikers ashore and the arrival of the mutinous crew of the battleship Kniaz Potemkine at Odessa on June 27, the account proceeds:

"Mutiny of the war ships provided the Revolutionary Committee with a good opportunity to influence the masses. The committee visited the battleship and assured the mutineers that the garrison of Odessa had laid down its arms and that the whole Black Sea squadron had joined hands with the crew of the Kniaz Potemkine. According to eye witnesses, officers took an active part in the councils on board the battleship, especially two young cadets. The result of the anarchist intrigues among the workmen and mutinous sailors became immediately evident. The troops were unable to use their arms against the crowds of workmen in the vicinity of the harbor for fear of the possibility of an enfilading fire from the battleship. The harbor, therefore, was at the mercy of the mob, which pillaged warehouses and vessels, broached casks of wine and spirits and started a drunken orgie.

"With nightfall the fires started by the rioters soon attained terrible dimensions. Nearly everything in the harbor was destroyed, the mob refusing to allow the firemen to fight the flames. Among the property destroyed were the warehouses and stores of the Russian Navigation and Commerce Company, the agency and stores of the Danube Navigation Company, the Bais stores on the Platanoff piers, the Odessa Harbor railroad station, the Harbor Master's offices, part of the warehouses of the Russian Navigation Trading Company, and of the Roseysky and Roshnine companies on the new pier, the shipping office on Platanoff Pier, part of the coal depot, all of the buildings of the Quarantine Harbor, and twenty wagons and six steamers belonging to various companies. The railway freight sheds were pillaged and many rioters and looters were burned alive while intoxicated.

"Several times during the night of June 28 the mob attacked the troops and police with revolvers, but every time they were scattered by a volley from the soldiers. The number of rioters killed or wounded is not yet known, but must exceed several hundreds. The damage can only be estimated in millions of roubles.

This story confirms the report that the Kniaz Potemkine on the evening of June 29 fired three blank shots, as prescribed by the Russian naval code for the funeral of a sailor, and followed these up with two live shots, destroying part of a house. Otherwise the battleship did no damage. The Government report then proceeds to relate the arrival of Rear-Admiral Kruger's squadron during the morning of June 30, as follows:

"As the squadron approached the Odessa pier the Kniaz Potemkine cleared for action, advanced to meet it and cut through its line. As the Kniaz Potemkine passed the mutineers received an ovation from the crew of the Georgi Pobledonosetz. Rear-Admiral Kruger thereupon signalled the squadron to swing around and return to Sebastopol but the crew of the Georgi Pobledonosetz prevented that vessel from following, and put ashore all their officers, disarmed, with the exception of Lieutenant Grigorieff, who blew out his brains.

"On the advice of the revolutionists a committee of twenty was elected to take charge of the vessel under the direction of a boatswain's mate and apparently against the latter's will. Dissension prevailed among the crew, only part of which was influenced by the revolutionists and wanted to follow the Kniaz Potemkine. The latter threatened to fire on the Georgi Pobledonosetz if she tried to rejoin the squadron at Sebastopol. The anti-revolutionary section, however, ultimately gained the upper hand, and when in the afternoon of July 1 the two battleships weighed anchor the Georgi Pobledonosetz put on full speed, entered the harbor and sent the boatswain's mate and some sailors ashore to signify her submission."

BIG PACKERS INDICTED

Federal Grand Jury at Chicago Finds True Bills Against Beef Trust.

TWENTY-TWO OFFICIALS ON LIST

Four Corporations Also Indicted—Nelson Morris and Michael Cudahy Left Out on Account of Their Age, But Their Managers Must Answer to Criminal Charges in the Federal Court.

Chicago.—Twenty-two officials of the big packing companies and four corporations were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury. Then the jurors filed into Judge Bethea's court, reported their findings, and were dismissed with the thanks of the Court.

Four corporations and eighteen individuals are named in the principal indictment, which charges a conspiracy in restraint of trade and a conspiracy to monopolize or attempt to monopolize any part of such trade or commerce, in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

Penalties for violations of either of these charges, which appear in different counts in the principal indictment, are a fine not to exceed $5000 and imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the Court. The fine only is applicable to corporations.

Four other individuals are named in a separate indictment which is based on the provisions of the interstate commerce law, making it unlawful to solicit or receive any rebate or concession in respect of the transportation of any property interstate or foreign commerce. The penalty prescribed under this charge is a fine of from $1000 to $20,000.

Originally the interstate commerce law provided a punishment of both fine and imprisonment for such violations, but the imprisonment provision was stricken out when the law was amended.

After a session extending intermittently over a period of three months the Federal Grand Jury finished its investigation into the packing industry.

The head officials of the packing companies anticipated the Grand Jury's action by sending their attorneys to the office of the United States District Attorney to make arrangements for bonds.

The indictment forms contained the names of Nelson Morris, head of Nelson Morris & Co., and Michael Cudahy, president of the Cudahy Packing Company. District Attorney Morrison made an address, in which he conveyed to the Grand Jury his impression that because of the advanced age of these two men and the fact that their concerns are practically in the hands of a younger generation the Government was disposed to be lenient.

After taking the matter under advisement the Grand Jury decided to have the names of the two aged packers stricken from the indictment.

A list of those indicted follows:

J. Ogden Armour, president; P. A. Valentine, vice-president; Samuel M. McRoberts, secretary; Arthur Meeker, manager beef department; Thomas J. Connors, a director; Charles W. Armour, manager Armour & Co., Kansas City, all of Armour & Co.

Louis F. Swift, president; Edward F. Swift, vice-president; Charles Swift, manager export department; Laurence A. Carton, treasurer; D. Edwin Hartwell, secretary, and Albert H. Veeder, general counsel, all of Swift & Co.

Arthur F. Evans, special counsel; Robert C. McManus, special counsel; Edward Morris, vice-president, and Ira N. Morris, secretary, all of Nelson Morris & Co.

Edward A. Cudahy, vice-president of the Cudahy Packing Company.

Edward Tilden, of Libby, McNeil & Libby.

Samuel Weil, secretary and former vice-president; Beth S. Cusey, general traffic manager; Vance D. Skipworth, traffic manager in New York, and Chester E. Todd, traffic manager in Kansas City, all of Schwarzchild & Sulzberger.

Corporations indicted—Armour Packing Company, Swift & Co., Fairbank Canning Company, Cudahy Packing Company.

SWEDEN CLOSES WAR PORTS.

Proclamation Issued, to Become Effective Immediately.

Stockholm, Sweden.—The apparently peaceful aspect of affairs which followed the excitement after Norway's declaration of her secession from the sovereignty of King Oscar was broken suddenly by the issuance of a proclamation, to become effective immediately, declaring Stockholm, Karlskrona, Gottenburg and Farosund to be war ports, and denying entrance to all foreign warships.

This will be followed by a notice to the Powers, through the ambassadorial representatives, announcing the action taken by the Government, so that all ships of war of other nations now within these ports will be withdrawn.

The proclaiming of the four ports as war ports is the most serious and significant action taken since the Norwegians announced their intention to secede, and is in effect the first step in preparing for an armed conflict to force the secessionists to return to their allegiance.

Oyama and Linevitch Negotiate.

Oyama and Linevitch were reported to be negotiating to arrange an armistice in Manchuria.

MINOR EVENTS OF THE WEEK

WASHINGTON.

President Roosevelt announced that the peace envoys chosen are Komura and Takahira for Japan, Muravieff and Rosen for Russia, who will meet in Washington as soon as possible after August 1.

The Acting Secretary of the Treasury received and accepted the resignation of sixty draftsmen employed in the bureau of the Supervising Architect. These employes had to be laid off on account of lack of work in the office, there being only enough in hand to keep about forty men busy. Since 1902 $50,000,000 has been expended on new public buildings and for improvements to old ones, but the work of preparing plans has been done with such rapidity that drawings for only two or three buildings are now in progress. Unless there is another public building bill at the coming session, the force in the drafting room will be still further reduced.

Former Secretary Morton was at the Navy Department to introduce his successor, Charles J. Bonaparte, to the chief officials of the department. Mr. Bonaparte assumed his new duties the same morning.

OUR ADOPTED ISLANDS.

There is every indication that the sugar season in the Hawaiian Islands will be one of the best in recent years.

The coffee growers of Porto Rico feel much encouraged by the efforts which are being made to popularize their product in the United States. There is a big crop in prospect.

A sergeant and six men of the Second Cavalry have killed Felizardo, the scourge of Cavite, Philippine Islands. He was the boldest bandit in the island, and was the hero of numerous escapes.

Judge Warren Ickis, formerly a lieutenant in the Fifty-first Iowa Regiment, died of septicaemia on Mindanao Island.

DOMESTIC.

Two white women, Mrs. Mary Jay, thirty years old, and May Woodling, twenty-eight years old, were murdered in a house in the Tenderloin section of Scranton, Pa. In each case the woman's skull was crushed with a hatchet.

The New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals has finally decided to wear robes, and will appear in them for the first time at the next term.

Gentiles organized in Salt Lake City, Utah, to defeat a Mormon plot to seize the choice tracts of the Uintah Indian reservation about to be opened by the Government.

The Rev. Dr. Wylie, of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, New York City, in a sermon suggested jail as the proper place for "high finance" directors who juggle with trust funds.

Congressman Driscoll, attorney for Superintendent Hendricks, of New York, in the Equitable investigation, replied to James H. Hyde's defense of his father, and showed how the elder man made huge profits at the expense of the policy holders.

Joseph M. Terrell, Governor of Georgia, has offered rewards of $300 each for the arrest and conviction of the first five members of the Watkinsville mob and $200 each for every other member.

Uniform food laws for all the States were considered by a convention of wholesale grocers in session at Milwaukee, Wis.

The American Institute of Homoepathy, meeting at Chicago, Ill., elected William E. Green, of Little Rock, Ark., as president.

Because of ill-health, George H. Witaty, a prominent attorney of Fremont, O., killed himself at Bellevue, O.

Gold has been found at a depth of 200 feet in the public square at Carson, Nev., where borings were being made for an artesian well.

A boiler explosion on former Congressman Isaac Stephenson's yacht at Menominee, Mich., injured the owner and several guests, among them former Governor Hood and Congressman Jenkins.

The California Limited, on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, collided head on with a heavy Kansas City Southern stock train in the suburbs of Kansas City, Mo. Two persons were killed and three injured.

While crossing a gangplank to a schooner moored at Sayreville, N. J., fifteen-year-old Annie O'Connell fell overboard and was drowned.

A plank on which he was "see-sawing" fell on Walter Tiofaken, seven years old, at Sayreville, N. J., killing him instantly.

FOREIGN.

Japan will soon offer $150,000,000 more of her bonds in New York and London.

The Chinese Chamber of Commerce at Selangor, Malay Peninsula, will take up the boycott of American goods.

Emperor William has promoted Admiral von Koester to be Grand Admiral of the German fleet.

The Russian transport Anadyr arrived at Diego Suarez, Madagascar, with survivors from the Russian battleship Orel, which went ashore disabled in the battle of the Sea of Japan and was surrendered to the Japanese.

Gen. Gripenberg, who formerly commanded the second Manchurian Army, but was relieved from the command on March 26 by order of the Czar, has been appointed Inspector General of Infantry.

A Norwegian officer, whose movements caused suspicion at Trosa, Sweden, was escorted to the frontier, it being believed he was a spy.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice In All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House
CLANTON.

Physicians.

Dr. V. O. Campbelle,
Physician and Surgeon,
Office over Roper's Store.
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

PURE GOODS
The following
SPECIAL BRANDS
always in stock

Big Rock	I. W. Harper
Rose Valley	Upper Crust
Upper Ten	Kentucky Taylor
Joe GMeon	American Malt
Murray Hill	Budweiser Rye
Pleasant Hill	Deep Springs
Green River	AAAA Lincoln County
Jack Daniel No. 7	Wilson
Old Spring	Good Wood
Shaw's Malt	Club House Rye, 10 years old.
Jefferson County Rye	Cascade, 14 years old.

Old Harvest Corn, 5 years old

I carry a Full Line of Barrel Goods which I sell in Jugs from half gallon up. Mail orders promptly filled.

A. STEIN,
Bank Saloon. Calera, Ala.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS. PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!

If you have timber lands for sale, want to buy a good home for $25.00 cash and the balance on long payments to suit purchaser, or if you want a position as log cutter, teamster or in saw mill or planing mill, write
The Marbury Lumber Co.,
Marbury, Ala.

THE SEA CAPTAIN.

I am in love with the sea, but I do not trust her yet;
The ta' ships she has slain are in to forget;
Their sails were white in the morning, their masts were split by noon;
The sun has seen them perish, and the stars and the moon.

As a man loves a woman, so I love the sea
And even as my desire of her is her desire of me;
When we meet after parting, we put away regret,
Like lover joined with lover; but I do not trust her yet.

For fierce she is, and strange, and her love is kin to hate
She must slay whom she desires; she will draw me soon or late
Down into darkness and silence, the place of drowned men Having her arms about me. And I shall trust her then.
—Gerald Gould, in London Spectator.

The Rescue of Hawkeye.

By F. ROBERTS.

THERE was no doubt that Robert Chesney Belden, better known as Dawdles, was lazy. This was a great trial to his mother, while his lack of courage was an equal cross to his father. If Mr. Belden tried to bribe him with a new wheel or a kodak to show a little boyish bravery, Dawdles shook his head.

"It isn't because I don't want to, but because I really can't," he said sadly.

He was a sturdy, healthy boy of twelve, yet he hated the vigorous games that most boys love.

He had knocked around with the boys at Bellenham school now for a year, and was as lazy and timid as ever. Yet he was popular. He was so good-natured and obliging and had such beautiful manners that every one loved him. The three boys who lounged on the fence in front of the drill hall shook their heads doubtfully as Dawdles sauntered slowly toward them.

"What do you think, boys," he said, holding a letter for them to see, "Uncle Jim is going to spend the summer in Montana, and wants me to go with him."

"I wish I were in your shoes," said the captain.

"I wish I were not," said Dawdles, heartily. "It's tramp, tramp, tramp all day, and slap, slap, slap mosquitoes all night. Uncle Jim is all right, but I would rather stay at home."

"What do you go for, then?" asked Phil.

"I have to. Father and mother are going to Europe. I would rather go to Montana than get seasick, as I always do."

"It will do you good," said the captain, sternly, "and I hope a bear gets after you. I would like to see you chased, Dawdles."

So Dawdles went to Beaver Lick, a beautiful place, half way up the fragrant pine trees. There he shivered as they sat about the camp fire and imagined he heard the howl of wolves and bears all around him. At such times he crept closer to Uncle Jim, who pretended not to see the nervous tremor, and talked of other things.

Dawdles found a companion in Hawkeye, the Indian boy, who sold wild berries at the camp. Hawkeye ran the errands, while Dawdles lounged around. Still, it made the white boy ashamed to hear the Indian's ambitions. Poor Hawkeye! His father rarely allowed him to go to the reservation boarding school, though the boy was quick and learned easily. His brown eyes beamed with delight when Dawdles offered to help him with his studies. The two spent many an evening over their books while Mr. Belden idly smoked and thought that the red boy would teach quite as much as he learned.

"Uncle Jim," Dawdles demanded one morning, as he sat on a stump and watched Mr. Belden clean his gun, "the Indians used to own this country. The white men didn't buy it. How did they get it?"

"That's a hard question, my boy. Some people would say we stole it; others, that we took it by right of power."

Dawdles rubbed his back against the tree. "I think I'll give Hawkeye that bridle you let me have. He has a pony and no bridle, and I have a bridle and no pony. That is, if you don't mind," he added, hastily.

"I don't mind," and Mr. Belden never smiled at the boyish attempt to make up to Hawkeye for the injustice of the white man. "He's a nice boy."

"I wish Jack could have him on the team. He runs like chain lightning, and is slippery as an eel. He would make a dandy tackle. Oh, dear, I wonder if I will ever be any good in this world?"

"Of course you will," said Mr. Belden, decidedly. "That is why the good Lord sent you into it. You are twice the boy you were when we came West."

Dawdles' face flashed with pleasure, but, boy-like, he tried to conceal it.

"Are you going up the mountain?" he asked.

"Yes; Reddy saw tracks of a mountain lion—pshaw, Dawdles, you needn't faint. The lion isn't here. I thought you were all over that nonsense. What are you and Hawkeye going to do?"

"Going down toward Buxton. There are some views over the valley that I want to take for mother."

Mr. Belden's face brightened again. The Dawdles of a month ago would not have walked a mile for all the views in Montana.

"Take care of yourselves," he called back to them, "and be home before dark."

Hawkeye carried the camera and lunch basket, while over his shoulder was slung the new bridle, for he meant to stop and bring his pony back with him. They sauntered down the trail that stretched straight as an arrow before them. When they were half way to Buxton Dawdles proposed that Hawkeye should go on and get the letters, and he would wait for him at the fork after taking the pictures. Hawkeye darted swiftly away.

* * * * * * *

The shadows were growing longer when Dawdles rubbed his heavy eyes after a nap and jumped up. Where was Hawkeye? He should have been there long ago. He looked down the deserted trail. Some way he seemed to feel that Hawkeye was in trouble; so he picked up his camera and started down the trail. As Dawdles neared the cut in the mountains he heard a murmur of angry voices. Quickening his steps, he came upon a group of wild, rough men, gathered threatingly about an Indian boy. It was Hawkeye.

"What's the matter?" asked Dawdles, as soon as he could speak.

"Horse thief" drawled the man beside him. "Two of Naughton's horses are gone, and he thinks the Indian took 'em."

Dawdles' breath came in a great gasp. He knew how Westerners punished horse thieves. A wild desire to run away almost overpowered him. But Hawkeye was his friend.

"It is a lie!" he shouted. "Hawkeye never touched his old horses."

Naughton stared at him. "Look here, my young tenderfoot," he said, with dangerous gentleness, "if you have any regard for that white skin of yours you'll take it back up trail."

Dawdles' eyes blazed, and without stopping to measure the distance between a grown man and a half-grown boy he pulled off his coat and squared his fists.

Naughton started forward, and then stopped with a coarse laugh. The other men, quick to follow his lead, laughed, too. Dawdles began to speak quickly, forcibly.

"You all know who I am. Rob Belden, from the camp up on the Lick. Let me take Hawkeye back with me, and my uncle and I will prove that he is innocent. Or, else, let Hawkeye go, and I'll stay until he brings Uncle Jim."

A fierce scowl darkened Naughton's face. "Come on, boys," he called, "we have wasted time enough."

Naughton's whip quivered in the air. "Touch him if you dare!" yelled Dawdles, frantically. "I'll see he has fair play. What proof have you that he has your horses? Come on, Hawkeye."

"Don't move a step," ordered Naughton, thoroughly aroused. Dawdles looked him steadily in the eye. He was not a bit afraid now.

"Excuse me," he said calmly, and with his hand on Hawkeye's shoulder, he forced him past Naughton, through the crowd, out into the road. The men stood aside to let him pass. His courage went up. When he stood in the road where he fancied they were safer, he stopped to ask again: "What proof have you?"

"Proof," almost howled Naughton; "didn't we find him with this bridle, and isn't it the identical one that's hung in my barn for six weeks?"

Dawdles took the bridle. "No, it isn't," he said, emphatically. "It's one I gave Hawkeye myself this morning. If you look you can see where I tried to mark it with a brand. Why didn't you tell them, Hawkeye?"

"I did try, but they wouldn't believe me," said the boy bitterly.

"You ought to be ashamed, Mr. Naughton," said Dawdles. "You might be glad I came along."

"That's so," assented a voice, and some one raised a cheer.

Dawdles flushed. "I hope you will find your horses," he said politely.

It was Mr. Naughton who told Uncle Jim about it, and after he had gone Mr. Belden hunted up Dawdles.

"Rob," he said, and it was the first time in many years he had called him anything but Dawdles, "I'm proud of you!"

Rob's face quivered. "It wasn't anything," he stammered; "anyone would have done it."—Washington Star.

Whistler's Judgment.

A Whistler story is told by friends of Miss Pamela Smith, the young American artist who has made a reputation abroad by her original work in color and black and white. Miss Smith's designs, while they show uncommon imagination, are technically crude, and a friend of hers who knew Whistler was anxious to get his opinion of them. She took a portfolio of Miss Smith's illustrations to the painter, and waited anxiously as Whistler examined them.

He looked them over carefully, and remarked, gruffly, "She can't paint."

Then he went through them again. "And she can't draw."

A third time he looked through the portfolio, pausing thoughtfully over each sketch.

"But she doesn't need to," he concluded.—Harper's Weekly.

The Tibetan Bible.

The "Kah-Gyur" or Tibetan Bible, according to a writer in the Kansas City Journal, consists of 108 volumes of 1000 pages each, containing 1083 separate books. This writer says: "Each of the volumes weighs ten pounds and forms a package 26 inches long, 8 inches broad and 8 inches deep. This Bible requires a dozen yoke for its transport, and the carved wooden blocks from which it is printed need rows of houses, like a city, for their storage. A tribe of Mongols paid 700 oxen for a copy of this Bible. In addition to the Bible there are 225 volumes of commentaries, which are necessary for its understanding. There is also a large collection of alleged revelations which supplement this Bible.

A CRITICAL TIME.

When maw is cleanin' house, you bet
We ain't got much to say;
The baby that would whine an' fret
Throughout the livelong day
Now does jest what maw wants him do—
He's silent as a mouse,
An' all us other youngsters, too,
When maw is cleanin' house.

When maw is cleanin' house, then pop
He wears a solemn frown;
Without his breakfast out he'll hop
An' git his meals down town.
An' late at night we'll hear him swear
Because he's caught a douse
From some old pail left standin' there
While maw was cleanin' house.

When maw is cleanin' house, by gosh,
There's soapsuds high an' low;
An' water 'round you comes, ker-slosh
Most anywhere you go.
The rooms is cold, the meals is bad,
It's one continual souse
An' we will all be more than glad When maw's done cleanin' house.
—Louisville Courier Journal.

JUST FOR FUN

"In our amateur theatricals, I carried off the honors." "I was wondering what had become of them."—Cleveland Leader.

He—But what does your father see in me to object to? She—He doesn't see anything in you. That's why he objects.—Chicago News.

Pell—Did Hardup ever hear from that uncle of his who made a fortune out west? Mell—No, his uncle heard of him first.—Detroit Free Press.

"De bird dat can sing an' won't sing," said Uncle Eben, "ain' as bad as de bird dat can't sing and insists on buttin' in."—Washington Star.

Ethel—I know he's rich, but isn't he too old to be considered eligible? Edith—On the other hand, he is too eligible to be considered old.—Puck.

It often happens that man will put himself to no end of trouble to find the key to a woman's heart, when all the time the door is wide open.—Life.

"Yes, Miss Pert, I am the sole remaining member of my family." "I read just yesterday that the lobster was becoming extinct."—Houston Post.

"So you took an ocean voyage for your health?" "Yes." "How did it work?" "I got seasick and never felt so miserable in my life."—Washington Star.

"Is that John givin' the college yell inside?" "That ain't the college yell; the old man's flailin' him out with a hickory, an' he's givin' the home yell."—Atlanta Constitution.

Edyth—Are you going to Niagara Falls on your wedding trip? Babette—No; I went there on my two previous wedding trips and I believe it's a hoodoo!—Detroit Free Press.

Nell—She claims that she makes it a point to be blind to the faults of others. Belle—Well, she may be blind, but she's not deaf. She likes to listen to tales of them.—Philadelphia Ledger.

First Waiter—Did that Arizona ranchman give you a tip? Second Waiter—I should say he did. He told me if I didn't step lively he'd blow off the top of my head.—Detroit Free Press.

"What," asked the young physician, "is the secret of your success?" "I make it a rule to find out what a patient wants to do," answered the wise old doctor, "then I order him to do it."—Chicago News.

"Mr. Jones, I called to ask you to join our church." "I'd like to join, parson, but can you wait a few weeks? That—ahem! excuse me, my new automobile isn't running yet just as it should do."—Houston Post.

"No," said Mrs. Housekeep, "my husband is not at home. He's out hunting, as usual." "Hunting? Why, this is the close season—" "He's hunting a cook. That season is always open."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"To be successful in politics," said the young man, "I suppose you've got to keep your wits together at times." "Well," replied the politician, "that's not so important as to keep your lips together at the right time."—Philadelphia Press.

Husband—Do you know that every time a woman gets angry she adds a new wrinkle to her face? Wife—No, I did not; but if it is so I presume it is a wise provision of nature to let the world know what sort of a husband she has.—New Yorker.

If you peep under your pie at the bottom crust your hostess will be offended. If you do not take the precaution your stomach may be insulted. The only safe rule in this dilemma is to insult the one you can afford to insult.—Boston Transcript.

"Come, Willie," said his mother, "don't be so selfish. Let your little brother play with your marbles a little while." "But," protested Willie, "he means to keep them always." "Oh! I guess not." "I guess yes, 'cause he swallered 'em."—Philadelphia Press.

An Example to Follow.

"What were the last figures on the bulletin for Brown?" demanded Mr. Harris, when he and his son had been at home half an hour, and his vexation at the way the election seemed to be going had cooled a trifle.

"I don't remember," said John, whose interest in the election was but lukewarm, and who was then with Nansen in the "Farthest North."

"Don't remember!" thundered his father. "Don't remember, sir! If you are so stupid you can't remember a few important figures for ten minutes at a time, why don't you write them down, as I do?"—Youth's Companion.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. M. E. HARLAN.

Subject: Moral Amusement.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Dr. M. E. Harlan, pastor of the First Church of Christ, Sunday morning gave another of his series of sermons on "Problems of Power For Plain People," the special subject being "The Problem of Morally Healthful Amusements." In February he offered prizes for best replies to questions covering the several problems to be discussed. He sent a printed list of these questions to several hundred people over the country. The sermon was based largely on the replies he received. The text was from Ecclesiastes iii:4: "There is a time to laugh and a time to weep." Among other things he said:

A few years ago, when a certain supposed ornament (?) to French society was asked what he did, he replied: "My business is to amuse myself." The history of the church is but a history of the struggle between men and women like this Frenchman, on the one hand, and, on the other hand, those who have had no place for a smile in their religion. The world has never lacked the stoic and the sensualist. To the stoic the church has seemed very lax. To the sensualist she has seemed too strict. The church always has stood and always will stand against the purposeless lives of both of these extremes. If to the mere pleasure seeker the church has seemed dogmatic and damnatory, we must remember that pleasure has been tyrannical and brazen and absurd. To him who worships the god of pleasure, even otherwise harmless pleasures become dissipation till the world is full of the insipid in heart and the vile in character and the purposeless in life. God did not make the world for mere amusement, neither did He design that it should be run by the mere rollickers. Yet desire for food and clothes is no more an indication of the physically robust and normal man than are the demands for laughter and amusement indices of the normal, mental and spiritual man. The question is not, therefore, one of amusements, but what kind and how much.

No doubt that the church has often been too closely allied with the stoic in exercising damnatory power respecting all forms of amusements. But before we censure too severely let us take into account the conditions of her early history. The church began her mighty march of conquest in cities where all sorts of lewd and obscene amusements were the rule—Rome, Corinth, Ephesus, etc. In these cities the god of pleasure held such high carnival that industry was throttled and domestic life was weakened. Rome's great amphitheatre, seating 385,000 people, could easily be filled with the morbid crowd that measured the worth of the amusements by the fury of the entertainment and by the number of men and horses slain merely for their amusement. The Emperor Trajan gave a three months' show in which 10,000 men and 11,000 beasts were slain to amuse the very best people of Rome. Men would appear on the stage dressed gorgeously, when suddenly flames would burst forth all over their bodies and they would die writhing in agony of flames to the delight of the god of pleasure. Often Christians were forced spectators and often unwilling participants in these brutalities. "Food and fun" was the hilarious cry of these amusement loving people that haunted with its awful hiss the ears of the dying gladiators. The popularity of the ruler was measured by his willingness and ability to satisfy this cry for "food and fun." An unwilling witness to these debaucheries in the name of amusement, can we wonder that coming from such a birthplace the church has at times been extreme?

Gibbon tells us that in the days of Rome's worst famines she dismissed her senators and patrons of art, but to satisfy her god of pleasure she kept her vile vestal virgins and her 6000 dancers and singers of the lewd sort to amuse her as she staggered down to death or lay in the last convulsions of her dying hour. He will not criticise too harshly the church who has come with her down her historic way and has witnessed her death struggle with the professional dispensers of amusement, who, as vile in purpose as the vestal virgins and who for financial gain will pander to the selfish and sensual moods of men till they leave those who otherwise would be noble men and women, mere derelicts on life's sea to the menace of the innocent voyagers.

Even to-day under the spell of this pleasure good men will pay an uncomplaining tribute to her and do not hesitate to keep an open account with the dispensers of hilarious and sensuous amusements about dance halls and theatres, while at the same time they will become exceedingly poor and saving if approached for charity or philanthropy or justice. The mere vagabond on the streets with his hand organ and monkey, or the grewsome and discordant "curb stone band" take in the revenue that belongs to laundryman or grocer, as though these mountebank dispensers of amusement were more deserving than they.

Seeing how Rome amused herself to death and how Spain amused herself with her bull fights out of one of the first rank powers into the imbecile skeleton she now represents, no wonder our Puritan fathers were fearful of this pleasure god. He is blind who sees no inconsistence in the Puritanical bans on all forms of amusement till a man must be or at least appear miserable before he can be happy. But he to-day is worse than blind who does not see, and especially in city life, that the god of pleasure has become daringly despotic and that she tyrannically invades every shrine of her devotees, and that no day is too sacred for her ribaldry and coarse jest. By pandering to the ruinous passion that would rather laugh than to think she would leave our fair land tenantless of the serious and the wise and fill it with a race of grinning pigmies. Any amusement that hinders me from doing my duty in my business during the week or makes me careless of my duties in the house of God or that would make serious thoughts a bore is to be avoided. Foster nor harbor no amusement that cannot grow consistently on the same stem with the Christian religion. The godless Coney Island craze creates a morbid desire for Sunday amusement that as a vampire feeds fat on the vitals of our holy religion.

I know there is danger of being misunderstood when I speak in detail. The man with a crabbed religion will think me too lax, while the man without conviction will think me too strict. With a zeal worthy of a better cause the church in the past has picked out a few amusements upon which it has placed the ban and left others with no censure. It has decreed that dancing and card playing and the theatres were of themselves sinful and devilish and were worse than are "Jacob and Ruth," or "Blind Man's Buff," or the more widely practiced game of miserliness or covetousness or "fibbing." It is a hopeful sign that the present tendency of the church seems to be to give more attention to the affirmative side of life rather than to act as Pharisaical judges on the negative. "Thou shalt not," is like a prop to keep a dying tree from falling, but it takes more than a prop to make a live tree grow. While the prop may have a place it is not nearly so important as some think.

I am not a theatregoer nor ballroom frequenter, neither do I know even the names of the different "playing cards," I feel that I have much better use for my time and money. From my observation I have no hesitancy, however, in agreeing with those who replied to my question that the theatre and dance and progressive euchre and cards are menaces to the development of the Christian life. While of themselves they may not be more harmful than the other forms of amusement named, their influence seems to be against them. To the question: "Do you personally know people who frequent the theatres and ballroom and euchre parties who at the same time are also leaders in prayer meeting and the Sunday-school as soul winners, with a good, healthful influence?" only two answered in the affirmative. Why? Does it not indicate that there is something out of harmony with these particular amusements and the healthful influence of the Christian life? Is it right to go counter to the testimony of people scattered over such a wide territory and from so many different denominations so long as we prize our religious influence?

If we say the theatre as a whole is of good influence and a necessity for the men who are carrying the great burdens in the commercial and industrial world, then it falls short of its purpose, for the theatre is supported not by the Cargenies and Rockefellers, but mostly by those who cannot afford it and at the same time do what they ought to in philanthropy. Most of the support comes from the younger class, who as yet have no great burdens to bear. As to why those who frequent them are not real forces in Christian work, read the following: President Eliot, of Harvard, says: "The influence of amusements may be drawn from the quality of the popular theatre. The taste is for the trivial spectacles, burlesques, vulgar vaudeville, extravaganzas, and the stage often presents to unmoved audiences scenes and situations of an unwholesome sort."

One of the leading dramatic critics of the English press, Mr. Clement Scott, says it is "nearly impossible for a woman to remain pure who adopts the stage as a profession and that the stage has a tendency to disorder the finer sensibilities and to substitute hollowness for sincerity," and adds: "I speak from my intimate experience with the stage running over a period of over thirty years." Is it right to demand amusement at the enormous price suggested by these men in the ruin of the virtue of womanhood whose profession is to amuse us and thus like Rome's vestals let their virtue pay the awful price for our mere entertainment? If it is "nearly impossible" to adopt the stage and remain pure, then it is not Christian to demand that form of amusement on whose altars womanhood is sacrificed. If the sacrifice was that of our own sons and daughters would we be willing to make it simply to amuse people?

The stage cannot be kept up without using somebody's daughters on the altar. Now the question becomes a double one—not only can I have Christian motives by frequenting the theatre, but is it right to ask that somebody's daughter run the risk of such an awful temptation as that to which the stage subjects them for my mere amusement, granting that the stage has many of the most noble as its adornment and that many of our best people patronize it? Yet if the flame of the theatre passion demands such fuel, can I afford to be a party to the transaction? I would not appeal to prejudice nor act as judge over other men's consciences nor pass hard ecclesiastical laws of disbarment against those who might differ with me. I make my appeal to the heart's sense of justice to make man or woman who may have enough of the Christly ambition to make the most of life by shunning that form of amusement of any kind which runs such tremendous risks.

Are you asking me if a man is to be deprived of his rights just because he is a Christian? This is a good question over which to pause and ask for the sake of others not what are my "rights," but what are my duties and obligations?

A Robert Louis Stevenson's Prayer.

Lord, behold our family here assembled. We thank Thee for this place in which we dwell; for the love that unites us, for the peace accorded us this day, for the hope with which we expect the morrow; for the health, the work, the food and the bright skies, that make our lives delightful; for our friends in all parts of the earth, and our friendly helpers in this foreign isle. Let peace abound in our small company. Purge out of every heart the lurking grudge. Give us grace and strength to forbear and to persevere. Offenders, give us the grace to accept and to forgive. Forgetful ourselves, help us to bear cheerfully the forgetfulness of others. Give us courage and gaiety and the quiet mind. Spare to us our friends, soften us to our enemies. Bless us, if it may be, in all our innocent endeavors. If it may not, give us the strength to encounter that which is to come, that we be brave in peril, constant in tribulations, temperate in wrath, and in all changes of fortune, and down to the gates of death, loyal and loving one to another. As the clay to the potter, as the windmill to the wind, as children of their sire, we beseech of Thee this help and mercy for Christ's sake.—From the Works of Stevenson.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 15.

Subject: The Suffering Savior Isa. liii. to liii., 12—Golden Text, Isa. liii. Memory, Verses 4-6—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. The humiliation and ... the Savior (vs. 13-15). The ... of the whole passage is the ... contrast between the present degradation and the future ... Jehovah's Servant.

II. The suffering Savior (vs. 1-3). "Believed our report." The ... the prophets and the gospel. ... The world is still full of ... believe this report is not ... sent to the truth of it, but ... it that the conduct will be ... it. The Jews did not receive ... therefore Christ was to them ... "comeliness." "Arm of the Lord" ... arm is a symbol of power, ... instrument by which we ... purposes. It is put for the ... God (Isa. 51:9; 52:10). It ... God's power in defending ... in overcoming His enemies, ... ing the soul. "Revealed" ... known, seen, understood. ... tions in this verse are strong ... total denials. 2. "For." ... now gives the reason why ... not believed. "He." ... "Grew up" (R. V.). The ... is at the time Christ's sufferings ... finished and He was entering ... glory. "As a tender plant." ... up small and of no reputation, ... family nearly extinct, like a ... plant springing unnoticed from ... hid in a barren and dry ... which nothing great was ... "And as a root," etc. The ... springs up from a root. Such a ... would lack strength and beauty. ... figures depict the lowly and ... tive character of the small ... orous beginning. "See. ... former part of this verse refers ... birth and childhood, the latter ... first public appearance. "No ... This refers to His state of ...

3. "Despised." By the ... great. "Rejected." "Forsaken" ... renounced. "We hid ... His appearance was such as ... men to turn their backs ... faces with disgust. "Men ... as though He had a dis... leprosy." "Esteemed Him not" ... to recognize His worth.

III. The atoning Savior (vs. 4-12). "Hath borne." The ... the consequences of sin fell upon ... the innocent, and that He bore ... deserved sufferings as a ... half of His people. ... nesses."—R. V., margin. ... ness is not to take it away ... to endure it. Christ endured ... own person the penal consequences ... the people's guilt. "Sorrows" ... pains. How did Jesus bear our ... and sorrows? 1. In His ... By His healing power. "Stricken" ... The expression used when God ... a man with severe and sudden ... especially leprosy, which was ... as the stroke of God's hand ... direct consequence of sin. The ... is only a strong image for such ... ings as are the evidence of God's ... against sin. 5. "Wounded." ... He was pierced because of our ... lions, crushed because of our ... The strong verbs pierced and ... are probably metaphors expressing ... fateful ravages of leprosy. "Bruised." ... Applied to the body, "crushed" ... to the mind, severe inward agony ... plied. "Of our peace." The ... ment needful to procure ... V., margin. "His seed." ... spiritual Israel of the future, ... who by His means are converted ... knowledge of Jehovah. "In His ... Under His government or ... 11. "Satisfied." He shall ... blessed fruits resulting from His ... ferings as amply to repay ... them. 12. "With the great" ... among the great. His kingdom ... rule among the nations. "To ... spoil." There shall flow to ... His kingdom the wealth, the ... the numbers, that the strongest ... possess.

Birmingham, Ala.—Martha ... Fields, the 59-year-old woman ... jumped or fell from a fourth story ... dow of the Osceola house on ... avenue, Friday morning at ... o'clock, died shortly ... ried to St. Vincent's ...

Bonaparte at Work.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary ... parte arrived in Washington ... and took up his duties at the ... department.

SOUTHERN ...

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO THE PLA...

The Family Garden.

There is no adjunct to a home ... yards as much pleasure and profit ... well planned, a well planted and ... well cultivated garden, and I use the ... word in its broadest sense.

The family garden should be ... ciently located to the residence ... should consist of about one ... and, and enclosed with a ... structed and substantial post and ... The plot should be liberally fertilized ... with cow or horse manure, and ... should be broken early and deep. ... harrowed several times to make ... all fine and to thoroughly incorporate ... the manure before the early planting ... begins. The garden should be laid ... into four plots by making walks ... ways through the middle of the ... den, crossing in the ... walks should be laid off ... about three feet wide ... ters or drains on each ... beds or squares, and should be ... shaped so that even in wet ... there would be a high and dry ... to walk.

The selection of seed, the variety ... and when and how to plant are ... important. It is also important to ... all rows with a line and equal distance ... Nothing adds more to appearances ... not to results than order and system in ... the garden, and where this is practiced ... you may make sure there will be ... sults.

The garden should have a four-year ... system of rotation, just as the ... should have, in order to obtain best ... sults from your plants. The ... should be numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4, ... should rotate around once in four years.

For instance, I would take plot No. ... and plant spring turnips, radishes, ... tuce, onions or any other early maturing ... crop you may fancy, and as the ... came off I would plant a late corn or ... bean patch by planting every other ... row.

On plot No. 2 I would have the ... planting of Irish potatoes, and just ... before these mature I would plant corn ... and beans in every other row, or ... might be devoted to a late cabbage ... patch or some other late crop, as ... whatever crop was selected to follow ... the potatoes could be worked as the ... potatoes were removed.

On plot No. 3 I would have two ... plantings of corn for roasting ears, ... and when the corn was waist high ... put in white crowder peas. As the ... ears were pulled from the stalks I ... would cut out for the corn and give ... the peas more room.

On plot No. 4 I would plant all the ... later varieties of vegetables, such as ... tomatoes, beets, cucumbers, squashes ... or other varieties and fancy dictate ... that come on in the summer.

I would rotate these crops so that ... to illustrate, the potatoes would ... be planted on the same spot but once ... in four years.

I would plant along the borders of ... the walks a few sage bushes, thyme, ... asparagus and other such useful garden ... den plants, but I would have no fruit ... trees, currants, strawberries, raspberries or grape vines in the garden. I ... would have all these and other fruits ... in an orchard set apart for the purpose. Such things in a garden ... only interferes with the proper rotation system, but they shade and draw ... from the vegetables and prevent the ... full development.

Such a garden as I have planned, ... planted and worked would be a thing ... of beauty and a joy forever, and when ... you come in on a hot summer's day ... and sit down to the mid-day meal, ... templating with a ravished eye ... an aching void in the region of the ... stomach the many tempting dishes ... that the good wife (not a slattern) ... vans has prepared, you will feel ... "praising God from whom all blessings flow."—S. H. Christopher, Bay ... Vista, Ga., Southern Cultivator.

Proper Place to Select Seed.

With cotton, as with corn, the place ... to select seed for the next year's planting is in the field, selecting with reference to total yield of seed cotton, percentage of lint, date of maturity, ... hardness, form and size of bolls, leaf ... stalks, limbs and resistance to disease ... and insect ravages. By selecting from ... stalks that bear a large number of bolls ... per stalk, the tendency will be in the ... progeny to give an increased yield over ... the average of the patch, which is the ... seed obtained when one waits to ... cure his seed at random from the ... Another objection to securing seed ... from the gin in the usual way is that ... it is usually deferred until late in the ... fall and thereby, generally, seed from ... th last picking are obtained which ... are not the best seed. The best seed, ... as a rule, are from the middle picking.

In selecting a variety one must not ... be guided entirely by total yield of ... seed cotton, for often between two ... rieties producing about the same quantity per acre, the one with the smaller ... yield should be chosen because of its ... production of a larger amount of lint.

Sheffield, Ala.—The channel of the ... Tennessee river at Kingston, Tenn., ... is being cleared so that ore barges ... can pass through; a bar 700 feet long ... and 60 feet wide is the place being ... worked at present. In ten days the ... Keppler, the dredge boat now ... there, will return to the canal ... above, or eight miles above here. ... Captain Fletcher and a force of fifty ... men will be left in charge of the ... point on the river.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS
FOR JULY 15.

Subject: The Suffering Savior. Isa. liii. 3-12. Golden Text, Isa. liii. 5—Memory Verses 4-6—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

SOUTHERN FARM NOTES.

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO THE PLANTER, STOCKMAN AND TRUCK GROWER.

The Family Garden.

The [illegible] adjunct to a home that affords as much pleasure and profit as a [illegible], a well planted and a well kept garden, and I use the word in the broadest sense.

The family garden should be conveniently located to the residence; it should consist of about one acre of land, and enclosed with a well constructed substantial poultry fence.

The plot should be liberally fertilized with cow or horse manure, and it should be broken early and deep, and harrowed several times to make the soil fine and to thoroughly incorporate the manure before the early planting begins. The garden should be divided into four parts by making walks both ways through the middle of the garden, crossing in the centre. These walks should be laid off with a line, about four feet wide, with little gutters on each side next to the beds of squares, and should be oval-shaped so that even in wet weather there would be a high and dryer place to walk.

The selection of seed, the varieties and when and how to plant are very important. It is also important to lay off rows with a line and equi-distant. Nothing adds more to appearances if not to results than order and system in the garden, and where this is practiced you may make sure there will be results.

The garden should have a four-year system of rotation, just as the fields should have, in order to obtain best results from your plants. The plots should be numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4 and should rotate around once in four years.

For instance, I would take plot No. 1 and plant spring turnips, radishes, lettuce, onions or any other early maturing crop you may fancy, and as these came off I would plant a late corn and bean patch by planting every other row.

On plot No. 2 I would have two plantings of Irish potatoes, and just before these mature I would plant corn and beans in every other row, or it might be devoted to a late cabbage patch or some other late crop, and whatever crop was selected to follow the potatoes could be worked as the potatoes were removed.

On plot No. 3 I would have two plantings of corn for roasting ears, and when the corn was waist high put in white crowder peas. As the ears were pulled from the stalks I would cut out for the corn and give the peas more room.

On plot No. 4 I would plant all the later varieties of vegetables, such as tomatoes, beets, cucumbers, squashes, or other varieties the fancy dictated, that come on in the summer.

I would rotate these crops so that, to illustrate, the potatoes would not be planted on the same spot but once in four years.

I would plant along the borders of the walks a few sage bushes, thyme, asparagus and other such useful garden plants, but I would have no fruit trees, currants, strawberries, raspberries or grape vines in the garden, but would have all these and other fruit in a fruit orchard set apart for the purpose. Such things in a garden not rotated with the proper rotation crops, but they shade and draw from the vegetables and prevent their full development.

Such a garden as I have planned, planted and worked would be a thing of beauty and a joy forever, and when [illegible] on a hot summer's day [illegible] down to the mid-day meal, contemplate with a ravished eye and a watering mouth the region of the [illegible] the many tempting dishes [illegible] by a good wife (not a slothful servant) prepared, you will feel like thanking God from whom all blessings flow.—S. H. Christopher, Buena Vista, Ga., in Southern Cultivator.

Proper Place to Select Seed.

[illegible] as with corn, the place [illegible] for the next year's planting [illegible] field, selecting with reference [illegible] yield of seed cotton, period [illegible] of maturity, vigor, [illegible] and size of bolls, leaves, [illegible] and resistance to disease [illegible] ravages. By selecting from [illegible] a large number of bolls [illegible] tendency will be in the [illegible] an increased yield over [illegible] of the patch, which is the [illegible] when one waits to select at random from the gin [illegible] to securing seed [illegible] in the usual way is that [illegible] deferred until late in the [illegible] by, generally, seed from [illegible] being are obtained which [illegible] best seed. The best seed, [illegible] from the middle pick-

[illegible] a variety one must not [illegible] entirely by total yield of [illegible] for often between two varieties [illegible] about the same quantity [illegible] the one with the smaller [illegible] be chosen because of its [illegible] of a larger amount of lint

[illegible], Ala.—The channel of the [illegible] river at Kingston, Tenn., [illegible] cleared so that ore barges [illegible] through; a bar 700 feet long [illegible] feet wide is the place being [illegible] at present. In ten days the [illegible], the dredge boat now at [illegible] will return to the canal [illegible] or eight miles above here. [illegible] Fletcher and a force of fifty [illegible] will be left in charge of that [illegible] on the river.

Birmingham, Ala.—Martha J[illegible] Fields, the 59-year-old woman [illegible] jumped or fell from a fourth story [illegible] now of the Osceola house on Second [illegible] avenue, Friday morning at [illegible] o'clock, died later [illegible] being [illegible] to St. Vincent's [illegible].

Bonaparte at Work.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary Bonaparte arrived in Washington Friday and took up his duties at the navy department.

Cotton Seed Meal For Dairy Cows.

E. R. C., Carterton, Va., writes: I would like to try cotton seed meal with my cows, as wheat bran is too high to buy now, and would like some information on the subject.

You will find cotton seed meal an excellent food for dairy cows, but you should not feed more than three to five pounds per day, and the former amount is better than the latter, because cotton seed meal is a very concentrated foodstuff. Pound for pound cotton seed meal contains about three and a quarter times as much protein as wheat bran. Therefore, when you feed three pounds of cotton seed meal you are practically feeding an equivalent of ten pounds of wheat bran. It is the failure to realize the very concentrated nature of cotton seed meal that has led many persons to suppose it was not satisfactory food for cows and other classes of farm live stock. While wheat bran is an excellent food for the cow and by reason of its excellent physiological effect and its favorable action on the coat and digestive organs, generally speaking it is too high to feed at $25 per ton when one can purchase cotton seed meal at about the same price. Of course, a little wheat bran, corn meal or ship stuff should be fed with the cotton seed meal to obtain the best results. If you have good clover hay and plenty of corn fodder, however, cotton seed meal by itself will prove satisfactory. —Knoxville Tribune.

Water on the Farm.

Some of the older readers of the Progressive Farmer may remember a time when water for domestic purposes had to be brought from the spring which was generally 200 to 300 yards from the house. Stock had to be carried to the nearest branch or creek to be watered. Both people and stock suffered for water at times. A well in the yard saves much labor and insures an abundant supply of water. If a farmer has several head of stock to water it will pay him in one year to dig a well in his horse lot and get an old-fashioned trough that will hold fifty to seventy-five gallons. That will save much time. If the farmer has two or three hundred acres, it may be inconvenient to carry plow animals some distance for water during the long hot days. A well dug in a convenient place will save much time and give water to stock when needed. But better than wells, is a hydraulic ram, if a farmer has a spring or clear branch near his house with fall enough to use one. The ram, piping and tank will cost only two or three bales of cotton, and water will be furnished to house, kitchen and horse lot. Any farmer who runs four or five plows could afford that, and after using this water system awhile, he would never give it up. The well could be kept in good order for drinking water.—Charles Petty, Spartanburg County, S. C.

Hint About Transplanting.

In transplanting a tree or plant the point aimed at is to get the roots in the earth as nearly as possible in the same condition as that in which they were before removal. In order to do this the soil should be made very fine and well worked in with the hands among all the roots, which should be spread out in their natural positions.

Montgomery, Ala.—E. C. Coats, of Marengo county, was appointed tax commissioner for that county by Governor Jelks Friday.

Mobile, Ala.—In the People's Bank has been deposited a check to the credit of Mrs. C. T. Hearin, the amount of which is $100,000. The check was paid on a single policy on the late Charles T. Hearin by the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Fashion Notes

New York City.—The short coat is undoubtedly the smart wrap of the season, for the more elaborate costumes at least, and among them nothing is better liked than just such a blouse

Eton as this one. It has the vest effect, which is always smart, and it allows a choice of elbow or full length sleeves. In the case of the model the material is taffeta, the vest being of the material, trimmed with applique or embroidery, while the trimming is bands of the silk, stitched and edged with braid. There are, however, many other materials which are appropriate. Voile is exceedingly fashionable, and all the softer silks and wools are correct, while in addition to plain materials, checks and stripes are greatly liked. Again, the vest can be of contrasting material, of embroidery, or of the material simply banded with fancy braid, as may be liked. The full length sleeves are in every way desirable for the simpler costume, but nothing is quite so fashionable this year for the dressier toilettes as those of half length finished with frills of lace.

The Eton is made with the fronts, back and the vest, the vest being arranged under the fronts and the jacket being slightly full at its lower edge, finished with a pointed belt. The sleeves are made to form voluminous puffs above the elbows and are in full mousquetaire style below and are arranged over the fitted linings. The flare cuff is exceedingly becoming, and it can either be arranged over the sleeves of full length or made to finish the one cut off at the elbow.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is four and one-half yards twenty-one, four yards twenty-seven or two and three-fourth yards forty-four inches wide, with two yards of lace for frills and one and seven-eighth yards of applique to trim as illustrated.

Tam O'Shanter Crown.

A picture hat in black transparent braid had a Tam o'Shanter crown and a wide, flexible brim, for a wonder, not turned up anywhere, but allowed to droop around the face like a child's hat. The trimming was rose wreaths, blush pink and white, part of the wreath appearing in the underbrim, against the hair, and the rest encircling the crown. A very large black aigrette trimmed the front of the hat.

Sun Pleated Walking Skirt.

No method of obtaining fulness is more fashionable or more graceful than sun pleating. Illustrated is a novel skirt which shows that treatment, while it is so arranged as to be smooth over the hips. In the case of the model it is made of champagne colored chiffon voile with banding of silks, but there are almost innumerable soft materials this season and any one of them would be effective. Not alone are silks and wools appropriate, but the thinner, softer cotton voiles and the like are also desirable.

The skirt is made in a succession of gores which provide abundant fulness for the pleats at the lower edge, while they allow of less bulk at the upper portion. It is first sun pleated, then shirred on indicated lines and arranged over a foundation yoke.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is sixteen and three-fourth yards twenty-one, eleven yards twenty-seven or nine yards forty-four inches wide, when material has figure or nap; ten and one-half yards twenty-one, eight and one-half yards twenty-seven or seven yards forty-four inches wide, when material has neither figure nor nap.

Inexpensive Dresses.

Very effective and at the same time inexpensive dresses can be made of oriental satin in cream or pale shades, finished with a deep chemisette, a fichu and elbow sleeves of cream muslin, and worn with a big picture hat. Of course the great beauty of costumes like this lies in their simplicity and picturesqueness. A fine ivory cloth dress I noted at a morning musicale recently seemed to have a kind of blouse and tunic of fancy guipure with a folded vest of soft satin and a wonderful waistband of gold. The waistband or ceinture, indeed, plays an important part in fashions, and is interesting on account of the variety of shades in which it is made.—New York Evening Mail.

A Parasol Hint.

A beautiful parasol in pale blue taffeta had a border of natural linen crash embroidered in French knots in pale blue. Edging the linen was a tucked piece of silk about two inches wide.

A Late Design by May Manton.

GOVERNOR DOUGLAS TELLS BOYS HOW TO WIN SUCCESS

"Stick to Your Last," Says the Chief Executive of the Bay State, 'and Keep Your Ambitions High."

FROM a place at the cobbler's bench at a mere pittance, William L. Douglas has risen to the highest position in Massachusetts, that of Governor, and has made himself a millionaire. He is to-day the ideal "successful man" in business and politics, and has just had the honor of declining a second nomination for Governor, which was practically assured to him.

His rules and precepts of success are given by him through the Boston Sunday American. They are rules that he has tried and tested; the rules which have elevated him to the highest position in the gift of his State; the rules which have won for him an enormous fortune.

The Governor is interested in boys. He declares that these rules are given for the benefit of boys. Here they are:

By William L. Douglas,
COVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS.

What are the secrets of success? Will I tell the boys of Massachusetts what I think they are? Recently, in talking to a delegation of bright-faced boys, I told them that they should, in order to make the most of life, obey the old maxim, "Stick to your last."

If you don't you'll find that old ogre, called trouble, bobbing up in your pathway every now and then, and you'll never get to be on speaking terms with success.

Fortune, you knows, favors the brave. Well, in the battle of life the really brave man is the one with courage enough to "stick to his last" in the face of early rebuffs and temporary reverses. He's the fellow who will eventually be able to laugh at trouble and to get chummy with success.

What would you think of a shoemaker who, after making part of a shoe on one last, became dissatisfied, and started another shoe on a different last, keeping up this method until he had finally spent all his money for stock and had nothing but a lot of half-finished shoes to show for it? Foolish way to do, isn't it? But it's no more foolish than for a young man to tackle a new line of business every little while until he grows too old to learn any business thoroughly.

KEEP AMBITION AT TOP NOTCH.

Every thing in nature is fitted to do one thing well and spends its whole life doing it. You never hear of the ant going into the honey-making business; nor of the bee building ant-hills for a change. Each one knows its place in the world and sticks to it, and that is what boys must do if they would accomplish great things.

Of course, boys are somewhat handicapped as compared with the bees and ants. You see, boys are not often born with a knowledge of just what kind of last they're best fitted to peg away on. But nearly every boy at an early age displays an aptitude for something, and if that aptitude is properly developed the process of selecting a last is simplified.

And remember always to keep your ambition up to the top notch. Whatever you do, try to do it better than the other fellow. At school make it a point to stand at the head of your class; and at play don't be satisfied until you can jump the farthest or throw the straightest. Then when you enter business life this matter of getting ahead will become a habit.

DO WHAT YOU CAN DO BEST.

Now I want to give you another thing to think about while you're growing up and preparing to win fame and fortune in the commercial world. It is this: Don't try to do what you like—do what you can. That's a good companion-piece for "stick to your last." Don't let the attraction of something you don't know lure you away from the thing you do know. Once upon a time a young man whose father made pickles, and who had learned the pickle business from A to Z, decided that he'd like to go into the business of making molasses candy. He didn't know anything about it, but he liked molasses candy and thought it would be great fun to make it and sell it. So he proceeded to try his hand at the business. The result was disastrous. His candy wasn't good candy, because he didn't know how to make it properly, and, therefore, nobody wanted to buy. Finally he went back to the pickle business and made a fortune, because he certainly did know how to make good pickles, and everybody bought them.

Do what you can and stick to it. That's wisdom. About the most striking sentence I remember is this one, written by the great philosopher, Thomas Carlyle: "The king is the man who can." There's a whole volume of sound sense contained in those seven one-syllable words. All the elements of success are there set forth and the whole secret of greatness sticks out conspicuously from that simple sentence—"The king is the man who can."

EVERY BOY MAY BE A KING.

It is possible for all you boys to be kings, provided each fits himself to do some one thing better than others do it. But you must work and study and persevere. You can't inherit kingships from your fathers; you must win them in competition with the world. As to how to go about this, every boy will have to work out the problem for himself. There is no fixed rule for determining the capabilities of any boy, and the methods that will convert one bundle of human material into a successful business man may prove a total failure when applied to the next parcel. Boys in their dispositions and possibilities bear a striking resemblance to toads. Did you ever poke a toad to make it jump? If you did, then you know that you can never tell what direction or how far toads will jump until after they have been poked. And it's the same with boys. We never know what a boy can do until after he has been tested. But we're sure of one thing, and that is this: If a boy chooses his last in the light of his ability, and sticks to it through thick and thin, he'll win out in the end.

Death of Glengarry's Daughter.

It seems wonderful to read of the death of a daughter of the Highland Chief who was the original of Fergus MacIvor in "Waverley." Mrs. Forbes, mother of Sir William Forbes, of Pitsligo, who has just died at the age of eighty-four, was a daughter of Alexander MacDonell, the sixteenth chief of Glengarry, who was an intimate friend of Scott, and there are many references to him in Lockhart's delightful biography of his father-in-law. "Glengarry" was the last highland chieftain who kept up the ancient feudal customs as far as possible, and he always traveled in befitting state with a "tail" of clansmen in attendance.

He died in 1828, leaving his immense property heavily encumbered. His son and successor emigrated to Australia, and the estates of Glengarry and Glenquoich were sold in 1840 for £120,000 to the late Lord Dudley (then Lord Ward), from whom they were afterward purchased by Mr. Edward Ellice ("the Bear"), and they now belong to his daughter-in-law. Scott described Glengarry as "savage and picturesque."—London Truth.

Japanese Radish.

Picture to yourself a pure white radish the size of a baseball or larger, firm and solid. Such is the Japanese radish. Cut it, and you find it has the consistency of a Baldwin apple, firm and fine grain; taste, and it proves to be away ahead of the most delicate spring radish that ever passed your lips. It will thrive at any season during the growing year; it may be transplanted or left alone; it is as good to eat when in bloom as in its younger days, and one radish will provide bulk enough for three or four people or more.—Garden Magazine.

Where Ignorance is Bliss.

A well-known physician has observed that the best thing that can happen to a man with diabetes is not to find it out, and the same might be said with some justice of a number of diseases.—Hospital.

A Correction.

Senator Dubois, of Idaho, tells of the case of a miner in that State who had been reported as dead by a number of the Idaho newspapers.

It would appear that the miner had a keen sense of humor, for with reference to an obituary of himself which appeared in a Boise City paper the alleged dead man addressed the editor with a view to correcting certain misstatements in the said obituary.

"My dear sir," wrote he, "relative to the obituary of myself appearing in your issue of the 22d ultimo, I beg leave to call your attention to several errors therein. In the first place, I was born in Massachusetts, not in Rhode Island; secondly, the cause of my death was not heart disease."—Collier's.

Musical Instruments.

"I see that a committee from the Albany Musicians' Union has called on the United Traction Company," said a young father to me this morning, "to ask permission to carry on the cars their bass viols and bass drums. If that concession is made I shall insist on being allowed to take my baby carriage on board. They both come under the head of music and are both public necessities. Theirs is instrumental music while mine is vocal."—Albany Journal.

Sleeping Sickness.

To the present science has proved powerless to cope with that strange malady, the sleeping sickness. The ablest physicians, not only of Belgium, but of England, France and Germany, have studied the disease exhaustively. Though much valuable data relating to its cause and effect have been collected, the discovery of its antidote seems to be as far off to-day as ever.—From "The Story of the Congo Free State," by Henry Wellington Wack.

United States Consul Covert, of Lyons, France, reports that the European orange crop is almost a complete failure.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Elder, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

Thursday, July 6, 1905.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

UNION CLUBBING LIST. . . .

The Union And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
The Union And Home & Farm	1.00
The Union And Dixie Home	1.00
The Union Saturday News	1.25
The Union And Weekly Age Herald	1.25
The Union And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
The Union and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.50
The Union And Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.50
The Union And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
The Union And Tri-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

THORSBY AND B. B. COMER.

Some persons have intimated that Mr. Comer was not really expected at Thorsby on the 4th of July, so in order to put such persons right we publish his letter to the committee, which letter fully explains the matter:

"Birmingham, Ala., July 1, 1905.

"Messrs. J. F. Peterson, G. W. Phalen, J. Bice, G. H. Gerald, P. K. Villadsen, L. V. Stabler, Thorsby, Ala.

My Dear Sirs:—Yours of the 30th ult. received and noted. I regret exceedingly that I cannot meet your wishes. An important meeting of the commission takes place on Monday, July 3, and am not right sure we are going to get through. Again, I have got to be in Barbour county the evening of the 4th of July and Wednesday, the 5th and probably several days thereafter. I understood when you telephoned me that you were from Troy, Ala., and I knew that if I could get through at Montgomery Monday I could be with you at Troy on Tuesday and take the train the evening of the 4th for Barbour county, but if I could get off on the 4th to go to Thorsby there will be no connecting train with Barbour county.

I regret this more than you can think, as I have for a long time been very anxious to meet you personally at Thorsby, and some time in the summer between now and the middle of August at your pleasure I'll be very glad to come down some day or afternoon and talk to your people about the issues of the day. I am getting off my dissenting opinion to the recent decision of the majority of the railroad commission of the state. It will probably be published Tuesday morning and I will have sent to you a number of copies, which you can distribute among your friends. Think the reading of it will give a much clearer insight of the conditions that exist in Alabama today. According to the recent decision the producer, manufacturer and consumer of Alabama will always have the highest freight rate that the articles will pay and in a measure will be hired out to the owners of the railroads. I have tried hard to get a better rate on nursery stock and a better rate on fruit, and I think before we get through that we will secure better rates. We were glad to have been a help to you in your depot, and any time that I can serve you do not hesitate to call on me. Please remember that is my business and my pleasure. With kindest regards and regrets, I am yours very truly,

B. B. COMER.

A CARD.

Every Alliance man who wishes full information about the action of the Alliance committee that had the Fertilizer Factory matter in charge should attend the County Alliance meeting on July 19-20. Alliance matters will be treated IN the Alliance. BY members of that body.

Respectfully,
W. H. CONWAY.

Gate City, Ala., July 11, 1905.

Editor Union:

Dear Sir—Herewith you will find $2.00 in payment of subscription to your valuable paper. The Union has been a welcome visitor to my home for the past two years or more, and it has afforded me great pleasure to peruse its columns and read of the people, friends and my numerous relatives who live in the grand old county of Chilton, the place where I was born, and which I left with my father's family forty years ago, when I was four years of age. I note the many changes which time has wrought since I left there at the close of the civil war. It has grown from a poor, non-productive county to a valuable productive domain, all by the thrift and energy of its noble, honest and wide-awake citizens.

I remember when it required ten acres of land in Chilton to produce a bale of cotton, and now a half bale to the acre is a medium crop, often producing a bale to the acre, and the improvement in other crops has been in the same proportion, and I note also the great interest manifested in in all its branches, and a great improvement in its educational facilities; also the great interest manifested in the study of agriculture and horticulture, and last, but not least, the profound interest manifested by almost every male citizen of Chilton county in local, state and national politics which bespeaks a thinking and an intelligent people.

I was wonderfully delighted with the result of the last election in your county, for when the intelligent, thinking people rule all the people rejoice and are happy.

Success to THE UNION and readers.

BLANTON RIGGINS.

Clanton, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a few words in regard to the Farmers' Summer School to be held at Auburn July 25 to August 2.

To the farmer that believes the earth is round I would say it will pay you handsomely to attend.

Haven't you learned some good lessons from fellow farmers at home? Then go to Auburn and learn from the four to six hundred practical and successful farmers and the able corps of instructors that you will find there. Last summer I had the pleasure of attending the Summer School at Auburn and expect to attend hereafter each summer.

In our county we lose at least TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS in buying our fertilizers each year by not having studied the subject of fertilizers as we should. Now, shall we go on this way or are we willing to spend one two-thousandth part of what we have been losing to learn how to avoid that loss?

I am proud to say that some of our people are learning and are well pleased with results.

We are far behind on many other things, for instance, diseases of cotton, fruit trees, live stock, etc.; seed selection, farm machinery, terracing, rotation of crops and many others that will be ably discussed by experts and practical men. (See adv. in another column.)

Thanking the editor for the interest manifested by him and hoping to find Chilton county well represented, I am, yours for better farms and improved farming generally,

J. N. DENNIS.

Thorsby, Ala., July 7, 1905.

Pursuant to the call of the Ware House and Fertilizer factory committee, the committee and citizens assembled in the College at 11 a. m. several communities of the county being represented. On motion of J. Bice, A. G. Dake was elected chairman and J. W. Hayes secretary.

Mr. Oliver, of Talladega, addressed the congregation on the fertilizer business and the way to successfully conduct a fertilizer manufactory. Mr. Oliver made the people a proposition to take 50 per cent of the stock and let the farmers take the other 50 per cent.

Hon. Tipton Mullins was then called for and he suggested that the chairman ascertain from the body how much stock could be subscribed, and subscription for twenty-three shares was at once taken.

A motion was made by L. B. Pounds and seconded to appoint committees in the adjoining communities to solicit the subscription of shares and ascertain the amount of fertilizer used in those communities. Oliver's proposition rejected. On motion the body adjourned until 2 p. m.

At 2 p. m. J. Bice took the chair by request of Mr. Dake, the chairman, and called the body to order and J. A. Caddell was asked to act as secretary A resolution was then offered by L. B. Pounds and on motion was adopted as follows:

"Resolved, That we start a ware house and fertilizer factory with a capital of $10,000, no one person being allowed to hold more than $1,000 worth of stock."

A resolution was offered and on motion of J. D. Collins was adopted as follows: "Resolved, That we build a ware house to hold one thousand bales of cotton." It was moved and seconded to make the shares at $25 each, which motion was carried. Twenty-nine shares were subscribed for in the enterprise. A motion was made to appoint a committee in each community to work up the interest of the enterprise in their respective communities. Motion was carried. A motion was made and carried to retain the present chairman and secretary until the organization is perfected. Next a motion was made and carried to give the chair the right to appoint the committees. T. J. Collins was appointed for Union; J. G. Billingsley and Charley Foshee, Billingsley community; W. P. Murray and John Benson for Collins Chapel; B. E. Collam, Rocky Mount; W. H. Shaw, Providence; T. G. Cofer, Mars Hill; J. W. Hayes, Cedar Grove; T. M. Driver, Pleasant Grove; W. F. Deshazo, Mulberry; J. Bice and B. N. Martin were appointed committee at large. Next in order was adjournment to meet again at Thorsby July 18th to perfect the organization. All come.

Only $5 to be paid on each share next Tuesday and $5 in the fall.

J. BICE, Chairman.
J. A. CADDELL, Secretary.

Clanton, July 11, 1905.

Well, I can't stand it to be silent any longer. I must warn the "dear people." I like to see our party build up, but it looks suspicious to see so many democrats falling over each other, trying to see which one can say the nicest things about Mr. Roosevelt. Why, there was a committee appointed in Birmingham to meet the president when he comes next fall, and the democrats monopolized the whole thing, so the head men had to enlarge the committee so as to get a few republicans on it. I kinder looked at this with one eye skinned, but when I see Tipton Mullins applauding Mr. Roosevelt to the skies, I tell you it makes me uneasy, and when I take into consideration that so many democrats are coming over to our party I'm afraid the offices won't go round. Perhaps these fellows will say that they were just joking when the next election comes on, and that they never meant it; and when they holler "nigger" in the next campaign they'll say things have changed, etc., for some mighty strange things happen to democrats. I'll give a hundred dollars reward for any democrat that will say that the present administration is not for the interest of the entire people, or that the democrats could make it any better. I mean, of course, a democrat that does not want office, for it is generally understood that an office-hunting democrat is not responsible for what he says. Well, the famous dog has had his day, went through court and had the sheriff puzzled for several weeks, but didn't he show up oddly for a dog, just strayed off and took up his Birmingham, where they have dog law, too. I really believe that this dog got the idea that he was being tried for his life, and so the first chance he got he lit out; as he was tied with a rope around his neck in the court house. I expect he thought the jury had sentenced him to death. But Lee Hayes was too sharp for that dog, and on his trail he got, and never let up until he found him. Somehow it just suits Hayes to be sheriff. Why, he'd follow a dog to New York if he had a paper for him. I sometimes think that I'll run for sheriff, but then Messrs. Grant and Hayes and others would be disappointed. How would I look in the Legislature. I tell you I could swell up and say "Mr. Speaker," and I know I could find the treasurer's office to get my pay. All office holders get fat and look like they were doing mighty, and if it busts the populite and republican parties in the county I must have something or I'll go democrat sure, though the way things look now, there won't be much democratic party to go to. I tell you, the machine is about busted now. I heard a man say that he heard Colonel A. C. Smith say that he had no use for the democratic party as it was run in this county, and that he was with the people in their fight against the ring clique. And there's lots more like him. Say, Brother Smith, come over and get out of that crowd, and help us, the people that help you, and be where a good man won't feel so awful lonesome. One thing I'd like to have forgotten, Mr. Editor. I hear you've been burned out, and I hope that every one that owes you will pay up now. Say, boys, think what a fix our editor is in and I heard him say that if he could collect what was due him he could get along fairly well, so let's all pay him up our back dues and go a little in advance, and let's do it NOW. Well, I'll quit now, but the Lord only knows where I'll break out next time. We cotton folks had better call a meeting and stop cotton going up; but say haven't us and the Lord run it up, eh? Respectfully,

"JUST A VOTER."

COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

The County Commissioners were in session Monday and Tuesday. Present, Commissioners Conway, Glasscock, Robinson and Kendrick. The court examined the tax book, also looked over the result of Tax Commissioner Vanderveer's investigations which were submitted to them. He has been hard at work and called for a large number of increases in valuation of taxable real property. The personal property, such as mercantile stocks, etc., will be shoved up next year if the owners don't take warning and do it themselves. At the suggestion of Com. Conway the very small land owners were given one more chance to do their own raising, as the costs of the proceedings were so out of proportion to the benefits derived by the county, but this is the last chance. The first Monday in September (4th) is the day set for hearing the property owners' protests, if they have any to make.

BEAT NINE ITEMS.

We have just had a good rain and cotton is over ten cents and the farmers are all smiles. G. D. Collins went to Clanton Saturday. M. W. Mims who has been attending the agricultural school at Hamilton, came in Friday. Thomas Childress, Jr., visited relatives in Ensley last week. Will Dennis and his son, Thomas, spent two or three days at Dixie last week. There is to be a singing school started Wednesday, July 12, at the Cross Roads school house by Prof. John Gore. The protracted meeting at Cedar Grove is announced to start Saturday before the fourth Sunday of July. Mr. and Mrs. J. Bice, of Thorsby, visited Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Mims Sunday. J. R. Collins and family visited relatives near Collins' Chapel Saturday and Sunday.

NIM ROD.

CRYPTIC MASONRY.

Clanton Royal Arch Chapter, No. 116, publicly installed their officers for the ensuing Masonic year on Thursday evening, July 6, at the Methodist church. Past Grand H. P. and present Excellent Grand Secretary, Geo. A. Beauchamp, of Montgomery, was the installing officer, and performed his duty in his usual impressive manner, which made the ceremonial, aided by the work of a choir, especially trained for this occasion, very interestisg to the assemblage. At the conclusion all present were invited to the banquet hall in the lodge building, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with the colors of the Chapter, and there partook of a bountiful cold collation. The new officers are: E. A. Matthews, high priest; W. H. Sartor, king; J. R. Mullins, scribe; W. T. Aldridge, C. of H.; E. B. Deason, P. S.; W. I. Mullins, treasurer; A. C. Smith, secretary; J. Watts Moore, R. A. C.; H. T. Pipes, M. and 3rd V.; J. W. Stanfield, M. and 2nd V.; J. P. Hayes, M. and 1st V.; E. A. Knight, sentinel.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union.

Crops are small, but growing nicely since the rain. Much low land is laying out that would be better to put in pasture. Plow Boy, were you ever in a stock law district? Did you ever see a hog weighing, when dressed, 500 pounds? I have. I know a man that railroaded for 15 years, going from county to county, and state to state; and now he is back on his farm and raises corn, wheat, meat, syrup, etc., to do his family, asd has some to sell. This goes to show that a man learns something by moving round a little and seeing things. I had to pasture my logs last year or they would have died, and I have them on pasture, and they're looking fine. Hill Billy needs to read the Bible and see where Abraham and the other patriarchs had herdsmen to keep their stock from trespassing on their neighbors' pastures. While I keep up my stock, other men's stock are laying around my gate. I can split rails and have 1,500 stacked away ready for use, and timber to make more. Mr. Editor, my time is not out, but here is another year in advance, to help you out. Better luck next time.

WHIPPORWILL.

INDEPENDENCE DAY, FLAG DAY AND ALABAMA DAY AT SHILOH SCHOOL.

July 4th, 1905, was a day celebrated the country over, but nowhere was it more earnestly celebrated and heartily enjoyed than at Shiloh school. The teacher, Miss Howell, met and organized the school July 1, expecting to make the 4th mean as much to the children as possible in so short a time, but was delightfully surprised to find that many of the patrons and others had decided to spend the day at the school. Delighted further that bountiful baskets had been brought. But more delighted when a crowded house waited for the exercises of the day.

The dinner was fitting for the 4th, and all ate together as one large family, leaving baskets of not fragments, but best of eatables.

The audience in turn were delightfully surprised with the entertainment by the school. Many of the patrons expressed themselves as proud of the work their teacher had done in making a day of enjoyment and profit to all.

Besides the school exercises were timely speeches made by Elders Deason, Dobbs and Mr. Bice.

The exercises were enlivened by alternating music with the other things that made this independence day, flag day and Alabama day.

There were cold drinks in plenty, but it was again demonstrated that an all-day affair can be a grand success without anything strong. The behavior of the day was perfect.

All were loath to leave, as the crowd lingered around after being dismissed, some listening to music, some talking to friends.

Many more glad 4ths for Shiloh.

SUBSCRIBER.

MACEDONIA.

Evangelist J. H. Henika, traveling under the auspices of the "Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society," of Allegheny, Pa., will preach at the Waldrup school house near this place on July 25-26. Services strictly undenominational, will be held both morning and night. He is doubtless a minister of fine ability. Come and hear him speak of the great plan of Redemption.

A FRIEND.

Notice No. 26046.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz: Dalee Millar, Homestead Entry No. 35550, for the W. 1-2 of N. E. 1-4, E. 1-2 of N. W. 1-4, Section 10, Tp. 23 N. of R. 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Rebecca J. Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; C. Buck Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; James Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala., Thomas Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes

FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alabama

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers.
County and Office Supplies a Specialty.

Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave, BIRMINGHAM, Ala.

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association

of Alabama.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch
Organized February 3rd, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' Dwellings, Outbuildings and contents and Live Stock against Loss by Fire, Wind and Lightning. The Cheapest, Safest and Most Sensible Method of Insurance Known to Man.

Average Yearly Cost for Four Years 56-100 of 1 percent.

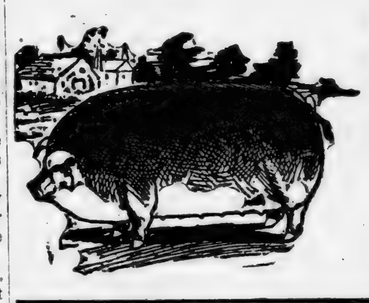
Full particulars furnished upon application to
WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Ala.

Gelder's Restaurant

Good Meals at Reasonable Prices

110 North 20th Street,
BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND FERTILIZERS

FOR SALE.

Troy Special & Mule Brand "Are the Best on Earth."

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - - Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Ala.

COURTS AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.

Spring Term—Third Monday in May.
Fall Term—Fourth Monday in November.
Judge—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
Solicitor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Clerk—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

Spring Term—Second Monday in March.
Fall Term—Second Monday in September.
Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
Register—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.

First Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

Second Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, first Monday November.

County Officers.

Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Solicitor—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would wish published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason 3rd Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman 3rd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman 2nd Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman 2nd Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee 4th Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 5th Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas 3rd Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas 2nd Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas 4th Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor Sunday before the second Sunday; T. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. Mr. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Second service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—Third Saturday, Clanton.

Amanda Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 250—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 423—First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 567—First Saturday, Billingsley.

Bozeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 411—Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Stanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 473—Tuesday on or before full moon, Stanton.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304—Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Geronermo Tribe, No. 90—First and third Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. of R.; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Eureka Lodge, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

BIG STORE,
...Head of The Procession.—
Clothing, Hats, Shoe
URNITURE,
...BURIAL NECESSITIES.
I. MULLINS,
Alabam
PRINTING CO
...akers and Lithographers.
...ffice Supplies a Specialty.
BIRMINGHAM, A
al Insurance Associati
of Alabama.
SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
...eople and for the People.
County Branch
...ed February 3rd, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
...Dwellings, Outbuildings and
...tock against Loss by Fire, Wind
...e Cheapest, Safest and Most
...nsurance Known to Man.
...56-100 of 1 percent.
...shed upon application to
...ACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Al
WOODLAW
FARM.
Barred
Plymouth Rocks
PURE BRED
Setting of 15 fresh eg...
50c. Packing for ship...
10c extra.
PURE BRED Duroc Jersey
Hogs.
Write us for prices b...
you buy. Address,
W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Ala
...s .Restaurant
...at Reasonable Pric...
...North 20th Street,
...GHAM, ALABAMA.
...MERCHANDISE A...
...RTILIZERS
...OR SALE.
...ial & Mule Bra...
...e Best on Earth.
...JONES,
Alab...
...er Prevents Fevers.
...S FURNISH PURE WA...
...water or no charge...made.
...n. Address
...E. SARBER CO.
Al...

...TS AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.

...ring Term—Third Monday in May.
...ll Term—Fourth Monday in No...
...ber.
...dge—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...olicitor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...lerk—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

...pring Term—Second Monday in ...ch.
...ll Term—Second Monday in Sep...ber.
...hancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...egister—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Cla...

County Court.

First Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

...econd Monday February, first Mo...y April, first Monday June, second ...nday July, second Monday August, ...st Monday November.

County Officers.

Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Solicitor—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would wish published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 3rd Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 3rd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 2nd Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 2nd Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 4th Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 2nd Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 3rd Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 2nd Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 4th Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; Sunday before the second Sunday; J. T. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. Mr. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—Third Saturday, Clanton.

Amande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 180—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 423—First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 167—First Saturday, Billingsley.

Bozeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 631—Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Stanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 473—Tuesday on or before full moon, Stanton.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304— Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Geronermo Tribe, No. 90—First and third Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. ...; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Eureka Lodge, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to July 12, '05, 7,954.
Price same date, 10 1-4c.
Total receipts season 1903-'04, 6,648.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

W. W. Robinson was a pleasant visitor Thursday.

Mr and Mrs. T. W. Robbins were in Clanton Thursday.

A. D. Massey was a welcome caller Thursday.

John W. Hayes and son, W. A., were pleasant visitors Friday. J. W. is sure one of the "sweet singers."

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nelson were in Clanton Friday. Mr. Nelson formerly lived in Illinois, where he still owns a valuable farm, but several years ago he bought the Kane plantation near Bice's ovens, and lives there.

F. J. Rodgers was in town Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards were in Clanton Saturday.

J. T. Logan and Lee Vickers were in town Saturday.

J. E. Kelley is visiting over in Coosa county.

J. D. Collins and little son were pleasant visitors Saturday.

I. C. Blackmon was a welcome caller Saturday.

R. J. Downs was a pleasant visitor Monday.

Charles Eastlund was in Clanton Monday.

I. E. Sarber, the water works man of Thorsby, was in town Monday.

E. L. Thornton, of Mountain Creek, is visiting Shelby Springs.

W. J. Bean was in Clanton Monday.

Mr. T. L. McKee and Miss Zora Marchs were married at the court house Saturday afternoon by Probate Clerk H. I. Honeycutt. While the throng of curious people who rush into the probate office to see a marriage was waiting, Mr. Honeycutt quietly married the couple as they sat in their buggy at the rear door, and the laugh was on the crowd. May the young couple be as successful in avoiding all unpleasantness through life as they were in this initial one.

Rev. J. T. Eckford filled the pulpit of the Metrodist church Sunday both morning and night. He sure gave his congregation a "heart to heart talk" in the morning.

Clanton B. B. club played three games at Union Springs last week, of which they lost two by scores of 8 to 0 and 7 to 1, and tied one 11-inning game, score 1-1.

Every one is glad to see John Garner and family back with us once again. We want John to stay this time. Next year Chilton Co. wants a new sheriff.

Rev. B. H. Vickers and Miss Esther were in town Tuesday. The little lady is improving in health. We are glad to say.

M. L. Giles and J. F. Hayes were in Clanton Tuesday.

A. P. R. Dahl, the surveyor, is in town doing some work for P. D. Wilson.

J. A. Mitchell was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

R. F. D. No. 6 at Clanton has been allowed by the postoffice department and will start up Sept. 1.

Circuit Clerk Collins went to the capital Wednesday on official business.

Attorney J. O. Middleton had quite an ovation at his birth place in Montgomery county on the 4th of July, when he made the oration of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Dennis were in Clanton Tuesday.

Mrs. M. K. Haynes has been very ill, but it getting better now, we are glad to say.

Judge R. M. Honeycutt was in Clanton Tuesday. He looks well, and it is a pleasure to see him around

J. A. Culp, Jr., and family have moved into Clanton and he says that he is prepared to do the best of painting, etc. He ought to do well here, since Painter Moon is gone.

Col. Sam Will John, of Birmingham, spent Wednesday here to close up the probate matter of Mrs. Lillian Gardner, which has been in the court a long time.

Rev. C. K. Helland and little daughter and J. F. Peterson, of Thorsby, were in Clanton Wednesday.

Mr. Youngblood, a brother of the architect who planned our court house, was here Tuesday and will submit plans and estimates for much needed additions to our jail.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

O. F. Scott and Miss Mollie Mims.
Thos. L. McKee and Miss Zora Marchs.

COLORED

John Dejarnette and Mary Houser

THORSBY LETTER.

G. H. Gerald has moved his real estate office into the quarters at the Thorsby Inn formerly occupied by J. F. Peterson. The postoffice is being moved to the Horn building. Our new depot is painted and now looks first class. Thorsby is developing into a cotton market, as nearly 200 bales were brought in and sold here last week. We have great hopes for the future, as the farmers have decided to build their ginnery, ware house and fertilizer factory here. Munroe Burnett and wife are spending their summer vacation here. Clarence Bice, of Montgomery, is here on a visit to his parents. Mr. Huton will remove his saw mill to Shelby county, and Prof. Ruffin has bought a half interest in the business. Mr. Hornsby is spending the week in Wetumpka, his old home. Shares in the Farmers' Factory are being sold right along; it will be a grand co-operative success. Mr. O'Grady has gone to Chicago, and Scott Caverno will take his place as secretary-treasurer of the Denison Lumber and Manufacturing Company. G. W. Phalin went to Birmingham on business Wednesday.

NEMO.

THE CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the Chilton Co. S. S. Association will be held at Maplesville, July 22 and 23, 1905. The basis of representation is: All ministers of the gospel, the superintendent and 3 delegates from each Sunday school in the county. It is earnestly desired that ALL the superintendents will announce this convention in their Sunday schools, see that delegates are elected and urge them to be present. The convention promises to be the most successful ever held during the ten years existence of the association. Several officers of the State S. S. Association will be present and men prominent in all county affairs will be in Maplesville to add their interest and enthusiasm to the S. S. movement in Chilton county.

MARY CARR GIBSON,
tf Secretary-Treasurer.

RUNAWAY MINOR.

All persons are hereby for bidden to harbor, employ or in any wise give aid or assistance to John Jackson, a minor son of the undersigned under penalty of the law.

E. F. JACKSON,
7 3 05 tf Clanton, Ala.

ROUND-UP FARMERS' INSTITUTE. FARMERS' SUMMER SCHOOL.

At Auburn, Ala., July 25 to August 2, 1905.

Experts will give lectures and practical demonstrations, 10 to 12 hours every day, on the following: Truck Gardening; Fruits; Fungus and Insect Diseases; Fertilizing, Culture, Varieties and Diseases of Cotton; Fertilizing and Cultivating Sugar Cane; Syrup Making and Syrup Selling; Cattle, Horses, Mules, Sheep, Hogs and Poultry; Diseases of Live Stock; Principles of Breeding; Feeds and Feeding; Soils and Soil Improvement; Soil Improving Plants, Terracing; Rotation of Crops; Fertilizers, Commercial and Home-made; Hay Crops and Hay Making; Storage, Dairy and Live Stock Barns and Houses; Farm Machinery and Farm Labor; Corn Judging, and many other real and interesting farm topics will be discussed.

Reduced rates on railroads. Three good meals and a bed for 50 cents per day. Auburn is high and healthy; good water and pure air.

Special Prizes: (1) $15 for the first best 10 ears of corn; $10 for the second best 10 ears of corn; $5 for the third best 10 ears of corn.

(2) $10 for the person who makes the best average in scoring live stock; $5 for second best; $3 for third best

C. A. CARY,
tf. Director of Farmers' Institute.

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

FREE BARBECUE.

There will be a free barbecue at Tyus on the line between Autauga and Chilton counties on July 22, 1905. Come everybody, and let's enjoy the day together.

Committee.
G. W. Williams,
T. J. Cox,
C. E. Boone,
J. H. Stange. tf

ATTENTION, ALLIANCE MEN!

Chilton County Farmers' Alliance will meet with Rocky Mount Alliance on Wednesday and Thursday, July 19, and 20, 1905. Business of great importance will come before the Alliance.

ALEX G. DAKE, tf Sec'y C. C. F. A.

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation; Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

NOTICE!

THE NORTHCUT JACK, one of the best in the country, is at my place 2 1-2 miles west of Thorsby.

tf. T. M. Driver.

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

Vol. II, No. 1, The July Number, to be Illustated and Greatly Improved.

As a token of appreciation of the liberal support given it by the public, Tom Watson's Magazine for July (commencing the second volume) will come out June 25th with illustrations, cartoons, head and tail pieces, etc., 128 pages of good reading to take home with you.

Of course, size isn't the only thing Tom Watson's Magazine is proud of. Quality first, size afterward, is its rule of action. There are plenty of good magazines now being published—but none of them can take the place of Tom Watson's, because no other editorial writer in America can feel the public pulse and diagnose social and political ills as Tom Watson does Not that there is any lack of good editorial writers—big, brainy men, who know how to write strong English—but there is only one Tom Watson; and he always commands attention and respect, even of those who combat his ideas most vigorously.

Tom Watson's is "a magazine with a purpose back of it," and the success it has attained, in the "swaddling clothes" period of its existence, shows that the American people are intensely interested in Mr. Watson's purpose, regardless of party names or affiliation. That success has been greater than the most ardent friend of Mr. Watson and his magazine had hoped for. From the very first it has enjoyed a steady growth in subscriptions and news stand sales. There has been no "boom," no mushroom growth to die suddenly, no sky-rocket ascent to fall a broken stick. Tom Watson's Magazine has been chary of using professional subscription solicitors, but relies upon local agents and clubbing with the country newspapers. The subscribers thus secured are the kind that renew year after year and form an "Old Guard," invaluable alike to the publisher and his advertisers.

Mr. Watson was last year the People's Party candidate for President, and, of course, his magazine editorially is an advocate of Populism—or Jeffersonian Democracy, as some prefer to call it. The magazine is especially strong in support of municpal ownership of railroads, telegraph, a parcels post, etc. But Tom Watson's Magazine is by no means all politics. About half its space is devoted to serials novelettes, short stories, poems, jokes, cartoons, illustrations and special articles by the world's best writers and artists; an Educational Department; news summary; "The Say of Otner Editors," etc., etc.; $1 per year by mail; ten cents per copy at the news stands.

THE UNION recognizes that the question of public ownership is one that can not longer be ignored and that it must be settled before many years. To secure a satisfactory settlement the people must be educated to act intelligently upon it; and to secure such education every phase of the question must be discussed. "Public control" will undoubtedly be tested thoroughly first, and if it works satisfactorily the "public ownership" feature will be dropped. But if "control" should fail "ownership' will inevitably be the next step. Accordingly, to help in an educational way, THE UNION has arranged a clubbing combination whereby our readers may renew for one year and secure Tom Watson's Magazine a year for only $1.50. Hand or send this amount to this office. We have also arranged for free sample copies of the magazine to be sent to any person cutting out the coupon below and mailing it to Tom Watson's Magazine, No. 121 West 42d street, New York city.

SAMPLE COPY COUPON.

Tom Watson's Magazine, No. 121 W. 42d Street., New York City.

The undersigned, a reader of THE UNION, desires a free samply copy of Tom Watson's Magazine, as per reading notice published in that newspaper. This is not an order for subscription.

Name .....

P. O. .....

State .....

tf

NOTICE OF ESTRAY.

Taken up by S. S. Conville, June 26th, 1905, and estrayed before B. W. Garner, Justice of the Peace, at Maplesville, beat 7, one light bay mare mule about fifteen years old, appraised value of fifty dollars.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.
This July 3rd, 1905. tf

Six Deaths in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa.—While there were no deaths Tuesday traceable to the heat, many prostrations and six deaths are reported. The deaths resulted indirectly from the high temperature Tuesday, making a total of twenty-seven deaths for the first eleven days of July, which breaks all former records.

The Black (or Euxine) Sea is nearly five and a half times as large as Lake Superior.

Academic
Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President

Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer

We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WITH

The Union

FOR

$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.

If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address

The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,
Furniture and Rugs.
—SOLE AGENTS—
Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.
Catalogue for the asking.
1011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,
205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician
Eyes Correctly Fitted
Mail orders promptly filled

E. M. PINCKARD & CO.
General Merchandise and Cotton Buyers
CLANTON, - - - - - ALABAMA.

Savages and Brutes

By Prince Kropotkin of Russia.

FOR the primitive savage, animals are mysterious, problematic beings, possessed of a wide knowledge of the things of nature. They know much more than they are ready to tell us. In some way or another, by the aid of senses much more refined than ours, and by telling to each other all that they notice in their rambles and flights, they know everything for miles round. And if a man has been "just" toward them, they will warn him of a coming danger, as they warn each other; but they will take no heed of him if he has not been straightforward in his actions. Snakes and birds (the owl is a leader of the snakes), mammals and insects, lizards and fishes—all understand each other, and continually communicate their observations to one another.

Inside this vast brotherhood there are, of course, the still closer brotherhoods of beings "of one blood." The monkeys, the bears, the wolves, the elephants and the rhinoceroses, most ruminants, the hares and most of the rodents, the crocodiles, and so on, perfectly know their own kin, and they will not tolerate any one of their relatives to be slaughtered by man without taking, in one way or another, honest revenge. This conception must have had an extremely remote origin.

Even now, when a savage is hunting, he is bound to respect certain rules of propriety toward the animals, and he must perform certain expiatory ceremonies after his hunt. Most of these ceremonies are rigorously enacted, even nowadays in the savage clans, especially as regards those species considered the allies of man.

It is well known that two men belonging to two different clans or tribes can become brothers by mixing the blood of the two, obtained from small incisions made for that purpose. But it was also quite habitual for man to enter into brotherhood with some animal. The tales continually mentioned it. An animal asks a hunter to spare it, and if the hunter accedes to the demand the two become brothers. And then the monkey, the bear, the doe, the bird, the crocodile, or the bee—any one of the sociable animals—will take all possible care of the man brother in the critical circumstances of his life, sending his or her animal brothers of different tribes to warn him or help him out of a difficulty. And if the warning comes too late, or is misunderstood, and he loses his life, they all will try to bring him back to life, and they fail they will take due revenge, just as if the man had been one of their own kin.

When I journeyed to Siberia I was often struck, without understanding it, with the care which my Tunus or Mongol guide would take not to uselessly kill any animal. The fact is that every life is respected by a savage, or rather it was before he came in contact with Europeans. If he kills an animal, it is for food or for clothing; but he does not destroy life, as the whites do, for the mere excitement of the slaughter.

Of course, there are rascals among the animals—the hyena, for instance, or the shrewmouse, or the man eating tiger; but these do not count; they are outlaws. As to the great animal world as a whole, savage children are taught to respect it and see in it an extension of their own kin.

THE ROAMER.

Swift to its close
Ebbs the long summer day,
Spirits of gold
Each passing ray.

Slowly the sun sinks
Weary to rest,
Tired, the nighthird
Flees to its nest.

Down thro' the gray mists Softly I go,
Each tiny ripple
Whispering low.

Sighs of the tree-tops
Atune with the night;
Breath of the willows;
The moon's misty light.

Mocking, the shadows
Guide my canoe
Where dark boughs are drooping,
Laden with dew.

Roaming the stillness,
Idly I dream—
Lulled by the silence,
I sleep with the stream.

—Woods and Waters.

Little, Old Miss Lavender

By ETHEL M. BRIMBLE.

Our verdict at first was that she was one of the most uninteresting, colorless sort of nonentities we had ever had the misfortune to come across. She was very quiet—almost subdued in her manner—with a slightly perceptible touch of shyness, and a slow way of speaking, which annoyed us both exceedingly.

We agreed, however, that the aunt was a sweet old lady, exactly like an Old World picture or a bygone romance—just the type one instinctively associates with an atmosphere of lavender and faded rose petals.

Her one idea in life—indeed, nearly all her interest—seemed centered on the only human being she had left to love—her grandniece, Lilian.

It was really too pathetic to hear her talk; I mean when one saw the girl, for she spoke as if she possessed all the graces and charms of a beauty and the attributes of a genius in embryo; whereas, in reality, she was, as I mentioned before, a most ordinary looking, commonplace little person, with nothing to redeem her rather plain features but a pleasant, though rare, smile, which lit up her face for a moment, and quite changed its expression.

The pathos, however, lay in the fact that "little, old Miss Lavender," as we had, with common consent, christened the old lady, could never see the smile, or, indeed, anything in the world around her, for she was totally blind.

Not for her did the sun turn the glistening dewdrops on their tiny lawn into diamonds or the sweet-scented, old-fashioned flowers in the little border spring forth into glowing colors as she passed, a sad-looking, old figure, though with a certain dignity of her own, down the tiny, gravel path between the lilies and roses, which stretched in a row to the little, green, wooden gate.

Yet one wonders if, after all, there were not compensations. Loving her niece as she did, it would have been agony to her sensitive heart to see how the girl was sometimes passed over among her more favored companions; or, when other girls appeared, arrayed in all the pristine freshness of crisp, new muslins, or soft silks, Lilian still came out in her well worn-white cashmere. We used to call it "Mrs. Noah" then, and laugh secretly at its regular reappearance each highday and holiday. How little we knew! It was only the other day I found my sister Molly kneeling before a funny little box sofa in Miss Lavender's best bedroom, shedding a quiet tear over something inside, and when I stole over to see what the contents were which caused my usually light hearted sister to weep, I found her holding a fold of the historic cashmere in her hands.

It made a lump rise in my throat, too, and I turned quickly away, and crept softly downstairs, to where the pathetic, old figure, in its dainty, lace cap and fichu, sat in the sunshine on the little lawn.

She looked up as I approached, with a smile of welcome, and made room for me to sit on the seat beside her.

"I heard your footsteps, my dear, and knew you would spare the old woman a little time for a chat. You know, I have had another letter from Lilian—the dear child is so happy, and I want to have a little talk about her with some one who knew her.

The sightless eyes were turned eagerly toward me, while the fragile hands fumbled for the letter in the little, satin workbag she always carried.

How could one have the heart to undeceive her—to dash the hope from the brave, old face and the brightness from her life? It would need a braver one than I, and we had long ago decided to help Lilian in her deception, and never to betray her secret to the loyal, trustful heart which beat for her alone. As she said, it could not be for long now, and, after the end, what would it all matter to anyone except herself?

It was curious how we all, even down to Molly, who was always so down on anything not quite above board, combined to aid Lilian in her deception toward Miss Lavender; but yet, what else could we do?

She had confided in us one day while we were all three sitting out on the lawn, and Miss Lavender and my mother were indoors, having a quiet chat together.

To this day I don't know what led up to it; I rather think it was after Molly had been holding forth on her pet subject of the general uselessness of most girls' lives nowadays, and how so few realized the obligation of work of some sort.

"I consider any sort of work is noble," she would up in her impetuous way; "and, provided it is honest, there is nothing derogatory in a girl earning her living by doing some so-called menial task."

"I am quite of your opinion," said Lilian, quietly; "and it leads me to tell you something which I have decided upon doing. You know—or, at least, no doubt you have guessed," she continued, flushing painfully, "that we are very poor. You girls, who have almost all that you can wish for, can hardly realize how poor, or—or—how difficult it is sometimes to make both ends even get within a measurable distance of each other, much less attempt to meet. Well, lately, auntie has lost some money—not much to you, I dare say, but to us——"

She broke off, and looked, with unseeing eyes, out over the little hedge and on to the road beyond.

"No, don't say anything, please," as I opened my lips to speak. "Auntie has her little annuity—enough for her to live upon—not in luxury, certainly—but she has simple tastes, and can manage well enough. When it comes to two—however, there is nothing more to be said, and so I——I———" she faltered a little for an instant, "have decided to leave her and to earn my own living."

"Well, I call that very sensible of you," said Molly, warmly. "I am dreadfully sorry for you, of course, dear," she added, giving Lilian's hand a little squeeze, "and you know———"

"Wait till you hear all," said our companion, reddening painfully. "I don't mind for myself, of course; it won't matter to me a bit," she went on, bravely; "but I think if auntie knew, it would break her heart. She thinks I have secured a post as companion to one of the leaders of the 'four hundred,' and is quite delighted at the idea of my being in society; but, in reality"—and here, for a moment, she hesitated; then, as if making a final effort, went on, hurriedly—"it is not as companion that this society woman has engaged me, but as a sewing maid."

For one second we were silent.

"A sewing maid?" echoed my sister, quickly. "Oh, Lilian, what will you have to do?"

"Live with the servants, for one thing," answered Lilian. "Yes, I know that—we all have meals together in the servants' hall—only the uppers have their dinner in the housekeeper's room, and I shall not even be an 'upper,'" she added, sadly. "Oh, I know well enough what you would say, but when all is said and done, what else can I do? Mrs. De Voore treats her servants well; I shall be earning my own living, and earning it in the only way I am competent to do. I have no talent, nothing to recommend me above the thousands of other far cleverer girls, all anxious to make a living nowadays; and, after all, it won't be so bad, as long as auntie does not know—you will never, never let her even suspect, will you?" she entreated. "She cannot live long now; the doctor says that at any moment her heart attacks may prove fatal, and as long as she thinks I am well and happy, and she has no anxiety about money matters, she will go on happily and well. Nothing would induce her to let me go if she knew the real truth—she must never know—promise me?" she insisted, entreatingly.

What could we do? We could only promise, and walk sadly indoors. Our mother tried to do something about it, but when she was driven, as a last resort, to give a sort of half hint to Miss Lavender, we could see, by the way she took it, that she had not a shadow of an idea as to the real truth, and, in honor bound to Lilian, we could do no more.

Well, she went, and what that girl—gently nurtured, and always accustomed to a certain atmosphere of delicacy and refinement—must have gone through makes me shudder to contemplate.

Her letters to the old lady were perfect marvels of ingenuity. Always rigorous as to truth, she managed in the cleverest possible manner to evade all unpleasant items, and yet appear to be having a perfectly delightful time, by her accounts. It was only to us who, knowing the truth, could read between the lines, that these letter, appeared one of the saddest and most touching tributes to the love she bore her aunt, and we learned to dread our weekly visit to the little, red brick house, when Lilian's last letter was invariably brought out for our delectation.

The girl always wrote describing the events which took place in Mrs De Voore's household, and when mention was made of a certain smart dance which had been given, she described the decorations and the young ladies' ball gowns so vividly that Miss Lavender remarked, complacently:

"It is easy to see that they treat her as one of the family! Why, the dear child seems to know all about their pretty frocks, and the little ins and outs of their lives! You see," she went on, tapping the letter, which we noticed she seemed to love to handle, as if the feeling of the paper conveyed some impression of her dearly loved niece, "I feel that dear Lilian is now partaking of some of the advantages which she ought to have had all along. I did my best for her," with a slight sigh; "but now she is seeing something of life, and enjoying herself in a natural way, and it does my heart good to think how truly happy my little girl is."

"What could we say? I know Molly and I left the dear, old lady that day with a terribly guilty feeling in our hearts.

It was always most painful to us to see those bravely written letters, conveying so much of the weariness and heartache beneath the carefully worded lines to those who knew the real facts, and could realize how sordid and bitter her life must be, in reality.

Sometimes we wondered how it would all end, and if ever in this life Lilian would win her reward for the pluck and tenderness she was showing toward her beloved guardian.

The end came sooner than we expected, however.

We went as usual to pay our weekly visit at the little house just off the highroad; but, to our surprise, there was no lace-capped, black-clad figure to greet us at the door, as was the general rule.

"She may have forgotten, and he upstairs," I said, quickly, though a sudden feeling of foreboding seized me; and, fearing I know not what, we silently entered the tiny hall. All was silent, and we stood, hesitating, not knowing exactly what to do.

At that moment, Miss Lavender's little maid-of-all-work appeared at the top of the narrow stairs and one look at her frightened face was enough to tell us something gravely wrong had occurred.

"What is it? What has happened?" Molly asked, anxiously, and it was only after many inherent speeches and much lamentations we learned that Miss Lavender had been seized with one of those attacks which Lilian had so dreaded for her, and it was with difficulty the little maid had managed to help her mistress to a couch and revive her from a death-like swoon.

Our appearance on the scene could not have been more opportune, and before another hour had passed we had got "little, old Miss Lavender" comfortably into bed, and the doctor had come and gone again.

His verdict was a grave one, and resulted, though much against Miss Lavender's wishes, in a wire being sent immediately to her niece.

"It is such a pity," the quavering, old voice whispered, as I bent down to catch her words; "there was to have been a dinner party tonight, and Lilian will miss it all now. I really think we might have waited till the morning," she added, so faintly that I could barely catch the words.

It was only two hours later that Lilian arrived, and, though she had traveled as fast as possible, and succeeded in catching an earlier train than we had hoped, she was just in time to be recognized by her aunt; and it was in the girl's arms the loving heart, which had always cared and thought for her, ceased to beat.

Poor Lilian was, indeed, alone in the world now!

Our mother was as sweet as possible and, of course, we all insisted on the girl coming to us on an indefinite visit; I think each one of us tried to share some of our pleasures and joys with the forlorn little guest; and, though she proposed, after some weeks, returning to Mrs. De Voore, it was only a half-hearted sort of an idea, and none of us allowed it to be entertained for a moment.

She has been with us a year now, and is almost like a sister—at least, Molly and I feel so, though—let it be whispered—Jack apparently does not.

"One never knows what may happen," my fair sister remarked only last night, in her oracular manner.

"Stranger things have sometimes occurred, and, if she were to become our sister in reality, I, for one, would give her a warm welcome."

"And so should I," I responded, heartily, as an energetic puff from my sister blew the candle out, and I sprang hastily into bed.

Revenge.

The great trust magnate who owned the United States was on his deathbed, dictating his will.

"I leave five millions to Miss Serchligh," he directed.

"What magnanimity, what kindness!" murmured the lawyers. "Five millions to the woman who wrote about him as an iron-hearted villain and a religious hypocrite!"

But the magnate had heard.

"Magnanimity nothing!" he exclaimed. "If she takes the money, she will be cast out a sa traitor and a sham; if she refuses it, she will regret the lost fortune all her life. She is a woman."

With a sight of satisfaction the magnate continued parceling out the North American continent.—Clement Scott, in Life.

Wasted Energy.

Sometimes head and heels work well together, but it was not so in a case reported in the Yonkers Statesman. Sam, a colored man, was an hour late, and his employer asked him to explain.

"Yes, sah, I'll explain, sah," Sam replied.

"Well, what excuse have you?"

"I was kicked by a mule on my way here, sah."

"That ought not to have detained you an hour, Sam, if you were able to come at all."

"Well, it wouldn't have if he'd only kicked me in dis direction. You see, boss, he kicked me de other way."

THE GYPSY MOTH

How It Was Brought Here and the Damage It Did.

BUT the greatest insect war ever known was the battle waged against the gipsy caterpillar in the State of Massachusetts.

The whole trouble, which caused years of labor and the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars, arose from a handful of eggs blown into some grass by an erring puff of wind.

Some thirty odd years ago, a certain French artist and naturalist, Leopold Trouvelot, lived in Medford, Mass. He was studying the habits of the native birds and insects, and was carrying on experiments with silkworms. One day he received by post a cluster of the eggs of the gipsy moth from a friend in Europe, which he placed on a table near an open window. A passing puff of wind blew the eggs into the grass outside.

Trouvelot did not miss them, or remember them, until a year later, he discovered a number of young gipsy caterpillars—hairy, gray creepers, speckled with red and blue. He attempted to stamp the colony out of existence, but finding, the next season, that they were more numerous, he gave public warning of what had happened, and advised the community to be on the watch. His warning was regarded as the vapering of a half-crazy collector of bugs.

Trouvelot left for Paris, and for some time nothing more was thought of the gipsy moth, though a few people noticed that near the old Trouvelot home caterpillars were plentiful, and that they did some damage to foliage. From 1869 to 1889 the parent colony was extending its territory, and wherever it went trees were defoliated. The damage was placed to any account but the real one, generally to the charge of the well-known cankerworm, or to the tent-caterpillar.

At last, in 1889, a season arrived when the gipsy caterpillars and moths had so greatly increased in numbers that their food supply gave out. Armies appeared in districts where they had never been known before, and destroyed every green thing. Their progress was checked on the south of Medford by salt marshes, but they began to spread east, west and north. Passing from tree to tree the hungry host swarmed over all the country side.

In the June of 1889 the plague had settled so heavily on Medford that the whole town was black with caterpillars. All the houses were covered with them. People going into their houses were obliged first to sweep their doorsteps clear. Brooms were commonly left outside the street doors for the use of callers. On the pavements the insects were so numerous that the pedestrians could slide on their crushed bodies.

The caterpillars crowded one another off the trees, and gathered in armies on the ground and on the fences. They entered the windows of houses, destroying all flowering plants, and penetrated to every corner, so that the people were afraid to go to bed. They dropped in showers from the trees, while the larvae, hanging from invisible threads, brushed the faces of those who passed beneath. In the heat of the still summer nights, a sickening odor arose. It began to look as though the town must be abandoned.

Throughout the summer the people spent most of their spare time in fighting the pest. They attacked with fire, water and oil, but with little avail. Cartloads of bodies were removed, and millions of caterpillars were killed in the shell by destruction of egg-clusters, each cluster containing some 600 eggs. But still the plague increased, and it began to be regarded as of fearful portent to the entire nation.

At last a specimen of the pest was sent to the State Board of Agriculture, where it was quickly identified as a well-known European scourge. A commission was appointed, public interest was aroused, and an act appropriating some $25,000 for the extermination of the gipsy moth was passed. A large staff of men, gradually increased until about 100 were employed, went about the country, clearing away infested woods and orchards, destroying eggs and caterpillars.

And so began a war that was destined to rage fiercely for ten years, and to eclipse any other insect war of the kind ever known.

An inspection made by the State officers in 1890 showed that fifty square miles of country were infested. An elaborate campaign was planned for the next year; $50,000 were appropriated to the work; the country was divided up into districts, and inspectors with gangs of men were employed to fight the plague in each district. But in spite of all efforts the insects steadily increased, until they extended over 230 square miles of territory.

At first an attempt was made to destroy the caterpillars by spraying them with arsenic, which is fatal to the cankerworm, the tent-caterpillar and other insects. It was found that the gipsy caterpillar rather enjoyed arsenic. Method after method was tested to find a quick means of exterminating caterpillars, pupae, moths and eggs. Great hopes were built on a moth-trapping scheme. The female moths cannot fly, but the males are swift on the wing, and it was found that captured females attracted the males from distances of fully half a mile. So the officers went about setting traps for the males, baited with females, and some tens of thousands were thus caught in a short time. But this had little effect upon the great numbers, so it was abandoned for more deadly methods.

The vitality of the gipsy caterpillar and its eggs proved to be extraordinary. Voracious as it is, the caterpillar can starve for weeks without injury; it will live for days in water, and can endure intense cold as well as intense heat. The eggs might be covered with ice and snow in the forests, and yet would hatch in the spring, while they would take little harm from small fires that burned the twigs and leaves of the trees on which they were.

The most effective weapon was found to be the intense heat given off from the flame of vaporized kerosene. Agents armed with long hoses attached to barrels of kerosene, went into the woods, and directed jets upon all trees within reach, and in this and other ways millions of the gipsy kind were destroyed by each worker. In spite of the insufficient funds, causing pauses in the work, and the enormous difficulties that had to be overcome, the Board of Agriculture succeeded in preventing the plague spreading beyond the 230 square miles of infested country, and slowly but surely in each district, by a method of double, triple, and even quadruple checking, it was stamped out. Had it not been for these energetic steps, the appalling amount of damage that the gipsy moth might have done is almost beyond imagination. It was reckoned by the authorities that the increase of a single pair of gipsy moths, if unrestricted, would suffice to destroy the entire vegetation of the United States within eight years. —Pearson's Magazine.

HOW ICEBERGS ARE FORMED IN GREENLAND

As the Glaciers Sweep Into the Sea They "Calve" or Throw Off These Chunks.

Icebergs are the product of the Greenland glaciers and are formed by the thousand in the far northern fiords. As the glaciers sweep into the sea they "calve" or throw off mighty blocks, and these are what we know as icebergs. Some are of stupendous dimensions. Dr. Kane's Arctic expedition saw one two and a half miles long and two and a half miles wide aground in half a mile of water in Melville Bay. This, of course, broke up into small pieces in time, which sun and sea and tide molded into the beautiful and fantastic forms familiar to the Arctic voyager. As they drift south and the sun plays on their facade, it melts them into shimmering cascades which leap into the sea, while below the tide frets them into delicate traceries. Then the berg gets top-heavy, turns over and exhibits an absolutely new contour, and so the process continues until they disappear in the Gulf Stream. The Labrador current, which carries them on its bosom, extends from the Polar Sea to the south of Newfoundland, an oceanic river 2000 miles long and 100 wide, and generously bejeweled with these gorgeous creations; and, as an irreverent tourist remarked last summer, they represent enough cold storage to put the ice trust out of business and give every American citizen a refrigerator stock of his own.—McClure's Magazine.

Newspaper Anonymity.

In a recent speech delivered before the Newspaper Society in London, Winston Churchill, M. P., said that while newspaper machinery every day expanded, the men who did the work seemed to him to have sunk somewhat into the background in our great social hierarchy. It was not so in France. In many ways the press of France was inferior to ours, but there were powerful individual journalists in France as there were not in England—men who wielded a power in directing the course of the policy of their country much greater than that wielded by the average member of the Chamber of Deputies. It was a great pity that individual journalists had not the same influence at home. It was certainly not because we did not possess writers of equal capacity. He ventured to think that anonymity had a great deal to do with it. If more articles were signed, individual journalists would acquire a greater weight and authority in the politics of the country.

A Sea Telescope.

A recent invention, the hydroscope, enables a spectator at the sea's surface to view objects at the bottom of the sea. The inventor is an Italian, Cavaliere Guiseppe Pino. The machine is constructed of steel, and in shape is like a huge telescope. Pointed downward into coral caverns or sunken ships, instead of upward at the sun or the stars, its complex system of lenses, twelve in number, answers to the objective glass of a celestial telescope. By the internal mirrors they produce a clear picture of the sea bottom, the rays of light passing up the tube to a sort of camera-obscura house at the top, which floats above the surface, and is capable of holding four persons.

Georgia's Wheat Crop.

In spite of the many jokes that are made at the expense of the Georgia peach crop, that State produced more peaches than any of the Eastern States. It is said that there are over 7,000,000 trees that bear peaches in the State.

SCIENCE & MECHA

Bees are attracted [illegible] bright colors. The [illegible] J. Wery, a Belgian [illegible] that perfume has [illegible] and that honey has [illegible]

Scopolamine, the [illegible] from a Japanese plant [illegible] by hypodermic injection [illegible] deep sleep for eight [illegible] is claimed to have [illegible] effects.

If it is not truly a [illegible] least a very respectable [illegible] near the International [illegible] at Durango, Mexico. It [illegible] 400 to 650 feet in height [illegible] and about one-third [illegible] United States Consul [illegible] ango, speaks of it [illegible] iron ore." Geologically [illegible] as a dike emerging from a rock [illegible] which lies more than [illegible] sea level. Its existence has [illegible] for 300 years.

A company has [illegible] Wichita, Kan., for [illegible] ploiting the oil [illegible] been invented by C. A. [illegible] city. The experiments [illegible] invention seem [illegible] arrangement is economical [illegible] and is operated wholly [illegible] of oil. The inventor [illegible] compromise between the [illegible] bearings, the surfaces [illegible] which come in contact with [illegible] being grooved so that the [illegible] very materially lessened.

Zapon, the new [illegible] products of Dr. Schulz, of Dresden [illegible] solution of nitrated [illegible] inexpensive solvent, [illegible] ing to be best adapted for [illegible] sheets. When dipped in the [illegible] or brushed with it, the paper [illegible] the liquid, and on evaporation of [illegible] solvent becomes [illegible] with a [illegible] film, which resists [illegible] various fumes, as well as [illegible] mold and bacteria and [illegible] treated paper, unaffected in appearance [illegible] may still be written on with [illegible] pencil.

The London Mail of recent [illegible] responsible for the following [illegible] hydrate of Dimethylmethane [illegible] tanol." Such is the [illegible] of the latest anaesthetic [illegible] to unduly alarm its patrons. Dr. [illegible] neau, its French discoverer, has [illegible] named it "Stovaine." [illegible] into the spinal fluid, and within [illegible] minutes produces complete anaesthesia [illegible] in the body below the point of injection. The patient, however, does not lose consciousness. Its effects last [illegible] an hour and a half, and [illegible] results have yet been discovered, but it has been tried for [illegible] than one Paris hospital.

May Wreck Tariff Scheme.

The latest wrinkle in the [illegible] line is a baggage insurance [illegible] semblling in form the accident [illegible] issued by a number of the [illegible] companies. It is understood as a [illegible] the articles of luggage insured. [illegible] check insures personal property [illegible] whether trunks, bags or any [illegible] style, against loss or fire and [illegible] while in transit or in any station, [illegible] house, hotel, boarding house or dwelling, except, of course, in the [illegible] the owner, where it is supposed to be [illegible] covered by the regular insurance. The check protects the [illegible] purchaser and any of his family or the servants accompanying them. Indemnity is payable [illegible] loss or damage by [illegible] or accidents of navigation.

The ticket contains [illegible] the contract on its face and a [illegible] margin are figures which [illegible] to denote the date of [illegible] of pieces of baggage [illegible] the insurance is to run [illegible] of the insurance. No [illegible] can be issued on the [illegible] baggage of any one person or party nor more than $500 on any one piece of baggage. The charge [illegible] cents a week for [illegible] ance, increasing in proportion [illegible] a hundred for six months. [illegible] New York Press.

Pearls of the Wabash.

On the banks of the Wabash [illegible] new industry has sprung up since the stream was sung to fame by [illegible] vaudeville stage and played to [illegible] tion by restaurant [illegible] that of "pearling." [illegible] the work hundreds of [illegible] and boys and girls [illegible] fresh water pearls [illegible] are known in the [illegible] in their rough state.

It is not uncommon [illegible] hunters to earn $3 a [illegible] this work has been [illegible] farmers along the [illegible] ing of a lack of [illegible] their crops.

Naturally, most of the pearls are small ones, but [illegible] found that weigh 20 grains or [illegible] it is the hope of [illegible] more of these big [illegible] "pearlers" at work. [illegible] sold to local dealers, who [illegible] to dealers in Malden [illegible] merchants on the Wabash River [illegible] New York Press.

Togo's Presentation Home.

Yes, Japan will give [illegible] but it is a "lighthouse" to [illegible] ate his victory. What a [illegible] sion of his country's gratitude [illegible] the scene of the destruction [illegible] sian fleet for all time! Wish [illegible] folks could think of this! [illegible] Boston Herald.

ur Facts For Sick Women To Consider

E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound an Unequalled Record of Cures—n. Pinkham's Advice Is Confidential, Free, and always Helpful

—That almost every operation hospitals performed upon women necessary through neglect of symptoms as backache, irregular painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacements of the uterus, pain in side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing-down pains, nervousness, ness and sleeplessness.

comp.—The medicine that holds record for the largest number of plete cures of female ills is Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. regulates, strengthens and cures ses of the female organism as ing else can.

thirty years it has been helping en to be strong, curing backache, rousness, kidney troubles, inflammation and ovarian inflammation, weak and displacements, regulating struation perfectly and overcoming its pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth, the change of life.

ead.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, s, many of which are from time to published by permission, prove conclusive evidence of the value of Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Pinkham's advice.

ealth.—Every ailing woman in the ited States is asked to accept the owing invitation. It is free, will g you health, and may save your

rs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation Women.—Women suffering from any of female weakness are invited to ptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. A letter will ceived, opened, read and answered by women only. For nearly twenty years Mrs. Pinkham has been advising sick women, and has helped more than one million. Her vast experience, her unrivaled facilities, and her splendid record for the largest number of absolute cures of female ills is unquestioned. Surely, if you are ill you should not neglect this opportunity to get the best advice possible, free of charge. Not even the family doctor may be able to give you such helpful advice. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass. Don't hesitate, don't delay, but write at once.

Don't forget that Mrs. Pinkham's advice is free, that her address is Lynn, Mass., and that a prompt reply is sure.

Don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a positive cure for those painful ailments which make the lives of so many women miserable.

Don't forget that for backache, kidney complaint, nervousness, or bearing-down pains, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is unequaled.

Don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored more sick women to perfect health than any other medicine the world has ever known.

Don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills for more than twenty years, and that it is the only medicine of its kind that can be implicitly relied upon.

Don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared only from roots and herbs, and that it is perfectly harmless and safe.

Don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only medicine of its kind that is manufactured under the most perfect conditions, and that it is the only medicine of its kind that is backed by a reputation of unquestioned purity and reliability.

Don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only medicine of its kind that is manufactured in a laboratory where only medicines are made, and that it is the only medicine of its kind that is manufactured by a woman who understands the needs of women

TH

l the

AND he Sea These of the by

SCIENCE & MECHANI

Bees are attracted to flowers by eight colors. The experiments of

J. Wery, a Belgian naturalist, p that perfume has much less attra and that honey has none at all.

A company has been organized

Wichita, Kan., for the purpose of planting the sand-burr, during which b been engaged by C. A. Latham, of Mr. Latham's experiments made with the sand-burr seem to indicate that the enterprise is commercial of po and is operated wholly without the of oil. The inventor seems to b connection between the roller and t to change the surface of the p which is consistent with each of bines, except so that the grinding seem materially lessened.

Zylon, the new preservative of pa products of Dr. Schuh, of Dresden, i solution of nitrated cellulose in a inexpensive solvent, amyl acetate

ing to be best adapted for paper sheets. When dipped in the solu or brushed with it, the paper abso

the liquid, and on evaporation of solvent becomes coated with a t film, which resists rain, sweat various fumes, as well as attacks mold and bacteria and hard usage.

treated paper, unaltered in appeara may dull be written on with ink pencil.

The London Mail of recent issue responsible for the following: "Chi hydrate of Dimethylamino-benzoyl

Lupin." Such is the awe-inspiring n of the cities anaesthetic. In order to mildly alarm his patients, Dr. F began his French discoverer, has named it "Stovaine." It is inje into the spinal fluid, and within minutes produces complete anaesth in the body below the point of in tion. The patient, however, does lose consciousness. Its effects last an hour and a half, and no unpleas results have yet been observed, tha it has been used for some time in m than one Paris hospital.

May Wreck This Scheme.

The latest wrinkle in the insura line is a baggage assurance check, sembling in form the accident tic issued by a member of the casu companies. It is attached as a ta the birthmark of baggage insured.

check insures personal prope

while in transit, bags or any o sured against loss by fire and th destruction of railway station, st house, hotel, burning house or d

the dwelling supposed to or fire insura property of any of his family guests or belongings. The checks are payable also in the event of sudden death or collision, derailm or other forms of conveyance.

The ticket contains the provisions the contract on its face, and in margin are figures which are punc to denote the date of issue, the num of pieces of baggage covered, the pe

the insurance is to run, and the amo of the assurance. Not more than $ can be issued on these tickets on baggage of any one person or fam for more than $500 on any one piec

The check is good for twenty hundred for $5 in addition to

New York Press.

Pearls of the Wabash.

On the banks of the Wabash Riv up since death on exhibited to years. T is enlisted so much and wo

for stones," as t is, p

the P day, and thus profitable

comp

to ha

Naturally most of the pearls fo have b gems each up ou

The slugs

sold to jewelers, who resell t

Lafayette. One of has thous

New York Press.

Togo's Presentation House.

Y

Togo a h to comme

Rockefeller. What

con of his country's grati these gifts of the destruction of the slum fleet for all time! With folks could think of these thin

Boston Herald.

Facts For Sick Women To Consider

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has an Unequalled Record of Cures—Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Is Confidential, Free, and always Helpful

Facts—That almost every operation performed upon women in hospitals is necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular periods, menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacements of the uterus, pain in the ovaries, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Facts—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of positive cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures disorders of the female organism as nothing else can.

For thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, curing backache, nervousness, kidney troubles, all uterine ills and inflammation, weaknesses and displacements, regulating menstruation perfectly and overcoming pains. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the change of life.

Facts—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give abundant evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Reason—Every ailing woman in the United States is asked to accept the following invitation. It is free, will restore health and may save your life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write confidentially to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, the exact nature of ailment may be located and the best and surest way of recovery found. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, when a sick woman is very poor, it is very foolish for her not to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

Catch Luck FOR A Big Bargain with the South's Leading BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

Scholarships are of

in this county at less than Cemetery of Hopes.

Clerk William H. Bayly, of in Washington, has a canvass of the clerks

the purpose of ascertaining the ambitions of employes. His shows that this depart-is a veritable burying ground disappointed hopes. Of the 1,200 nearly 900 had prepared them-for the professions of law, medi-

Forty of them had authors, forty-three were editors, were lecturers and publishers, newspaper correspondents, were magazine writers and of the old college or univerdiplomas. Among the men now the war claims who formerly clerks are one major gen-adjutant general, five briga-generals, eight colonels, seven colonels, twelve majors, captains, eighty lieutenants second lieutenants. There ex-members of houses of representatives of various states and territories, state senators on the rolls, justices of the peace have writing places in the pension of-with five county judges, probate judges and twelve

Twenty-one former surgeons and six dentists and two clerks are now delving over for back pay and bounty.

seems to be an unprofitable for no less than 457 of the in the pension office were in that profession.

Cane and Austrian sugar is ex-from a tw high duties.

WANTED TO SLEEP.

That a Tired Preacher Should Have Such Desire.

Rev. speaks of the curious ef-

Grape Nuts food on him and family.

Endless understand how with indigestion with to be troubled made my

the most unendurable burden.

was that after my Sabbath and from performed, sleep was my pillow till nearly day-be very careful as to what with all my care I exfrequent physical distress and my food never satis-

Months have elapsed since I be-

Grape-Nuts food, and the have derived from it are very

I no longer suffer from indi-

I began to improve from Nuts appeared on our that by eating a dish of Sabbath work is done (and so now) my nerves are rest and refreshing sleep

I feel that I could not without Grape-Nuts food.

know its value. It is inva-table—we feel that we plete the meal—and our

Grape-Nuts when persuaded to touch any-

Name given by Postum

Mich.

famous little book, "The

" in each pkg.

USE OF KNITTING AS A NERVE CURE.

The Old Doctor Tells His Patient That It Induces a Calm and Cheerful Frame of Mind.

It is told of Robert Louis Stevenson that one of the many things he learned to do to keep him amused when he was restless or ill was to knit. There are many men of a generation much older than ours who improve odd moments by working with yarn and needles. But women to be women, simply must knit after their hair is grey, and it is good for them.

"My prescription, madam, is that you knit two hours daily," said the physician.

"Knit," exclaimed the nervous patient. "Why on earth should I knit?"

The doctor replied: "Because nothing is more soothing to the nerves; because nothing induces to such a calm and cheerful frame of mind. I could prescribe velerian for you, but knitting will be better. It will do you much more good. I believe that a month of it will cure you."

He went on to explain that his attention had been called to an article in a medical journal on the beneficent effects of knitting, and he had prescribed the treatment, with excellent success, to a dozen women.

"The shining needles," he said, "playing swiftly among soft-colored silks or wools, engage the eyes pleasantly, and fill the mind with cheery and sane thoughts. At the same time they may produce admirable things—golf waistcoats, golf stockings of wool, delicate evening stockings of silk, shawls, a hundred articles."

The woman smiled, and said she did not know how to knit, but she would learn at once.

WISE WORDS.

Men of cold passions have quick eyes.—Hawthorne.

Life has no blessing like a prudent friend.—Euripides.

A wanton eye is the messenger of an unchaste heart.—Augustine.

The heart is an astrologer that always divines the truth.—Calderon.

Our dissatisfaction with any other solution is the blazing evidence of immortality.—Emerson.

To the Lonest mind the best perquisites of a place are the advantages it gives for doing good.—Addison.

To make knowledge valuable you must have the cheerfulness of wisdom. Goodness smiles to the last.—Emerson.

The charity that hastens to proclaim its good deeds ceases to be charity, and is only pride and ostentation.—Hutton.

If a book come from the heart it will contrive to reach other hearts. All art and authorcraft are of small account to that.—Carlyle.

Philosophy is of no use to a man until it enables him to be lenient to his own weaknesses, and then it is dangerous.—Town Topics.

The meanest, most contemptible kind of praise is that which first speaks well of a man and then qualifies it with a "but."—H. W. Beecher.

We all dread bodily paralysis and would make use of every contrivance to avoid it, but none of us is troubled about a paralysis of the soul.—Epictetus.

It's a Crime to Split Bills.

Judge Taylor, for the first time by any Federal Judge, has decided that the practice of splitting bills is a crime. In defending three Greeks charged with splitting bills, Attorneys Matthews and Billman set up the novel defense that it was no crime to paste the back of a one-dollar bill upon the back of a five-dollar bill, inasmuch as the splitting of the bills destroyed their value as money. In his decision Judge Taylor found that splitting bills constituted an alteration of the money against which the Federal statutes specifically provide. The jury found one of the Greeks, William Mihatakaponias, guilty of splitting one-dollar and five-dollar bills, and Judge Taylor sentenced him to five years in the penitentiary. Two other Greeks were acquitted.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Boon of Self-Education.

"To give a boy the best of all opportunities—the opportunity for self-education—turn him loose in a library," advises Professor George Edward Woodberry, writing of Sir Walter Scott in McClure's.

"Scott," he says, "had the education of the school as a thing of course, and it was valuable to him; but he illustrates the fact that to turn a boy loose in a library is to give him the best of all opportunities—the opportunity for self-education. He read from childhood widely and well, and while yet a boy had such an acquaintance with great literature as would now seem phenomenal, though it was precisely the same as that which a generation later New England boys had at the same age, if they were so inclined."

The Oldest Inns.

There is a discussion in the English papers as to which is the oldest inn in England. A writer in the Estates Magazine thinks the Ostrich, at Colnbrook, Middlesex, is one of the oldest. There is every reason to believe it has been in existence 700 years, and even then took the place of an earlier inn burned down by Henry I., in consequence of the misdeeds of the tenant. The story of the Seven Stars, in Manchester, can be traced clearly back to 1356. Its existence as a licensed house dates down to that year. Among the relics of the Seven Stars is an old clock which has stood at the top of the staircase for more than two hundred years.

Great Maritime Cities.

Suppose you were asked to tell which is the greatest maritime city of the whole world, judging by the vessel tonnage movement? You would in all probability say Liverpool, London, Antwerp, New York or Hamburg. Wrong. To be right you would have to say Hong Kong, according to the report of the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor. The general supposition is that Hong Kong is a city. Wrong again. It is an island, a British crown colony and naval station, with Victoria as its capital. But Victoria is nearly submerged in common usage, being called by nearly everybody Hong Kong. After Hong Kong come, in order, London, Antwerp, New York, Hamburg, Liverpool, Rotterdam, Cardiff, Shanghai and Singapore in vessel tonnage.

Statue's Decorations.

An image of the Virgin Mary in a church at Antipolo, in the Philippine Islands, has jewels valued at $1,500,000, which have been given it by the devout women natives.

FITS permanently cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Alcohol is coming into considerable use for illumination in France.

Use Allen's Foot-Ease.

It is the only cure for Swollen, Smarting, Tired, Aching, Hot, Sweating Feet, Corns and Bunions. Ask for Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder to be shaken into the shoes. Cures while you walk. At all Druggists and Shoe Stores, 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Sample sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N.Y.

A librarian declares there are more than 1,500,000 novels.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle

In 1750 diamonds were sold in Europe at $40 a carat.

Piso's Cure cannot be too highly spoken of as a cough cure.—J. W. O'BRIEN, 322 Third Avenue, N. Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6, 1900.

The German flag was first unfurled in 1867.

Cures Blood Poison, Cancer, Ulcers.

If you have offensive pimples or eruptions, ulcers on any part of the body, aching bones or joints, falling hair, mucous patches, swollen glands, skin itches and burns, sore lips or gums, eating, festering sores, sharp, gnawing pains, then you suffer from serious blood poison or the beginnings of deadly cancer. You may be permanently cured by taking Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) made especially to cure the worst blood and skin diseases. Heals every sore or ulcer, even deadly cancer, stops all aches and pains and reduces all swellings. Botanic Blood Balm cures all malignant blood troubles, such as eczema, scabs and scales, pimples, running sores, carbuncles, scrofula. Druggists, $1 per large bottle, 3 bottles $2.50, 6 bottles $5, express prepaid. To prove it cures, sample of Blood Balm sent free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

Buying Up America.

Foreign landlordism is reaching out its tentacles in the direction of America. A syndicate headed by the Earl of Verulem and the Earl of Lankerville owns a vast tract of land in Wisconsin. Alexander Grant, of London, has 35,000 acres in Kansas. The English Land Company owns 50,000 acres in Arkansas. Mr. Elfenhauser, of Halifax, has 600,000 in West Virginia. A Scotch concern, Syndicate No. 1, bought 50,000 acres in Florida. The Holland syndicate owns 5,000,000 acres of grazing lands in the West, and the German syndicate 2,000,000. It is said that 20,000,000 acres of good American land are owned by foreign landlords (English and Scotch). That is an area larger than the state of South Carolina, and nearly as large as Maine.

A Peculiar Gun.

A shotgun recently manufactured by a Connecticut firm was a special order for a man who uses his left eye to aim with, the right eye being sightless. The stock and lower frame of the gun were twisted so that he may shoot without discomfort. The gun is the third made for this man in twenty-five years.

A LOVELY COMPLEXION

New York Lady Proves That Every Woman May Have It by Using Cuticura Soap.

Mrs. R. Reichenberg, wife of the well-known jeweler, of 146 Fulton St., New York, says: "I had a friend who was justly proud of her complexion. When asked what gave her such a brilliant and lovely complexion, she replied, 'A healthy woman can be sure of a fine skin if she will do as I do, use plenty of Cuticura Soap and water.' She insisted that I follow her example, which I did with speedy conviction. I find that Cuticura Soap keeps the skin soft, white and clear, and prevents redness and roughness."

A Parisian physician has started a school of laughter.

The Oldest Nurse in Georgia.

Mrs. S. E. Kennedy, one of the oldest and best known nurses in Georgia, states that in all her experience with bowel troubles and children teething, Dr. Biggers' Huckleberry Cordial is the best remedy.

Sold by all Druggists, 25 and 50c. bottle.

Ancient Bank.

One hundred and thirteen years ago, on June 14, 1792, the Hartford bank was organized under the charter granted by the state a few weeks before, and its doors were opened for business on Aug. 8, 1792. It has had a continuous business existence since that date.

CONSTANT ACHING.

Back aches all the time. Spoils your appetite, wearies the body, worries the mind. Kidneys cause it all and Doan's Kidney Pills relieve and cure it.

H. B. McCarver, of 201 Cherry St., Portland, Ore., inspector of freight for the Trans-Continental Co., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills for back ache and other symptoms of kidney trouble which had annoyed me for months. I think a cold was responsible for the whole trouble. It seemed to settle in my kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills rooted it out. It is several months since I used them, and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo N. Y.

Greek Can't Speak Greek.

The Greek colony of San Francisco protests against the appointment of one J. Kapsimalis as consul there. One of their counts against him is that he cannot speak Greek correctly, but speaks it, they say, "like a tongue-tied Hottentot telling about a baseball game."

Gomez's Name in History.

Gomez's name will go down in Cuban history as has the name of Washington in our country's history. He was to Cuba in a very large degree what Washington was to the United States.

SUMMER RESORTS

On or reached via Southern Railway. Summer excursion tickets are now on sale by the Southern Railway to the delightfully cool resorts of East Tennessee, Western North Carolina (including the beautiful Sapphire Country) and Virginia; also many other desirable resorts. For a copy of Summer Homes Folder, descriptive of the many delightful summer resorts on or reached via the Southern Railway, also for rates and other information write to J. N. Harrison, District Passenger Agent, Birmingham, Ala.

SUMMER EXCURSIONS.

Write to J. N. Harrison, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway, Birmingham, Ala. for copy of Summer Homes Folder, descriptive of the many delightful resorts located along the line of the Southern Railway. Excursion tickets on sale now.

FOR THE LIVER AND BOWELS

Nothing can equal MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR. It promptly cures constipation, biliousness, indigestion, sour stomach, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels. 50c a bottle at all drug stores.

WINCHESTER

"LEADER" AND "REPEATER" SHOTGUN SHELLS

Carefully inspected shells, the best of powder, shot and wadding, loaded by machines which give invariable results account for the superiority of Winchester "Leader" and "Repeater" Factory Loaded Smokeless Powder Shells. Reliability, velocity, pattern and penetration are determined by scientific apparatus and practical experiments. They are THE SHELLS THE CHAMPIONS SHOOT

Checkers

—if you have been told you cannot live—that your disease is incurable—do not despair! Buy a large $1 bottle of Checkers and watch the result. Sample bottle free, write to-day—you'll forget it to-morrow.

Checkers Medicine Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

BAD BLOOD

"I had trouble with my bowels which made my blood impure. My face was covered with pimples which no external remedy could remove. I tried your Cascarets and great was my joy when the pimples disappeared after a month's steady use. I have recommended them to all my friends and quite a few have found relief."

C. J. Pusch, 907 Park Ave., New York City, N. Y.

Best For The Bowels

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC

THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c. 25c. 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y. 600

ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

OUR SPECIALTY

3—4—5

Three two dollar shirts for five dollars.

MADE TO YOUR MEASURE.

Write for samples and measurement blanks.

MODEL SHIRT CO.

Dept. S, Indianapolis, Ind.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and local soreness, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh.

Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in pure water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all

TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES

For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box.

Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.

THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

When King Alfonso traveled from Paris to Cherbourg, 238 miles, the road was guarded by 30,000 troops.

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.

NEW ORLEANS.

Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.

MILLIONS OF WOMEN USE

Cuticura SOAP

Assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great Skin Cure, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or undue perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic, purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery.

Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston. Mailed Free, "A Book for Women."

FOR WOMEN

Amigo

$2.50

A Shoe Which is the STYLISH WOMAN'S Favorite.

It Must Be Worn to Be Appreciated.

INSIST UPON HAVING IT.

IT'S A MONEY SAVER. IT'S AN "ALWAYS JUST CORRECT" CLOVER BRAND SHOE.

Wertheimer-Swarts Shoe Co.

LARGEST FINE SHOE EXCLUSIVISTS

ST. LOUIS, U. S. A.

Say Plainly to Your Grocer

That you want LION COFFEE always, and he, being a square man, will not try to sell you anything else. You may not care for our opinion, but

What About the United Judgment of Millions of housekeepers who have used LION COFFEE for over a quarter of a century?

Is there any stronger proof of merit, than the Confidence of the People and ever increasing popularity? LION COFFEE is carefully selected at the plantation, shipped direct to our various factories, where it is skillfully roasted and carefully packed in sealed packages—unlike loose coffee, which is exposed to germs, dust, insects, etc. LION COFFEE reaches you as pure and clean as when it left the factory. Sold only in 1 lb. packages.

Lion-head on every package.

Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.

There is absolutely no other school for Women and Girls in the South, if anywhere offering an extensive curriculum, thus the greatest benefits for the smallest outlay. Most approved modern improvements. Elect. Light. Water heating. Complete outfit of Bath-rooms, etc. Grounds of forty acres, in natural oak-grove, the most unique and beautiful School Grounds in America. Offers to the children thorough instruction for the great universities. Col. Th. Smith A. M. Pres. Adam, Ky. Co. Va.

THE DAISY FLY KILLER destroys all flies and affords comfort to every home—in dining room, sleeping room, kitchen, all places where flies are troublesome. Clean, neat, will not soil or injure anything. Try them once and you never will be without them. If not kept by dealers, sent prepaid for 30c. HAROLD SOMERS, 149 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

TULANE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA.

Its advantages for practical instruction, both in ample laboratories and convenient hospital materials are unequalled. Free access is given to the great Charity Hospital with 900 beds and 20,000 patients annually. Special instruction is given daily at the bedside of the sick. The next session begins October 19th, 1905. For catalogue and information address

PROF. S. E. CHAILLE M. D., Dean, P. O. Drawer 261, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Am. 28, 1905.

The Bryant & Stratton

Business, Shorthand and Telegraphy College, Louisville, Ky., open the whole year. Students can enter any time. Catalog free.

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free Catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO., 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

GOVERNMENT REPORT

On the Growing Crops of the United States, on July The First.

REPORT ON CROP CONDITION.

Average Condition of Growing Crops on July 1 Was 87.3—Compared With Former Years.

Washington, D. C.—Preliminary returns to the chief of the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture show the acreage of corn planted to be about 94,011,000 acres, an increase of about 2,080,000 acres, or 2.3 per cent on the area planted last year.

The average condition of the growing crop on July 1 was 87.3 as compared with 88.4 on July 1, 1904, and a ten year average of 87.6.

The average condition of winter wheat on July 1 was 82.7, as compared with 85.5 last month, 78.7 on July 1, 1904, and a ten year average of 77.8.

The average condition of spring wheat on July 1 was 91.0, as compared with 93.7 last month, 93.7 on July 1, 1904, and a ten year average of 89.3.

The average condition on July 1 of spring wheat and winter wheat combined was 85.8, as compared with 84.5 on July 1, 1904, and 80 at the corresponding date in 1903.

The amount of wheat remaining in the hands of farmers on July 1 is estimated at about 24,257,000 bushels; equivalent to about 4.4 per cent of the crop of last year.

The average condition of the oat crop on July 1 was 92.1 as compared with 92.9 last month, 89.8 on July 1, 1904, and a ten year average of 88.5.

The average condition of winter rye on July 1 was 92.7 as compared with 88 on July 1, 1904, and a ten year average of 89.1.

The average condition of spring rye on July 1 was 93.0 as compared with 90.8 on July 1, 1904, and a ten year average of 88.4.

The average of rice is less than that of last year by about 172,000 acres or 26 per cent, and the condition on July 1 was 88 against 88.2 one year ago.

The acreage of potatoes, excluding sweet potatoes, is less than that of last year by about 19,000 acres or 6 per cent. The average condition on July 1 was 91.2 as compared with 93.1 on July 1, 1904, and a ten-year average of 92.1.

The acreage of tobacco is less than that of last year by about 54,000 acres, or 6.7 per cent. The average condition on July 1 was 87.4 against 89.3 one year ago.

Another Mine Accident.

Birmingham, Ala.—Three men were killed, and three others were seriously injured in the mines at Sayreton, operated by the Republic Iron and Steel Company, Tuesday afternoon at 6 o'clock by rock falling from the roof of the slope. Sayreton is one and a half miles beyond North Birmingham.

The killed: John Owens, white; Patrick Bailey, white; Frank Scott, a negro. George Kennedy, white, was slightly but not seriously injured; Henry Finley, colored, was probably fatally crushed by the falling stone, and Zeb Perryman, colored, was seriously injured, but it is thought that he will recover.

It is claimed that a car in the mines was off the track near the first slope heading and several of the miners, including those killed and injured, were trying to get it back on the track when, without a moment's warning, a huge stone broke loose from the roof and fell with terrific force on them.

The three men who lost their lives were killed almost instantly. The bodies of those killed and the injured were quickly recovered.

Three Killed in Explosion.

Huntsville, Ala.—The boiler of the big saw mill at Golightly, in a remote section of Madison county, exploded with tremendous force Monday morning and killed three white men.

The dead are Allen Hall, the fireman; Frank Wallace and Ed Beech.

Several persons about the establishment were injured by flying debris, and two or three mules and oxen were killed, one of the latter animals being cut half in two by a flying iron rod. The explosion was due to the carelessness of the fireman, Hall, who allowed the water in the boiler to run low.

The force of the explosion demolished the whole building, blew lumber in every direction, demolished wagons standing in the adjacent yard and blew the bodies of the dead men a distance of thirty-five yards. One report claims that the water in the well a few feet from the boiler was blown out.

Prosecution to Follow.

Washington, D. C.—The scandals of the department of agriculture are now in the hands of the department of justice. Secretary Wilson, of the former department, has referred all the papers in the cotton leak to the attorney general. This, it is believed, was done at the suggestion of the president, who, it is said, wanted this action taken before the Southern Cotton Growers' Association made similar demands.

Attorney General Moody is out of the city and Solicitor Henry M. Hoyt is acting attorney general. From a public standpoint it would be well if the matter could rest entirely in his hands. He is well qualified in every respect to go into the law of the case, and in addition is an official who will not fear to prosecute all who are connected with the scandal. If Mr. Hoyt has his way there will be no whitewash. It is believed here that the acting attorney general will find a way to prosecute Holmes, and it will not be surprising if under his supervision other department officials, confederates of Holmes, are uncovered. Few believe that Holmes could have acted alone in the matter.

Shoots Himself Before Mother.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Guy Robertson, living at Sylvan, shot and instantly killed himself late Saturday evening. According to reports from Sylvan young Robertson attended a game of ball and returned late in the afternoon so that his mother could use the horse and buggy. Upon his return he was met by his mother, who was waiting his return.

She noticed as he entered the room that he went to the bureau and took from a drawer a revolver, which she asked him to return to her. He told her that he would replace it himself, and stepped back only a few feet, pressed it to his temple and fired. Death resulted immediately.

Alabama Still in the Third Rank.

Washington, D. C.—In a report on iron ores issued by the geological survey it is stated that Alabama last year contributed three varieties of ore, 2,894,423 tons being red hematite, 787,544 tons being brown hematite and 17,944 magnetic.

The state occupies third, first and sixth places respectively in these classes. The total production of all classes, 3,699,881 tons, is an increase of 14,921 tons over the 1903 output of 3,684,960 tons, and maintains Alabama as third in rank.

Goldfield Has $200,000 Fire Loss.

Goldfield, Nev.—Two blocks of Goldfield's business and residence sections have been destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $200,000. The fire originated in the basement of Mrs. Wilson's millinery store, spread to R. Romero's brokerage office and automobile establishment, which blew up. A new $40,000 hotel being built lasted about twenty minutes, and the Nevada Detective Agency and Grandview hotel, both across the street, soon followed.

Buck Lewis Shot.

Guntersville, Ala.—John A. Dotson shot and fatally wounded Buck Lewis about three miles north of Guntersville Tuesday. Reports say Dotson had been endeavoring to call at Lewis' house to see his daughter, but Lewis prevented him.

This made the young man angry and securing a pistol he went to the field where Lewis was plowing, crept up behind him and fired a 44-caliber pistol ball through his back and stomach. Officers are in search of Dotson.

Big Fire Loss at Guntersville.

Guntersville, Ala.—Fire which started in F. C. Whittaker's furniture store Tuesday morning destroyed that establishment, John Gilbreath's grocery store, the Bank of Guntersville, the grocery store of A. R. Hooper, and Sam Henry's general merchandise store. The loss is estimated at $35,000, and very little insurance was carried.

Miss Wheeler to Marry.

Washington, D. C.—Miss Julia Knox Wheeler, daughter of General Joseph Wheeler, will be married to William J. Harris, a prominent insurance man of Georgia, July 27. The ceremony will be solemnized quietly by the Rev. Ernest M. Stires in St. Thomas church, New York.

Shipbuilding Plant Is Sold.

Richmond, Va.—The shipbuilding plant of the William R. Trigg Company here has been sold by order of court to Frank Samuel and H. G. Lloyd, both of Philadelphia, for $368,000. It is understood that the purchase of the plant by Messrs. Lloyd and Samuel was made for the bondholders.

Wife Offers Reward.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Mrs. H. A. Lindgreen has offered one thousand dollars for any clue of her husband whom it is thought was assassinated and thrown into the Warrior some two months ago.

An Accomplished Daughter.

Mrs. B.—I suppose you find your daughter very much improved by her two-year stay at college?

Mrs. Proudmother—La, yes! Mary Elizabeth is a carnivorous reader now, and she frequently impoverishes music. But she ain't a bit stuck up—she is unanimous to everybody, an' she never keeps a caller waitin' for her to dress; she just runs in non de plume an, you know that makes one feel so comfortable.—Lippincott's.

Losing Its Land.

Great Britain lost 148,906 acres between 1867 and 1880 by the encroachment of the sea, and 29,155 acres between 1880 and 1890, says the Philadelphia Ledger. A survey in the reign of Edward I. gave the Duchy of Cornwall 1,500,000 acres, but the ordinance survey some years ago showed that this had been reduced to 829,500 acres.

Russia's olive crop is reported to be complete failure.

Missouri River Rampant.

Omaha, Neb.—The Missouri river Saturday broke into "Cut-off lake" with a strong current twenty feet wide and with a suddenness that endangered several families living in the vicinity. At noon the river was still rising at East Omaha. Heavy damage has been done to crops and live stock.

Norway Is Flourishing.

Christiana, Norway.—The political crisis has remarkably small influence on the general condition of the country. With the exception of a falling off in the number of Swedes visiting Norway the traffic is excellent. The customs revenue for June shows a great increase, partly due to the new tariff, which is slightly protective. This indicates a flourishing condition of commerce.

Muravieff Leaves for Russia.

Evian Les Bains, France.—M. Muravieff, Russian ambassador to Italy, and one of the Russian peace plenipotentiaries, accompanied by the members of his family, has left for St. Petersburg. The ambassador has completed three weeks of the water cure.

In Federal Court.

Louisville, Ky.—A special from Maysville, Ky., says Judge Cochran of the United States District Court, has taken jurisdiction in the Caleb Powers case. This means that the case will be tried in the federal court.

Attorneys for Powers made a motion that a date be set to hear the question of bail, but Judge Cochran did not think it advisable to pass upon the question of bail until the matter of jurisdiction was settled by the court. Judge Cochran then ordered Powers removed from the jail at Georgetown to the jail at Newport.

Cotton Destroyed By Fire.

Meridian, Miss.—Fire Saturday destroyed the building of the Gulf Compress Company. Over 14,000 bales of cotton were in storage and about 5,000 bales were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $175,000, partially insured.

Couch Is Denied Bond.

Decatur, Ala.—In the preliminary trial of Percy Couch, charged with the murder of Officer W. A. Baber, the justices late today decided that Couch was not entitled to bond. Therefore he was remanded to jail. Couch broke down, as did his sisters, who were present. The trial of the case will take place at the regular term of the criminal court in October.

Leather Plant Is Burned.

Danvers, Mass.—The plant of the P. Kearns Russett Leather Manufacturing Company at Davenport was destroyed by fire Saturday, entailing a loss estimated at about $100,000, with partial insurance.

The French Budget.

Paris, France.—The budget for 1906 was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies Friday, showing an increased expenditure of $1,400,000 compared with 1905.

The ministry does not propose increased taxation, calculating that the revenues from the existing taxes will show a small surplus.

Japs Monopolize the Trade.

Berlin, Germany.—An article in the semi-official Tsingtauer Neueste Nachrichten, reprinted here, calls upon Germany to take a firm and vigorous course in checking the trade invasion of the Shantung province by the Japanese, who, the paper affirms, are establishing themselves in the capital and lesser cities of the province, while Japanese-made articles are in the shops in every place. The Japanese under secretary to the minister of commerce himself, the article says, has visited Tsingtau recently.

Ryan to Visit Philippines.

Rome, Italy.—Father Ryan, rector of St. Patrick's College, Thurles, Ireland, has been commissioned by the Vatican to visit the Philippines with a view of establishing Irish ecclesiastics there. Archbishop Harty, of Manilla, and Monsignor Reus, the apostolic delegate in the Philippines, have been informed of the scheme and approve of it.

Execution in Louisiana.

New Iberia, La.—Friday Amos Holms paid the penalty for his crime committed on Avery's Island last February, when he criminally assaulted a white woman. The execution took place in the partish jail in the presence of about forty witnesses. The trap was sprung at 12:30, and Holms' neck was broken by the fall.

Shonts Goes to New York.

Washington, D. C.—Chairman Shonts of the Panama canal commission left for New York Friday, where he will meet Mr. Stevens, the newly appointed chief engineer. Together they will visit President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay next Monday.

Tiflis, Trans Caucasus.—Bomb-throwing continues daily. Two Dynoriks were killed and thirteen persons wounded by a bomb and a policeman was shot Saturday night.

Memphis, Tenn.—Judge Moss turned his attention from "the lid" to Magistrates who are violating the law passed by the recent legislature by trying misdemeanor cases outside their districts. The grand jury was instructed to indict these Magistrates.

Santa Fe Sends Money.

Topeka, Kans.—The Devlin miners in southern Kansas were paid Saturday with $50,000 borrowed by Cyrus Leland, one of the receivers of the Devlin estate. Money will be sent to Osage City next week to meet the pay roll there. This will be advanced by the Santa Fe railroad. Treasurer Edward Wilder announced that the Santa Fe was ready to advance the $50,000 for the southern Kansas miners, but Mr. Leland had already made arrangements to secure it.

The Santa Fe wants to keep all the mines open, as the road is dependent upon them for its coal supply. The receivers express themselves favorable to continuing the operation of the mines.

Swedish Feeling High.

Christiania.—The secretary of the Norwegian government office at Stockholm was preparing to decorate the building on the occasion of the entry in state to the city of Prince Gustavus Adolphus and his bride, permission having been given him to do so. This occasioned hostile criticism in the Swedish press, which declared that Sweden should not allow the flag of revolutionaries to welcome the princely couple.

To avoid hurting Swedish susceptibilities or causing an unpleasant demonstration the secretary was recalled and arrived at Christiania today. The Norwegian government's palace at Stockholm will therefore be empty tomorrow. The incidents are referred to here as evidence showing the excited state of Swedish feeling, as the Norwegian government wished merely to pay its respects to the former dynasty.

Postoffice Appointments.

Washington, D. C.—Boling Kavanaugh has been appointed postmaster at Cubahatchie, Mason county, vice Mary J. Cliett, deceased.

Rural routes ordered established September 15, Glenn Allen, Fayette county, route 1, population 433; houses 103. Talladega, Talladega county, route 4, population 388; houses 80.

William H. Roberts appointed regular, Humphrey Roberts substitute, rural carrier route 1, at Hugen.

One Is Killed, Nine Injured.

Detroit, Mich.—Nine persons were injured, one of them fatally, Sunday evening at the corner of Fort and Hastings streets, when a Trumbull avenue car crashed into a wagon load of people returning from a drive about Belle Isle park.

Joseph Schwartz, of Toledo, who was fatally injured in the collision, was driving and did not hear the car approaching. The wagon was demolished. The occupants were hurled in every direction.

Shops Burned at State Institution.

Talladega, Ala.—Shops of the State Deaf and Dumb institute burned at noon Sunday. The water supply was sufficient, but the mains were too small to save the building.

The value of the building and contents was probably $30,000. The principal of the school, J. Hal Johnson, is away. It is impossible to learn tonight whether the buildings were insured.

Murder in Bledsoe.

Crossville, Tenn.—W. L. Tollett brother of State Senator E. G. Tollett, was killed from ambush Saturday morning near Litton, about seventeen miles from here, while driving from Litton to his home at Pikeville. No particulars of the murder can be learned. The deceased was proprietor of a hotel at Pikeville, and a prominent democratic politician of Bledsoe county.

Impeachment Proceedings.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The impeachment proceedings against J. H. Schroeder and W. M. Hall, associate members of the workhouse and road commission, against whom charges were preferred by W. A. Park, chairman of that commission, are on in the county court. Two or three additional days will be required to complete the hearing.

Lightning Causes Big Fire.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Lightning struck the grocery store of O. E. Porter at Sweetwater, Tenn., a small town on the Southern railway, forty-two miles west of Knoxville, Sunday, and before the fire had been extinguished it had burned one block of business buildings on the main street of the town and had jumped across Third street and destroyed three stores in the second block. The total damage will be close to $60,000, with insurance of $25,000.

Stop Gambling In Mexico.

Mexico City—It is stated no more gambling licenses will be issued after August 1st, when all existing licenses expire. Governor Tands of the federal district announces that he is determined to extirpate gambling in this city.

Eleven Negroes Arrested.

Birmingham, Ala.—Officers Buckalew and Burns arrested eleven negroes, said to have been engaged in a crap game on the south side Saturday night. One of the eleven made bond. The others were sent to the police station and locked in the city jail. The patrol wagon was taxed to its capacity in accommodating the gang. Patrol Driver Stokes, who was on duty at the time, states that this broke the record for big loads.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.

Thorsby Winery —Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props.

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOE

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wisha
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby In
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & S
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUGGI

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

Santa Fe Sends Money.

Topeka, Kans.—The Devlin miners in southern Kansas were paid Saturday with $50,000 borrowed by Cyrus Leland, one of the receivers of the Devlin estate. Money will be sent to Osage City next week to meet the pay roll there. This will be advanced by the Santa Fe railroad. Treasurer Edward Wilder announced that the Santa Fe was ready to advance the $50,000 for the southern Kansas miners, but Mr. Leland had already made arrangements to secure it.

The Santa Fe wants to keep all the mines open, as the road is dependent upon them for its coal supply. The receivers express themselves favorable to continuing the operation of the mines.

Swedish Feeling High.

Christiania.—The secretary of the Norwegian government office at Stockholm was preparing to decorate the building on the occasion of the entry in state to the city of Prince Gustavus Adolphus and his bride, permission having been given him to do so. This occasioned hostile criticism in the Swedish press, which declared that Sweden should not allow the flag of revolutionaries to welcome the princely couple.

To avoid hurting Swedish susceptibilities or causing an unpleasant demonstration the secretary was recalled and arrived at Christiania today. The Norwegian government's palace at Stockholm will therefore be empty tomorrow. The incidents are referred to here as evidence showing the excited state of Swedish feeling, as the Norwegian government wished merely to pay its respects to the former dynasty.

Postoffice Appointments.

Washington, D. C.—Boling Kavanaugh has been appointed postmaster at Cubahatchie, Mason county, vice Mary J. Cliett, deceased.

Rural routes ordered established September 15, Glenn Allen, Fayette county, route 1, population 433; houses 103. Talladega, Talladega county, route 4, population 388; houses 80.

William H. Roberts appointed regular, Humphrey Roberts substitute, rural carrier route 1, at Hugen.

One Is Killed, Nine Injured.

Detroit, Mich.—Nine persons were injured, one of them fatally, Sunday evening at the corner of Fort and Hastings streets, when a Trumbull avenue car crashed into a wagon load of people returning from a drive about Belle Isle park.

Joseph Schwartz, of Toledo, who was fatally injured in the collision, was driving and did not hear the car approaching. The wagon was demolished. The occupants were hurled in every direction.

Shops Burned at State Institution.

Talladega, Ala.—Shops of the State Deaf and Dumb institute burned at noon Sunday. The water supply was sufficient, but the mains were too small to save the building.

The value of the building and contents was probably $30,000. The principal of the school, J. Hal Johnson, is away. It is impossible to learn tonight whether the buildings were insured.

Murder in Bledsoe.

Crossville, Tenn.—W. L. Tollett brother of State Senator E. G. Tollett, was killed from ambush Saturday morning near Litton, about seventeen miles from here, while driving from Litton to his home at Pikeville. No particulars of the murder can be learned. The deceased was proprietor of a hotel at Pikeville, and a prominent democratic politician of Bledsoe county.

Impeachment Proceedings.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The impeachment proceedings against J. H. Schroeder and W. M. Hall, associate members of the workhouse and road commission, against whom charges were preferred by W. A. Park, chairman of that commission, are on in the county court. Two or three additional days will be required to complete the hearing.

Lightning Causes Big Fire.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Lightning struck the grocery store of O. E. Porter at Sweetwater, Tenn., a small town on the Southern railway, forty-two miles west of Knoxville, Sunday, and before the fire had been extinguished it had burned one block of business buildings on the main street of the town and had jumped across Third street and destroyed three stores in the second block. The total damage will be close to $60,000, with insurance of $25,000.

Stop Gambling In Mexico.

Mexico City—It is stated no more gambling licenses will be issued after August 1st, when all existing licenses expire. Governor Tands of the federal district announces that he is determined to extirpate gambling in this city.

Eleven Negroes Arrested.

Birmingham, Ala.—Officers Buckalew and Burns arrested eleven negroes, said to have been engaged in a crap game on the south side Saturday night. One of the eleven made bond. The others were sent to the police station and locked in the city jail. The patrol wagon was taxed to its capacity in accommodating the gang. Patrol Driver Stokes, who was on duty at the time, states that this broke the record for big loads.

The Agricultural Department puts the annual damage done by insects in this country at $785,000,000, states the Birmingham Age-Herald. This sum is so enormous it almost staggers belief, but the Agricultural Department is prepared to sustain with facts and figures its aggregate.

In Brassey Naval Annual for 1905, which has just appeared, the figures on effective fighting ships of the five great nations are as follows: Great Britain, all ships 178, battleships 65; France, all ships 93, battleships 36; United States, all ships 75, battleships 36; Germany, all ships 69, battleships 36; Russia, all ships 44, battleships 26. As to first class battleships the figures are: Great Britain, 50; France, 17; United States, 25; Germany, 22; Russia, 13.

Rojestvensky organized a fleet. Under great difficulties he brought it safely to the China Sea. He drilled his officers and crews for months to make them passably efficient, reflects the Chicago Tribune. Then, perhaps in obedience to imperative orders, he bearded the Japanese in their own waters and won for himself melancholy immortality as the commander in a momentous historic contest—the greatest sea fight of modern times—of a routed and crushed fleet—a fleet on which all the hopes of his Emperor were staked.

As a broad, general statement, it has often been remarked that monkeys are afflicted with diseases common to human beings, remarks the Daily True American. The last report of the Board of Directors of the Philadelphia Zoological Society is to the point, showing as it does that tuberculosis, inflammation of the gastro-intestinal tract, non-tubercular pneumonia, pleurisy, abscess of the panceas and similar afflictions are a part of the monkey's existence. Nevertheless, imitative as the little creatures are, they have never yet been known to contract tonsilitis from smoking cigarettes, or to suffer from "drinker's stomach."

Italy must be entering upon another era of prosperity, or otherwise the Government would not consent to enter upon a project for naval reconstruction and expansion, opine the Boston Transcript. For years the work of building up a new fleet to take the place of that which was growing old has been deferred to financially better times, but the other day the Minister of Marine introduced a bill appropriating $27,000,000 to be devoted to new construction. The proposal is that the building program shall provide for five battleships, five 10,000-ton cruisers, fourteen destroyers, twelve submarines and forty-two torpedo boats. The sum of $27,000,000 will not build all these vessels, but the Government believes it can eke out expenditures from the regular naval budget which amounts to about $25,000,000 yearly.

When Dewey destroyed Montojo's fleet without injury to his own it seemed incredible. When the fleets of Sampson and Schley destroyed Cervera's ships unscathed the officers of an Austrian war vessel in the vicinity refused for a time to believe it. The victory of Togo is equally complete, and the damage to his fleet is insignificant. The whole world is astonished, declares the Philadelphia Record. Yet this one-sidedness is inevitable under the conditions of modern naval construction and armament. When two cowboys meet the usual result is that one of them is dead and the other is uninjured. The one who "gets the drop" on the other puts his enemy out of business without harm to himself. Twelve-inch shells do their work very quickly, no matter how heavily armored the sides of the opposing ships may be; it is only a question of their hitting

VOL. III.

GENERAL S Current News Garner
the Plant.

Officer Kills a Negro.

Selma, Ala.—Police Officer Logan killed a negro by the name of Wi[illegible] Friday morning. He was ar[rested] by the officer and asked if he paid his street tax, the officer being notified him. The negro stated that he had not paid and did not intend to pay it. Whereupon he was told to consider himself under arrest. Chum replied that he would rather die than either be arrested or pay the tax. He had in his hands some long shingles and started towards the officer in a threatening manner when the latter pulled his pistol and fired twice, both balls taking effect and causing instant death.

The officer remained at the scene of the shooting until Chief Walters, who had been notified, reached him. When he turned over his pistol and policeman's club to the chief, awaiting investigation. Mr. Logan, in speaking of the shooting, stated that he regretted exceedingly, but he deemed that he was going to be attacked. And knowing the negro's character to shoot him. Chum did not bear good character, while the officer was considered one of the most conservative and faithful men employed by the city. This is Chief Walters' estimate of the officer as expressed publicly after the shooting.

Officer Logan went to the county jail, where he will remain until the mayor holds a preliminary examination. There is little room to doubt but that Mr. Logan will then be liberated.

Dead Body Found.

Tuskegee, Ala.—News has just reached here that the body of Bolling Cloud was found in Calibee swamp on the evening of the 14th, near Milstead.

Mr. Cloud has been missing since May 18th. When last seen he was at the home of a Mr. Simmons near Milstead. He spent the night of May 17th with the Simmons family, leaving there on the morning of the 18th for his home near Laplace and it is supposed he was taken sick on the way home, as he was subject to spells and perhaps stopped in the shade of the swamp for a little rest, where he died. The body was found by a negro who was out squirrel hunting. When he discovered the scattered bones of what he thought a person the negro reported the find to some of the white people who lived close by.

Big Order of Iron.

Birmingham, Ala.—Announcement has been made that the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company has placed an order for 10,000 tons of pig iron in this district, delivery to be made between now and the first of January.

It is understood that the order was placed with the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company under $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry, and the greater portion of the order will be filled from the Bessemer furnaces, five furnacemakers at that point being in blast. This order is the largest one booked in the Southern territory in several weeks.

New Steamship Company.

Mobile, Ala.—When the Bay Steamship Company, of Baldwin county, filed with the secretary of state a notice of its incorporation it became definitely known that a new freight and passenger line will be established with offices at Point Clear.

The boats of the new company will ply to and from all points on the shores of Mobile Bay, the rivers and streams flowing thereinto and the waters adjacent thereto in the Gulf of Mexico and Mississippi Sound.

The capital stock of the company is $50,000.

Shot By Negro.

Girard, Ala.—Young Thompson, a well known citizen of Girard, was shot and seriously wounded Friday night at 9 o'clock under very peculiar circumstances. He and a number of friends were walking along Sixth street, Thompson being slightly in the rear of the others. They met and passed a negro and Thompson, thinking he was a white man, accosted him and jocularly asked him, "What's the matter?"

Without a word the negro pulled a pistol and fired twice. One ball struck Thompson in the leg, producing a serious but not a fatal wound. The other shot went wild. The negro was pursued by the crowd but escaped. His identity is unknown.

Charged With Mail Robbing.

Birmingham, Ala.—Charged with robbing mail pouches, John Pruett, of Talladega, was brought to Birmingham Saturday and landed in the county jail. His bond has been fixed at $5,000 and this will be made.

y, Alabama
ess Directory.

IVE, er er
Store

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABL
information furnished to parti
who desire to locate in the So

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatesse

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Toba
and Cigars.

Thorsby Winery
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Prop

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toi
Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIS

E. H. Adams
General Merchandis
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

"MOLINE" Farming Imp
ments and "FLORENCE
Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOE

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wisha
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby In
G. C. Michelson, Prop
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & S
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUGGI

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., JULY 20 1905 NO. 17

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Officer Kills a Negro.

[illegible] Police Officer Logan [illegible] a negro by the name of Willie [illegible] Friday morning. He was ac[illegible] by the officer and asked if he had paid his street tax, the officer having notified him. The negro stated that he had not paid and did not intend to pay it. Whereupon he was told to consider himself under arrest. Chum replied that he would rather die than either be arrested or pay the tax. He had in his hands some long [illegible] and started towards the officer in a threatening manner when the latter pulled his pistol and fired [illegible], both balls taking effect and causing instant death.

The officer remained at the scene of the shooting until Chief Walters, who had been notified, reached him, when he turned over his pistol and officer's club to the chief, awaiting investigation. Mr. Logan, in speaking of the shooting, stated that he regretted exceedingly, but he deemed that he was going to be attacked, as knowing the negro's character he had to shoot him. Chum did not bear good character, while the officer was considered one of the most conservative and faithful men employed by the city. This is Chief Walters' estimate of the officer as expressed publicly after the shooting.

Officer Logan went to the county jail where he will remain until the coroner holds a preliminary examination. There is little room to doubt but Mr. Logan will then be liberated.

Dead Body Found.

Tuskegee, Ala.—News has just reached here that the body of Bolling Boyd was found in Calibee swamp [illegible] the evening of the 11th, near Millwood.

Mr. Cloud has been missing since the 18th. When last seen he was at the home of a Mr. Simmons near Millwood. He spent the night of May 17th with the Simmons family, leaving [illegible] on the morning of the 18th for his home near Laplace and it is supposed he was taken sick on the way [illegible] as he was subject to spells and stopped in the shade of the [illegible] for a little rest, where he died. The body was found by a negro who was out squirrel hunting. When he discovered the scattered bones of what he thought a person, the negro gave the find to some of the white people who lived close by.

Big Order of Iron.

Birmingham, Ala.—Announcement has been made that the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company has placed an order for 10,000 tons of pig iron in this district, delivery to be made between now and the first of January.

It is understood that the order was placed with the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company under $11 per ton for No. 2 foundry, and the greater portion of the order will be filled from the Bessemer furnaces, five miles from Birmingham at that point being in the district. This order is the largest one placed in the Southern territory in several weeks.

New Steamship Company.

Mobile, Ala.—When the Bay Steamship Company, of Baldwin county, filed with the secretary of state a certificate of its incorporation it became generally known that a new freight and passenger line will be established with offices at Point Clear.

The boats of the new company will run to and from all points on the bay of Mobile Bay, the rivers and [illegible] flowing thereinto and the waters adjacent thereto in the Gulf of Mexico and Mississippi Sound.

The capital stock of the company is [illegible].

Shot By Negro.

Girard, Ala.—Young Thompson, a well known citizen of Girard, was shot and seriously wounded Friday [illegible] at 2 o'clock under very peculiar circumstances. He and a number of others were walking along Sixth street, Thompson being slightly in the rear of the others. They met and passed a negro and Thompson, thinking he was a white man, accosted him jocularly asked him, "What's the [illegible]."

Without a word the negro pulled a gun and fired twice. One ball struck Thompson in the leg, producing a serious but not a fatal wound. The other shot went wild. The negro was [illegible] by the crowd but escaped. His identity is unknown.

Charged With Mail Robbing.

[illegible], Ala.—Charged with [illegible] robberies, John Pruett, of [illegible] was brought to Birmingham Saturday and landed in the county jail. His bond has been fixed at $[illegible] and this will be made.

New Coal Company.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Star-Cahaba Coal Company has been organized by W. G. Robinson, John J. Callahan, D. H. Brown and others, of Bessemer, Birmingham and other places in this vicinity and mines are being opened near Parkwood, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, twenty-five miles south of Birmingham.

The mines have already run down 300 feet. A basin will hardly be reached until 500 or 750 feet have been pushed down, when entries will be opened. The new company expects a daily output of 1,000 tons of coal when fully developed.

Couch Religious.

Decatur, Ala.—Pierce Couch, who shot and killed Police Officer William A. Baber on the night of June 30, and who is now confined in the county jail in this city, is spending his time while incarcerated in the study of the Bible. He says he has read the Bible half through and that he wants to join the Methodist church on next Sunday morning if Sheriff Wiggins will accompany him or send a deputy with him.

Couch shot and killed Policeman Baber and then escaped to Winchester, Tenn., where he was arrested on the following Saturday on an N., C. and St. L. train bound for Nashville. He was brought back here the same night and lodged in jail. He was given a preliminary trial and denied bond.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

Selma, Ala.—Word reached the city of the shooting of a negro by the name of Wull Hall by another negro by the name of Dick Fields near Consul in Marengo county. Hall was working a crop on shares with Fields and was late in coming to work Friday morning. Fields upbraided him and the two negroes quarreled. Fields pulled a pistol which he claims he did not know was loaded and the two negroes scuffled for the weapon. In some manner it was discharged as he was stooping over at the time, ranged downward into his lung, causing practically instant death. Fields gave himself up and will be sent to jail at Linden.

A Youthful Couple.

Birmingham, Ala.—A youthful couple, at first claiming to be brother and sister, but later claiming to be man and wife, called upon Mayor Ward Saturday requesting transportation to their home at Macon, Ga. They give their names as Henry and Pauline Crawford. The boy says he is 18 and the girl admits that she is just 13 years of age. They were detained at police headquarters and a telegram was sent the authorities at Macon asking for information about them.

Company to Develop Natural Gas.

Huntsville, Ala.—The annual meeting of the shareholders of the New York-Alabama Oil Company that is developing the natural gas fields of this section, has been held in New York and directors for the year were elected. The company has an oil well good for a dozen barrels a day and four gas wells near Balze Green and others being drilled. The company has already secured rights of way and franchise for running a pipe line to Huntsville and expects to take up this enterprise as soon as arrangements are completed.

May Get Glass Factory.

Decatur, Ala.—A party of Northern and Eastern capitalists are contemplating locating a large glass factory near this city, and those in a position to know say the chances are the factory will be a go.

It is stated that this factory will employ about 600 skilled mechanics, and that it will bring with it a number of other glass industries, such as factories for the manufacture of glassware of all kinds.

It has long since been demonstrated that there is lying in easy reach of the Decaturs almost inexhaustible quantities of the finest glass sands. Much of this sand could be transported to the city by the present railroads, river and by wagons.

It is said that the location of this industry would probably add 5,000 or more to the population of the Decaturs and would pay out in wages many thousand dollars monthly.

Abbeville, Ala.—The Abbeville Guano company has been formed with a capital of $10,000. It will manufacture and sell guano, also will sell cotton seed meal and acid and buy cotton seed. The plant will be located at Dothan. The officers are J. W. Melvin, president; R. C. Stokes, vice president; M. V. Capps, treasurer; Robert Newman, secretary.

McGill Is Lynched.

Mobile, Ala.—Captain Doe, of the steamer Condor, arriving here Thursday afternoon from Ceiba, reported that the negro McGill, who murdered the crew and eight passengers of the cattle steamer Olympia, has been lynched. When McGill was captured at El Provinci, he was placed aboard the Honduran warship Ta Tumblar and sent back to Utilla Island. The natives were greatly wrought up over the horrible murders, and according to Captain Doe they first planned to burn the prisoner, but later he was taken from the officials and lynched.

The laws of the island forbid capital punishment, and it was this fact that caused the lynching.

Injured in Runaway at Boaz.

Gadsden, Ala.—Carrier Duffy, on the Boaz free delivery, number six, and his son had a very narrow escape from death one day this week at Boaz. Mr. Duffy and his son were driving through Boaz when the horse become frightened and ran away, and Mr. Duffy was thrown out and badly hurt by the wheels running over his body. The boy remained in the buggy and the horse ran for nearly two miles down the public road, being finally stopped by several men, and the boy, who was almost frightened to death, was rescued uninjured.

Big Sale of Cotton.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Col. D. N. Snodgress, one of the largest planters in Jackson county, and whose magnificent plantation fronts for miles on the Tennessee river, sold on Monday last his entire crop of last year's cotton, consisting of three hundred and fifty-four bales, to Knight, Yancy & Company, cotton dealers of Decatur, for 10 cents a pound, clear of all expenses, storages, insurance, etc., giving him in round numbers $18,953.90. Colonel Snodgrass has only three hundred acres in cotton this year, as he greatly reduced the acreage.

At the same time J. D. Snodgrass sold to the same firm three hundred bales for $17,000. The crop condition is poor and prospects are indeed gloomy, caused by the excessive rainfall.

Attempts to Take Life.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. B. Bynum, one of the most prominent and oldest citizens of Nix, Etowah county, made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide Thursday afternoon at his home some twenty miles from Gadsden. Dr. Bynum has been in feeble health for some time and Thursday while all the family were at dinner he walked out of the house and after going some little distance drew a sharp razor across his throat, cutting a gash about two and one-half inches long but fortunately the wound was not deep enough to be fatal.

He was not found until some hours later and after a hard rain had fallen. He was in an unconscious condition from loss of blood and the rain, but he was revived by hard work. When he regained consciousness he said that he was sorry he was unsuccessful, for he was tired of living and wanted to die and end his sufferings.

Speculation as to Engineer Corps.

Selma, Ala.—A corps of civil engineers has been observed in this vicinity for the past two days and their presence has caused much speculation. The party themselves do not make public their business, but have been busy running lines west of the city through what is known as Leach's grove and from that point to Valley Creek and the Alabama river.

It is said that the party is employed by the Memphis and Pensacola railroad which is seeking to secure a branch from the mineral fields to join the main line below Selma. It is supposed to be the same party that was seen near Bessemer some weeks ago. There are others who think that there is some local enterprise afoot and that a branch of either the Southern or the Louisville and Nashville is to be run to the location.

Bad Fires Occur at the Same Hour.

Bay Minnette, Ala.—The plant of the Hand Export Company at Hurricane, seven miles below here on the Louisville and Nashville, suffered a loss of about $25,000 dollars Friday afternoon by fire. The planing mill, dry kiln and commissary were entirely destroyed, together with about 10,000 feet of lumber. One box car on the side track was burned.

At the same hour the turpentine still of Cooper & Lowell, three miles from here, was burned, loss $2,000. It is not known what the cause was for either fire, and neither company carried any insurance.

Store Is Robbed at Vance.

Vance, Ala.—The store of A. W. Roland was broken into Friday night and goods valued at between $400 and $500 were stolen. The articles stolen included a 38 Winchester rifle, a 38 Colt's pistol, jewelry, clothing and $25 or $30 in cash. A liberal reward has been offered for the capture of the burglar.

RATES INVESTIGATED.

The Louisville Hearing Shows Some Sensational Developments.

FIRM TO BE PROSECUTED.

Louisville Shippers Obtain Big Advantage in Freight Rates to the Southwest.

Louisville, Ky.—Evidence of a sensational nature was offered late Monday afternoon at the hearing which is being conducted by the interstate commerce commission to investigate the charge of irregularities of the freight rate on grain originating west of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio rivers, and shipped to southeastern points. The evidence presented Monday consisted of sixty-seven 'expense bills" taken from the local office of the Southeastern Mississippi Valley Association, some of which had been altered, and the rest duplicated, and even triplicated with the result that the Louisville shipper was given an illegal advantage of three cents per hundred pounds over competitors selling grain in southeastern territory.

Complaint Against Louisville Shippers.

The hearing was instituted on complaint of shippers of grain from St. Louis and other Mississippi and Ohio river points, who charged that Louisville shippers by manipulating expense bills, either with or without knowledge on the part of the railroads, were securing lower rates to southeastern territory than other points in this territory. Under the present system the Mississippi and Ohio rivers are billing points for all grain originating west of those streams. Grain shipped from St. Louis to the Atlanta, Ga., district, by way of Cairo, Ill., at the regular local rate, would, on account of the shorter distance, be carried three cents per hundred pounds cheaper than it would via Louisville.

By presentation of an expense bill for each car of grain handled from St. Louis at any time within the previous ninety days, the Louisville shipper may ship an equal amount of grain on to Atlanta and have the rate "shrunk" 3 cents, thus placing him on an equality with the St. Louis shipper.

Shippers Deny Allegation.

The Louisville shippers through counsel before the commission denied that these expense bills had been manipulated, and duplicated, so as to allow of the shipment of grain to southeastern territory, that they had been bought in the vicinity of Louisville, which saved them the 3 cents over St. Louis grain. The duplicated bills introduced, however, were admitted by counsel for all parties interested to have been in many cases forged from beginning to end. Others had been obtained by erasing such words, for instance, as "bricks," and writing in wheat. Every one of the bills introduced was in favor of a single Louisville grain firm, which does an immense business in the southeast. As the bills thus far show only the months of September and October, 1904, those interested expect the total number of such bills used during the past two years to number hundreds and covering a saving in freights to the guilty users of many thousands of dollars, to say nothing of the advantage reaped in getting hold of the grain trade of the southeast.

A thorough investigation will be started and the criminal prosecutions in either state or federal courts are expected. The name of the firm implicated in Monday's exposure is withheld until the documents become a matter of record. No action had been taken in the matter when the commissioners adjourned until Tuesday.

Woman Found Murdered.

Decatur, Ala.—What seems to be one of the most diabolical crimes which has been committed in this portion of the state took place near Hillsboro, in Lawrence county, about twelve miles west of here, on the Southern railroad Sunday.

The lifeless and badly mutilated body of Mrs. Emmet Parhal, a white woman, about 21 years of age, was found on the track of the Southern railroad, about one mile this side of Hillsboro, and her husband was at once accused of having murdered her and placed her body on the railroad and a passing train mutilated the body to such an extent that it was almost unrecognizable.

The coroner of Lawrence county held an inquest over the body Monday night, but the decision was not given out. A preliminary trial was held in Hillsboro Monday afternoon and Parhal was remanded to jail without bond. He was taken to Moulton, the county seat of Lawrence county.

Triple Hanging in Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn.—Three negro murderers were hanged for the murder of Sam Gaines, committed in Memphis on August 27, 1904. The two negroes had been involved in a fight over a woman. Taylor slipped up behind Gaines and shot him to death. Taylor was brought to trial last October and pleaded self-defence. The jury returned a verdict in five minutes of willful murder.

Wife murder was the crime which cost A. M. Miles his life. He shot his wife, Mattie Miles, dead while she was in the act of obeying his command to cook supper. The killing took place in a negro tenement in this city June 7, 1904.

The crime of Major Mills was the murder of his father-in-law, Alexander Gill, which was committed at the home of the latter in this city, January 3, 1905. Mills had quarreled with his wife, and she left him, going to her father's home for pretection. Mills followed her and when her father, over 80 years of age, took the daughter's part, Mills pulled a weapon and began a vicious assault on the old man. While the wife stood by, begging him not to shoot, Mills emptied six shots of a revolver into Gill's body, killing him. Mills fled but was later captured and brought to trial. The jury in a few minutes returned a verdict of guilty in the first degree.

Three Are Killed in Feud.

Lee City, Ky.—Three men were killed on Holly Creek near here Saturday as the result, it is believed, of a feud of long standing. The dead are Frank Smith, aged 60, and his two sons, William and Manfred, ages respectively 20 and 21. Scott McQuinn is said to have admitted killing all three.

The shooting is believed to have been the result of bad feeling between the McQuinn and Smith families, which has been manifested for more than six years, when a 14-year-old brother of Scott McQuinn was killed by William Smith and Wayne Taulbee. Both men were convicted of the crime and Smith has just been liberated from the state penitentiary after serving a five years' sentence.

McQuinn is said to have stated that he was responsible for the killing but that he had done it in self-defense.

Freight Wreck on Southern.

Selma, Ala.—An extra freight train composed of cars of pig iron en route to Mobile for a foreign shipment was derailed Monday afternoon about Catherine on the Southern railway. The journal of one of the cars broke, allowing the truck to run out from one of the cars. The wreck delayed the southbound passenger train several hours, but was cleared in time for the midnight train to pass. The pig iron was time shipment and was due at Mobile at 8 o'clock.

Steamboat Accident.

Lexington, Ky.—News received here Tuesday says that the steamer Shamrock, plying about Valley View on the Kentucky river, while carrying a party of fifty excursionists up the river three miles from Valley View, ran into a rope stretched from a log boom Monday night. The rope swept Miss Nancy A. Carpenter, daughter of H. C. Carpenter, into the river and drowned her. The smokestack was thrown down on George W. Hutchinson, superintendent of the Kentucky Poplar Company, probably fatally injuring him. Five others were badly hurt.

In Favor of Deposing Nicholas.

St. Petersburg.—A sensational rumor is current here that a large party of the zemstvoists and doumaists at Moscow are in favor of the proclamation of the deposition of Emperor Nicholas and the establishment of a regency for the Grand Duke Alexis-Nicholaievitch (the infant son of the emperor and heir to the throne) under four grand dukes.

It is alleged that for this reason the meeting of the all Russian zemstvoists and doumaist congress, which was to take place Wednesday at Moscow, has been prohibited.

New Cracker Factory at Athens.

Athens, Ala.—Athens has a new industry, a cracker factory, owned by Henry Christensen. He has established an up-to-date factory here and will begin turning out products in a few days. He has invented two or three valuable improvements in the bakery business, one a cake cutter, and one a flower sprinkler that is a great labor and flour saver, and from both he has realized handsome returns.

Sedberry Examining Petition.

Heflin, Ala.—State Examiner Sedberry, at the request of Governor Jelks is in Heflin examining the petition to remove the Cleburne county court house from Edwardsville to this place. The investigation is causing the greatest interest, as the people of Heflin are anxious to secure the change. It will probably take four of five days to complete the investigation.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House
CLANTON.

Physicians.

Dr. V. O. Campbelle,
Physician and Surgeon,
Office over Roper's Store.
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
Office Hours 8 to 12 a. m. 1 to 5 p. m.
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

PURE GOODS
The following
SPECIAL BRANDS
always in stock

Big Rock	I. W. Harper
Rose Valley	Upper Crust
Upper Ten	Kentucky Taylor
Joe Gideon	American Malt
Murray Hill	Budweiser Rye
Pleasant Hill	Deep Springs
Green River	AAAA Lincoln County
Jack Daniel No. 7	Wilson
Old Spring	Good Wood
Shaw's Malt	Club House Rye, 10 years old.
Jefferson County Rye	Cascade, 14 years old.
Old Harvest Corn, 5 years old

I carry a Full Line of Barrel Goods which I sell in Jugs from half gallon up. Mail orders promptly filled.
A. STEIN,
Bank Saloon. Calera, Ala.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS. PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!

If you have timber lands for sale, want to buy a good home for $25.00 cash and the balance on long payments to suit purchaser, or if you want a position as log cutter, teamster or in saw mill or planing mill, write
The Marbury Lumber Co.,
Marbury, Ala.

A Child's Music

When Babbie plays, and from the keys
Evolves strange childish melodies,
Tis as from elfland came the strain,
Not heard before nor known again,
But wayward, passing like a breeze.

Scarce meant for ears pedantic these Soft chords that well the child-soul
please;
It even might to some cause pain
When Babbie plays!

Yet as low surge of breaking seas,
Or bird notes far within the trees
That echo long in heart and brain;
So through this thrumming love is fain
To hear the sweetest harmonies
When Babbie plays.

—C. M. Paine.

SLIGHTLY UNCONVENTIONAL

By GEORGE FRED LAWSON

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Mrs. Lambert didn't really mean anything by it. She was not a flirt—at least not now, that she was a married woman. She had left all that behind her two years ago. Not that she was a flirt even then; oh! no. But she had been the possessor of the average amount of coquettishness inherent in most girls of nineteen—perhaps just the least little bit more.

But he looked so decidedly lonely and gazed at her so often, as if he wished to speak and didn't dare, that she really wished he would for he looked quite like a gentleman, and a handsome one at that; one who would know just the limitations of a chance acquaintance with a very pretty woman at a ho', stuffy, little out-of-the-way station, and with the prospect of a two hours' wait for the last train of the day before her.

Yes, she wished he would speak or do something else. But he didn't. She would have smiled, had she dared. Even at that he gave her little enough chance. She could feel him staring at her and once in a while could catch a glimpse of his face in the dusty little window opposite her. But when she turned carelessly in his direction ostensibly to gaze out upon the dusty stretch of track, he was always gazing interestedly at a forlorn "Sapolio" sign over her head, or was flicking a bit of imaginary dust from his immaculate sleeve.

And then she did it. You must remember that she was not a flirt. She was just a pretty girl stranded at a country station, the only occupants of which were, besides herself and the sleepy station agent, a prim old maid and — a man. It was hot, and dusty, and the prospect of two long hours of weary weary waiting was quite too awful.

She swept by him toward the door with airy grace and sparkling eyes, and turned suddenly with reddened face at his:

"I beg pardon."

They stared at each other and he, too, reddened. "You dropped your handkerchief," he said.

"Oh, thank you. How careless of me," she replied, accepting the proffered bit of linen and lace—the little vixen. She smiled and tucked it into her corsage and turned to go.

"I—"

Her heart beat fast as she turned, with the old-time feeling of coquetry.

"I beg pardon," he continued, "I—that is, it is very lonely here."

She agreed that it was with just the right degree of embarrassed inflection, and the correct angle to her drooped eyelids.

"You—" he proffered a card which she, little rascal, neglected to notice—"you might care to take a stroll

"You dropped your handkerchief," he said.

through yonder field. It's two hours to wait, and it's very hot here, and stuffy. It looks cool and nice over there."

She hesitated and elevated her little brown head in a manner as much to say, "Well, I hardly know whether to feel insulted or not." She didn't say it, though, and she wished he wouldn't back down now, just when he was doing so nicely. Then her brown eyes met his blue ones, and surrendered.

"Perhaps I am too bold, Miss ——" She took particular notice of the significant pause after the "miss" but, so far as was concerned, utterly ignored it.

"I beg—"

"Don't, please," she said smiling. He was going to beg her pardon again! Oh, he was too polite, and made it all the more difficult for her. If he would only say, "Come on. Let's take a walk and get away from this miserable hole," she felt sure she would have replied, "all right, come on."

At her "don't, please," he had started toward her when she supplemented this by adding:

"There is nothing to pardon, I'm sure. I'm only too well pleased to escape this horrid place."

"Thank you, Miss ——" Again the pause. She bit her lip.

"You look much the same, Jack—only the beard changes you."

"Miss Wakeley." She tossed her head definantly as she said it, that is, she meant it to be defiant. It may have been so, but he took no apparent notice of it. Anyhow the ice was broken and she stifled all thoughts of outraged propriety that arose in her mind and actually smiled at the old maid, who glared as they made their way across the glimmering tracks to the field beyond.

It was very pleasant to stroll about. He didn't attempt to quiz her to find out all about who she was; he simply accepted her company thankfully and seemed to thoroughly enjoy it. Finally they found a gurgling stream and lolled upon its grassy banks, she with her back propped against the trunk of a tree and he spread out at her feet. The touch of his hand and the gentle pressure of it as he had helped her over a stone wall lingered in hers, and the look in his eyes as he slowly lighted his pipe tingled her heart.

"Much more pleasant than that dingy station," he vouchsafed.

"Decidedly," she agreed, flirting down the hem of her skirt which a teasing breeze had fluttered back displaying shapely ankles modeled in black silk, "and it's so sweetly unconventional. It adds to the charm."

"I—I'm so glad you look at it in that way. I wanted to speak to you all the time, but you looked so deucedly offish I didn't dare."

"I?" She cast one of those old-time college-day glances at him and he edged nearer and neglected his pipe, which went out.

"Um—m, yes, you did. Looked kind as if you'd bite a fellow's head off if he so much as dared. I could have yelled with delight when you dropped your handkerchief. Wasn't it lucky?"

"Lucky? Oh, yes, wasn't it?" She smiled queerly. The wind was again playing tricks with the ruffles at the bottom of her skirt and she didn't appear to notice it this time. Besides, she was conscious of certain facts. He edged still closer till she laughed gaily and tucked her feet under her.

He spoke. "I don't believe in too much conventionality, especially when it makes no particular difference. You see, there was no one at the station to know," he added hastily noticing a look of alarm on her face.

She was sitting bolt upright, her head held rigidly against the trunk of the tree, and was staring straight ahead of her and over his head. She smiled somewhat painfully as he spoke. "It's my hair," she explained, "it's caught on this plaguey tree, and I can't move, and—ooh, it hurts!" She reddened as he hastened to relieve her. His face approached very close to hers, and his arms all but enfolded her. The hair had become provokingly tangled about a tiny twig and baffled his efforts to loosen it. She felt his hot breath upon her face and looked up at him. Perhaps it was unfortunate that, just at that moment, the hold on her hair gave way and she swayed toward him. At any rate, she felt herself crushed tightly to him and felt his impassioned kisses rained upon her face and lips. She was powerless to resist even if she would. She could struggle but weakly and lay like a fluttering bird in his strong embrace. She listened to his passionate words of love and felt supremely happy, and she wondered at it in spite of her joy.

Finally he released her and held her off at arm's length. "Oh, Editha!" he exclaimed tremulously, "did you think I didn't know you, even if it has been five years? It seems a long time, dear. Has it changed you?"

She gazed at him and smiled happily. "You look much the same, Jack—only the beard changes you."

"I know, dear. I allowed it to grow this summer. You see, I'm summering here and something seemed to draw me to the station to-day. Editha, say you——"

She stopped him with a coquettish gesture. "But, Jack, I——"

"Oh, Editha!"

"It was more a family affair than anything else, Jack. His folks wished it, and mine wished it. I married him on his sick bed. Poor Mr. Lambert died the next day, and——"

He caught her in his arms and kissed the happy smile from her lips. "My darling!" he murmured, and she cuddled happily to him.

Two sharp whistles sounded on the warm summer air as the last train pulled out of the station, but neither of them noticed it.

NO MORE HOUSEHOLD DRUDGE

Dr. Thompson's Scheme for Saving Women from Cooking.

Dr. Robert Ellis Thompson of Philadelphia has a vision, if we may apply such a word to the well-pondered plan of a man of science, remarks a writer in Everybody's. Woman, the homemaker and mother, should not be hampered by household drudgery. Cooking is a matter of chemistry and will be done by men. All the tedious chores of housework, washing, dishwashing, scrubbing, ironing, sweeping, housecleaning—oh, word of horror to the ears of man—will be done by public corporations, syndicates, scientific co-operative housework concerns.

Houses will be heated from a central plant and swept by hydraulic brooms. Meals will come from the grand central cookery or its nearest branch. Stairs will be supplanted by automatic elevators. Washing day will disappear from the week. Even now many women send a telephone call for window cleaners, and have their husband's "socks" darned by specialists. In the cities you can have your clocks wound and your lamps trimmed and tended by outside experts. In the Norwegian town of Bergen everybody's food comes from the town kitchen. In Paris the workman gets his hot soup from the grand central dinner kettle.

Happy day, if it ever comes, when women have no servants and no household drudgery to earn wrinkles by! We do not understand, however, just how a woman whose husband "gets ten per" is going to have that automatic elevator. Do the city, the town, the state pay all for these "private utilities," made "public utilities." Rich women escape drudgery now. How are poor women to do it?

Man's Dull Comprehension.

It was in a Chestnut street ice creamery. The waitress ran over the list of flavors glibly, and after due deliberation the young woman decided upon cherry ice.

"Thought you were so fond of pistachio," murmured her male companion as soon as they were left alone.

"Love it," she replied.

"Why cherry ice, then?" he inquired. "They have pistachio—I'll call the girl and change it."

She reached across and seized his wrist as he started to rap on the table. "Don't you know I can't eat pistachio in this old rose gown?" she whispered. "The very idea of the pale green and the old rose is horrible. It gets on my nerves. But cherry is just the thing—they have a beautiful shade of cherry here."

"Oh," said the young man.—Philadelphia Record.

Pleasant for the Host.

William Faversham, although an Englishman, tells this story at the expense of one of his countrymen in London. The latter, a young society man, was attending a West End social function which was proving extremely boresome to him. Disconsolately wandering into the conservatory, he had met a gentleman who, although a stranger, impressed him as being a fellow-sufferer.

"Dispensing with an introduction," said the actor-reconteur, "he frankly delivered his opinion of the evening, and hopefully suggested that they adjourn to the club."

"Well—ah—I would, you know," rejoined the other, "but—ah—I'm the host here, don't you know."—New York Times.

Imperfect.

I wonder if ever a song was sung,
But the singer's heart sang sweeter!
I wonder if ever a rhyme was rung,
But the thought surpassed the meter!
I wonder if ever a sculptor wrought,
Till the cold stone echoed his ardent thought!
Or if a painter, with light and shade,
The dream of his inmost heart portrayed.

I wonder if ever a rose was found,
And there might not be a fairer!
Or if ever a glittering gem was wrought,
And we dreamed not of a rarer!
Ah! never on earth do we find the best,
But it waits for us in a land of rest,
And a perfect thing we shall never behold,
Till we pass the portals of shining gold.

—James Clarence Harvey, in New Orleans Picayune.

HUNT FOXES WITH EAGLES.

Strange Sport That Is Enjoyed by Natives of Siberia.

A Siberian correspondent of London Sphere sends some photographs relating to a form of fox hunting which is probably unique. The hunting of foxes with eagles takes place among the Kirghese, in the southwest district of Siberia, known as the general government of the steppes. It is a favorite sport with the Kirghese and takes place in the autumn and early winter, when the foxes' coats are ruddy and perfect, though hunting is not always confined to this period. The eagles selected for the purpose are powerful birds, of such weight that a small wooden support is carried by the eagle bearer. A well grown bird of more than usually fierce temperament will occasionally kill a wolf. Directly any game is seen the birds make their flight and swoop down with great precision. "One of these birds has, to my knowledge," writes our correspondent, "killed seventeen foxes in the last six weeks. I can vouch for this killing of foxes by eagles, for I personally took all these photographs and saw the whole sport from beginning to end. Years ago I wrote a letter to the Field, telling how foxes swarm up small pine trees in Florida when a 'kill' appears imminent. I have frequently seen them do so, but I was politely told what an Ananias I must be. So I fear that possibly you may desire to tell me the same thing. I can only assure you that it is a fact, which arouses no astonishment out here."

The Best of Life.

Not till life's heat is cooled,
The headlong rush slowed to a quiet pace,
And every purblind passion that has ruled
Our noisier years, at last
Spurs us in vain, and, weary of the race,
We care no more who loses or who wins—
Ah, not till all the best of life seems past
The best of life begins.

To tell for only fame,
Handicappings, and the fickle gusts of praise,
For place or power or gold to gild a name
Above the grave whereto
All paths will bring us, were to lose our days;
We, on whose ears youth's passing bell has tolled
In blowing bubbles, even as children do,
Forgetting we grow old.

But the world widens when Such hope of trivial gain that ruled us lies Broken among our childhood's toys, for then
We win to self-control!
And mail ourselves in manhood, and there rise
Upon us from the vast and windless height
Those cleaner thoughts that are unto the soul
What stars are to the night.

—The Spectator.

Whale Flesh or Beef?

Whale meat at from three to six cents a pound is to be the solution of the meat trust question, according to some Newfoundland speculators who are seeking to make a market for whale meat.

It is declared that the flesh is finer flavored than beef, more nearly suggesting venison, and is capable of being prepared in a variety of ways.

Whales are not to be found in this part of the globe in sufficient numbers to make a serious inroad into the sale of beef, but it is declared by the promoters that they have already built up a successful trade in whale meat with the West Indies, and that they shortly intend placing it upon the London market.

It is to be shipped in special steamers, and even at a price of six cents a pound will return a handsome profit, while the cheaper cuts may be retailed for half that sum.

Reckoned by Years.

There is a representative in Congress from the West whose special pride it is to recount the quaint observations of his 9-year-old daughter.

Not long ago, according to the proud father, little Ethel came to him one afternoon and informed him that she had just seen the President's wife walking with one of the ladies of the cabinet circle. "And, papa," said Ethel, "she isn't anything like as old as grandma!"

"Why, my dear!" exclaimed the congressman, "of course she isn't! Mrs. Roosevelt is a young woman! How in the world did you get any other idea?"

"Well, papa,' 'replied the youngster, "you yourself once told me that she was the first lady in the land!"—New York Times.

Joke That Was On Depew.

Senator Depew had to deny himself the pleasure of being present at a recent dinner where he was an invited guest, and so he missed a joke at his expense, which he enjoyed as much as any one, however, when it was told to him several days later. Bishop Potter was the perpetrator. Senator Depew's regrets had just been read.

"I need not tell you," said the Bishop, "how we will miss the senator, he who has for so many years charmed us with the humor of his eloquence and the logic of his anecdotes,"—New York Times.

Chinese in New York.

There were 6,080 Chinese inhabitants of New York, according to the last census, but the popular estimate is that the actual number of Chinamen is twice as large. Though there is a rigid federal exclusion law and few births occur in the Chinese quarters, the Chinese population seems to increase.

Thibet Poor in Minerals.

The geologist who accompanied the British mission to Thibet reports that the country is strikingly poor in valuable minerals. The largest yield of gold was .28 grain a ton of gravel, and there was no trace of coal or indigenous gems.

When

If I were told that I must die to morrow,
That the next sun
Which sinks should bear me past all fear and sorrow
For any one,
All the fight fought, all the short journey through,
What should I do?

I do not think that I should shrink or falter,
But just go on.
Doing my work, nor change nor seek to alter
Aught that is gone;
But rise and move and love and smile and pray
For one more day.

And, lying down at night for a last sleeping,
Say in that ear
Which harkens ever: "Lord, within Thy keeping How should I fear?
And when to-morrow brings Thee nearer still,
Do Thou Thy will."

I might not sleep for awe; but peaceful, tender,
My soul would lie
All the night long; and when the morning splendor
Flushed o'er the sky,
I think that I could smile—could calmly say,
"It is His day."

But if a wondrous hand from the blue yonder
Held out a scroll,
On which my life was writ, and I with wonder Beheld unroll
To a long country's end its mystic close,
What should I do?

What could I do, O blessed Guide and Master,
Other than this,
Still to go on as now, for fear to miss
Thy faintest wish,
The road, although so very long it be,
While led by Thee?

Step after step, feeling that Thou art near me,
Although unseen,
Through thorns, through flowers, through gloom, through shine, the tempest's lull—
Or heaven's calm—
Assured Thy faithfulness would guard me well,
Thy love defend?

I may not know; my God veileth
Thy counsels well,
Along the path and speedeth
eth,
No voice replies
To all my questionings to to tell,
And it is well

Let me keep on, abiding as I
Thy will always,
Through a long country's tion,
Or a short day's Thou canst not come too wait,
If Thou come
—Sarah C. Wool

What Happened to Brown

"Steve Brown of this place, while hoeing in his garden yesterday, accidentally upset a beehive, and will be confined to the house for some days."

This news dispatch does not tell the whole story, but artistically leaves something to the imagination of the reader. Why must Steve Brown be confined to the house for some days because he accidentally upset a beehive? Here is where the imagination of the reader is supposed to work. The labor will really not be difficult to persons who have taken a course in nature study and who have some slight understanding of the bee. A man need not be a goggled entomologist to know what happened to Brown. Anybody who has ever experienced the animated sensation which a bee can inspire will comprehend the reason for Steve Brown's retirement. Upsetting a beehive is one of the most careless things a man can do. No bee is able to retain his composure under such circumstances. Bees seem to view with disfavor a man who thus invades their privacy or interrupts the happy concord of their domestic life. Any man who looks for trouble is apt to find it, but this is especially true if he looks for it in a beehive. Bees take pleasure in furnishing trouble to anybody who wants it. The bee has a sharp tongue, with [illegible] in his pistol pocket.

Another unfortunate phase of a controversy between a man and [illegible] that most men find it difficult to preserve their dignity in a mixing of this kind. Bees seem not to be bound by any of the rules governing civilized warfare. The weight of opinion among men acquainted with the idiosyncracies of bees is that they are disinclined to give quarter to the upsetter of a hive. No doubt Steve Brown feels this.

The man who coined [illegible] literative phrase, "busy bee," knew whereof he spoke. Of course, if the bee should busy himself [illegible] his own business, no just complaint could be made against him, but this is perhaps too much to ask either of bee nature or human nature.

There is a good deal of [illegible] the bee. The bee has other almost human traits of character. There is very little reason for the bee to be conceited. Time was when we depended on him, or [illegible] for our honey. That time was. Now the bee is no more essential to the production of honey than the cow is to butter or the sugar maple to maple sugar. The bee is a has-been. Now days we get our "wild-flower and apple-blossom honey" out of paraffin and glucose.—Washington Star.

Spent Fortune in Week

The story comes from a little town in Nevada of a miner who at the end of twenty years of hard work found himself the possessor of $35,000 in hard cash, says the Washington Star. His ambition took a quer turn, and he wasted his whole store in a week spent in barrooms with convivial company. What he and his cronies did not consume in drink he gave away, and then, with his pockets empty, started for the mountains again, with a borrowed outfit, in search of another fortune.

When Brete Harte first introduced men of this sort in his pages the country made allowances for the extravagance of fiction. Romance, it was explained, demanded high colors. Mr. Harte's heroes lived principally, we are told, in Mr. Harte's mind. A poet was entitled to his license. But many things have happened since to show that, gifted as he was with fancy and expression, Mr. Harte was a good deal of a photographer. He gave us, with no material change, men and women he had known, and described scenes he had actually witnessed. A striking phase of frontier life had simply found in him an eloquent and accurate laureate. Truth, so to speake, was the strength of Mr. Harte's fiction. He had caught it on the end of his pen and preserved it for the world's enjoyment.

This old miner has a good deal of boy remaining in his nature. In his lonely life in the mountains, prospecting for gold and dreaming of wealth, he probably nourished his spirit with fancies about the future should fortune ever smile on him. A rough fellow, hardened by rougher surroundings, his hero very likely was some chap who in earlier days had, with a big "roll" turned things upside down in Sacramento or San Francisco and had been the theme over since of fireside eulogy throughout the mining country. Were the great days no more? Was the Caucasian race played out? Did a man with a "roll" have to go on a journey to become a hero?

Fortune at last smiled and here was the opportunity. The money burned the old miner's pocket. Why not set the pegs in Nevada for a "lark"? Who had ever separated himself from $35,000 in a week's time without calling in the aid of faro or draw poker? The thing could be done and he set out to do it. He succeeded and now is the mountain camp again will enjoy the distinction of his performance. A strange life, but stranger are the men who lead it.

"Creeping Bear" Is Sad

Sitting in the sun on the veranda of the city hospital recently was an Indian, his braided hair entwined with yellow yarn, and his melancholy countenance twitching with a nervous affection, according to the Kansas City Star. This picture of misery was Joseph Creeping Bear, son of White Bear, chief of the Ogalallah Sioux. He had rheumatism in one leg and was feeling very badly.

"Very bad, very bad," he growled. "Take off Injun clothes, put on English clothes—catch rheumatism. Never had rheumatism in South Dakota. Damn English clothes!

"Yes, my father White Bear, chief Ogalallah Sioux. White Bear little chief when Sitting Bull big chief. White Bear very old now.

"Me Joe Creeping Bear. When I born White Bear see bear creeping to steal meat my mother hang up. So they call me Creeping Bear. Indian father name boy for first thing he see after boy born. Me got two brothers, Sammy Little Bear and Willie No Heart. White Bear find dead animal, cut him open, got no heart; call boy Willie No Heart."

Joe Creeping Bear says he was taken to the Carlisle Indian school fourteen years ago. Four years later he ran away and joined Buffalo Bill's Wild West, which he accompanied to London. On his return two years later, he was captured during a visit to his home at Pine Ridge, S. D. and started for the school again, but escaped on the way.

"No like school. No like work. No like English clothes. Is the explanation for this reluctance on the part of Joseph.

The rheumatic Indian is [illegible] with four others of his tribe, was on his way home from the Indian Territory when he became ill.

"We been visit Cheyennes, Chickasaws, Comanches," he said. "Visit them last payment. Gamble a little, one-card monte. Sioux too smart for Cheyennes. Sioux win. Cheyennes quit."

Creeping Bear is twenty-three years old. He can speak good English when he wishes and has some rudiments of an education. He has written his mother for a ticket to Pine Ridge.

Won Carnegie Scholarship.

Henry Cook Boynton of Cambridge, Mass., who has been awarded the Carnegie research scholarship of $500 by the Iron and Steel Institute of London, is one of the younger instructors in mining and metallurgy at Harvard. He is 30 years of age, a native of Plymouth and entered Harvard in 1896. He received his A. B. degree in 1900 and 1901 took the degree of master of arts. He is the third American to win this scholarship, which is awarded annually and entitles the winner to expend £100 ($500) in [illegible] whenever he desires. Mr. Boynton intends to pursue his investigations at Harvard.

The Reformer.

[illegible] the monstrous wrong he him down—
One man against a stone walled of sin.
For centuries those walls have a building,
Smooth porphyry, they slope coldly glass
The flying storm, the wheeling
No chink,
No crevice lets the thinnest arrow
He fights alone, and from the cl quarts
A thousand evil faces gibe and him
Let him lie down and die! Wh the right,
And where is justice in a world
this?
But, by and by, earth shakes her impatient!
And down, in one great roar of crash
Watch tower and citadel and ba ments
When the red dust has cleared,
lonely soldier
Stands with strange thoughts neath the friendly stars.

—E. R. S.

The Plot That Failed

(By Neal Martin.)

Ivan entered the library and sented a card to Giles Dawson. Under the printed name, "P Nicholas Barnakoff," a few w were penciled requesting an i view.

"Ivan," said Mr. Dawson to his lian servant, "show the prince i once."

A moment later a tall, handsome man, wearing the uniform of an er in the Czar's army, entered room.

He took the proffered cha began at once to speak in En with the perfect facility of an cated Russian.

"Mr. Dawson, I have called to from you in marriage the hand your beautiful ward, Miss I Bayle. You must have noticed admiration for mademoiselle knew that I can give her an eq social position here in St. Petersb and I trust that you will have no jection to my paying her my dresses."

"Ah, you have not spoken to yet," asked Mr. Dawson.

"Speak to her before I saw I could not commit such a breach Russian etiquette."

"I am glad you have not spoken her. In fact, Prince, I shall be happy to consent to your marriage my ward, but there are difficul You doubtless know that she is mensely wealthy, but she can have control of her fortune until is twenty-one years old, at wh time I cease to have any authori over her," Mr. Dawson continued slowly. "She will be twenty-one less than a month, and then—"

"Yes, and then?" asked the Ru sian, looking intently at the m chant.

Mr. Dawson did not answer question, but continued after a sl interval:

"I would not give my consent her marriage with a young Engl man. I was so afraid that she wo do something rash, so I brought as far away from him as I could; just when I was beginning to feel cure, he arrives on the scene."

"Who, the lover?" asked Barnak with an ugly expression.

"Yes, Ralston Stainer—cu him!"

"Do not distress yourself about Ralston Stainer," smiled the Prin "There are various means in Rus to dispose of an undesirable perso

Then the details of the transact were gone into. Mr. Dawson wo receive forty thousand pounds ou Elinor's fortune if he succeeded making her marry Barnakoff.

When the infamous compact completed Mr. Dawson rang the b and requested that if Miss Bayle returned from her drive she sho come to the library.

A moment later she entered, t beautiful, and exquisitely dress bringing with her a breath of keen winter air in her bright ga eyes, her wind-blown hair, and cheeks like many roses.

She bowed coldly to the Prin who stood erect and soldierly bef her, and, addressing Mr. Daws said, with distant courtesy:

"You wished to see me?"

"Yes; this gentleman has reques the honor of your hand in marria and it is my wish that you accept It is such a union as your fat would have desired."

"I thank you, Prince Barnakoff, the honor, but it is impossible! Y know," addressing her guardi "that I love and am engaged to Blaine and I shall marry no o else."

"You disobey me, then?" asked Dawson, purple with rage.

"No, I simply refuse to mar Prince Barnakoff."

"You shall, I tell you!" said Dawson, ringing violently the be "Ivan, call Mrs. Dawson."

A tall, haughty woman came and she received orders from her h band to watch the refractory you lady, and not to allow her to see a one except her maid, who was dev ed to the Dawsons.

The next morning, when Elin

When

ened to Brown

une in Week

Bear" Is Sad

The Reformer.

Before the monstrous wrong he sets
him down—
One man against a stone walled city
of sin.
For centuries those walls have been building;
Smooth porphyry, they slope and scowl, glass
The fire of the storm, the wheeling sun.
No crevice lets the thinnest arrow in.
He begins alone, and from the cloudy ramparts
The cruel evil faces gibe and jeer at him.
Let him go down and die! What is one right,
And what is justice in a world like
this?
But by and by, earth shakes herself,
impatient;
And down in one great roar of ruin,
crash
Watch tower and citadel and battlements.
When the red dust has cleared, the lonely soldier
Stands with strange thoughts beneath the friendly stars.

—E. R. Still.

The Plot That Failed

By Neal Martin.)

He entered the library and presented a card to Giles Dawson. Upon the printed name, "Prince Barnakoff," a few words were penciled requesting an interview.

"Show Mr. Dawson to his Russian guest," said Mr. Dawson to his Russian servant, "show the prince in at once."

A moment later a tall, handsome man, wearing the uniform of an officer in the Czar's army, entered the room.

Dawson motioned the preferred chair, and asked if he chose to speak in English, as he was perfectly familiar with the educated dialect.

"Mr. Dawson, I have called to ask your consent to marriage the hand of your beautiful ward, Miss Elinor Bayle. You must have noticed my admiration for mademoiselle. You also that I can give her an exalted position here in St. Petersburg, and that you will have no objection to my paying her my addresses."

"I have not spoken to her Mr. Dawson.

"Nor before I saw you! Such a breach of etiquette!"

"I am glad you have not spoken to her, Prince, I shall be most happy to consent to your marriage to my ward, but there are difficulties. You doubtless know that she is immensely wealthy, but she cannot have control of her fortune until she is twenty-one years old, at which time I cease to have any authority over her." Mr. Dawson continued slowly. "She will be twenty-one in less than a month, and then—"

"Yes, and then?" asked the Russian, looking intently at the merchant.

Mr Dawson did not answer the question, but continued after a short interval.

"I would not give my consent to the marriage with a young Englishman, I was so afraid that she would do something rash, so I brought her far away from him as I could; but just when I was beginning to feel secure he arrives on the scene."

"Then he is a lover?" asked Barnakoff, with an angry expression.

"Yes, Rallston Stainer—curse him!"

"Do not distress yourself about Mr. Rallston Stainer," smiled the Prince; "there are various means in Russia for the disposal of an undesirable person."

"Yes, the details of the transaction do not enter into. Mr. Dawson would receive forty thousand pounds out of Elinor's fortune if he succeeded in persuading her marry Barnakoff.

When the infamous compact was completed Mr. Dawson rang the bell and requested that if Miss Bayle had returned from her drive she should come to the library.

A moment later she entered, tall, beautiful and exquisitely dressed, bringing with her a breath of the fresh sea air in her bright gray eyes, her wind-blown hair, and her cheeks like many roses.

She bowed coldly to the Prince, who stood erect and soldierly before her, and, addressing Mr. Dawson, said, with distant courtesy:

"You wished to see me?"

"Yes, this gentleman has requested the honor of your hand in marriage, and it is my wish that you accept it. It is such a union as your father would have desired."

"I thank you, Prince Barnakoff, for the honor, but it is impossible! You know," addressing her guardian, "that I love and am engaged to Mr. Stainer, and I shall marry no one else."

"You disobey me, then?" asked Mr. Dawson, purple with rage.

"No, I simply refuse to marry Prince Barnakoff."

"You shall, I tell you!" said Mr. Dawson, ringing violently the bell. "Then call Mrs. Dawson."

A tall, haughty woman came in, and she received orders from her husband to watch the refractory young lady and not to allow her to see any one except her maid, who was devoted to the Dawsons.

The next morning, when Elinor was ready to go down to breakfast, she found that her doors were locked, and that she was a prisoner in her own room.

II.

On the day when Mr. Dawson deprived Elinor of her liberty, a handsome young fellow was sitting before his mid-day breakfast.

Rallston Stainer had taken lodgings in a fashionable quarter of St. Petersburg, and according to the country's custom, his landlady provided him with the lighter meals of the day.

All at once there was a sharp knock at the door of his sitting room; then, without waiting for an answer, the door was thrown open and three men in civilian clothes came into the room.

Stainer arose from his chair.

"What means this intrusion?" he asked.

The tallest of the men, who seemed to the one in command, looked rapidly over a sheet of paper that he held in his hand.

"Tall, slender—yes; brown eyes and hair; calls himself an Englishman. No doubt it is the same," he muttered, looking at the young man.

"Monsieur," he then said, "we are members of the secret police of St. Petersburg and would like to see your passport."

"I have had it looked over, and it is perfectly correct," answered the young man.

"I have my orders; also a search warrant in case of resistance."

Rallston Stainer shrugged his shoulders, as if thinking that Russia was a queer place, and took from his pocket the official document signed by the different consuls and officials of the two countries.

The man looked the paper over, then he calmly folded it and put it in his pocket.

"What do you mean by doing that," said Rallston, agrily.

"That this paper is forged," answered the Russian. "We arrest you in the name of the Czar for a conspiracy against his Imperial Majesty."

In spite of his protestations, and his expressed desire to see the British Ambassador, he was hurried into a waiting carriage and taken away.

Two weeks he spent in a cold, foul cell, and during that time he was taken three times befcre a court. He could not speak either Russian or French, and the judges spoke no English.

They did not believe his assertion that he did not understand Russian.

The heaviest blow came when the interpreter told him that he had been condemned to twenty years' exile in Siberia.

On Friday of the next week he was to start with a few other convicts.

III.

It was nearly midnight, and the house was very still.

Elinor, sitting near the window of her darkened room, began to prepare for the night. Absently she went to the door and tried it, expecting to find it locked, as usual, but the door yielded, and she knew that her maid had forgotten to lock the door on retiring for the night.

She threw a long, dark cloak over her dress and pinned a black hat and veil on her head. Then putting all the money she had in her little purse, she left her room noiselessly, and went downstairs, meeting no one.

Near the front hall she heard a noise, and she darted into a dark room next to the library.

The door between the two rooms was ajar, and she heard Mr. Dawson saying:

"So tomorrow he starts for Siberia for twenty years?"

"Yes; of course, his mention of you, and your denial to the Chief of Police that you knew him, really settled him. It was very neatly done," and Prince Barnakoff laughed.

"Ah, Rallston Stainer," exclaimed Mr. Dawson, "I told your father I would be revenged! I could not on him, but I have accomplished it in you—his only son."

The Ambassador was very much startled when the servant ushered into his presence a distracted young woman, who told him in an incoherent manner her story.

This gentleman, who knew her well, also her lover, soothed her and placed her into his wife's keeping, then, late as it was, he started to find Count Gourki, the Chief of the Third Section, of St. Petersburg's secret police. Next day was Friday, and there was no time to lose.

By noon next day Rallston Stainer held his beloved in his arms, and that very afternoon the chaplain of the British Embassy officiated at the wedding of Rallston Stainer and beautiful Elinor Bayle.

The Dawsons were ordered to leave Russia within twenty-four hours, and a fine of fifteen thousand rubles was imposed on Prince Barnakoff; but the ruined gambler would not pay it, and he went to prison for five years.

A CABBAGE-WORM SCARE.

Government Bulletin Issued to Counteract Effect of Wild Stories.

The Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin which describes in effect the operation of a land seaserpent. Not since the "kissing-bug" craze of 1899 has there been anything like such a furor as was created by the discovery of the so-called "cabbage snake," the bulletin declares, in Tennessee, South Carolina, and Louisiana, in 1903. That year the scare was practically confined to Tennessee and neighboring States southward. This creature and its still whatever mysterious occurence in cabbage has become a great annoyance to many correspondents, to economic entomologists, and to chemists and physicions. Many reports have been received from reliable correspondents of rumors of persons being poisoned by eating cabbage affected by this hair-worm. Among them were alleged reports from a physician who stated that when cabbage thus affected was eaten it produced instant death, and from a "State chemist," who made an examination of the worm, and reported that it contained enough poison "to kill eight persons."

"It should be unnecessary to add," the bulletin says, "that none of these reports had any foundation in fact. Nevertheless the known presence of the hair-worm in an affected district seriously injured the demand for cabbage there, causing very considerable loss to truckers and grocers. What was in reality a hoax assumed most serious proportions, not alone because of widespread alarm caused by erroneous reports of loss of life, but also because of the very material loss to cabbage growers and others who handled this commodity, and the decided extension of the area in which the hair-worm was detected. The scare soon became widespread, causing general fear of poisoning from Virginia and West Virginia southward and westward to Kentucky, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Colorado."

The cabbage hair-worm is described by the department as resembling a piece of basting thread, of the thickness of a strand of corn silk, white in color. Its length varies two to nine inches, but reports have been received of a creature found in the heads of cabbage measuring nine feet! The imagination of newspaper writers as to color runs riot through "green, white, light red, olive green and yellow."

Many popular names have been bestowed upon it, including "cabbage snake," "snake," "snake worm," "serpent," "reptile" and "cabbage rattlesnake."—Washington correspondence of the New York Post.

"POLLY PORTER."

A Parrot Who Never Forgot What He Once Had Learned.

Perhaps all parrots have equally remarkable memories, but twenty-five years' acquaintance with "Polly Porter" enables me to say that he never forgets what he has once learned. Like other parrots, when he is alone he exercises his memory, as if amusing himself. Then it is that Polly Porter chatters in sentences; laughs aloud, hysterically; calls, in various tones, commandingly or beseechingly; calls the names of servants who, but for Polly, would have been forgotten; calls the cat; whistles for dogs who were about him years ago.

Polly's cage is in the bow window of the dining room—a good place for keeping an eye on the family. When the father rises from the breakfast table Polly advises: "Hurry! Hurry up! Hurry!"

Later, with the first movement preparatory to the children's start for school, he repeats sharply: "Hurry up! Hurry up! Hurry!"

When a guest comes in he says briskly, "Why, how d'ye do?"

When he calls "Good-by" to persons passing on the street it seems almost certain that he reasons about the coming and departing guest. He quickly notices little children; coming to one particular corner of the bottom of his cage, he flutters before a little one, attempting baby talk, which is very funny, ending with "Beautiful child! Beautiful child!" and a loud laugh.

When the house is quiet and his mistress has a visitor in the parlor Polly craves attention.

He repeats the children's names, almost as if he were calling the roll, in sweet, low tones. Then he says "Mama!" over and over, in a child's voice, till it is common for a visitor to say, "Do answer that child," or "Some one is calling you." He comes very near to telling tales, saying, "Ah, ah! naughty boy!" with great severity.

Polly is most impatient at breakfast time, when he shrieks till he receives attention: "Polly wants coffee! Polly wants breakfast!"

He takes a piece of bread cautiously; examines it; if it is not well buttered he throws it down. He enjoys a bunch of grapes, holding it down with one claw while with the other and his beak he opens grape after grape, eats the seed and casts the pulp away. He easily crushes a pear or an apple to get at the seeds.

Last Christmas Polly was sent by his owner, a New York boy, to friends as a present. They were told of his liveliness and astonishing powers of speech.

For some months Polly moped and said nothing, but at last began calling members of the family by name. It let out of his cage he fought the pug and whipped the cat; when shut up in his cage for punishment he would persistently work at the wires till he would force them apart and walk out defiantly. Recently he began upon his old lessons, and now repeats the cries of the newsboys in the street: "Extrah! Extrah! 'Journal'—'Sun'—'Herald'!" And he sings quite well "Yankee Doodle," which was taught him last summer.

Good-by, Polly!—Mary Rice Miller in St. Nicholas.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. WILLIAM YOUNG CHAPMAN.

Subject: Churchgoing Abolished.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Dr. William Young Chapman, pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Buffalo, preached Sunday at both services in the Central Presbyterian Church. In the morning he had as his subject "Churchgoing Abolished." The text was from Revelation xxi:22: "And I saw no temple therein." Dr. Chapman said:

Among many things in this sublime apocalypse of St. John hard to be understood there is one thing that stands out with clearness and certainty, and that is the vision of the perfected church, the ideal society. It is the same church triumphant and perfect there that is militant and defective here. The same souls that struggle and suffer here are they that walk in white and wave palms of victory there. Here we see as in a glass darkly. There they see face to face. Here we know in part, there they know as they are known. John had given to him a divine horoscope, revealing the consummation and absolute perfection of the essential characteristics of the kingdom of God concentrated in the imperial capital of the universe—the city of God. By every sort of figure and symbol are its glories set forth. And we learn as much about it by what is said negatively as by what is said positively. Thus we are told it has streets of gold and gates of pearl and a sea of glass and all the most costly and beautiful things of this world, while all that is disagreeable—pain, sickness, sorrow, sin, death—is wanting there. There is nothing to hurt or annoy, no night, no more sea, no temple.

And it strikes us at first thought as very strange that there should be no temple, no central place of worship in a city which we are accustomed to think is altogether devoted to religion. And yet the text states a great truth which I want to treat broadly, and I believe the text contains easily the subject by which I have chosen to entitle this discourse, "Churchgoing Abolished." The end being attained, the means are discontinued. Hence there are no more churches, no times, nor places, nor forms; no liturgies, nor rituals; no ecclesiastical machinery such as we know here.

And, surely, this must come as a welcome announcement to many a tired churchgoer in this world who finds his religious duties more or less irksome, and to many a non-churchgoer, who does not feel quite comfortable in his neglect of formal religious exercises. Many there are who indulge an indifferent hope of heaven as a sort of Mohammedan paradise, where they may enjoy an eternal holiday, basking in the uncreated rays, drinking from and bathing in the waters of the fountain of life, eating the twelve manner of fruits and sailing on the glassy sea. But they would hardly be attracted to a place where this ceaseless round of ecclesiastical duties should go on forever. Imagine such a one enjoying the delights of that glorious city, counting the towers thereof, marking well her bulwarks and admiring her foundations of jasper and sapphire and chalcedony and sardius and emerald and sardonyx and chrysolyte and beryl and topaz and chrysoprasus and jacinth and amethyst, when suddenly there comes a peal from the golden bells and poor soul, he must take himself off to prayers.

Let such a one be comforted, for John says he saw no temple there, and we dare to infer from that statement that there is no synagogue, nor meeting house, nor Sunday, nor formal religious exercise, "for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it."

It becomes us to inquire more closely into the truth involved here. And if what John saw was the church triumphant, if the conditions he saw were the perfection of what is rudimentary here, if the Holy City, New Jerusalem, is continually coming down from God out of heaven, then we ought to be realizing more and more on earth that heavenly condition.

I believe that condition is illustrated by the progressive church of Christ on earth. Think for a moment of the advantages we have over the ancient Jewish worshiper. He had his central place of worship. Three times a year he must make his pilgrimage to Jerusalem, from even the remotest corner of the land. Over many a rugged mile he must travel with his family and his sheep and oxen for sacrifice and his tent and provision for his journey, in order to perform his religious duties. There at Jerusalem was the temple. There he expected to meet God, or at least there God would be propitious. There was the priest who could offer his sacrifice and present his confession to God. There was the holy place and the most holy place, the locus of the Jewish worship. Even in far off lands, when he worshiped he turned his face toward the temple, as if his heart were there, in any case.

Then, too, his daily devotions found expression in a most elaborate ceremonial. There were divers washings, as there were multifarious causes of uncleanness. There were tithings and manifold offerings. There were sin offerings and peace offerings, all associated with infinite trouble to the worshiper. These minute requirements were infinitely multiplied by the Jew in the time of Christ and His apostles, so that Peter spoke of it as a yoke "which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear."

Now it was immunity from these intolerable burdens that was the first great practical boon of Christianity. Our Lord stated the precious truth to the woman at the well. Said she, "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain (Terezim), and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." Jesus saith unto her, "Woman, believe Me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. But the hour cometh and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth. God is a spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." It was one of the first meanings of Christ's sacrifice, to abolish the temple. When He bowed His head in death on Calvary and said "It is finished," "the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom," and the whole significance of the temple service passed away. The temple itself did not long survive the death of Christ, and the ecclesiastical capital was soon destroyed. Henceforth the Church of God in the world was on a different basis. Henceforth God became accessible without offering or priest, without temple or altar, and irrespective of locality. We are enjoying in a measure that rest which Christ came to give—rest from ceremonial burdens. We are living in the dispensation of the spirit, and the church is wherever the spirit moves men to worship. Wherever the Holy Spirit has gone and planted the gospel of Christ in the hearts of men, turning their thoughts and affections to God, there is the church. It matters not whether it be in Greenland's icy mountains or India's coral strand. It matters not whether it be in gorgeous cathedral or in mountain cave. It matters not whether the worshiper be white or black, whether he worship on his knees or on his feet or on his back, so long as he worship in spirit and in truth. Christianity so far as it consists of a visible performance at all is the most natural and spontaneous outgo of the religious instincts to God, and religious worship is essentially a personal communion with God, and in such form and place as is best suited to the worshiper and most in accordance with the will of God.

Hence, you will see, one of the prime characteristics of the church triumphant is perfect liberty. "Get religion," said Augustine, "and do as you please." By which he meant if you truly get religion you will always please to do right. Paul means the same thing when he says, "If ye be in the spirit ye are not under the law." And Jesus meant the same when He said, "Make the tree good and his fruit will be good." And hence, the ideal Christian life is perfectly spontaneous. Obedience is not by compulsion of law, but by impulsion of love. "All the law is fulfilled in one word, 'Thou shalt love.'"

We have heard not a little about "the consent of the governed," and we are likely to hear more. The statement as it stands in that famous document will not bear a literal application. But there is good reason to believe that our fathers knew what they were talking about. If they had said, "government derives its potency from the consent of the governed" they would have been uttering the exact truth. Statutes are inoperative until the subjects consent. Perfect society implies perfect acquiescence in the will of the superior or law making power. The more society progresses toward unity, the simpler and more equable will government become, because the more general will be the consent or acquiescence in the government. Paul says, "I consent unto the law that it is good," and in the perfect society of John's vision each man enjoys perfect liberty because the will of the governor and the governed are in perfect correspondence. Each individual does as he pleases and at the same time does as He pleases.

In some such way the perfect community is characterized by perfect unity without uniformity. Each performs his own duty in his own way, but is all the while in perfect harmony with his neighbor. Again, in the perfected society there is no distinction between the religious and the secular. Here we have our times and places of religion. We gather here in this house of prayer, believing that God is present here as He is not in other places, as, indeed, He has promised to be. It is God's concession to our limitations and infirmities. But it is far from the ideal. We are apt to identify religion with the means of religion, rather than religion itself. We get grace by our religious exercises to keep God's commandments in all our walks of life, and that is religion. The members of the church triumphant are equally religious every day of the week and every hour of the day, and hence, church-going in our sense of the word, is forever abolished. In that society, one does not need to say to his brother, "Know the Lord," for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. There is no more preaching, "no temple therein."

Once more: it is obvious that the more faithful and devoted we are to the means of religion here the sooner we shall be fitted to do without them. Your child, learning to play the piano, finds it hard labor to spell out note by note, conforming to the rules and rudiments of practice. By and by she will go beyond the rules. She will acquire the genius of the skilled performer. And the more diligently we observe our religious duties here the sooner we shall get beyond them. The more faithful we are now to the times and places of religious worship the sooner shall we be ready for that society where all life is religious.

Zachariah had that vision ages before John had it, when he saw "Holiness to the Lord" inscribed on the bells of the horses and the pots in the Lord's house, as sacred as the bowls of the altar; yea, and every pot in Jerusalem as holy as the vessels of the sanctuary. That was at least a glimpse of the templeless city of God.

And now shall we not keep before us that ideal? Let us not be discouraged by the great disparity between that far-off perfection and present reality. The poet well expresses our feeling:

Oh, Land of Promise, from what Pisgah's height
Can I behold thy stretch of peaceful bowers,
Thy golden harvest flowing out of sight,
The nestled homes and sun-illumined towers?
Gazing upon the sunset's high-heaped gold,
Its crags of opal and of chrysolite,
Its deeps on deeps of glory, that unfold,
Still brightening abysses,
And blazing precipices,
Whence but a scanty leap it seems to heaven,
Sometimes a glimpse is given
Of thy gorgeous realm, thy more unstunted blisses.

Gazing upon that vision, let us be faithful to our temple duties here that we may be fitted for that city where there is no temple, "for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it."

No troubles are so great that they cannot be built into the steps of the staircase, by which souls mount up to heaven.—Canon Liddon.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 23.

Subject: The Gracious Invitation, Isa. lv., 1-13—Golden Text, Isa. lv., 6—Memory Verses, 6-8—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. An invitation to the blesings of the Gospel (vs. 1-5). 1. "Ho." A word calling immediate and earnest attention to what is to follow. "Every one." The invitation is unlimited. "That thirsteth." Every one who has a keen sense of need and an intense desire for those things (see Matt. 5: 6). "Wine and milk." These were regarded by the Jews as the very choicest articles of diet. "Without price." The freeness of the offer is again repeated that there may be no mistake and the poorest and most needy may feel sure of a welcome.

2. "Wherefore." There is a remonstrance here against earthliness; against making much of that which is of the least importance. "Not bread." Contrast the "bread of deceit" (Prov. 20: 17) with the "bread of life" (John 6: 32, 35). "Satisfieth not." Nothing but God can meet the boundless desires of the soul. "In fatness." This expression pictures to us the choicest blessings that God has. His provisions are ample and satisfying (1 Cor. 2: 9, 10; Psa. 36: 8; 63: 5). 3. "Incline your ear." Pay attention. "Soul shall live." Life is more than mere existence. Real life is spiritual life—a life in Christ and given by Christ (John 14: 6). "Everlasting covenant." The covenant made first with Abraham and renewed with David; the covenant promised of Christ in His humiliation and ending with a crowned Christ, exulting in royal victories and a redeemed church. "Sure mercies." That is, the mercies promised to David and his house (see 2 Sam. 7: 8-16, 23-5).

4. "Given Him." God continues calling attention to the great Messiah. He is the central figure of these three chapters. David was the type and Christ the antitype; David in supreme royalty, king over all foes and friends; Christ in ascended majesty, but dispensing His rich blessings which He has provided in His redemptive work to all who will receive them. "A witness." He bore witness even unto death for God, to His law, to His claims and to His plan of redeeming love. "Leader," etc. He was the great Lawgiver, originating laws and institutions for His people. "People." "Peoples."—R. V. We must keep in mind that no race distinctions are allowed. All the peoples and nations of the world are included.

5. "Call a nation." The Christian church, a holy nation, a peculiar people. "Knowest not." The Gentile world whom He had hitherto not distinguished by covenants and blessings. "Know ye not," etc. The Gentile nation was to become one with the people of God (see Eph. 2: 11-13).

II. Conditions of accepting the invitation (vs. 6, 7). 6. "Seek." The only way to find God is to seek Him; but how? By repenting of and forsaking sin. "May be found." This implies that there will be a time when we cannot find Him. 7. "Wicked . . . unrighteous." The wicked man sins more openly in "his way." The unrighteous refers to the more subtle workings of sin "in the thoughts." All are guilty in the latter respect, though many fancy themselves safe because not openly wicked in their ways. "Forsake . . . return." He who would find God must first forsake his sins. Yet this is not sufficient; he must actually come to God. Repentance therefore implies both the negative and the positive duty. "Will have mercy." However far away the sinner may have gone yet when he returns with his whole heart God will not reject him. "Abundantly pardon." God's pardon is full and free. The margin renders it "multiply to pardon."

III. Reasons for accepting the invitation (vs. 8-13). 8. "My thoughts." Jehovah's thoughts transcend those of man as much as the heaven is higher than the earth. The thoughts and ways of Jehovah are His purposes of redemption. Thus we have not only a motive for repentance, but also for eager, expectant hope.

9. "My ways higher," etc. This is a natural and beautiful illustration of the previous verse. Our fellow men might not be willing to forgive, but God is always ready to pardon the true penitent.

10. "Rain . . . snow," etc. By quick association of the ideas mentioned in verse 9, there is a comparison here made. Rain and snow fall from heaven to water the earth and so prepare it for its annual growths to feed the bodies of men and beasts. Just as God's word falls from heaven to produce fruit of righteousness among the millions of Israel and of outlying peoples, and it shall not be void, for every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God is bread (Deut. 8: 3). 11. "So," etc. So every word that God utters shall be made a blessing to man. The Gospel promises and commandments are all important and beneficial. "Not return . . . void." It shall not return without results. God's purposes shall be realized. The full accomplishment of this verse and verses 12 and 13 is to be at the Jews' final restoration, and the conversion of the world. 12. "Go out with joy," etc. The words are used as illustrative of the people of God from the Mosaic dispensation and brought into Gospel privileges under the Christ. They go forth bounding with joy for the conquest of the whole world for Christ, and all nature—the mountains, the hills and the trees—take on the happy spirit of the church. The result shall be the world's renewal. 13. "Instead of the thorn," etc. Christ's work in the world is to remove the useless and the injurious, and to plant the good and the helpful. Where the Gospel goes sin must give way to holiness. "For a name." That is, "for a memorial to His praise" (Jer. 13: 11).

COTTON BROKER DROPS DEAD.

R. L. Bruner Passes Away in Chair on Porch in Knoxville.

Knoxville, Tenn.—R. L. Bruner, forty-three years old, widely known in the South as a stock broker and a member of the New York and New Orleans Cotton Exchanges and Chicago Board of Trade, died suddenly while seated in his chair on the porch of his home.

Death was due to heart failure brought on by an acute attack of indigestion.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Elder, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

Thursday, July 20, 1905.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

UNION CLUBBING LIST. . . .

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Home & Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Dixie Home	1.00
THE UNION Saturday News	1.25
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
THE UNION And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.50
THE UNION And Twice-a-Week Globe-Democrat	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION And Semi-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

HIGHLANDS.

Highland Lodge of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America held a meeting at Highland school house on Saturday, July 15. A. W. Powell is the president of the local lodge, and N. A. Dobbs is president of the organization in our county. There were a large number of members with their families and invited guests present, and all present seemed thoroughly imbued with the feeling of fraternity and were like one large family. We had the pleasure of hearing some good singing, led by "Uncle" Natty Dobbs, the patriarch of the community, who carries his 80 years as lightly as a boy, and whose voice rose as clear as a bell. Judge Reynolds then addressed the audience on organization, etc., and gave some good advice to the young folks present, which was heartily endorsed by the older folks, as shown by their spoken commendation; the Judge feels strongly on the subject of the coming generation, and wants to see them "trained up in the way they should go." Dinner was then served in the grove on long tables all together (still carrying out the family idea). The array of eatables was all that heart could wish, both as to quality and quantity. After dinner many went to see Frank Culpepper's fish pond, and watch him feed the fish, of which he has a great number. He has done what many more farmers could easily do. There were many there striving to make the day pass pleasantly, among who we noticed J. C. Grimes. The treat of the afternoon was to be an address by Miss Melissa Howell, the talented young school mistress of Shiloh. We were not able to remain, though feeling that the loss was ours. Uncle John Milford, another octogenarian, was present, enjoying himself. To all that were there we say, "Thank you, God bless you, and may you all have many more of such fraternal gatherings."

THE LAST CHANCE.

This is the last time the coupon for Tom Watson's Magazine will appear. Now is your time to cut it out, put your name and postoffice on it, put it in an envelope and send it to the magazine and get a sample copy for the cost of a postage stamp. Don't delay, do it at once.

When cotton gets over 10 cents it seems to us that the farmer who is not so fixed financially that he can hold old and new crop for an undetermined time, ought to sell what old cotton he has on hand and thus put himself in a position to hold this fall's crop, until he gets full price for it. By holding you can always get 10 cents, and if Providence should curtail this year's crop of cotton, so that it would not be over ten million bales, you can get 12 1-2 to 15 cents for it. The events of the past year should have convinced even a "wooden man" that the farmer can always get a fair price for his cotton, if he sticks to his organizations and act together. "One for all, all for one."

CLANTON'S ENTERPRISE MARKED AND NOTABLE.

Montgomery Journal of Monday.

Clanton, July 17.—(Special.)—The Chilton Warehouse and Manufacturing Company has $6,000 in its treasury and is ready to put up the buildings as soon as the L. and N. locates the side track. The company has had so many applications for shares that it contemplates issuing an additional $10,000 worth of stock, which would make $40,000 in all. Treasurer L. H. Reynolds has his hands full these days refusing would-be shareholders."

A PEACH.

Tuesday, we received a box of fine Elberta peaches from G. H. Gerald, Esq., of Thorsby. They are beautiful in color and luscious in flavor, and as to size, well, by actual measurement they are from 8 to 9 inches in circumference. Many thanks, Bro. Gerald, for the kind feelings expressed by the gift.

A CARD.

Clanton, July 19, 1905.

Editor Union:

I've just noticed that I am on the program of th ecounty S. S. Convention that is to meet at Maplesville next Saturday and Sunday, and a splendid subject has been assigned me, but I am so late on the program (3 p. m. Sunday) that I can not be there, and I'm such a poor speaker that I could not interest the crowd at that late hour, and in fact no speech ever amounts to much at the close of any meeting, when people are anxious to get away, especially if they have been there a couple of days.

However, I hope the convention will have a profitable meeting, and will accomplish much good. I am interested in Sunday school work and whatever I can do for the good of the cause I am ready to do. But, to make our county S. S. convention what it ought to be, what it is supposed to be, we must put it on a high plane, above all factions or "isms" of ANY KIND. Thanking the executive committee for putting me on the program, and hoping that my position will be fully understood, I am very respectfully,

L. H. REYNOLDS.

The above letter impels us to say that hitherto we have been far from having had a county S. S. meeting in the proper sense of the word. Even as to the present meeting, while the "announcement" was sent to THE UNION by the secretary, Miss M. C. Gibson, we have never been furnished with a copy of the proposed program, that we might publish it for the benefit of our readers. This writer is now and has been for years an enthusiastic supporter of Sunday school work, but that work should be conducted with an eye single to the advancement of the Sunday school and the church, and not allowed to be made use of for political advancement or private prejudice.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Editor Union:

On Saturday, July 15th, we had our Children's Day Exercises, which were a grand success. Commenced with song, prayer by Bro. Walter Martin, our Supt. We won't give our program in full on account of its length. Suffice it to say we had about 60 recitations, some pathetic, some funny, but all good, and made a day long to be remembered. Our beloved pastor spoke, and he sure told the boys that love a dram more than good character what they might depend upon. We're glad to say that we had beautiful behavior all day, not a drop of whisky about the place, and we wish to thank our people and visiting friends for th einterest they showed. Special thanks are due Bro. Cord Northcutt for his splendid talk. We believe it came from his heart. We know it reached the hearts of many there. May the Lord bless our brother and co-worker. Dinner was very good and plentiful. About 350 souls were present. Some splendid recitations in the afternoon by our young friends from Rocky Mount. Everything was good, and we'll do still better in the future. Success to THE UNION and its many readers.

M. C. ROBINSON.

BEAT 9 ITEMS.

Crops are needing rain. Sidney Scott and family, of Autauguaville, are visiting his brother, R. W. Scott. J. P. Barrett and son, Charles, were at Clanton on business Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hayes visited relatives in Blocton last Friday. Mrs. Martha Baker, who resided near Walnut Creek church, died Sunday night, and was buried at Cedar Grove church Monday at 3 p. m. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Parrish Mr. and Mrs. "Doc" Gentry are visiting in Dallas county this week. Success to THE UNION.

NIM ROD.

BAZZATE.

Editor Union:

Crops are good here. Mrs. Letcher visited friends down the road Sunday. Mrs. L. E. Barrett and her charming sister, Miss Candy Bone, were visitors at Will Cherry's Friday. The barbecue at Mr. Tom Cole's went off all right; plenty to eat and lots of lemonade to drink. We all sympathize with J. R. Barrett and wife in the loss of their 3-months-old baby. The Lord took him to a better world, where he had a place for him. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh, blessed be the name of the Lord."

SUNFLOWER.

FARMERS' WAREHOUSE AND FERTILIZER FACTORY.

The people of Thorsby and vicinity met at that city on July 18th for the purpose of building a ware house and Fertilizer Plant. The meeting was called to order by Pres. J. Bice and Secretary Caddell being absent, J. D. Collins was appointed in his stead. Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Reports of the various committees were received and the committees discharged. A motion to take subscriptions for stock was carried and 55 shares of stock were placed among the following: B. N. Martin, J. Bice, J. D. Collins, A. G. Dake, G. W. Phalen, J. W. Hayes, J. P. Barrett, J. F. Peterson, J. G. Hayes, T. M. Driver, J. H. Benson, J. R. Parnell, J. R. Billingsley, G. W. Freeman, E. H. Adams, J. W. Billingsley, G. H. Gerald, P. K. Villadsen, A. L. Tornblom, J. C. Michelson, J. W. Littleton, T. J. Collins, W. P. Murrah, L. J. Jones, R. W. Scott, T. W. Childress, R. H. Bean, J. A. Bean, W. J. Bean, J. R. Martin, J. H. Collins, Stephen Pate, T. J. Martin, W. C. Martin, H. F. H. Hartillous, A. Littleton, A. M. Johnson, S. W. Collins, J. W. Collins, W. R. Robinson and J. T. Mims. Various resolutions were adopted as to incorporation, etc., and the 20 per cent paid in on shares was ordered deposited in the Thorsby Savings Bank. G. H. Gerald was elected temporary treasurer and the enterprise named by unanimous vote "Farmers' Warehouse and Fertilizer Company." T. J. Collins, B. N. Martin, T. W. Childress, W. R. Robinson and T. M. Driver were appointed as a committee to sell stock, and the meeting adjourned to Saturday, July 22, at 10 a. m.

J. D. COLLINS,
Secretary.

SPORTING NOTES.

W. B. Jennings' Proper won the Long Island Handicap.

Bryn Mawr polo team defeated the Rockaway Hunt quartet at Cedarhurst, L. I.

P. J. Dwyer's two-year-old colt Quorum won the Atlantic Stake at Brighton Beach, N. Y.

James B. Brady's high-priced colt Oiseau won the Spindrift Stake at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.

Sydney Paget's Cairngorm won the Bay Ridge Handicap at the Coney Island Jockey Club course.

Arthur Smith, with a score of 278, won the Western open golf championship at Cincinnati, Ohio.

The American Yacht Club's Mimosa III. won the first race in the challenge series for the Manhasset Cup.

In a close finish the Queen's Westminster Volunteers defeated the Seventh Regiment team, of New York.

"Alec" Smith, with a card of 70, established a new golf record for the public links at Van Cortlandt Park, New York City.

Squadron A. N. G. N. Y., defeated Great Neck at polo by a score of 9¾ to 6¾ goals in the final match for the Rumson cups.

Charles E. Courtney, coach of the Cornell navy, urges that the distance of intercollegiate races be reduced from four to three miles.

Miss May Sutton easily defeated Miss Winifred Longhurst, the Irish woman lawn tennis champion, in the all-England championship tournament.

Winners in the round robin lawn tennis in doubles at the Ardsley Club were H. F. Allen and C. F. Watson, Jr., and George L. Wrenn, Jr., and Reginald F. Fincke.

Marvin Hart knocked out "Jack" Root in the twelfth round of a finish fight, at Reno, Nev., and is hailed as the heavyweight champion by James J. Jeffries, the retired champion.

Boll Weevil in Limestone.

Athens, Ala.—The dreaded boll weevil, which has done such vast damage to the cotton of Texas, has been found in this county in large numbers. The first found were discovered by E. O. Hendricks, a planter in the Paclo settlement, twelve miles west of Athens, and he says that they are eating his crop up. They enter the square and when they leave it the square falls off, and he says the ground is nearly covered with squares, where they pass along.

SALE OF COLLATERALS.

Notice is hereby given that I, J. B. Downs, will sell at public outcry to the highest bidder for cash in front of the Court House Door in Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama, between the hours of 11 o'clock in the forenoon and 1 o'clock in the afternoon, on Thursday, the 27th day of July, 1905, the following notes and mortgage held by me as collateral security, to-wit: Notes and mortgage executed by W. R. Moore to L. O. Larson on the 27th day of July, 1904, as follows: One note for $150.00 due on the 13 day of October, 1904, eight notes each in the sum of $25.00 and due respectively on the first day of each month from the first day of November, 1904, to the first day of June 1905, inclusive, one note in the sum of $16.96 due on the first day of July, 1904, each and all of said notes containing a waiver of exemptions as to personal property and a provision for the payment of attorney's fees for collection, and the mortgage securing said notes, which said mortgage is recorded in the office of the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama in the record of mortgages in Volume 70 on page 313, and contains a power of sale an dprovides for the payment of costs and expenses incident to a sale under said power including attorney's fees, and conveys the following property, to-wit: One Atlas engine No. 8030 belts pulleys and fixtures—one 35 horse power boiler pipes connecting rods an detc., one saw mill and everything pertaining thereto, two brindle oxen Buck and Ball, one red ox Red, one ox name Tom, two brindle oxen known as T. W. Wilson oxen, one brindle ox Jerry, three white oxen Brandy Lep and John; also one note executed by Thorsby Lumber & Mfg. Co. to L. O. Larson on the 13th day of June, 1904, and due four months after its date in the sum of $150.00, which said note contains a waiver of exemptions as to personal property and provides for the payment of attorney's fees for collection.

This the 20th day of July, 1905.

J. B. DOWNS.

7-20-05 tf

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

Vol. II, No. 1, The July Number, to be Illustated and Greatly Improved.

As a token of appreciation of the liberal support given it by the public, Tom Watson's Magazine for July (commencing the second volume) will come out June 25th with illustrations, cartoons, head and tail pieces, etc., 128 pages of good reading to take home with you.

Of course, size isn't the only thing Tom Watson's Magazine is proud of. Quality first, size afterward, is its rule of action. There are plenty of good magazines now being published—but none of them can take the place of Tom Watson's, because no other editorial writer in America can feel the public pulse and diagnose social and political ills as Tom Watson does. Not that there is any lack of good editorial writers—big, brainy men, who know how to write strong English—but there is only one Tom Watson; and he always commands attention and respect, even of those who combat his ideas most vigorously.

Tom Watson's is "a magazine with a purpose back of it," and the success it has attained, in the "swaddling clothes" period of its existence, shows that the American people are intensely interested in Mr. Watson's purpose, regardless of party names or affiliation. That success has been greater than the most ardent friend of Mr. Watson and his magazine had hoped for. From the very first it has enjoyed a steady growth in subscriptions and news stand sales. There has been no "boom," no mushroom growth to die suddenly, no sky-rocket ascent to fall a broken stick. Tom Watson's Magazine has been chary of using professional subscription solicitors, but relies upon local agents and clubbing with the country newspapers. The subscribers thus secured are the kind that renew year after year and form an "Old Guard," invaluable alike to the publisher and his advertisers.

Mr. Watson was last year the People's Party candidate for President, and, of course, his magazine editorially is an advocate of Populism—or Jeffersonian Democracy, as some prefer to call it. The magazine is especially strong in support of municipal ownership of railroads, telegraph, a parcels post, etc. But Tom Watson's Magazine is by no means all politics. About half its space is devoted to serials novelettes, short stories, poems, jokes, cartoons, illustrations and special articles by the world's best writers and artists; an Educational Department; news summary; "The Say of Other Editors," etc., etc.; $1 per year by mail; ten cents per copy at the news stands.

THE UNION recognizes that the question of public ownership is one that can not longer be ignored and that it must be settled before many years. To secure a satisfactory settlement the people must be educated to act intelligently upon it; and to secure such education every phase of the question must be discussed. "Public control" will undoubtedly be tested thoroughly first, and if it works satisfactorily the "public ownership" feature will be dropped. But if "control" should fail "ownership" will inevitably be the next step. Accordingly, to help in an educational way, THE UNION has arranged a clubbing combination whereby our readers may renew for one year and secure Tom Watson's Magazine a year for only $1.50. Hand or send this amount to this office. We have also arranged for free sample copies of the magazine to be sent to any person cutting out the coupon below and mailing it to Tom Watson's Magazine, No. 121 West 42d street, New York city.

SAMPLE COPY COUPON.

Tom Watson's Magazine, No. 121 W. 42d Street., New York City.

The undersigned, a reader of THE UNION, desires a free samply copy of Tom Watson's Magazine, as per reading notice published in that newspaper. This is not an order for subscription.

Name .. ..

P. O. ....

State .....

tf

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 12, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz.: Isaac B. Martin, Homestead Entry No. 32916, for the S. E. 1-4 of S. E. 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23 N. of R. 13 East.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Zack S. Avery, Clayton Glasscock, Hubbard Glasscock, Norman Bradford, all of Jemison, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
Register.

7-13-05-6t

Nashville, Tenn.—Near Couchville in this county at an early hour Friday morning Walter Wright shot and killed Mack Boner. Wright fired first with a shotgun loaded with buckshot and three shots from a revolver, all taking effect. Both men were prominent farmers. Family trouble was the cause of the killing. Wright has surrendered.

Academic
Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., Pres.

Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

Tuition free; living expenses 20[illegible] per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer

We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WITH

The Union

FOR

$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.

If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, for a full year. Address

The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

1011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

E. M. PINCKARD & CO.

General Merchandise and Cotton Buyers

CLANTON, - - - - - ALABAMA

Thomas Davidson's Twenty Maxims

Summing Up the Results of a Kindly Philosopher's Own Experiences in the Life We Live.

By William James.

RELY upon your own energies and do not wait for or depend on other people.

Cling with all your might to your own highest ideals and do not be led astray by such vulgar aims as wealth, position, popularity. Be yourself.

Your worth consists in what you are and not in what you have. What you are will show in what you do.

Never fret, repine or envy. Do not make yourself unhappy by comparing your circumstances with those of more fortunate people, but make the most of the opportunities you have. Enjoy profitably every moment.

Associate with the nobles' people you can find, read the best books, live with the mighty, but learn to be happy alone.

Do not believe that all greatness and heroism are in the past. Learn to discover princes, prophets, heroes and saints among the people about you. Be assured they are there.

Be on earth what good people hope to be in heaven.

Cultivate ideal friendships and gather into an intimate circle all your acquaintances who are hungering for truth and right. Remember that society itself can be nothing but the intimacy of pure and noble souls.

If the world despise you because you do not follow its ways pay no heed to it. But be sure your way is right.

Do not shrink from any useful or kindly act, however hard or repellant it may be. The worth of acts is measured by the spirit in which they are performed.

If a thousand plans fail be not disheartened. As long as your purposes are right you have not failed.

Examine yourself every night and see whether you have progressed in knowledge, sympathy and helpfulness during the day. Count every day a loss in which no progress has been made.

Seek employment in energy; not in dalliance. Our worth is measured solely by what we do.

Let not our goodness be professional; let it be the simple, natural outcome of your character. Therefore, cultivate character.

If you do wrong, say so, and make what atonement you can. That is the nobleness. Have no moral debts.

When in doubt how to act ask yourself: What does nobility command? Be on good terms with yourself.

Look for no reward for goodness but goodness itself. Remember heaven and hell are utterly immoral institutions if they are meant as reward and punishment.

Give whatever countenance and help you can to every movement and institution that is working for good. Be not sectarian.

Wear no placards, within or without. Be human fully.

Never be satisfied until you have understood the meaning of the world for the purpose of our own life, and have reduced your world to a rational cosmos.

—McClure's Magazine.

COUNTS AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

Spring Term—Third Monday in March.
Fall Term—Fourth Monday in November.
Judge—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
Solicitor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Clerk—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

Spring Term—Second Monday in March.
Fall Term—Second Monday in September.
Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whiteside.
Register—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.

First Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

Second Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, first Monday November.

County Officers.

Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Solicitor—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Mosca Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would wish published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3d Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 3rd Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 3rd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 2nd Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 2nd Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 4th Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 3rd Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Collins' Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 3rd Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 2nd Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 4th Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor. Sunday before the second Sunday; T. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. Mr. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Son service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—Third Saturday, Clanton.

Amanda Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 250—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 423—First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 667—First Saturday, Billingsley.

Bozeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 411—Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Stanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 473—Tuesday on or before full moon, Stanton.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304— Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Geronermo Tribe, No. 90—First and third Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. of R.; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Bareb[illegible] Lodge, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

bama Girl's Industri School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., Presid ession Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

ombination Offe

nish the Twice-a-Week issue of the Globe-Democra

WITH

e Union

FOR

rs One Year Only $1.5

e-Democrat is issued Semi-Week every Tuesday and Friday. It and has no equal or rival as dern Newspaper.

s of the World's Fair, all the new and all the news of all the earth
-Democrat during the coming yea

S THE TIME.

and get your best home paper an r of the World's Fair City, Lo

Clanton, Ala.

acobs & Bros.,

re and Rugs.

LE AGENTS—

lastic Book Cases an Cabinets.

ing.

MINGHAM, ALA

Practical Watchmake and Optician

Eyes Correctly
Fitted

Mail orders promptly fille

KARD & CO

dise and Cotton Buyers

ALABAMA

avidson's venty Maxims
Results of a Kindly Phi wn Experiences in fe We Live.

and do not wait for or depen to your own highest ideals an such vulgar aims as wealth, positio sts in what you are and not in wh are will show in what you do.

envy. Do not make yourself u your circumstances with those of mo the opportunities you have. Empl can find, read the best books, li alone.

and loyalism are in the past. Learn saints among the people about you.

to be in heaven.

for intoned intimate circle all your th and right. Remember that heav of pure and noble souls.

you do not follow its ways pay no he kindly act, however hard or repellant by the spirit in which they are p counterfeited. As long as your purpos see whether you have progressed ating the day. Count every day a l in dalliance. Our worth is measured s sonal; let it be the simple, natural o cultivate character.

what atonement you can. That in t ourself: What does nobility command?

s but goodness itself. Remember hea utions if they are meant as reward help you can to every movement and Be not sectarian. thout. Be human fully.

understood the meaning of the world
e reduced your world to a rational co

COURTS AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

Spring Term—Third Monday in May.
Fall Term—Fourth Monday in November.
Judge—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
Solicitor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Clerk—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

Spring Term—Second Monday in March.
Fall Term—Second Monday in September.
Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
Register—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.

First Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

Second Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, first Monday November.

County Officers.

Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Solicitor—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would wish published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. F. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 3rd Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 2nd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 2nd Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 2nd Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 4th Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 1st Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Concord—Rev. J. H. Thomas 3rd Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 2nd Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 4th Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; Sunday before the second Sunday; J. P. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. Mr. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—Third Saturday, Clanton.

Amande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 150—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 421—First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 497—First Saturday, Billingsley.

Bozeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 611—Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Stanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 673—Tuesday on or before full moon, Stanton.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304—Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Geronermo Tribe, No. 90—First and third Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. of R.; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Bursar Lodge, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to July 19, '05, 7,990.
Price same date, 10 1-4c.
Total receipts season 1903-'04, 6,648.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

C. N. Elland was in Clanton Thursday.

T. E. Hannibal, of Lomax, was a pleasant visitor Thursday.

Surveyor Dahl has completed platting the P. D. Wilson addition to Clanton, and went home Thursday. Mr. Dahl has a vineyard in Shelby county, from which he makes a very fine wine. See his ad in this paper.

T. J. Billingsley was a welcome caller Thursday.

Judge Reynolds spent Thursday at the capital.

Squire Alf Childress was in town Friday.

J. H. Ray and H. J. Dobbs, accompanied by a visitor from Blocton, Ned Wyatt, were in Clanton Friday.

W. R. Jackson, of Jemison was in town Friday.

'Squire B. E. Collum was in Clanton Friday.

R. J. Williams was a pleasant visitor in Clanton Friday.

R. J. Williams was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

Madison Bean was in town Saturday.

Lee Headley was a pleasant caller Saturday.

R. E. L. Ward, of Lomax, was in town Tuesday.

R. W. Foshee and Miller Sorrels were in Clanton Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Robinson, of Lomax, have a young lady visitor that came to their house last week, that they think a world of.

M. C. Williams and C. C. Burkhalter were in Clanton Tuesday.

T. J. Henderson, postmaster at Mountain Creek, was arraigned Saturday before United States Commissioner Elmore at Montgomery for selling liquor without a license and discharged, it being shown to the court that he had a license. Joan Royles, arrested on the same charge, was held in $200, which he made.

I. C. Harber, of Thorsby, who digs wells that never go dry, was in Clanton Saturday. On Monday he loaded his machinery on a car and went to Sims, Ala., where he will drill a well for the Sims Lumber Company. He drilled a well for Marbury Bros. at Marbury, that will furnish 5,000 gallons per minute. He will soon be back, ready to put in wells in his own county.

J. Wash Riggins was in town Saturday.

Robert Popwell and family went to Kinchcon Saturday to spend Sunday at their old home.

Rev. A. C. Swindall filled his appointment at the Baptist church Sunday, and preached a very able sermon on "Hell" and showed very conclusively that it wasn't a myth, but a reality, if you believe the Bible.

Judge Reynolds paid a visit to his plantation in Beat 2 on the line between Chilton and Shelby, Monday, and his tenant, Mr. Charles Johnson, loaded the judge's buggy with new sweet potatoes, green peas and other fine vegetables. Bro. Johnson also sent some sweet potatoes to THE UNION. None weighed less than a pound. How is that for potatoes, eh? The Judge says Johnson's cotton is waist high with 25 to 30 bolls to the stalk. We thank the Judge for bringing in subscriptions to THE UNION.

F. M. Langston, of Jemison, was a pleasant visitor Tuesday. We are glad to see that he is getting back to his usual good health.

G. T. McElderry, of Talladega, was here Tuesday and Wednesday.

R. A. Hancock was in Clanton Wednesday.

Clerk Collins spent Tuesday in Thorsby.

W. H. Goodgame moved to Thorsby Monday with his family, where he will make his home for the future. He has a good position at Nute Gentry's gin. Good luck, Will.

The L. & N. R. R. had a man in Clanton Wednesday locating the sidetrack for the warehouse, etc. Just as soon as he is through the building will commence. There will be a number of good teams needed at the works, so those that wish to work for the company had best send in their names.

J. H. Middleton is spending a few days in Clanton with his parents.

That dog will not lie still. Several warrants are out for parties on the charge of "larceny." It bids fair to be a "celebrated case."

ANGELICA WINE!

Pronounced equal to the best made in Europe, by good judges of wine. Price $2.00 per gallon, discount for larger quantity. Guaranteed to keep. Address

A. P. R. DAHL,
tf. Calera, Ala.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Billie Riggins and Miss Lola Littleton. Rush Curry and Miss Lillie Hayes.

TIMBER FOR SALE!

Over a hundred acres of Virgin Swamp timber for sale. Apply to T. J. Billingsley, Clanton, Ala. Route 3. tf.

EQUITABLE DISCLOSURES

Amazing Testimony From Grafters Who Looted the Concern.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTION NEAR

The New York World Publishes a Summary of the Sworn Evidence Upon Which the Hendricks Report Was Based—Confessions of Depew, Schiff, Hyde, Alexander and Others.

New York City.—A summary and large section of the testimony upon which the Hendricks report on the scandals in the Equitable Life Assurance Society was based were made public by the New York World.

So damning a document has never before emanated from a public office. It calls into question the veracity, honor and even the common honesty of men who have long stood high in financial and social circles in New York. It does more. It actually convicts some of them on their own testimony of offences punishable by penitentiary sentences.

Nothing that has occurred since the beginning of the plutocratic age in America has been so startling in its revelations of greed, graft and wholesale buccaneering.

It has shattered forever the glamour that has heretofore surrounded certain multi-millionaires of the eminently respectable class, and shows in revolting details the methods employed by them to rob the trust funds of widows and orphans left in their hands.

Every member of the ring which which preyed on the Equitable is now in danger of relentless criminal prosecution.

This testimony shows that the guilty officials of the Equitable have diverted more than $20,000,000 of the funds of the society within the last few years. A summary of the most important features of the testimony follows.

Chauncey M. Depew, a director, testified that the Depew Improvement Company, a suburban land enterprise, of Buffalo, had obtained from the Equitable a loan of $250,000 on property which the State Insurance Department had valued as only $150,000, and which was afterward sold on foreclosure for $50,000. As a member of the Executive Committee of the Equitable Mr. Depew said he had voted for the loan, but denied that he advised it. He admitted that later he with others interested had agreed to protect the Equitable against loss, but said, as a lawyer, he did not consider that promise binding. Mr. Depew testified that since 1889 he had been paid $20,000 annually by the Equitable for legal counsel, and that for thirty years he had received money from the Equitable "on a sort of general retainer." Mr. Depew said he lifted young Hyde's salary to $100,000 a year at Hyde's request because of what his father did. He raised Alexander's salary to make it even with Hyde's.

James H. Hyde on his own testimony, is shown to have been in eight syndicates which sold securities to the Equitable. His widely advertised restitution of $61,000 he confessed to be merely formal, as the money has not reached the treasury. He admitted that the society paid for the Cambon dinner and that it purchased for him a $20,000 private car. When the capital stock of the Equitable Trust Company was increased he grabbed the profit for himself. Mr. Hyde said that it was true that several persons carried on the payrolls of the Equitable did most of their work for him personally.

Former President Alexander testified that he was in eight syndicates; had offered to return the profits made in two, but even this small share of his loot had not reached the treasury. He admitted the charge that a host of members of his family were carried on the payrolls at salaries ranging as high $25,000 annually. He admitted sanctioning the leases of Equitable property to Hyde's safe deposit companies at a nominal rental at the expense of the society.

Jacob H. Schiff admitted that up to the time of the exposure he had been neither a policyholder nor a stockholder in the Equitable, though, as a director, he threw a great part of his investment business to his firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. He admitted selling bonds to the Equitable which he thought unfit investments for life insurance societies; selling Japanese bonds to the society and buying them back at a lower figure; selling Metropolitan Street Railroad bonds on which the society suffered a large loss. The sensational part of the Schiff testimony was his impassioned charge that the records of the society had been falsified in so far as they showed sales of Union Pacific stock to the company by his firm. Yet the books of the company show that Schiff voted to approve these records, and the officials of the company produced checks in payment for this stock made out to his firm and indorsed by it.

Valentine P. Snyder testified that in operations conducted by him to effect the merger of the Bank of Commerce and the Western National Bank the Equitable Society lost about $1,200,000.

Evidence was presented showing the purchase of Western bank stock by the Equitable for 390 and its sale for 150. More extraordinary yet, it bought Equitable Trust Company stock for about 1000 and sold it for half as much to George Gould and E. H. Harriman on the same day.

Huge Railway Earnings.

Railway earnings continue good and the traffic outlook is favorable.

Use Birmingham Slag.

Athens, Ala.—The city administration is having the streets of the town graded and covered with a thick coating of Birmingham slag, upon which they will lay a cover of chert, which is found here in abundance. The discovery of chert was made while digging ditches for the sewer pipe, and it is found in large quantities in several places in the town.

Notice No. 26046.
NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz: Dalee Millar, Homestead Entry No. 35550, for the W. 1-2 of N. E. 1-4, E. 1-2 of N. W. 1-4, Section 10, Tp. 23 N. of R. 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Rebecca J. Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; C. Buck Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; James Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala., Thomas Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

THE CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the Chilton Co. S. S. Association will be held at Maplesville, July 22 and 23, 1905. The basis of representation is: All ministers of the gospel, the superintendent and 3 delegates from each Sunday school in the county. It is earnestly desired that ALL the superintendents will announce this convention in their Sunday schools, see that delegates are elected and urge them to be present. The convention promises to be the most successful ever held during the ten years existence of the association. Several officers of the State S. S. Association will be present and men prominent in all county affairs will be in Maplesville to add their interest and enthusiasm to the S. S. movement in Chilton county.

MARY CARR GIBSON,
tf Secretary-Treasurer.

ROUND-UP FARMERS' INSTITUTE.
FARMERS' SUMMER SCHOOL.

At Auburn, Ala., July 25 to August 2, 1905.

Experts will give lectures and practical demonstrations, 10 to 12 hours every day, on the following: Truck Gardening; Fruits; Fungus and Insect Diseases; Fertilizing, Culture, Varieties and Diseases of Cotton; Fertilizing and Cultivating Sugar Cane; Syrup Making and Syrup Selling; Cattle, Horses, Mules, Sheep, Hogs and Poultry; Diseases of Live Stock; Principles of Breeding; Feeds and Feeding; Soils and Soil Improvement; Soil Improving Plants, Terracing; Rotation of Crops; Fertilizers, Commercial and Home-made; Hay Crops and Hay Making; Storage, Dairy and Live-Stock Barns and Houses; Farm Machinery and Farm Labor; Corn Judging, and many other real and interesting farm topics will be discussed.

Reduced rates on railroads. Three good meals and a bed for 50 cents per day. Auburn is high and healthy; good water and pure air.

Special Prizes: (1) $15 for the first best 10 ears of corn; $10 for the second best 10 ears of corn; $5 for the third best 10 ears of corn.

(2) $10 for the person who makes the best average in scoring live stock; $5 for second best; $3 for third best

C. A. CARY,
tf. Director of Farmers' Institute.

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

FREE BARBECUE.

There will be a free barbecue at Tyus on the line between Autauga and Chilton counties on July 22, 1905 Come everybody, and let's enjoy the day together.

Committee.
G. W. Williams,
T. J. Cox,
C. E. Boone,
J. H. Stange. tf

RUNAWAY MINOR.

All persons are hereby for bidden to harbor, employ or in any wise give aid or assistance to John Jackson, a minor son of the undersigned under penalty of the law.

E. F. JACKSON,
7 3 05 tf Clanton, Ala.

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes,
FURNITURE,
COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alabama

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.,

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers.
County and Office Supplies a Specialty.
Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave, BIRMINGHAM, ALA

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association
of Alabama.
CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.
Chilton County Branch
Organized February 3rd, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' Dwellings, Outbuildings and Contents and Live Stock against Loss by Fire, Wind and Lightning. The Cheapest, Safest and Most Sensible Method of Insurance Known to Man.

Average Yearly Cost for Four Years 56-100 of 1 percent.

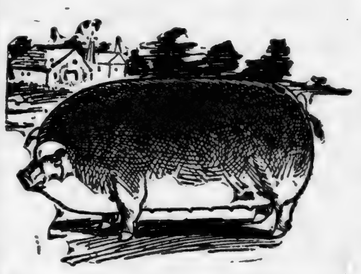
Full particulars furnished upon application to
WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

Gelder's Restaurant,
Good Meals at Reasonable Prices.
110 North 20th Street,
BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND FERTILIZERS
FOR SALE.
Troy Special & Mule Brand
"Are the Best on Earth."
J. C. JONES,
Clanton, - - - Alabama.

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

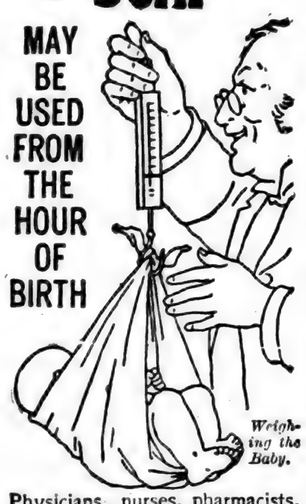
We guarantee water or no charge made.
Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Alabama.

Cuticura SOAP

MAY BE USED FROM THE HOUR OF BIRTH



Weighing the Baby.

Physicians, nurses, pharmacists, and chemists throughout the world endorse Cuticura Soap because of its delicate, medicinal, emollient, sanative, and antiseptic properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, united with the purest of cleansing ingredients and most refreshing of flower odors. For preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet and bath, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great Skin Cure, is priceless. Guaranteed absolutely pure, and may be used from the hour of birth.

Two Soaps in one at one price—namely, a Medicinal and Toilet Soap for 25c. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston. Mailed Free, "How to Care for Baby's Skin, Scalp, and Hair."

Am. 29, 1905.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and local soreness, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh.

Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in pure water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all

TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES

For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box.

Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.

THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

Edison on New York Living.

Edison despises New York City. "I loathe its artificial way of living," he says. "It's mannerisms, its ways of thought. It has but the one redeeming feature, that it is getting so impossible that people must leave it or become crazy. A man in New York gets down to his office at 9, works until 12 or 1, goes out, takes a couple of cocktails, eats a hearty luncheon, hurriedly goes back to his desk and works until 5 or 6, hurries up town, stopping off for one or two more drinks, goes out somewhere, eats an enormous dinner, goes to the theater and then supper afterward, and finally tumbles into bed. It is that type of man who often says to me: 'I don't see how you stand the strain of working the way you do day after day and night after night in the laboratory.' Work? Why, my work is play compared with his."

Alluminum-Coated Paper.

Aluminum-coated paper, made in Germany for wrapping food substances, is prepared by applying a thin coat of an alcohol solution of resin to artificial parchment, then sprinkling aluminum powder over the surface, and finally submitting to pressure. The artificial parchment is paper that has been treated with sulphuric acid. The aluminum paper is not attacked by the air or by fats, is much cheaper than tinfoil, and late analysis in Paris of this paper and of aluminum foil showed but a small proportion of foreign matter and no arsenic or poisoned metal.

COMES A TIME

When Coffee Shows What It Has Been Doing.

"Of late years coffee has disagreed with me," writes a matron from Rome, N. Y., "it's lightest punishment was to make me 'logy' and dizzy, and it seemed to thicken up my blood.

"The heaviest was when it upset my stomach completely, destroying my appetite and making me nervous and irritable, and sent me to my bed. After one of these attacks, in which I nearly lost my life, I concluded to quit and try Postum Food Coffee.

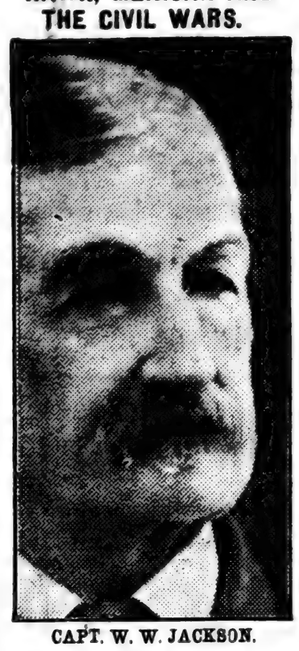
"It went right to the spot! I found it not only a most palatable and refreshing beverage, but a food as well.

"All my ailments, the 'loginess' and dizziness, the unsatisfactory condition of my blood, my nervousness and irritability disappeared in short order and my sorely afflicted stomach began quickly to recover. I began to rebuild and have steadily continued until now. Have a good appetite and am rejoicing in sound health, which I owe to the use of Postum Food Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," found in each pkg.

A VETERAN OF THE BLACK HAWK, MEXICAN AND THE CIVIL WARS.



CAPT. W. W. JACKSON.

Sufferings Were Protracted and Severe —Tried Every Known Remedy Without Relief—Serious Stomach Trouble Cured by Three Bottles of Peruna!

Capt. W. W. Jackson, 705 G St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I am eighty-three years old, a veteran of the Black Hawk, Mexican and the Civil Wars. I am by profession a physician, but abandoned the same.

"Some years ago I was seriously affected with catarrh of the stomach. My sufferings were protracted and severe. I tried every known remedy without obtaining relief.

"In desperation I began the use of your Peruna. I began to realize immediate though gradual improvement.

"After the use of three bottles every appearance of my complaint was removed, and I have no hesitation in recommending it as an infallible remedy for that disorder."—W. W. Jackson.

Address Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Limits of Vision.

The limits of vision vary with elevation, conditions of the atmosphere, intensity of illumination and other modifying elements in different cases On a clear day an object one foot above a level plain may be seen at the distance of 1.31 miles; one ten feet high, 4.15 miles; one twenty feet high, 5.86 miles; one 100 feet high, 13.1 miles; one a mile high, as the top of a mountain, 95.23 miles. This allows seven inches (or, to be exact, 6.99 inches) for the curvature of the earth and assumes that the size and illumination of the object are sufficient to produce an image. Five miles may be taken as the extreme limit at which a man is visible on a flat plain to an observer on the same level.

The membership of the Army Temperance Association comprises not less than one fourth of the British army.

A WOMAN'S MISERY.

Mrs. John LaRue, of 115 Paterson Avenue, Paterson, N. J., says: "I was troubled for about nine years, and what I suffered no one will ever know. I used about every known remedy that is said to be good for kidney complaint, but without deriving permanent relief. Often when alone in the house the back ache has been so bad that it brought tears to my eyes. The pain at times was so intense that I was compelled to give up my household duties and lie down. There were headaches, dizziness and blood rushing to my head to cause bleeding at the nose. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me so much that I continued the treatment. The stinging pain in the small of my back, the rushes of blood to the head and other symptoms disappeared."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers, 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Disparages Italian Colonies.

Baron Gustave Tosti, who as vice consul and for the last two years consul to Italy, has lived in New York City for ten years, has gone to Boston to take charge of Italian consular interests in all New England. Baron Tosti is well known as an advocate of breaking up Italian colonies and getting his fellow countrymen out in the country, farming, fruit raising and gardening. He wants them to become Americans. Tosti is a Neapolitan of an old aristocratic family, but is a thorough democrat. He has been in consular service for a long time, in various parts of the world; since coming to New York he has studied medicine, taken his degree and passed the New York State examination, but does not intend to practice, devoting himself to psychological researches.

Lapland Newspaper Enterprise.

A decided novelty in the way of newspaper enterprise is announced from Lapland. The first paper in that country has appeared. It is written upon a single sheet of paper and is published every Sunday at a town with an unpronounceable name. Up to the present the journal has only half a dozen subscribers, and every issue is welcomed.

NATURE IS A KIND MOTHER.

CURIOUS METHODS BY WHICH SHE MENDS ANIMAL INJURIES.

The Earthworm Grows a New Half-body to Replace the One Drowned by a Robin for Breakfast—Lizards Can Grow New Tails.

How many weak and timid creatures there are in the world, with neither teeth and claws for their protection, armor for their defense, nor speed with which to escape their enemies! One can hardly understand why they have not all been killed and eaten up long ago. Nature is, however, kinder to these poor animals than she seems; for if she has left them defenceless against attack, she has given them a marvelous power of recovery from injuries.

When a tiny lizard has to scamper for his life in search of a crack in the rock, he often has "so close a call" that his pursuer snaps off his tail just as he whisks into safety. A loss like this would kill most larger animals, but not the little lizard. He simply waits round quietly until a new tail grows, and then is as well off as before, except that the new tail has a flexible rod of cartilage where the old one had a backbone.

If an earthworm happens to be retiring to his hole when a robin is out looking for breakfast, there is apt to be a lively tug of war between the eater and the breakfast. Not infrequently the bird gets the tail end of the worm, while the other half crawls away into safety. Not even a lizard could survive such treatment as this, but the earthworm is, in ability to recover from injuries, almost as much superior to the lizard as the lizard is to us. He grows a new half-body to replace the one which has been devoured, and seems to mind his loss no more than a body minds having his hair cut.

There are, besides, some snail-like water worms which quite outdo the earthworm. If one of these chances to lose his entire head, in a week or so, sometimes in only four or five days—he grows a new one, brain, eyes, and all, and is as well off as ever. Even if a hungry fish gets two bites at him, so that he loses both head and tail, the worm can patch himself out with new members and go about his business as before. They have even been known to get divided into two pieces about equal in size, and each piece grow a new half-body, so that there were two entire worms in place of one.

After this it will easily be guessed that if the head end of the worm happens to be split half way down he will grow two new sides and become Y-shaped with two heads. Or if the tail end is split new sides grow and a two tailed worm is made. Sometimes one or two new heads develop close behind the old one in the angle of the Y. Indeed, the little creature seems to have a sort of mania for making new heads and tails wherever he finds a chance. If, therefore, the worm, after receiving several wounds, manages to escape with his life from the cuts which happen to open forward, little heads grow out, and from those opening backward little tails—no doubt greatly to his embarrassment.

But what of the cut-off heads and tails? Do they make new bodies and become whole animals again? Not usually. The severed head seems to become confused, so that it does not know what to do. If it lives it is most apt to produce another head like itself, and change into two heads placed neck to neck so that they look in opposite directions. So, too, the severed tail, equally foolish, doubles itself and becomes two useless tails growing end to end.

But isn't this really quite impossible? A head or a tail or even a half-body cannot get food. If it cannot eat it cannot grow; and that is all there is about it. Well, it is true that a fragment cannot eat. But still it can make the new part out of its own tissue. So the animal keeps getting smaller as it becomes more nearly complete, until, when the new part is finished, the whole body may be no more than the tenth part of its proper size. The reconstructed animals are, therefore, forced to begin life over again like young worms. In time, however, they grow up to full size. When a head end makes a new head instead of a tail, or a tail makes a new tail instead of a head, the little creatures must necessarily waste away and die.—From Nature and Science in St. Nicholas.

WATERS OF HAMMAN.

Baths in Galilee Which Have Been Used Since 1350 B. C.

Stooping, I put my hand in the water. It was hot—so hot, in fact, that the thought took hold of me, if I entered that water to bathe, I might peradventure stay there to be boiled.

But knowledge cometh only by experience; so I removed my garments, and dipped an experimental foot in the steaming fluid. It needed some resolution to give it the company of its fellow; and there I sat humbly on the stonework, awaiting courage for further immersion. Gaining confidence by degrees, anon the two English bathers stood upright on the margin of least depth fetching their breath how they could in the clouds of steam. Then my brother, plunging headlong, swam across the bath, and, he returning none the worse (but, indeed, much uplifted in spirit), I found heart to copy his behavior. So that presently the pair of us were swimming in full enjoyment to and fro across the little bath, drawing ejaculations of enthusiasm from the Bedouin bathers, who, it would seem, could not put their arms and legs to such service.

That water, hot from the inside of the earth, had a soft and silky feel though pleasantly sulphurous to the taste and smell. From our new point of view the dome was seen above this disk of water, so that in form the bath (though the present building is only some sevety years old) resembles those of antiquity.

In subsequent soapings and sluicings by a bakshish-expectant attendant, experiences in a Turkish bath found their counterpart. A notable shortcoming of the establishment then revealed itself. It had no dressing room. An apartment of a lower temperature was manifestly essential if the burden of clothes were to be resumed in any comfort, and if one were to confront the cold night air with confidence and closed pores. We had perforce to take the risk—and, indeed, we did not contract the chills we courted.

I have since seen the Hamman in full daylight. You hear the water gurgling within the closed-in remnant of a former bath, and chinks in the ancient masonry give out evil smells from the pent-up sulphur fumes. Several springs gush forth openly beside the shore, the copious supply of hot water being available to all who may desire to profit by its use.

At one of the steaming pools I saw two industrious Arab women washing the bright raiments of those they love; and water at a temperature of 144 degrees Fahr., must be excellent for the purpose. It remains to state that since 1350 B. C. these hot baths have been credited with a great efficacy in rheumatic complaints, though neither my brother nor I was qualified to test any virtue of that sort which may belong to them.

We have made acquaintance with another hot spring of Galilee. In a little boat we sailed northward over the small, calm sea, gliding by Tiberias and the flowery shore that lies beyond. And the day being gloriously warm, we dropped anchor and bathed. This was to have experience of two sorts of water—one luxuriously warm, the other benumbingly cold.

We were but thirty yards from the shore at a point where a hot stream came tumbling over dark stones into the sea. So considerable was the volume of this tributary that its waters were spread far over the surface of Galilee. We swam into patches of warmth, and the water between and underneath felt, by contrast, icy.

VICTORIA AND NIAGARA.

There is No Possibility of Comparison Between the Two.

It was on the 22d of November 1855, that the friendly natives with whom he was traveling brought Dr. David Livingstone for the first time within sight and sound of the wonderful cataract on the Zambesi River now known as the Victoria Falls. Before finding it, the good missionary had journeyed for nearly two years, and from his point of departure at Kuruman, in Cape Colony, had traveled quite 4,000 miles of hitherto unknown country.

Today one takes the train at Cape Town on Wednesday, passes through Kimberley on Thursday, reaches Buluwayo on Saturday, and late in the afternoon of Sunday begins to see in the distance the rising pillar of mist from the great cataract.

The natives call it "Mosi-oa-tuni," meaning "the roaring smoke." Twenty miles away the spray thrown back from the depths of the tremendous cavern into which the river tumbles appears like a column of smoke from a burning village, and during the last mile of the railway journey the roar of the falling water becomes noticeable. Finally, when the edge of the chasm is reached, if the river is in flood, the eye and ear are assailed by a combination of phenomena that probably cannot be duplicated as marvels anywhere else on the planet.

The first question that is asked of an American who has seen this African wonder generally is, "How does it compare with Niagara?" There is no possibility of comparison. The two are as different as day and night. Niagara is a perfect picture in a lovely natural framework. Every point and line and curve of motionless trembling verdure and gliding water is a touch of majestic beauty. Victoria is simply a phenomenon, a terrific gash in the floor of an apparently unending plain, which, as one gazes, simply swallows a river in a manner that produces almost a thrill of horror.—From Theodore F. Van Wagenen's "The Victoria Falls," in the Century.

Whispering She Would Ne'er Consent.

If the crinoline comes, the most courageous of women will have to wear it. She will begin by declaring that nothing will induce her to adopt so meaningless and so hideous a fashion; and for several weeks, no doubt, the knowledge that she possesses greater courage than other persons will sustain her as the ballrooms and reception roms become every day more crowded with silk-covered cages and Venetian-blind cotrivances for the nice disposition of steelribbed skirts. But the weeks will go on until one day, in the utter desolation of her unfashionable prettiness.— It is impossible to contemplate the end without emotion.—London Speaker.

One of the most energetic nest builders is the marsh wren.

We Are Developing A Subtler Form of Crime

By District Attorney Jerome, of New York.

WE are developing in this present day a subtler form of crime than any our fathers knew. In the olden days criminals moved along the line of knock-down-and-take. Nowadays robbery has a more commercial aspect. This change is not being met by a corresponding development of laws to punish commercial crime. England and France have done better than we. Here a civil suit is often the only remedy—an inadequate remedy.

The trouble is that the moral sense of most people is governed by statute books. Thousands of us are blind on our moral side. Too many do not know that they are doing an immoral thing until it is pointed out to them as a felony on the statute books. Let us consider an instance. The eminent gentlemen who have been concerned in the Equitable Life Assurance matter have done things which are not described in section 528 of the penal code as larceny in law, but in a moral sense I defy you to distinguish some of the acts of these gentlemen from the crimes named in that statute.

Since the Equitable matter has arisen I have been receiving letters every morning, from people who cannot see the difference between the acts of these eminent gentlemen in the Equitable directorate and the confidence games played by men like Larry Summerfield, whom I recently sent to Sing Sing. I cannot make these people understand the difference. They read in the newspapers of "high finance," and they say, "Good gracious! That's not finance; that's stealing!" Then they lose their tempers and write to me letters like this:

"What's the matter with you? We voted for you as an honest man. Why don't you put some of these fellows in jail? You put Larry Summerfield away. Why don't you do something to these big crooks?" I can't make my correspondents understand that these men are just outside the criminal statutes, though their morals are really no better than those of the Bunco steerer Summerfield.

I met Larry in a restaurant just before he was tried the last time. He had a talk with me and said frankly enough that he didn't see why he had been indicted, and didn't believe that he could be punished, because, he said, he had the best legal advice in New York, and had always kept inside of it. The "high finance" people will tell you the same thing. They are in the same business as Summerfield, selling things of no value to suckers.

The Best Kind of Husband

By Beatrice Fairfax.

THE best kind of man, the one who makes the best husband and father, is the normal, wholesome, everyday man.

He has no morbid ideas about woman. He judges her by the same healthy minded standard as he judges all else.

The morbid, introspective man will always command a certain amount of interest from women.

They do not understand him, and therefore feel that he must be worth investigating.

As a rule he is not.

He is pessimistic, self-centred and much given to philosophizing on subjects which he knows little or nothing about.

His admirers are chiefly young girls.

Men have not much use for him, his business judgment is not very reliable and he is not manly and jolly enough to be companionable.

His mind grows so distorted by his queer, morbid views on himself, women, sentiment and the world in general that he is quite likely to end as a raving maniac in a lunatic asylum.

The great trouble of it is that he is apt to make an impression on a girl through arousing their sympathies.

Let a woman feel sorry for a man and there is no knowing to what length her foolishness may carry her.

He tells her that she is the only one who understands him, that all the world is against him, that her sympathy is so sweet, etc.

She soon grows to think that nothing could be more beautiful than devoting her life to brightening the dark existence of this blighted being.

She thinks she has a mission, and once a woman gets that into her head angels, ministers and potentates cannot move her.

What I would like to impress on the girls is the fact that while the matter-of-fact men may not seem quite so romantic they make ten times better husbands than the morbid ones.

The best man to marry is the man who is doing his everyday work to the best of his ability.

He is a rock of strength on which to rely. He looks after his business, his wife and his family as well as he knows how.

He is the man who is making this country what it is.

He is not a hero of romance, he is just a strong, steady, everyday specimen of man.

He is manly, girls, and that means a great deal.

The pessimistic, morbid man is not manly, and take my word for it, you will be far happier woman with the former than the latter.

Men are not gods, you know, and if they were we'd grow very tired of them.

Don't jump to the conclusion that because a man is different from others men he is clever or wonderful in any way.

And when he talks epigrammatically about woman don't imagine that he understands her.

A man of this type is interesting enough to talk to occasionally, but not to marry, no.

Marry the man that you understand and that understands you.

Then you'll both be happy.—New York Journal.

The Social Philadelphia.

From the American Review of Reviews.

THERE is only one modern flat-house in Philadelphia, perhaps half a-dozen modern hotels, and no tenements such as all other cities have by the acre. There is no large proletariat in the city and such as exists is due to the influx of derelicts from abroad. Natives rule the Philadelphian is well employed the year round.

There are about 300,000 residences in the city—more than in Greater New York and London combined—— and most of them are owned by the people who live in them. Almost 200,000 of them are two story houses, with six or seven room and a bath, generally a sizeable yard, and in the newer portions a little front yard and a porch.

Mechanics buy these houses through the building associations and mortgages from the trust companies. Such houses cost from $2,000 to $4,000 and the latter would seem like mansions to many New Yorkers. They rent from $12 to $25 a month, with an average of about $16.

Philadelphians, as a rule, are sober and hard-working men with families. When a man comes home from work it is not necessary to fly to the nearest saloon to get a comfortable place to sit. He has his little parlor, his back yard or his front step. There are hundreds of miles of streets to be seen on a summer night in Philadelphia where the father and mother sit on the porch steps and enjoy the sports of the children in the street. Because the home life is largely developed, and because the city is composed almost exclusively of native Americans and Germans, the women have a much wider influence in Philadelphia than anywhere else in America, and they exercise it.—American Review of Reviews.

Profits of the Dump.

"I get," said a Philadelphia dump boss, "5 a week, free rent, and the disposal of any dump of value.

"Tin cans, for instance, belong to me if they are dumped here, and I make a pretty penny out of them. They are turned, you know, into tin soldiers and so forth.

"Corks are another perquisite of mine. Many and many an old broken bottle on this dump had a good cork in it. I get eight cents a pound for all the corks I find.

"Old shoes are never too old to be sold. They have always one good piece—the piece over the instep—that can be used again. The smaller pieces of good leather cut out of them are made into purses and wristlets.

"Eggshells also have value. Something like 1,000,000 pounds of eggshells are used every year in the manufacture of kid gloves and print calicoes.

"Do you see those eighteen barrels behind there? Well, each of those barrels contains its own variety of assorted marketable dumpage. Each will sell, when filled, at a good price. There are, I believe, fifty-seven varieties of marketable dumpage, and some dumps yield all the variety. Mine yields twenty-seven."—Philadelphia Press.

One of the Stages.

Over in New Hope, Ark., last week the farmers of Green County held a meeting of the Educational and Co-operative Association for the purpose of electing delegates to the State convention, to be held in Hot Springs. Among the prominent men in attendance was General N. Y. Crawley, of Independence, who is making the race for railroad commissioner. While the session of farmers was under way a New Hope maid, with musical talent in the bud, opened up a piano and, by the way, and began that process known as cultivating the voice.

"For goodness sake," exclaimed General Crawley, "what noise is that?"

"Gently, General," explained Mr. Burton, of Caddo Township, who had just been elected one of the delegates. "That noise is from a young lady who is having her voice cultivated."

"Cultivated, huh," said the General, "then it is evident the process of cultivation has reached the harvest stage."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

A MAMMOTH SQUASH.

We feel that the Yankees are usually boastful of having about the largest of everything, but they are over the fact that it remained for William Warnock, of Goderich, Ont., to raise the largest squash known. This mammoth squash weighed 403 pounds, and, for all Mr. Warnock had so easily raised several wonders, it beat his record by seven and a half pounds. In raising squashes Mr. Warnock uses common sense. He does not treat them as babies and feed them milk and other things, but he believes that the thing that will increase the size

THE LARGEST SQUASH. A mammoth vegetable was grown on weighed 403

The fruit must come through the channels of nature out of the vine, and the vine must get its support from the natural roots. Thus squash raising is much like the development of a child. To make a noble man or woman, the education must be watched. It must be thoroughly substantial in every way. If a mistake has been made, followed by a stunting or false growth, no amount of artificial feeding or building up will equal the work of nature. Mr. Mashes and children must be fed from the "roots," so to speak.—Book Lovers' Magazine.

A MECHANICAL DEER.

Makes Through the Woods to Be Shot at by Sportsmen.

Even in this age of extravagant mechanical contrivances it is doubtful whether any toy has been constructed unique and costly as that which James Mackay recently has had installed on his estate at Harbor Hill, Roslyn, L. I. Shooting galleries

MR. MACKAY'S MECHANICAL DEER.

PRESIDENT CAST

FEDERAL PALACE.

Fitzhugh Lee's Eulogy of Lincoln.

General Fitzhugh Lee's eulogistic references to Lincoln in his recent address before the joint session of the New York Legislature are another evidence that the passions and prejudices of the Civil War are forever buried in the United States. No more striking tribute was ever paid to the martyr President than was passed upon him this former prominent Confederate officer. It recalls the eulogy paid to Lincoln, just after his death by Sen-

Developing er Form of Crime

...ney Jerome, of New York.

...ern day a subtler form of crime ...
... modern days criminals moved ...
... Nowadays robbery has a ...
... not being met by a ...
... to launch commercial ...
... does better than we. Here a ...
... an inadequate remedy. ...
... of most people is governed by ...
... lost on our moral side. Too many ...
... moral thing until it is pointed out ...
... us consider an instance. The ...
... rol in the Equitable Life Assurance ...
... scribed in section 528 of the ...
... dy you to distinguish some ...
... named in that statute.

... been receiving letters ...
... difference between the acts of ...
... deceitful and the confidence game ...
... whom I recently sent to Sing Sing ...
... the difference. They read in ...
... say, "Good gracious! That's not ...
... their tempers and write to me ...

... ked for you as an honest man. ...
... on? You put Larry Summerfield ...
... the crooks?" I can't make my ...
... are put outside the criminal statute ...
... than those of the bunco steerer ...

... he was tried the last time. He ...
... that he didn't see why he had ...
... ld be punished, because, he said, ...
... had always kept inside of it. ...
... ...ething. They are in the same ...
... to success.

ind of Husband

...rdian.

... The best husband ...
... ...ery man.
... ...ost women. He judges her ...
... he judges all else.
... ...ll obey a command a certain ...
... ...and the reform feel that he must ...
... ...to philosophizing on subjects ...
... ...judgment is not very reliable ...
... ...on himself, women ...
... ...ly to end as a suicide ...
... ...is not to make an impression on girls ...
... ...no knowing to what length ...
... ...understands him, that all the ...
... ...more beautiful than devotion ...
... ...of this blighted being. ...
... ...a woman gets that into her head ...
... The fact that while the plain ...
... romantic they make ten times better ...
... ...is doing his everyday work to the ...
... ...rely. He looks after his business, ...
... ...bow. ...
... ...country what it is. ...
... ...just a strong, steady, everyday splendid ...
... ...a great deal. ...
... ...not manly, and take my word for it, you ...
... ...than the latter. ...
... ...they were we'd grow very tired of them ...
... ...because a man is different from other ...
... ...about woman don't imagine that I ...
... ...enough to talk to occasionally, but ...
... ...that understands you. ...
... ...Journal.

hiladelphia.

...m Review of Reviews.

... ...house in Philadelphia, perhaps ...
... ...tenements such as all other cities ...
... ...is no large proletariat in the city. ...
... ...the influx of derelicts from abroad. ...
... ...employed the year round. ...
... ...residences in the city—more than ...
... ...London combined—— and most of them ...
... ...and a bath, generally a sizeable back ...
... ...front yard and a porch. ...
... ...the building associations and mortgage ...
... ...houses cost from $2,000 to $4,000 apiece ...
... ...to many New Yorkers. They rent ...
... ...of about $16. ...
... ...and hard working men with families ...
... ...it is not necessary to fly to the near ...
... ...He has his little parlor, his back yard ...
... ...miles of streets to be seen on a ...
... ...father and mother sit on the porch ...
... ...on the street. Because the home is ...
... ...is conducted almost exclusively ...
... ...have a much wider influence ...
... ...and they exercise it.—American ...

... ...some dumps yield all the varieties ...
... ...Mine yields twenty-seven."—Philadelphia Press.

One of the Stages.

Over in New Hope, Ark., last week ... the farmers of Green County held a meeting of the Educational and Co-operative Association for the purpose of electing delegates to the State convention, to be held in Hot Springs. Among the prominent men in attendance was General N. Y. Crawley, of Independence, who is making the race for railroad commissioner. While the session of farmers was under way a New Hope maid, with musical talent in the bud, opened up a piano across the way, and began that process known as cultivating the voice.

"For goodness sake," exclaimed General Crawley, "what noise is that?"

"Gently, General," explained Will Burton, of Caddo Township, who has just been elected one of the delegates, "That noise is from a young lady who is having her voice cultivated."

"Cultivated, huh," said the General, "then it is evident the process of cultivation has reached the harrow stage."—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

A MAMMOTH SQUASH.

...ans feel that the Yankees are ...
...ally boastful of having about ...
...est of everything, but they ...
...ve the fact that it remained ...
... Warnock, of Goderich, ...
... the largest squash ...
... mammoth squash ...
...ario, and, for all Mr. ...
... easily raised several ...
... beat his record by ...
... pounds. In raising ...
... Mr. Warnock uses com- ...
... does not treat them ...
... feed them milk and ...
... he believes that the ...
... will increase the size ...

THE LARGEST SQUASH EVER GROWN.

...vegetable was grown on a farm in Ontario, Canada, and weighed 403 pounds.

...come through the ...
...stature out of the vine, and ...
...must get its support from the ...
...roots. This squash raising is ...
...development of a child. ...
...like a boy or girl, must be watched. It must ...
...substantial in every way. ...
...mistake has been made, fol- ...
...lowing a stunting of false growth. ...
...work of nature. ...
...feeding or build- ...
...children must be fed ...
...so to speak.—Book-Magazine.

A MECHANICAL DEER.

Is Through the Woods to Be Shot at by Sportsmen.

...of extravagant mo- ...
... it is doubtful ...
... has been constructed ...

A NEW MECHANICAL DEER.

...as costly as that which ...
... recently has had in- ...
... at Harbor Hill, ... Shooting galleries ...
... at which rabbits, pigs and lions bob up and disappear in front of a screen a dozen feet away to prompt and test the aim of sportsmen, says the New York Press, have long been familiar to visitors to Coney Island and other similar resorts. Clarence Mackay has constructed, in the wildest part of his big estate, a regular railway to furnish him the same sport on a scale and in a manner that is absolutely true to nature.

The railway, which runs in an irregular ellipse, and is operated by electricity, is a mile long and goes winding in and out among the woods and broken ground with all the seeming irresponsibility of a wild animal. The wild animal is provided in the shape of a life-size deer, mounted on a small bogie truck. At a speed which can be regulated at any pace up to ten or twelve miles an hour the deer is carried through the woods, and as it appears at the different openings that have been among the trees along the route of the railway Mr. Mackay and his sporting friends get a chance for just such a quick shot as the hunter in the Maine woods has to rely on to fill his bag.

At the end of the run the truck passes over an automatic switch which shuts off the current, and the deer comes to a standstill in a sheltered pit, where a marker is posted. He notes the places where the deer has been hit, telephones, by means of a special wire laid down for the purpose, the results of his aim to the man with the gun, and then, as soon as he has pasted a piece of canvas or brown paper over the wounds that have been made, is ready to cart the deer off again to run the gantlet of the marksmen a second or a third time.

The deer itself is made and mounted with such skill that anyone not in the secret inevitably would believe it was a real live animal. The illusion is helped by the fact that it never comes nearer the guns than 100 yards, and not only does it pass so quickly that it is impossible to get more than a hurried glance at it, but by an ingenious mechanism the motions of a galloping deer are reproduced exactly.

At present Mr. Mackay has only the single "deer" on his estate, but with the railroad in full working order he can put on as many more as he likes and have deer or tiger, buffalo or moose rushing in and out of range as fast as bearers can load the guns.—Philadelphia Record.

An official map of Paris on a large scale has just been finished. It is twenty-five yards long and nearly twenty yards wide.

PRESIDENT CASTRO'S PALACE.

FEDERAL PALACE, CARACAS, VENEZUELA.

Lee's Eulogy of Lincoln.

...ough Lee's eulogistic re- ...
... Lincoln in his recent ad- ...
... joint session of the ...
... Legislature are another evi- ...
... passions and prejudices ...
... War are forever buried ...
... States. No more strik- ...
... was ever paid to the martyr ...
... was passed upon him ...
... eminent Confederate ...
It recalls the eulogy paid to ... just after his death by Senator Lamar, also a distinguished adherent of "the lost cause." Lee's eulogy of Lincoln was the last public utterance of one of the bravest soldiers of the South, and, like the dying words of General Grant on Mount McGregor, it was an eloquent plea for perpetual peace.—Leslie's Weekly.

Bleeding at the nose, a doctor has discovered, can be quickly stopped by plunging the feet and hands in water as hot as can be endured.

Something of a Contrast.

Dr. Parkhurst will preach only a few more sermons in his famous old church in Madison Square. It is likely that the new place across the street will be completed before the snow flies, and then the gaunt old brownstone pile will be pulled down to make room for the tallest inhabited structure in the world—the new tower of the Metropolitan Life Insurance building. Here will be a characteristic contrast of the newer New York. The church now building for the Parkhurst congregation is a squat, low-roofed affair which for all that its architecture signifies might be a theater or an eye and ear infirmary. Directly across the street will be the great temple of Mammon, fully five time as high as the church. Time was, and not so very long ago, either, when the church steeples thrust themselves far above the commercial sky-line, but this is so no longer. Twenty years hence, when the spire of the new cathedral of St. John the Divine begins to take shape, it will probably be the only acute angle visible from the harbor of New York.

Irish Language.

Among the many languages that exist today is the Gaelic or Irish language, a tongue which belongs to what is technically called the Celtic branch of the Indo-European family of languages; which has monuments going back to an extraordinarily early period; which has been called more flexible than the Greek, more subtle than the French, more comprehensive than the German and yet more concise than the ancient Hebrew, and which, with its wonderfully copious literature, is without doubt one of the greatest glories of Ireland. The Irish language has this peculiarity, that amid the tribulation and suffering and tyranny which have made up the history of the race its language still remains intact. There is perhaps, besides the Irish, only one other race which has, through chance and change, through chaos and circumstances, preserved intact its national language—that is the Hebrew race.

Railways of the United States employ an army of 1,500,000 men.

FITS permanently cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free Dr. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

There are in Germany twenty-one universities.

Ladies Can Wear Shoes

One size smaller after using Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder. It makes tight or new shoes easy. Cures swollen, hot, sweating, aching feet, ingrowing nails, corns and bunions. At all druggists and shoe stores, 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Trial package FREE by mail. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N.Y.

Russia has eighty-six general holidays in a year.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle

Winnipeg, Manitoba, is said to be the fastest growing city in the world.

Piso's Cure for Consumption has no equal for coughs and colds.—JOHN F. BOYER, Trinity Springs, Ind., Feb. 15, 1900.

The production of quicksilver in 1904 is estimated at 2591 tons.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SORE

Body Raw With Humor—Caused Untold Agony—Doctor Did No Good—Mother Discouraged—Cuticura Cured at Once.

"My child was a very delicate baby. A terrible sore and humor broke out on his body, looking like raw flesh, and causing the child untold agony. My physician prescribed various remedies, none of which helped at all. I became discouraged and took the matter into my own hands, and tried Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment with almost immediate success. Before the second week had passed the soreness was gone, not leaving a trace of anything. Mrs. Jeannette H. Block, 281 Rosedale St., Rochester, N. Y."

There were 778,339 paupers in England and Wales at the end of April. This is the highest April total since 1872. Over 245,000 were in workhouses, the greatest number since 1865. London's paupers number 119,375, or one out of every forty inhabitants.

A statuette of Isis, declared to be of ancient Egyptian origin, has been found buried under the foundation of the Paris bastile.

Greenland now has nearly 12,000 inhabitants.

FREE TO OUR READERS.

Botanic Blood Balm for the Blood.

If you suffer from ulcers, eczema, scrofula, blood poison, cancer, eating sores, itching skin, pimples, boils, bone pains, swellings, rheumatism, catarrh, or any blood or skin disease, we advise you to take Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B). Especially recommended for old, obstinate, deep-seated cases, cures where all else fails, heals every sore, makes the blood pure and rich, gives the skin the rich glow of health. Druggists, $1 per large bottle, 3 bottles $2.50, 6 bottles $5.00, express prepaid. Sample sent free by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter. Medicine sent at once, prepaid.

Valuable Papal Crowns.

In the pope's treasure house are two crowns which are valued at $2,500,000. One of them was the gift of Napoleon to Pius VII. and contains the largest emerald in the world. The other, the gift of Queen Isabella of Spain to Pius IX., weighs three pounds and is worth $1,000,000.

Cure For The Blues

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts" for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart-beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her menstrual period she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up: you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

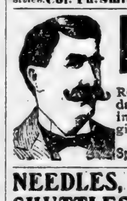
Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, 'the blues,' nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my younger days has returned, and I do not suffer any longer with despondency, as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.

There is absolutely no other school for Women and Girls in the South, if anywhere, offering so extensive a curriculum: thus, the greatest benefits for the smallest outlay. Most approved modern improvements—Electric Lights, Hot Water heating, Complete outfit of Bath-rooms, etc., etc. Grounds, of forty acres, by universal consensus, the most uniquely beautiful School Grounds in America. Offers to the ambitious thorough preparation for the great universities. Col. Th. Smith, A. M., Pres. [Alum. Univ. Va.]



Dropsy CURED Gives Quick Relief.

Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free Catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO., 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir.

Is a sure cure for all LIVER TROUBLES and a preventive of TYPHOID and other fevers.

Good for { Grandparent / Parent / Baby

Ask Your Neighbor

50c. and $1.00 per bottle at Drug Stores.

TRADE MARK. Concentrated

Crab Orchard WATER

Nature's Great Remedy

—FOR—

DYSPEPSIA SICK HEADACHE CONSTIPATION

Stimulates the Liver, regulates the Bowels and keeps the entire system in a healthy condition.

A Natural Product with a record of a Century. If afflicted try it.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

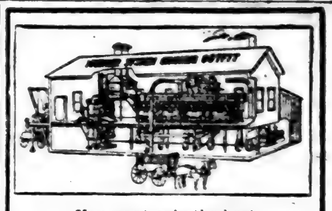
CRAB ORCHARD WATER CO., LOUISVILLE, KY.

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.

NEW ORLEANS.

Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address

THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.



You want only the best

Cotton Gin Machinery

Ask any experienced Ginner about

Pratt, Eagle, Smith Winship, Munger

We would like to show you what thousands of life long customers say. Write for catalog and testimonial booklet.

Continental Gin Co

Charlotte, N. C., Atlanta, Ga. Birmingham, Ala. Memphis, Tenn., Dallas, Tex.

OUR SPECIALTY

3——4——5

Three two dollar shirts for five dollars.

MADE TO YOUR MEASURE.

Write for samples and measurement blanks.

MODEL SHIRT CO.

Dept. S. Indianapolis, Ind.

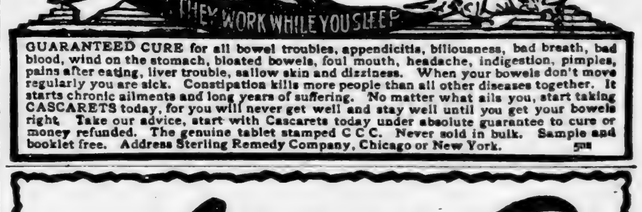
WANTED— Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not living with any tribe, (2) of men who were drafted in Kentucky, (3) of mothers of soldiers who have been denied pension on account of their remarriage, (4) of men who served in the Federal army, or (5) the nearest kin of such soldiers or sailors, now deceased.

NATHAN BICKFORD, Attorney, Washington, D. C.

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC



GUARANTEED CURE for all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, bloated bowels, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow skin and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. It starts chronic ailments and long years of suffering. No matter what ails you, start taking CASCARETS today, for you will never get well and stay well until you get your bowels right. Take our advice, start with Cascarets today under absolute guarantee to cure or money refunded. The genuine tablet stamped C C C. Never sold in bulk. Sample and booklet free. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York. 502

Libby's Natural Flavor Food Products

Don't Be Without Them In Your Home They Are Always Ready to Serve

Lunch Tongues — Veal Loaf
Boneless Chicken — Dried Beef
Brisket Beef — Soups
Jellied Hocks — Baked Beans

Ask Your Grocer

The Booklet "How to Make Good Things to Eat" sent free.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

CURES INDIGESTION

Checkers Saves Days of Misery

$1.00 everywhere. Sample bottle free. Checkers Medicine Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Facts Are Stubborn Things

Uniform excellent quality for over a quarter of a century has steadily increased the sales of LION COFFEE, The leader of all package coffees.

Lion Coffee

is now used in millions of homes. Such popular success speaks for itself. It is a positive proof that LION COFFEE has the Confidence of the people.

The uniform quality of LION COFFEE survives all opposition.

LION COFFEE keeps its old friends and makes new ones every day.

LION COFFEE has even more than its Strength, Flavor and Quality to commend it. On arrival from the plantation, it is carefully roasted at our factories and securely packed in 1 lb. sealed packages, and not opened again until needed for use in the home. This precludes the possibility of adulteration or contact with germs, dirt, dust, insects or unclean hands. The absolute purity of LION COFFEE is therefore guaranteed to the consumer.

Sold only in 1 lb. packages. Lion-head on every package. Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Avery & Company

SUCCESSORS TO AVERY & McMILLAN,

51-53 South Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga.

—ALL KINDS OF—

MACHINERY

Reliable Frick Engines, Boilers, all Sizes. Wheat Separators.

BEST IMPROVED SAW MILL ON EARTH.

Large Engines and Boilers supplied promptly. Shingle Mills, Corn Mills, Circular Saws, Saw Teeth, Patent Dogs, Steam Governors. Full line Engines & Mill Supplies. Send for free Catalogue.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

TULANE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA.

Its advantages for practical instruction, both in ample laboratories and abundant hospital materials are unequalled. Free access is given to the great Charity Hospital with 600 beds and 20,000 patients annually. Special instruction is given daily at the bedside of the sick. The next session begins October 19th, 1905. For catalogue and information address

PROF. S. E. CHAILLE, M. D., Dean, P. O. Drawer 261. NEW ORLEANS, LA.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

THE NORTH SEA.

The voice of the North Sea calleth,
Solemn and full and slow:
"Come down to my icy caverns,
My grottoes and deeps below.
I will lay my head on your forehead
And on your fevered breast
You shall sleep serene and quiet
No dream shall haunt your rest.

"I saw the boat of the Norseman
Afloat in the silent night,
I marked in the danger calmness,
In the eye undaunted light.
'Come down!' I cried. 'We are kindred.
Thou [illegible]
The [illegible]
[illegible]

"What is [illegible]
[illegible]
'How beats my heart for bishers,
The beers of ocean cherish!'
The cold it has kept these waters
As pure as falling snow
Come hither, intrepid seamen!'
Behold, they lie below.

"No hark I am for spices,
Upon my diadem
In filagree or rose I wear
The midnight sun for a gem.
The Orkneys North has fingers
That reach into my tide.
Oh, not for balmy pleasure
He clutches deep and wide.

"Ho, ye who fear not anguish,
Ye souls of steel, come forth!
As Jacob fought with the angel,
Come struggle with the North!
Stand face to face with trouble
And meet death with a shout,
The gale that dims your courage
Shall blow the North Star out!"

—Youth's Companion.

IRENE'S LOVER

By MRS. NELLIE FISHER.

There had been a large embezzlement in the great banking house of Blaisdel & Rogers, and Blaisdel was furious.

Two weeks before, Harry Traverse, the tall, gentlemanly manager, had tendered his resignation, stating as a reason his rapidly failing health; and, looking in his pale face, no one doubted his statement.

Blaisdel was just starting on a pleasure trip with his wife and daughter, but this affair would keep him at home. He insisted on their going without him, however, as a party of friends went the same route in a few days.

John Dalton, the head clerk, was installed in Traverse's place; he was an inferior person in stature, with something disagreeable lurking in his restless, gray eyes.

So thought pretty Irene Blaisdel, for, although only a clerk, he was often invited to accompany Traverse to the hospitable homes of his employers, the latter being something of a favorite, especially at Blaisdel's.

His family had been gone two weeks, when Blaisdel sat, in the gray dawn of morning, poring over the files of half a dozen account books, with all sorts of papers in disorderly confusion about his desk.

There was an air of neglect about his person, like the appearance of a man who has been up all night, and his face wore a puzzled expression, as he shut the cover with a bang over the dancing figures, and gave the bell a pull that brought a sleepy-looking office boy to the door in some trepidation.

It was as much as a clerk's place was worth to offend Blaisdel, and somebody had offended him with a vengeance. Who it was, he hadn't a doubt, and sent posthaste for Rogers.

Some fifteen minutes later that gentleman came puffing into the office, very red in the face from the extra exertion he had found it necessary to make, his usually placid temper somewhat ruffled, as he inquired:

"What's up now?"

"Enough, I should think!" was the answer. "Look at these books! That rascal, Traverse, has robbed us out of ten thousand dollars, and been gone these two weeks! We deserve to lose every dollar, as a penalty for our carelessness and neglect!"

"Traverse!" exclaimed Rogers, incredulously.

But there it was; no one else had access to the books, and it had all been done a few days before he left.

After a brief consultation, Detective Farley was sent for, matters explained, and, with a picture Blaisdel had no compunction in taking from his daughter's album, Farley was set to work to trace the guilty man.

A gay party of ladies and gentlemen were enjoying the grand scenery and bracing air in a tidy looking camp on the shores of Lake Champlain. Some were playing croquet, others strolled leisurely away, exploring the wonders along the shore, and the green boughs of the cool, dark woods.

Irene Blaisdel sat on a huge, rocky bowlder, watching the restless water at her feet, and the towering outlines of the Adirondacks, which rose so abruptly from the other shore of the lake. Several boats were moored near her, and, being a good rower, she did not hesitate to appropriate one of them to her own use, and was soon out on the broad lake.

The sky was partially overcast, but Irene apprehended no danger, continuing to row from camp, until the freshening breeze warned her to return. The sky grew darker, and the waves were crested with foam, but not until the roll of distant thunder sounded on her ears did she fully realize her danger; and, although she was a brave girl, her cheek was blanched with a deadly pallor as she bent to the oars, sending the frail boat through the foaming waters with a speed she would have been incapable of in calmer moments.

The thunder became almost one incessant roar, and flash after flash lit up the dark sky and seething waste of waters, where tossed a frail boat, with its pale, lone occupant. Other boats were putting out, manned by strong, willing hands, but one from a nearer point than her friends was fast nearing the exhausted girl. The rain poured down in torrents, and a sudden terrific gust caught the frail craft, and the next flash of lightning revealed a golden head in the mad waters; but a strong arm reached out, grasping the weary, struggling form, and Irene was saved.

She gave one glad cry of "Harry, it is you!" as her eyes fell on his face; then the tired head sank on his breast in perfect content, while he bent every energy to gain a landing place with his precious burden.

When, at last, the boat touched the land, and they looked shudderingly back, it seemed to them no living thing could breast those mad waters for a moment, and the rascal who could appropriate another man's funds without a compunction drew the pale, drenched girl down beneath the protecting boughs of a friendly tree, and offered a fervent prayer of thanksgiving to Him who had saved them both from a grave in the waters.

They proceeded slowly toward camp, and in that walk through the woods, with the howling storm all about them, these two came to a perfect understanding. He confessed to having followed her, and taking up his abode at a hotel near where they were encamped.

The joy of Mrs. Blaisdel, as her darling was restored to her, can be imagined. Traverse was the hero of the hour, but he declined the loan of a dry suit, hurrying back to his room at the hotel.

The next morning, Irene awoke with an aching head, but her heart was light with a great happiness, and she was out on the shore at an early hour. Traverse, who came to inquire after the girl he had saved, found her there, and together they strolled away from observation, to talk over their newfound happiness.

The week which followed was one of such quiet content to the lovers that the awakening, which came so abruptly, seemed too cruel and pitiless to be true. They had just returned from a row on the lake, one lovely afternoon, when a horseman rode into camp, inquiring for Traverse, who instantly recognized Farley, and went forward to meet him. That officer explained, in a low tone, his business, with as few words as possible.

Traverse was, for a moment, dumb with amazement.

"There is some terrible mistake here! I never can submit to those!" he added, quickly, with a look of pain on his face, as Farley produced a pair of handcuffs. "I pledge you my honor——"

And then he remembered how little he had left now.

Farley came to his relief:

"If you will come with me quietly, I will not put them on; but I must do my duty, painful as it may be. And, though this is a trifle out of my line, I came myself, instead of sending a subordinate, to spare you as much as possible."

Traverse thanked him, and obtained leave to bid Irene good-by.

This explanation and leave-taking was a very painful affair, and Irene sat in bewilderment long after he was gone, trying to think what it was best to do, for she did not for an instant believe him guilty. Then, at last, she made up her mind. She sought out Mrs. Blaisdel, whose face still bore traces of tears, and told her of her trouble, and her love for this young man.

The two ladies left camp next day, en route for home, where they arrived, dusty and tired, in the gray dawn of the next morning, surprising Mr. Blaisdel out of his self-control.

Irene was closeted with him a long time. Together they went over the books, and the result was a message to Dalton, whose face grew ghastly, and who dropped the pen he was holding, when the messenger requested him to come immediately to Blaisdel's private office. He was charged point-blank with the fraud, and, thinking himself found out, confessed his guilt, even to the purloining of the office keys from Traverse.

That young gentleman was liberated, and in the autumn there was a quiet wedding, to which a few particular friends were invited, and Traverse became the husband of the girl he had saved, and a partner in the banking house of Blaisdel & Rogers.—New York Weekly.

The Race He Won.

In the old whaling days a New Bedford captain fell in with a lot of his "townies" in the Pacific, says the Chicago Record-Herald, and after a landing for water on the coast of South America, began a boat-race off shore toward the ships. The old skipper kept muttering to his crew to take it easy. The others jeered him as he fell behind, but he took it cheerfully.

"The race I'm after is the race home," he said. He pointed to a little bight in the rocks, into which the crew could just see.

"Ever see that rock in there before?" he asked. "No, I guess not. That's a cow whale and her calf up there on the shore. It's her nursery."

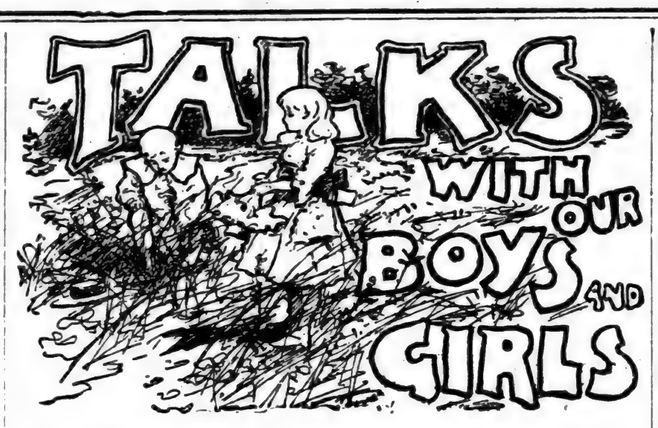
When the others were far enough away to give him a clear field he made for the shore. He got the cow and the calf. The others said very little about the race he did not win, for he was the first man back to New Bedford.

It Often Happens.

We miss to-day's opportunities because our eyes are swollen with tears shed over yesterday's failure.

We see very little good in life because we are always looking for the worst of it.

We fail to see our neighbor's virtues because we spend our time searching out his faults.—Detroit Free Press.



LITTLE WINKIE.

When Winkie died there was sincere mourning in the family of which he was a valued member. Winkie was a marmoset, a creature bearing about the same relation to a monkey that a mouse does to a rat. He was born in the forests of Central Brazil, and when a few weeks old he fell out of his tree home and was picked up by some men who wander through the woods and wild places looking for tiny monkeys that fall to the ground. He was then packed in a basket with a dozen other monkeys, and after a long journey to the coast he was bought by a man who was coming up from Brazil early last summer and wanted to take a present to his wife. He became a great pet, with all sorts of cunning tricks and ways, and the end of his brief life was a real tragedy in the annals of the family.

Winkie looked like a little gray squirrel with an old man's face. His eyes were hazel, and very expressive, and he was prettily marked with black. His body was five inches long, and his tail was exactly thirteen inches from where it began to where it ended. And what a beautiful tail it was. Fine and plumy, yet as bushy as a squirrel's. And how much attention Winkie bestowed on it! A dozen times a day he would comb it with his little fingers, carefully picking off the tiniest speck of dirt or dust, and when he accidently whisked it into his drinking cup, or in a cup of hot tea, he would chatter and scold and brush and comb until the precious appendage was in perfect order again.

Marmosets are much better behaved and nicer than monkeys. Winkie was a little gentleman, and his table manners were worthy of imitation by grown-ups, as well as by children. When his cup and plate were filled and put before him, he would fill both hands, eating first from one, then from the other, and no matter how hungry he was or what delicacy was offered, he would touch nothing more until he had emptied his hands. He ate almost everything the family did, but dearly loved a chicken bone and sweets.

The only bad habit Winkie had was that of occasionally nipping his master or mistress with his sharp little teeth. It took a good many little raps on his head to make him understand that he was doing wrong. Sometimes he would cry, and the tears would run down his cheeks, just like a child's would. Then he would rub his head and pout, and run off and hide.

He loved to get on something high when his mistress was dressing her hair, and make a spring to the top of her head. He also delighted in climbing stealthily up the back of her chair and slyly picking out her hairpins, so that the first thing she knew her hair would come tumbling down.

Sometimes he was allowed on the writing table, and it puzzled him greatly to see the black marks appear on the paper. After watching the movements of the pen for some time, he took hold of it, turned it over, looked into the inkstand, and then at the paper, and finally he began to chatter as if trying to explain that at last he understood all about it.

He was also greatly puzzled by the fact that the different members of the family had differently colored hair. He admired his master's fair hair, and would take a curl in his hand, separate it hair by hair, and pat his cheek, as if in approval.

He readily obeyed his master, but was inclined to resent the authority of his mistress once in a while. He would hurry to her from any part of the room, however, if she put her finger to her lips, or moved them as if eating.

Often his master would put him in his pocket and take him out for a walk. He did not like crowds and the noises of the street frightened him, but when curiosity got the better of fear he would come to the edge of the pocket and peer out with his bright little eyes. Occasionally he would climb to his master's shoulder to gaze at the things in a store window, but advances from a stranger made him scurry back to cover. Yet he liked company, and loved to be petted.

Winkie was taught to perform many amusing tricks and others he picked up for himself. He could jump a rope, turn somersaults and play "tag" and "hide and seek." He whistled beautifully a low, sweet, clear whistle, like a bird's, and it was in this way that he let the family know when he wanted to get out of his basket.

Marmosets are delicate animals, so when the cold weather came Winkie found it very trying. No amount of bedding would keep him warm, and soon he took such a cold that one morning he was found dead in his basket. His poor little body was put into a box and buried in the garden, and somehow no one has felt inclined to get another pet to take his place.—New York Tribune.

HOMES FOR HORSES.

A home of rest for horses—that is what some good people of Philadelphia are planning to establish at Devon soon. Probably they got their idea from the Horses' Home, in London, which has been in existence many years. Such a good work it is doing! For it takes care, for a very small fee or for nothing, of horses that are failing, not from age, but from continuous work, sickness or accidental causes, and are likely to be benefitted by a few weeks' rest and change. A little timely care of this kind will enable many failing horses to do further work with comfort for years, and save their hard-working owners the expense of purchasing others.

The horse, after passing examination by one of the veterinary surgeons of the home, is admitted for half a crown (do you know how much that is?) per week. In many cases the animal is received free of charge. And often, when a horse is found incapable of further work, his owner is persuaded to let him be mercifully put to death. To the small cab owners, laundrymen, costers and dawkers the home is a very great benefit.

The visitor to the Home of Rest for Horses takes the Great Western Railway from Paddington, London, and has a short ride to Acton station, not far from the home. The road leads through a pleasant lane under green shady trees to the horses' haven, which is well named "Home of Rest." The two rows of "loose boxes" facing the sun, with the big pasture fields stretching away on all sides, the sweet-scented hayricks and tall trees, which wave slowly in the soft summer breeze, all picture rest and contentment. But one turns from the poor suffering, sick and injured victims of London's slippery pavements and congested traffic, whose pleading eyes follow the visitor wistfully to where the half doors of the loose boxes stand open, and over hang the placid, contended heads, all shapes, sizes and colors, of the pensioned old "favorites" and convalescents half-dozing in peaceful bliss. On leaving, one feels that the teamster who cares enough about his good servant horse to place him there, when he receives him again, will be likely to be more careful of his faithful animal than before, when he sees how kindly humane workers care for the animals in their charge.—Philadelphia Record.

"BISMARCK."

This dignified Great Dane was named "Bismark," for he was a great-grandson of Tyrah, who lost his life while dragging furniture from the burning palace of his master, the German Chancellor. Bismarck had not the fierce look usual with Great Danes, because his ears were as nature made them and had not been trimmed in the cruel fashion of the day. Sometimes puppies presumed on his gentleness and teased him without harm, but if a dog of size became troublesome a big paw was laid upon that dog and he was crushed to the earth.

Birmarck once adopted a little spaniel with a big name and was bullied by him without limit. "Kaiser Wilhelm" was a restless puppy who got into disputes with strange dogs, and then Bismark stood between Kaiser and trouble; and Kaiser, being only a dog, repaid him with gratitude and danced around him in token of affection. Together they caught woodchucks and chased minks, squirrels, foxes and an occasional bear. Once they caught a porcupine, and Bismarck came home with a full growth of porcupine-quill whiskers.

Bismark's chosen friend was the bicycle girl, whom he rarely allowed to pass the gate without him. As she rode through woods and over lonely roads he was always beside her wheel, and was ever ready for a romp with his friend. He would jump around her in a fashion so lively that a stranger usually sought safety by climbing the nearest fence.

A melancholy interest is added to the story by the fact that about a year ago Bismarck perished in the flames which destroyed his master's house, as did his ancestor Tyras.—A. W. Dimock in St. Nicholas.

The crescent, moon and stars were adopted by the Turks as their device on the capture of Constantinople by Mohammed II in 1453.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

MINOR EVENTS OF THE WEEK

WASHINGTON.

During the absence of the President official circles are navigating to various summer resorts for the remainder of the season.

The President's proclamation for the opening to settlement of the Uintah Indian reservation, in Utah, will be issued about the end of July. About 1,000,000 acres are embraced in the reservation.

OUR ADOPTED ISLANDS.

Preparations are being made in Honolulu for the reception of Secretary Taft and his party of sightseers.

There has been a strike of longshoremen at San Juan, P. R., and the cargoes of vessels were unloaded by laborers brought from interior towns.

The Philippine Commission, at Manila, has passed an act granting to John I. Sabin and Louis Glass, of San Francisco, Cal., a franchise to construct telephone and telegraph systems throughout the Philippine Islands.

It was announced at Manila that Felizardo, a bandit, who has long terrorized the Province of Cavite, had been killed by a detachment of the Second Cavalry. The fact is that he was only wounded and made his escape. His chief subordinate surrendered and two of his men, who ranked as leaders, were killed.

President Roosevelt has approved the issue of $600,000 of bonds by the Territory of Hawaii to refund the gold bonds of the Republic of Hawaii, issued under an act of the Legislature of June 13, 1896.

DOMESTIC.

Charles J. Bonaparte, Secretary of the Navy, in an address at Baltimore, Md., warned against "graft" in political life in this country.

Representatives of the Japanese Government have purchased five highly bred stallions in Lexington, Ky., to be sent to the royal stud.

Two severe thunderstorms passed over Medway, Mass. James Jay, a fifteen-year-old boy, was struck and instantly killed by lightning while walking in the street with a companion.

Before both Houses of the General Assembly at Atlanta, Joseph M. Terrell was inaugurated as Governor of Georgia for a second term.

Carl Zuber was killed by George Leatherwood, his cousin, at McNeill, Miss. The boys had been out to the creek bathing, and on the way home got into a quarrel. Zuber was cut with a knife and died almost instantly. The parents of both boys are well known.

Fred Ross, of Denver, Col., who was knocked out by Jack Donnelly, of St. Louis, Mo., in the sixteenth round of a prize fight, is dead. His neck was dislocated and a blood clot gathered on the brain.

A package of dynamite was found at the New York City end of the Brooklyn Bridge after it had been kicked about for an hour.

Former Interstate Commerce Commissioner Yeoman declares in an interview that the Panama Canal is the "biggest humbug of the age" and cannot be completed.

From injuries received at a fire two months ago Chief Herman Meminger, of the Milwaukee (Wis.) Fire Department, died.

The largest militia encampment in the history of Massachusetts was opened at Westfield under command of Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles.

The Yoakum lines in Texas have purchased $200,000 worth of land in the heart of Dallas for terminals for their four railways.

Fifteen packers in Chicago, Ill., gave bonds in $5000 each.

Franklin D. Strong, of East Hampton, Mass., was killed at Trinidad, Col., by plunging over a twelve-foot embankment in an automobile which he had just bought and was using for the first time.

Fort Grant, established many years ago on the San Carlos reservation, in Arizona, is to be abandoned because of the peaceful character of the Indians.

Kansas is financially embarrassed as the result of the Devlin failure. The State is unable to pay the salaries of 2000 employes.

FOREIGN.

The three notes which form the Franco-German agreement on Morocco were made public at Paris and Berlin.

Julian Cendoya, an American banker and agent of the Ward Line, was seized by eight men at his home near Santiago, Cuba, and forced to pay $2000 as ransom.

The London (Eng.) Standard's Christiania correspondent says that the Norwegian throne has been offered to Prince Charles of Denmark, second son of Crown Prince Frederick.

William Orr died at Toronto, Ontario. He was one of the men who cut the steamer Caroline from her moorings and sent her over Niagara Falls during the rebellion of 1837-8.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

Commercial Club OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.

Thorsby Winery —Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props.

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOES

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wishart
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BIGG
Charcoal Ovens.

VOL III.

ATTENTION!

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama, (Chilton County Branch) will be held at the court house in Clanton at 10 a. m. on Saturday, Aug. 5, 1905. A full attendance is desired to pass upon the annual report.

W. M. WILSON,
President.
tf

Young Girl Kills Herself.

New Orleans, La.—Because her sight, hearing and speech had been destroyed by a strange affliction under which she suffered, Miss Lilly Goldberg, of Jeanette, La., suicided Saturday at her temporary home in this city by drinking carbolic acid.

Miss Goldberg was a beautiful girl, 16 years of age, and had been brought here by her parents for medical treatment, but the efforts of the physicians were attended with but scant success. In despair the girl took the fatal dose.

Vessels Will Be Watched.

Norfolk, Va.—Yellow fever having been discovered at New Orleans, the United States marine hospital service will keep a very rigid watch on all vessels arriving in Hampton Roads from that port. Craft from New Orleans will be held in quarantine the usual five days.

Jerry Simpson Very Low.

Roswell, N. M.—Hon. Jerry Simpson, former congressman and nationally famed as "Sockless Jerry" of Kansas, is seriously ill at his home here, having ruptured one of the blood vessels of his heart. Death may result at any moment.

Kelly Still Defiant.

Topeka, Kas.—State Treasurer T. T. Kelly today refused formally the demand of Governor Hoch to give a new bond for $750,000 to cover that imposed by the failure of C. J. Devlin, one of Kelly's principal bandsmen, and the governor announced that he would declare the office of state treasurer vacant because of Kelly's refusal.

Southern Pacific Train Wrecked.

San Antonio, Tex.—The westbound Southern Pacific passenger train which left San Antonio Friday morning was wrecked at Dryden, twenty-five miles east of Sanderson. The engineer was killed and the fireman is probably fatally injured. The engine and two cars were thrown into the ditch. No passengers were hurt, it is reported.

Killed by Lightning.

Talladega, Ala.—An 18-year old negro girl by the name of Bertha McElroy was killed by lightning at McElroy's Station. The girl had started to take an umbrella to her sister, who had got caught in a shower while on her way to the station, and when a few yards from the house was struck by lightning, which killed her instantly.

Engineers Surveying Railway.

Florence, Ala.—A corps of railway civil engineers is surveying from Dickson, Tenn., to Florence, but for what end is not known. The line surveyed commences at Dickson and passes through Wayne county, along Buffalo and Green rivers, on to the head of Big Cypress, which stream it parallels within three miles of Cloverdale, thence direct to Florence.

Salvation Army Girl Sentenced.

Chicago, Ill.—Inga Hanson, the former Salvation Army girl, convicted of perjury in connection with a suit for personal damages against the Chicago city railway, will have to go to the penitentiary to serve an indefinite term, according to a decision given today by Judge George H. Kernsten. The decision denied a motion to vacate sentence in the case.

Mustered Out.

Jackson, Tenn.—The McMillin Riflemen were formally mustered out Saturday night and the new military company mustered in by Dr. George Hamilton, assistant surgeon of the Second Tennessee. R. A. Wells was elected captain, Dave Stovall first lieutenant and Horace Blankinship second lieutenant. Fifty men were enlisted.

Young Marksman.

Martin, Tenn.—The Gun Club of this has some splendid shots, but no doubt if any club in the state has a younger or smaller member than Price Baker, son of W. G. Baker. He is only 12 years of age and handles a gun like a veteran. In a trial shoot today he broke 46 clay pigeons out of 50.

y, Alabama
ss Directory.

WEEK

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABL
information furnished to parti who desire to locate in the Sou

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatesse

J. J. STANLE
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERR
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Toba
and Cigars.

Thorsby Winer
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Prop

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toil
Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandis
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

"MOLINE" Farming Imple
ments and "FLORENCE"
Wagons in stock at all
times.
J. K. ORR SHOE

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wishar
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby In
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & So
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUGGIE

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BIGG
Charcoal Ovens.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., JULY 27 1905. NO. 18

ATTENTION!

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama, (Chilton County Branch) will be held at the court house in Clanton at 10 a. m. on Saturday, Aug. 5, 1905. A full attendance is desired to pass upon the annual report.

W. M. WILSON,
President.

tf

Young Girl Kills Herself.

New Orleans, La.—Because her partial hearing and speech had been destroyed by a strange affliction under which she suffered, Miss Lilly Goldberg of Jeanette, La., suicided Saturday at her temporary home in this city by drinking carbolic acid. Miss Goldberg was a beautiful girl, sixteen years of age, and had been brought here by her parents for medical treatment but the efforts of the physicians were attended with but scant success. Despairing the girl took the fatal dose.

Vessels Will Be Watched.

Norfolk, Va.—Yellow fever having been discovered at New Orleans, the United States marine hospital service will keep a very rigid watch on all vessels arriving in Hampton Roads from that port. Craft from New Orleans will be held in quarantine the usual five days.

Jerry Simpson Very Low.

Roswell, N. M.—Hon. Jerry Simpson, former congressman and nationally famed as "Sockless Jerry" of Kansas, is seriously ill at his home here, having ruptured one of the blood vessels of his heart. Death may result any moment.

Kelly Still Defiant.

Topeka, Kas.—State Treasurer T. T. Kelly today refused formally the demand of Governor Hoch to give a new bond for $750,000 to cover that imposed by the failure of C. J. Devlin, one of Kelly's principal bandsmen, and the governor announced that he would vacate the office of state treasurer on account because of Kelly's refusal.

Southern Pacific Train Wrecked.

San Antonio, Tex.—The westbound Southern Pacific passenger train which left San Antonio Friday morning was wrecked at Dryden, twenty-five miles east of Sanderson. The engineer was killed and the fireman is probably fatally injured. The engine and no cars were thrown into the ditch. No passengers were hurt, it is said.

Killed by Lightning.

Talladega, Ala.—An 18-year-old negro girl by the name of Bertha McElroy was killed by lightning at McElroy's Station. The girl had started with an umbrella to her sister, who was caught in a shower while on her way to the station, and when a few yards from the house was struck by lightning, which killed her instantly.

Engineers Surveying Railway.

Birmingham, Ala.—A corps of railway engineers is surveying from Dickson to Florence, but for what purpose is unknown. The line surveyed starts at Dickson and passes through Blount county, along Buffalo river, on to the head of Bear creek, which stream it parallels for many miles of Cloverdale, to Florence.

Salvation Army Girl Sentenced.

Memphis, Tenn.—Inga Hanson, the Salvation Army girl, convicted in connection with a suit for damages against the Chicago way, will have to go to the penitentiary to serve an indefinite sentence according to a decision given by Judge George H. Kernsten. Judge Kernsten denied a motion to vacate sentence in the case.

Mustered Out.

Jackson, Tenn.—The McMillin Riflemen were formally mustered out Saturday night and the new military company mustered in by Dr. George Hamilton, assistant surgeon of the Second regiment. R. A. Wells was elected captain, Stovall first lieutenant and Hankinship second lieutenant. Seventy men were enlisted.

Marksman.

Troy, Ala.—The Gun Club of this city has some splendid shots, but doubt if any club in the state has a smaller or smaller member than Master Baker, son of W. G. Baker, who is only 12 years of age and handles a gun like a veteran. In a trial shoot recently he broke 46 clay pigeons out of 50.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Of General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Freight Trains Collide.

Anniston, Ala.—Thursday morning at 11 o'clock freight trains north and south-bound collided on the tracks of the Southern railway in front of the union depot, and the caboose of the south-bound train was derailed and badly damaged. The exact cause of the wreck could not be ascertained, but it was thought to be due to either defective trucks on the south-bound freight or to a misplaced switch. As the accident was foreseen no one was materially injured. The hind trucks of the derailed caboose were torn from the car, and the side of the caboose striking the engine was badly smashed.

A Big Barn Burns.

Center, Ala.—The large barn at the residence of Dr. S. C. Tatum, in Center, was destroyed by fire Wednesday night, together with enormous quantities of hay and corn and a number of horses and cattle confined in the building. The loss will amount to more than $3,000, with insurance of about $1,200.

Will Keep Trophy.

Montgomery, Ala.—By winning the Clark trophy Thursday afternoon, the First infantry rifle squad becomes its owner. No shooting was done for the Ligon and other individual medals. The following was the score made:

First infantry squad, 200 yards, 214 out of possible 300.

Five hundred yards, 125 out of possible 200.

Second infantry, 200 yards, 113 out of possible 300.

Five hundred yards, 29 out of possible 300.

Big Coal Company Organized.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Another corporation which will add very materially to Tuscaloosa's progressive march is a mammoth coal development company, which has just been formed. There is more than three thousand acres of coal land in the tract, and when the mines are opened it will mean a very much better price of coal in this section. The class of coal there is very similar to that mined at Brookwood. It is said that nearly all of the stock is owned by Tuscaloosa people. A. S. Vandegraff and J. W. Miller are at the head of the company.

A New Inventor.

Eufaula, Ala.—Henry Persons, of this city, is proving to be quite a genius and has on file an application for a patent that promises to prove useful and convenient. His invention consists of a covering for steam launches. It will be made of steel or aluminum, and folds by means of an ingenious combination of hinges so constructed as to be water-proof, and can also be locked and when not in use can be easily folded and carried as part of the luggage, taking up but very little space $50,000 Suit Against Mayor.

Birmingham, Ala.—As a sequence of the charges recently preferred by Mayor George B. Ward against Police Commissioner George G. Phillips, the commissioner, through his attorneys, Gaston and Curtis, Friday filed suit in the circuit court against Mayor Ward asking damages to the extent of $50,000.

Shot Wife by Mistake.

Birmingham, Ala.—William Early, check weighman at the Coalburg coal mines, ten miles from the city, shot and fatally injured his wife about 2 o'clock Saturday morning, mistaking her for a burglar. Early is wild with grief over his awful mistake. It seems that his wife got up to get some hot water for the baby. The kitchen is out on a rear porch of the home. Early did not hear his wife get up, but when she re-entered the door slammed a little. This awoke Mr. Early, who secured his pistol quickly and fired on the approaching figure. The minute the bullet pierced the body of the woman she cried out, "My God, you haave shot me."

The husband instantly saw his mistake and hurriedly picked her up and placed her tenderly on a bed. Neighbors were summoned and physicians did everything in their power until the injured woman could be brought to the St. Vincent's Hospital. She will hardly recover.

Putting Down Pavement.

Huntsville, Ala.—The Miller Paving company, of Memphis, has taken a contract to put down about 900 lineal feet of paving on the government building site here. The work has begun and will be completed within ninety days.

Big Suit Filed.

Birmingham, Ala.—Suit has been instituted in the circuit court by C. B. Powell, guardian of H. M. Harton, against the Ensley Realty Company, Ensley Development Company, Douglass H. Gordon, Jefferson County Savings Bank, John H. Eubank, Eugene F. Enslen, Delia W. Enslen, Lula B. Harton and J. W. Minor.

Petitioner asks for the appointment of a receiver for the Ensley Development Company, and further that the defendants be enjoined from transacting the affairs of the company. Judge Coleman after reading and considering the complaint granted the injunction as prayed for, and the petitioner furnished bonds as required.

The amount involved in the case is between $75,000 and $100,000, and the action taken, it is understood, is for the purpose of arriving at a settlement.

Found Dead in Bed.

Ensley, Ala.—Mrs. E. A. Richard, aged 22, wife of a well-known engineer at the Ensley blast furnaces, was found dead in bed Saturday morning at the Richard home, Tuxedo Park, Ensley.

Mrs. Richard went on a picnic Friday, and to all appearances was in the best of health. She retired early Friday evening, being tired from the outing. During the night she had an attack of nightmare. Saturday morning Mr. Richard arose and made the fire as usual in the kitchen. When he returned to awaken his wife he was startled to find her dead.

Bessemer's New Car Line.

Bessemer, Ala.—Bessemer citizens have organized a company to construct and operate an electric car line around the various suburbs of that place.

The new line is intended to extend to Jonesboro, Dolomite, Ensley, Thomas and other mining and manufacturing camps in the lower part of the county, and will be used as a branch later for a line to Tuscaloosa county.

It is proposed to secure $25,000 subscriptions from among the citizens with which to make the survey and start the first work. Then outside capital will be sought. F. A. Sawyer, special southern representative of the New York Commercial, stated to the people who have taken up the matter that there will be no trouble in disposing of bonds for the new concern and that within a few months a first-class electric car line can be in course of construction.

Land Office Closed Too Soon.

Montgomery, Ala.—It now develops that the United States land office at Huntsville was closed prematurely, and the peculiar feature about it is the received of the land office, H. V. Cashin, the negro in charge, is primarily responsible for it. It was a case where a man cut his own official head off and unwittingly deprived himself of at least one year's salary. A republican official tells the story. "The closing of the Huntsville land office," said the official, "was due entirely to a clerical error in the office, of which, of course, the head of the office was responsible. It was due to a mistake in figures giving the number of acres of land in the territory of the land office and under the jurisdiction of the land office in question. But for this mistake the Huntsville land office could at least have been continued in existence a year longer, if not indefinitely.

"Under the rules of the land office at Washington," continued the official, "every land office must have within its jurisdiction 100,000 acres of public land. When the Huntsville office was asked for the number of acres the official accepted as correct the totals handed down to him by his predecessor and abstracted the land that had been sold since he came into office, and as a result he made a most unfortunte mistake for himself. He reported to the government that he had only 85,000 acres, whereas a recent investigation by the land office in this city revealed that the Huntsville office at the time it went out of business had over 150,000 acres within its jurisdiction.

"Capt. Robert Barber, register of the montgomery land office, never takes anything for granted," said the official, "and when he was called on by the Washington office for a statement of public lands within the jurisdiction of his office he and his clerk went back over the books, made a map of all the government lands and marked each section off that had been sold. In this way a correct footing was made, and the result was that over 50,000 acres of land were found yet in possession of the government more than the Huntsville office had given the government credit for."

A New Corporation.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Gibson Building and Investment Company has been incorporated with $15,000 capital stock. George A. Gibson, C. S. Ellis and F. H. Patterson are the incorporators. The domicile of the company is Birmingham.

A RIGID INSPECTION.

New Orleans Physicians Co-Operating in Effort to Stamp Out Fever.

WORKING ON MOSQUITO IDEA.

French Market Quarter Cleaner Than It Has Been Since the War—Government Assisting in Work.

New Orleans, La.—No early reports of deaths from yellow fever were received at the board of health on Tuesday. In the mail was sent out a circular to every physician in the city urging the prompt report of all cases of fever, typhoid, malarial, yellow and otherwise, so that the appearance of new foci may immediately be established, screened and watched. The doctors are also asked to surrender individual opinions they may have formed and to cooperate with the state and federal authorities in as rigid an application as possible of the mosquito theory. Ward organizations are being formed for the general screening of houses and cisterns and the prosecution of sanitary measures.

Meantime the city board of health is making up a careful record for the state board of all cases of sickness and of the deaths since the fever appeared. Subscriptions are being taken to a fund of $100,000 for the maintenance of a detention hospital. Sanitation in the French market quarter, where the disease incubated, continues. That section is now probably in a more cleanly condition than it has been at any time since the war.

The more rigid regulations which are to be put into effect to prevent further introduction of disease by increasing the period of detention of ships from Central American ports and the Indies threatens temporarily to drive the fruit trade to Mobile, Galveston, Pensacola and other ports. The fruit companies are now considering a change of entry, fearing that their fruit will spoil if subjected to the increased detention.

New quarantines are being put on, but a number of towns still refuse to put up the bars. The piney woods section of St. Tammany has refused to quarantine and has extended a general invitation to New Orleans people to come there.

As far as ascertainable there have been eight deaths from yellow fever since its first appearance here. There have probably been altogether fifty cases, many of them having recovered. About fifteen cases are under treatment. Prompt reports hereafter will enable the health authorities to keep an accurate record.

Released From Custody.

Decatur, Ala.—"Red" George, the negro who was arrested Saturday charged with the murder of Mrs. Emmett Parhal, a white woman, near Hillsboro, was given his freedom Monday on account of insufficient evidence to retain him. On Sunday a quantity of blood was found in a pool within 300 yards of the scene of the murder and a bloody stick lying in the pool tells the story of the crime. The woman's husband still lies in jail at Moulton, though the evidence against him is slight. The case grows more mysterious day by day, and the officers acknowledge they are baffled. Mrs. Parhal's body was found by an old negro lying on the south track near Hillsboro cut to pieces by passing trains.

Oil Fire Burning Out.

Houston, Tex.—The Humble oil fire was still burning on Tuesday, but is confined to an area 100 acres in extent. It will soon burn itself out. The loss is now estimated at $857,000 in oil and tank damage. Two and one-half million barrels of oil have been and are being destroyed and ten earthen tanks extensively damaged. Ten bodies have been recovered, and it is believed others will be found after a more careful search is possible. Estimates of fatalities vary between ten and eighteen. All of the victims were negroes.

Selma Takes Precautions.

Selma, Ala.—Whatever the situation may be in New Orleans, the Selma authorities do not intend to leave anything undone to protect this city from the plague. Monday the public health committee of the board of health met with Acting Mayor Peacock and Mayor Atkins, who came over from Montgomery specially for that purpose, where he had gone to prepare for the cavalry encampment Mayor Atkins being major of the First squadron of cavalry Alabama National Guard.

Speak at Union Springs.

Union Springs, Ala.—Hon. W. H. Seymour, president of the Alabama division of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association, and Major Joe Harris, of Chambers county, addressed a small number of farmers here Monday. Major Harris represented the state agricultural department and spoke on agriculture in general. Mr. Seymour spoke in the interest of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association, rehearsing the benefits already derived from it, and emphasized the good that would come from a thorough organization. He believes that the future is full of promise for the organization and that it will accomplish great things for southern cotton planters.

Funeral of Sheriff Conner.

Tuskegee, Ala.—The funeral services of J. T. Conner, sheriff of Macon county, were held from the residence Monday morning at 10 o'clock, conducted jointly by the Baptist and Methodist ministers, Dr. S. M. Provence and Rev. Mr. Peterson. The local lodge Knights of Pythias took charge of the remains at the house and conducted them to the city cemetery, where Pythian ceremonies were observed, led by Acting Prelate D. E. Laslie in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends. The remains, accompanied by his wife and brother, reached Tuskegee Sunday afternoon.

Death of Miss Kemp.

Marion, Ala.—Miss L. Kemp, whose critical illness of more than two months has elicited the sympathy of the community, died at her home Friday evening last. The funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church Saturday morning by her pastor, Rev. L. H. S. Chappell, assisted by Rev. E. D. Patten, of the Presbyterian church, after which the interment took place in the city cemetery. Miss Kemp was in the bloom of early womanhood, being only 14 years of age. She was the daughter of Mr. T. D. Kemp, manager of the electric light and power company.

Fire in Decatur.

Decatur, Ala.—At an early hour Monday morning fire of unknown origin caused a loss of over $10,000 in South Decatur. The buildings burned were William B. McCollough's furniture store and stock, Edward Sittison's dwelling and most of the household goods and a residence belonging to Dr. Gadston and occupied by Mr. Orr. Orr saved no household goods.

James Gray's residence in East Decatur was damaged by fire to the extent of several hundred dollars Monday morning.

All losses are partially covered by insurance.

Erection of New Brick School.

Elba, Ala.—Monday morning dirt was broken for the Citizens' Bank block. It will be composed of brick and stone and will be a beautiful structure, composed of a bank and four large store houses.

As a general rule crops are good in Coffee. Cotton is not so well fruited as last year at the same time, but so far there is nothing to cause despondency among the farmers, especially as weather conditions are exactly suited to the crop.

A New State School.

Huntsville, Ala.—James H. Pride, city superintendent of public schools has issued a card, stating that he has employed a faculty and will open a state school in the building of the Huntsville Female Seminary. Mr. Pride and the city council have failed to agree on a faculty for the city schools, and the state appropriation for the city schools will be withheld and diverted to the seminary school.

Attorneys Negotiating.

Opelika, Ala.—The attorneys representing the opposing parties in the Lafayette railway case are negotiating over the terms of a settlement, and the differences may be settled at an early date. A large force of hands, abount fifty in number, was carried to Lafayette Monday morning, and as soon as a compromise is reached they will be put to dismantling the road.

Bishop Gives Bond.

Luverne, Ala.—The preliminary trial of E. O. Bishop, charged with the murder of Gordon Reddock, was called at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. An agreement having been made for bond at $4,000, Mr. Bishop readily made it. Mrs. Bishop left on the afternoon train, accompanied by her brother-in-law, Dr. George Williamson, for Hartford, where she will reside.

Killed in Mexico.

Huntsville, Ala.—News has come from Mexico of the tragic death of George H. Smith, a former citizen of Paint Rock valley, who was killed by being run over by a freight train at Lanaris, Tex. Smith was foreman of a copper mine, and leaves a widow and several children.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 4th St, Opposite Court House.
CLANTON.

Physicians.

Dr. V. O. Campbelle,
Physician and Surgeon,
Office over Roper's Store.
CLANTON.

M. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

PURE GOODS
The following
SPECIAL BRANDS
always in stock

Big Rock	I. W. Harper
Rose Valley	Upper Crust
Upper Ten	Kentucky Taylor
Joe Gideon	American Malt
Murray Hill	Budweiser Rye
Pleasant Hill	Deep Springs
Green River	AAAA Lincoln County
Jack Daniel No. 7	Wilson
Old Spring	Good Wood
Shaw's Malt	Club House Rye, 10 years old.
Jefferson County Rye	Cascade, 14 years old.

Old Harvest Corn, 6 years old

I carry a Full Line of Barrel Goods which I sell in Jugs from half gallon up. Mail orders promptly filled.

A. STEIN,
Bank Saloon, Calera, Ala.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS.
PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!

If you have timber lands for sale, want to buy a good home for $25.00 cash and the balance on long payments to suit purchaser, or if you want a position as log cutter, teamster or in saw mill or planing mill, write
The Marbury Lumber Co.,
Marbury, Ala.

ABSOLUTION.

By Arthur Ketchum.

When all the steady stars are lit
And the light sleeps, for weariness,
Night stands with pitying hands outspread
To give her pardon and to bless.
Earth creeps so near to heaven then,
That scarcely may one watching, mark
Where they are twain—so potent is
The benediction of the dark!

—Ainslee's Magazine.

An Old Coat.

Stephen Birt and Mary, his wife, had fallen out, not by any means for the first time. Both were young, hot tempered, high spirited and prone to jealousy.

Today matters had come to a climax. The two young people, white, angry, with blazing eyes, stood facing one another. It did not make matters any better that they spoke slowly and deliberately.

"I'm tired of these scenes," Mary said, "sick to death of them. I can't go out, I can't talk to an old friend, but what you accuse me of flirting. I can't spend a day with a girl chum but what you say I neglect you. I can't——"

"You never spend a day with me; you haven't given me a whole day since we returned from our honeymoon. I might be the greatest stranger instead of your husband of six months for all the notice you take of me. You're cold as an icicle, and indifferent as—as—"

"You are! I shape my course entirely in accordance with yours. If we do go out together you are never by my side from the time we enter a house to the time we leave it. You can laugh and talk with other women; you never have a joke to tell me, or a smile for me. We never ought to have married; I'm sorry, heartily sorry, we ever did."

His hand, resting on the back of a chair, gripped it tightly.

"You mean that?" he said, his tone changing, his expression hardening; "you really mean it?"

Her clasped hands gripped one another.

"So much so that I mean to do what I can to rectify our mistake. We can't live in peace together. I have tried; I daresay—I do you that much justice—you have tried; it seems impossible. That being so"—her voice was level, hard, though her heart was beating in loud thumps, "the best think we can do is to part. Fortunately I have my own income. I only have to leave this house and make a home for myself elsewhere."

Her words startled, staggered him. He made a step forward, caught her hands.

"You mean that?" he asked again. "You are serious?"

"I—I never was more serious in my life."

"You would leave me?"

"This is your house. Since it is best we should part, I must leave you."

"Did you never love me?" She tried to draw her hands from his, but failed; he held them closely clasped, waiting for her answer.

Perhaps we were both too young to understand what love should be," she answered. "Perhaps we took mutual admiration for a deeper feeling. Anyway"—she felt a fear tightening round her heart as she spoke—"it is quite clear the love has waned. Anything is better than being together, with constant scenes. It will be wiser to part."

He tried to draw her to him; she held away.

"I will not let you go!" he said "you are mine—my wife—I love you. If I have seemed indifferent, it—it has been only this—a man expects his wife to know he loves her, not to need telling day after day; that is a lover's business. Mary, if we have made mistakes surely we can put them right; if we have disappointed one another—and you, I must confess, have disappointed me—can't we begin all over again, wipe out the last six months?"

Her face softened for a minute; now once more it hardened. So she had disappointed him—she who had done everything she could to make him happy—while he—

"I have no wish to begin again," she answered. "We have tried to be happy, I suppose; we have been miserable. I, you say, have disappointed you; you have disappointed me. I would rather not talk any more. I will tell the servants I am going on a journey. I don't want to make things disagreeable for you. And I shall go today."

He dropped her hands; he looked at her for a moment—at her white, set face, her eyes that did not soften in the least as his glance met hers. Then a proud, boyish rage entered his heart. If she could go, if she could leave him, then, indeed, she did not, never had loved him.

"You will please yourself, of course," he answered, "but whether you remain with me or leave me you are still my wife—you are still bound to me; be good enough not to forget that."

He scarcely saw his way as he crossed the room and left her—left her with a great anger in his heart against her.

"She never loved me," he said to himself, "never, never; let her go!"

He found his way to his study, sat down, staring blankly before him for a while, and scattering his papers heedlessly on the floor. Then his head dropped upon his hands, and his eyes were wet.

As the door closed after him Mary trembled. So he had accepted the situation! Then, indeed, he did not love her. She had expected pleading protestations; she had meant to forgive him; she had thought, indeed, they might begin again.

"He never loved me," she said to herself. "I did not mean to leave him. I shall go now; I owe it to my pride to go now."

She dragged her steps to her room; she must put her things together. Where she should go she did not know—and did it matter? If she was not with him she did not care where she was. There were plenty of hotels, but how lonely she would be!

She opened her wardrobe and flung dress after dress upon the floor. She must take something with her; it didn't matter what. Wherever she was he would not be there to see her.

The light was growing gray outside; the room seemed cold. She wondered what he was doing. He had not gone from the house; he was waiting to see her off, perhaps—wondering why she was so long. Could she have looked at him then she would have seen him sitting with a miniature in his hand, looking at the pretty face with tear-dimmed eyes—would have heard his words, "My little wife!"—seen him lift it to his lips.

She had taken out all the dresses now. There was still something at the back of the wardrobe—something soft. She took it down, drew it out, and a swift rush of color swept her face.

In her hands she held an old velvet smoking coat; but the sight of it brought back a flood of memories. She remembered so well he had strolled over to her father's house wearing it; he had found her in the conservatory, tending the plants, he had told her then that he loved her, had taken her for the first time in his arms, kissed her, gained her promise that she would be his wife.

As she stood with the coat in her hand she recalled she had been so happy; she could recall each word he had said, each kiss he had given; and his arms, his dear arms, how tenderly, how closely, how fondly they had held her!

She sank into a chair, the coat now close against her breast. A little sob rose in her throat, tears came into her eyes. It was all over—all over! His arms would never hold her again, his lips would never kiss her more!

Outside it grew darker still. She felt sad, lonely and she must go soon. She had cut the ground under her feet, burned her boats behind her; he would be wondering why she did not go.

If only he would come to her! After all he did love her; she knew that well. They had been foolish—proud. If only he would come.

She lifted the coat. Then, while in the semi-darkness the color burned her face, she threw it aroud her—drew the arms right across her. A faint smell of smoke clung to it yet. She could almost fancy she was in his arms, that their quarrel was a dream, that she was not leaving his home and hers forever.

He had laughed at her often for keeping the old coat, for loving it almost as though it were something human. She would take it away with her; he would never miss it.

And then, quietly, she began to cry, her soft cheek pressed to the old velvet, sometimes her quivering lips. If only he would come to her. How could she go away?

How long she cried, quietly but bitterly—how soon, utterly exhausted, she dropped to sleep—she did not know. The opening of the door aroused her; the switching on of the electric light. And once more husband and wife—almost children both—looked at one another.

Looked and understood that parting was impossible, the love was still there; looked while, as his eyes fell upon the old velvet coat, and he understood, a flush swept her face. Then, with one swift stride, wife and coat all were taken into a passionate embrace, words of love and forgiveness stumbled across their lips, and parting was something that would never come while life should last.—Alice Maud Meadows, in Chicago Tribune.

CURIOUS HOBBIES.

One Man Found a Fortune in Pursuing a Fad at His Home.

A gentleman of the name of Dale found a fortune in a curious hobby. He had fitted a small theatre at his residence near London with distorting mirrors of all kinds. The incongruit of this form of reflection delighted his friends so much that the invention, if such it can be called, was turned to commercial purposes, and found very much in demand for shops and restaurants.

An enthusiastic Sheffield dentist has preserved a monument of his skill in the dental art, in the form of a pyramid covered with the teeth of his patients. One thousand eight hundred and thirty-eight lost grinders adorn this strange obelisk, in memory of numberless pangs and groans.

Another tradesman's hobby is that of a Halifax tinsmith, who constructs bicycles and tricycles in his spare time, all the parts being made of the wares in his shop. Galvanized conductor piping makes the frame of a bicycle, one and one-quarter-inch lead pipe forms the wheel rims, the spokes are tin blasting spoons, a patty-pan forms the bell; pie plates, nutmeg-grater, knives and clothes pegs are all utilized in this novel hobby cycle.

A charming collection was that of the late Sir Herbert Oakeley, the musician, who had a complete set of models of the cathedrals of the world constructed by an eminent architect. Very beautiful and delicate are these miniature replicas of noble buildings. It is easy to see that much supervision was necessary for the work, and Sir Herbert visited many with the camera and assisted personally in obtaining accuracy of detail. This stupendous collection took over twenty years in making.

WHERE KISSING IS UNKNOWN.

How People of Different Lands Express Feelings of Endearment.

A caress, a kiss, a kindly touch are supposed to be signs of love everywhere, while a frown expresses displeasure. A study of the psychology of peoples shows that the kiss is only one expression of affection. There are places where kissing is unknown, this mode of expression being only supplemented by caressing with the hand, the nose, the tongue, clapping of hands and various embraces.

Western civilization holds the kiss as the kindest expression of endearment. Paolo Mantegazza, the great Italian psychologist, says: "Fear, religion, interest, space and time may separate lovers, but the kiss they have exchanged will hold them together." For all this Darwin assures us that kissing is unknown among the Malays, the dwellers of the Friendly Isles, the Andamans, Fuegians, the Taitians, Papuans, Australians and the Somals of Africa.

The Malays express their feeling of endearment by touching noses. They say much tenderness is expressed by bringing the noses in contact. They believe it is by the nose we breathe, and the bringing of the noses in contact has the same influence on the soul. A traveler told them to kiss with their lips, but they said: "No, no, the soul is not in the mouth."

The Andaman islanders also refuse to hear of the joys of kissing. They rub noses occasionally, but it is customary for friends to greet each other with the eye. When a husband is away and returns home, he shows his joy by sitting with his arms about his wife's neck, and they weep and howl as if a great sorrow had befallen them. Suddenly, by some unexplainable reason, their grief turns to joy. The man then calls on his other relatives and goes through a similar performance.

African husbands never kiss their wives. They would consider this a too familiar expression of devotion. A Mandigo wife meeting her husband who has just returned home throws herself on the ground as a token of greeting. In Loango the women kneel, and as they rise they clap their hands.

The Dahomians greet their husbands with wonderful dignity; they prostrate themselves, throw sand on their heads and never think of rising until their husbands make the command. The Tongans are more strenuous in their expression; they tear their hair, and even beat their breasts.

But the New Zealanders prefer to believe that the soul has its nearest approach to another soul through the nose. After a long absence the husband gives vent to his joy in the tangi—a bitter crying and moaning spell which transforms itself gradually into a merry laugh. In Polynesia, when a husband becomes demonstrative, he strokes his wife's face with his hand or foot. The Australian holds his wife by the neck and pats her on the back.

A Bad Break.

During the annual convention of a certain religious body, not so very long ago, an incident occurred which was not on the program, and which completely upset the gravity of the ministers and brethren assembled. It was at the closing session, and the chairman stated that they were about one hundred dollars short of an amount desired to be raised for a given purpose, and hoped that the sum could be made up before final adjournment. One of the laymen jumped up with the remark:

"I'll start the good work with $25."

"I don't know your name, brother," said the chairman, "but may God bless you, and may your business be doubled during the year."

Much to his astonishment, a burst of laughter followed from many in the hall, which was explained when a brother up in front stepped to the platform and whispered:

"Why, that's Mr. Blank, a prominent undertaker of the town."—Up

To Get a Splinter Out.

When a splinter has been driven into the hand it can be extracted by steam. Fill a wide mouthed bottle nearly full of hot water, place the injured part over the mouth and press it slightly.

The action thus produced will draw the flesh down, and in a minute or two the steam will extract the splinter, also the inflammation. Try it and be convinced.—National Magazine.

In France for the privilege of wearing men's trousers the government imposes on women a tax of fifty centimes per annum.

SCIENTIFIC & INDUSTRIAL

An astonishing number of edible seaweeds is known to the native Hawaiians, who give to these kinds and some others the general name of "limu."

Though first made by Fouche and Picard as recently as 1901, the oxyacetyleme blowpipe is now employed in France by at least three hundred or four hundred establishments.

Official statistics show that the production of natural gas in the United States, in 1903, was greater than any previous year. The production had a value of $35,715,000, or sixteen per cent. more than that of 1902.

There is now in operation on a commercial scale, at Port Chester, New York, an artificial camphor factory, the product of which is intended to compete in the market with the natural substance. It is maintained that it does not differ, except in the manner of its origin, from that extracted from the camphor-trees of Formosa. Artificial camphor is made from essential oils derived from turpentine.

In France the poetic name, "white coal" (la houille blanche), is applied to water-power employed for the production of electricity. France is poor in coal but rich in waterfalls, and the utilization of them for industrial purposes is proceeding rapidly. In that part of France bordering on the Alps a recent computation shows the existence of sufficient water-power to furnish, during eight or nine months of the year, 5,000,000 horse-power, and during the rest of the year 3,000,000 horse-power.

The story is often told of the great naturalist Cuvier that, given a single bone, he could reconstruct the animal to which it belonged. That a somewhat similar law of organization runs through the various species that form families in the animal kingdom is indicated by a curious case of scientific prediction, to which attention was called at a recent meeting of the Biological Society of Washington. Ehrenberg, while studying the minute animals called diatoms, found that many species were distinguished by the number of rays that they possessed. But in the series of specimens that he had he could find none having respectively 27, 29, 30, 31, 37, 39, 41, 42, 44, 45, 46, 48 and 49 rays. Still he predicted that the missing species would some day turn up, and he was right, for ten of them were afterwards discovered, although the remaining three have not been found.

The Close of a Hot Day.

At last the glaring sun descends, then a sudden breeze flutters the foliage, light straws of dust begin to dance in circles, first a few steps, then a fierce measure. The fairy fiddles are still with dread. The valley darkens in awful silence and clouds roll together on the rushing wind. Trees bend and shiver and turn out the white linings of their foliage, dogs and poultry crawl into shelter, and wise men shut doors and windows, for lightning rides on the draught and is sure to touch more than one of those trees or houses with its fiery sword. The roar and flash are such as England never sees. A Niagara of rain, welcome though terrible, bathes the dry earth, and soon the world, cooled and moistened, sparkles in the setting sun. Then people in light vehicles drive out to taste the air, my young friends come on horseback, and while we sit in the darkness sipping iced lemonade or sherbert the multitudinous voices of the grass and leaves again rehearse their symphony. From the distant pond booms the heavy frog note, from overhanging branches trills the contented undiscoverable tree-frog. The myriad grasshoppers tune up their wiry legs and fiddle with fresh enthusiasm. The stinging swarm of mosquitoes sing around a little lamp in the hall. Fireflies flicker everywhere. We listen to them and are idle.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Voice From the Dead.

A baggage-man on the Hannibal division of the Burlington was hauling a corpse into his car, and imagine his feelings when he heard a strange, unnatural voice coming from the oblong box, saying: "Let me out of here." When he recovered from his first fright he ran for his conductor, who arrived just in time to hear the uncanny sound. The whole train crew was called and a brave engineer investigated. Sitting near the coffin was a small square box. Listening, the engineer heard a scratching, and again the voice "Let me out of here." The smaller box was opened and a little green parrot popped out.—Kansas City Journal.

Object Lesson on Birds.

Some school children were having an object lesson on birds, and the teacher called attention to the small tail of the blue heron, saying: "This bird has no tail to speak of." Next day the class was told to write an essay on the bird, and one little girl concluded her essay thus: "The blue heron has a tail, but it must not be talked about."—London Express.

Defined.

The teacher had been talking to the class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, you can name some things," said he, "which are very dangerous to approach, and which have horns?"

"Motor cars!" replied little Jimmie, promptly.

SOUTHERN FARM NOTES

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO THE PLANTER, STOCKMAN AND TRUCK GROWER.

What is Rich Soil?

A soil which is able to produce good crops is considered to be a rich soil. In order to produce good crops, a soil must supply a sufficient quantity of the food required by the plants. That is to say, the plant must be able to obtain enough potash, lime, magnesia, phosphoric acid, iron, sulphur and water from the soil to supply its needs, and if any one of these substances is absent, or not furnished by the soil in sufficient quantity, the soil will not produce good crops.

Few farmers realize that their soils contain very large quantities of these substances. The trouble with a poor soil is, not that it does not contain plant food, but that the plant food in it cannot be taken up by plants. The food is locked up and the plants cannot get it, and suffer accordingly. By far the greater part of the plant food in every soil is in such a form that it cannot be taken up by plants. But every soil is undergoing a continual change, by which small portions of the locked-up plant food is daily made soluble, and in such a form that plants can use it. It is within the power of the farmer to cultivate and manage his farm in such a way that the quantity of plant food released each year will become more and more each year. In such a case his farm is growing "richer." It is also possible (and very often the case) that a farm will be managed in such a way that the agencies which release the locked-up plant food will decrease in power from year to year. In such a case his farm will grow poorer; not because the plant food in the soil is exhausted, but because, by bad management, the farmer no longer has a sufficient supply of plant food in his soil in a form available to plants. The most important agency in releasing the locked-up food in a soil, is a supply of decaying vegetable matter. Decaying vegetable matter forms various acids, which act upon the soil and decompose it. Decaying vegetable matter allows the growth of minute plants, which also act upon the soil and release inert plant food. Humus as the decayed vegetable matter in soil is called, is very important in a soil for other reasons, but it is certainly very important in aiding to provide plants with a suply of plant food from the soil. A soil containing much humus is always more fertile than the same soil with little humus, and one reason for this fact is that already stated, namely, that the humus aids in bringing the plant food to such a form that plants can use it.

The most natural method of farming is to utilize as much as possible the plant food already in the soil, and resort to fertilizers only to supply the deficiencies of the soil.—Dr. G. S. Fraps, Ph.D., of Raleigh, in Philadelphia Farmer.

How to Get Eggs.

The following from the Baltimore Sun is just as good as it would be if taken from the columns of the best poultry journal in the country:

If it costs in actual money one dollar a year to keep a hen and the hen lays 200 eggs, there is a net profit of 100 per cent., even though the average price of eggs is only twelve cents a dozen.

As no other farm stock will pay this average profit, this subject is one that should be studied. On this subject a poultryman gives the following general facts:

The pullet that begins laying at the earliest age and continues to lay the longest is the ideal mother for a strain of layers.

But there is something beyond this, for a laying strain must be started ahead of the eggs from which its members are hatched. The hens must be in the best possible condition before the eggs are laid. The eggs they lay will hatch out strong, vigorous chicks, and these should be forced to the limit. Vigorous constitution means a capacity to produce a large number of eggs. Good feed and care induce continued vigor. The artificial stimulus grows into a characteristic that becomes fixed and descends to the progeny generation after generation, and in the end a laying strain is established, and the value of such a strain is undisputed. Any one who breeds poultry may do something toward increasing the general average by attending to the details of care and feeding. Upon productiveness depends the profit that may be made from commercial poultry, to a large extent. These are not idle theories; they are facts that have been established by years of experience and observation. The study of them is a material factor in making improvements in our flocks.

To this we add that eggs being most profitable in winter, every effort should be made for winter eggs. So it is best to have a field of cow peas near the house for the chickens to forage on and a pasture of rye.

Large or Small Cows.

A reader wishes to know whether we would prefer large or small cows for dairy or milk-giving purposes. To make a short answer, we would prefer the cow that would give the most and best milk and would keep at it longest. The object in view should always be kept foremost. If you have a cow that is just such a milker as you wish she is the best cow without reference to her size.

If the purpose is to buy a dairy cow the fact that there are special dairy breeds must not be ignored, and they are mostly small, though the Holsteins come in of fair size. But if the object is to get cows for the farm, where it is desirable to raise calves as well as to get milk, size should be considered. In that case we advise getting a medium to large cow of a well-known dairy strain.

Our fathers would have thought it strange had we talked of feeding corn to hogs, or laying in a supply of corn as a winter feed for hogs. But it is done now in many places as a matter of course, as laying in hay for feeding horses and cattle. Cow pea and soy bean hay have been proven good feed for cattle, when only as pasture feed in summer, and as dry feed in winter.

If you have a mule colt to pasture this spring, don't try to make him stay in the pasture by himself. He just won't do it. He'll find some way to get out, and after that no fence will bother him much. Give the mule colt or colts company. A good dispositioned old horse is best, a gentle old gray mare is the very thing for company for mules.

Corn Husks and Wheat Chaff.

H. L. D., Scottsville, wishes to be given me the feeding value of corn husks and wheat chaff as a feed for cows.

The following table gives the composition of corn husks and wheat chaff:

	Protein	Fiber	Extract	Fat
	Pct.	Pct.	Pct.	Pct.
Corn husks	2.5	35.8	28.3	1
Wheat chaff	4.5	36.	31.6	1

Wheat chaff contains about twice as much protein, crude fiber and fat as the corn husks. These foods are low in digestible protein and fat and only constitute cheap forms of roughness, more valuable as a filler for ruminating animals than for their entire diet, and they are also considerably lower in nutrients than corn leaves. Wheat chaff contains about as much digestible matter as wheat straw, but is much lower in digestible nutrients than oat straw, containing only about one-fourth as much digestible protein. Neither form of roughness thus compares well with hay from any of the leagues or tame grasses. At the same time corn husks and wheat chaff can certainly be utilized to advantage on the farm if fed in proper amounts.—Prof. Soule.

Watering Fowls.

To keep poultry healthy plenty of fresh water must be kept within easy reach of them. Crocks, pans and such vessels have to be filled several times a day. The young chicks are apt to get drowned when enough water is kept to last any length of time; besides the water gets old and unhealthy. My plan is to take a small keg at bottom; set the keg upright on box or frame a foot from ground, put a curved tube in hole, put a vessel under lower end of tube. When water is put in keg the vessel will run full of water to the lower end of tube. The depth of water can be regulated by raising or lowering the tube. If keg is filled with fresh water every morning there will always be a fresh supply of fresh water in vessel. This is the best device for watering poultry I know of. It is a great labor-saver.—H. C. Marsch, Tusculum, Tenn.

Soy Beans and Millet For Hay.

J. S. C., Russellville, Tenn., writes: Will soy beans mature early enough to be sown with millet for hay? What proportion of each should be used when sown with drill and for hay?

Some of the early maturing varieties of soy beans might be sown with millet for hay, but the standard varieties would have to be sown in drills and about thirty days before the millet is seeded. The millet might then be sown broadcast and covered with a harrow. One of the best varieties of soy beans is the mammoth yellow. A mixture of soy beans and millet will make an excellent quality of hay, but it is somewhat easier to cure the hay made from cowpeas. You should sow about a half bushel to three pecks of soy beans per acre, and a gallon and a half gallon and a half of millet seed.—A. M. Soule.

Sandy Soil For Fruits.

Sandy soils are good fruit soils when fertile enough, and are well adapted to the smaller fruits and berries needing careful cultivation. Peaches require high, dry and moderately fertile soil, and do best on side of hills.—Southern Fruit Grower.

The Pacific and Idaho Northern Railroad has contracted for 600 Japanese laborers.

The number of deaths from industrial accidents in Great Britain, reported in 1904, was 3758.

The American Labor Union has announced the postponement of its annual convention.

Two thousand wood workers employed by various firms in Chicago went on strike for higher wages.

It is reported from Mackay, Queensland, that the Japs are a great danger to the white workers in that district.

J. M. Barrie is extremely fond of his native Forfarshire.

The King of Belgium is developing a mania for building.

President Loubet has finished the sixth year in the French Presidency.

King Edward receives daily no fewer than 3000 newspapers and 1000 letters.

John Alexander Dowie has secured options on $500,000 worth of land in Mexico.

The Pope has consented to sit to M. Carolus Duran, the French artist, for his portrait.

PRIZE SECURED BY MORGAN.

Financier Pays High Price for Old Crystal Cup.

Herewith is a picture of the Crystal Cup bought by J. Pierpont Morgan the other day in London for the highest price ever paid for such an object, $51,000.

The cup is catalogued as a bi[illegible] drinking vessel with a cover for an invalid's use—of [illegible] Italian workmanship. It is [illegible] long, and about a foot [illegible] exact, 12¾ inches high. The top section, at a little distance, looks much like the outline of a turtle perched upon a pedestal, with an ornate support for a figure of Neptune surmounting the turtle's back. Persons who have seen a giant [illegible] gather from that form an idea of Diberon's [illegible] to size. The catalogue describes the cup as "roughly resembling a monster."

The head of the dragon-like monster forms the spout of the vessel, and "the monster shape," in the words of the catalogue, "is lost in the fluted shell-like effect of the general outline." Back of the neck, and spread over the forward end, or shoulders, of the beast are two wings. The [illegible] and its base is carved with [illegible] shells in low relief. The [illegible] Neptune, which surmounts [illegible] depicts the sea god astride a dolphin, and the dolphin rests upon a wave pattern base. The cup has gold mounts of simple design, but enriched with stray [illegible] opaque and transluscent enamels, with precious stones.

The under side of the handle, the statuette of Neptune astride the dolphin—and the upper end of the [illegible] stem, which show through the crystal body of the vase, are also chased and enameled.

BAT CANNOT BREAK.

Invention Will Please Heavy-Hitting Base Ball Players.

The base ball fan, or, more correctly speaking, the base ball player, will hail the advent of the non-breakable bat that has made its appearance. The most desirable and hitherto unknown attribute of a base ball bat is attained by cutting a spiral groove in the wood and inserting therein, flush with the surface of the bat, some strengthening material, such as steel wire or silk tape or sinew. The spiral is made to run from a point just above the handle, so as not to interfere with a good comfortable grip, to a point just below where the ball ordinarily strikes.

Care has to be exercised, of course, in fastening the ends of the strengthening material sound in the groove to prevent the developments of weak spots, particularly at the handle extremity. The groove, of course, is made large enough to detract appreciably from the normal strength of the wood of the particular section used.

Blacksnake's Big Breakfast.

Walking in the woods, Harry and Joe Robinson, boys, discovered a gray squirrel's nest in a tree. Climbing up to investigate they found a big blacksnake's head protruding from the nest.

They beat the snake until it fell to the ground and then killed it. They then made a post-mortem examination of the carcass and found that the snake had made breakfast off the young squirrels, and was evidently awaiting the return of the parents. The reptile measured five feet seven inches in length.—Dennisville correspondence Philadelphia Telegraph.

Drove Into Swarm of Bees.

Joshua Willits, mail carrier between Wrightstown and Bordentown, one afternoon, near Chesterfield, drove into a swarm of bees.

The horse, wagon and the [illegible] were literally covered with bees. When [illegible] the bees it was nothing short of a miracle that himself and horse were not stung to death.—Dispatch from Trenton to Philadelphia Telegraph.

Mr. Jung's Rooster.

William Jung of Liberty recently purchased a rooster of dealers in thoroughbred poultry. A few days after Mr. Jung became the owner of the rooster he discovered an egg in the coop where the fowl was confined. As he had no companions it must have deposited the egg itself. Mr. Jung says he is getting eggs right along.—Kingston Daily Leader.

FARM NOTES.

PLANTER, STOCKMAN AND TRUCK GROWER.

would prefer large or small cows for dairy or milk giving purposes. To make a short answer we would prefer the cow that would give the most and best milk and would keep at it longest. The object in view should always be kept foremost. If you have a cow that is just such a milker as you wish, she is the best cow without reference to her size.

If the purpose is to buy a dairy herd, the fact that there are special dairy breeds must not be ignored, and these are mostly small though the Holsteins come in of fair size. But if the idea is to get cows for the farm, where it is desirable to raise calves as well as to get milk, size should be considered. In that case we advise getting a medium to large cow of a well known milking strain.

Our fathers would have thought it strange had we talked of feeding hay to hogs or keeping in a supply of hay as a winter feed for hogs. But this is done now in many places as regularly as keeping hay for feeding the horses and cattle. Cow peas and alfalfa have been proven good feed for hogs, not unlike pasture feed in the main, but only finishing grains.

If you have a male colt to put on pasture this spring, don't try to make him stay in the pasture by himself. He just won't do it. He'll find some way to get out, and after that no fence will bother him much. Give the colt company or cross company. A good disposition old horse is good, but a gentle old gray mare is the very best company for colts.

Corn Husks and Wheat Chaff.

H. L. D., Scottsville, writes: Please give me the feeding value of corn husks and wheat chaff as a feed for cow.

The following table gives the composition of corn husks and wheat chaff:

	Protein	Fiber	Extract	Fat
	Pct.	Pct.	Pct.	Pct.
Corn husks	2.5	15.8	28.3	7
Wheat chaff	4.5	36.	34.6	1.4

Wheat chaff contains about twice as much protein, crude fiber and fat as corn husks. These foods are low in protein and fat and only constitute cheap forms of roughness, more valuable as a filler for ruminating animal than for their entire plant, and they are also considerably lower in price than corn leaves. Wheat chaff contains about as much digestible nutrients as wheat straw, but it is poorer in digestible nutrients than oat straw containing only about one-fourth as much digestible protein. Neither form of roughness thus compares well with hay from any of the legumes or tame grasses. At the same time corn husks and wheat chaff can certainly be utilized to advantage on the farm if fed in proper amounts.—Prof. Stone.

Watering Fowls.

To keep poultry healthy plenty of fresh water must be kept within easy reach of them. Crocks, pans and such like have to be filled several times a day. The young chicks are apt to get drowned when enough water is kept for a short length of time; besides the water gets old and unhealthy. My plan is to take a small keg at both ends, set the keg upright on box or frame about a foot from ground, put a curved tube, inside, put a vessel under lower end of tube. When water is put in the keg the vessel will run full of water to the lower end of tube. The depth of water can be regulated by raising or lowering the tube. If keg is filled with fresh water every morning there will always be a fresh supply of fresh water in the vessel. This is the best device for watering poultry I know of. It is a great labor-saver.—H. C. Marsch, Tuscumbia, Tenn.

Soy Beans and Millet For Hay.

J. S. C., Russellville, Tenn., writes: Will soy beans mature early enough to sow with millet for hay? What proportion of each should be used? Should soy beans be sown with drill and fertilizer?

Some of the early maturing varieties of soy beans will be ready to cut with the standard varieties of millet if sown in drills, say two weeks before the millet was sown. The millet might then be sown broadcast and covered with a cultivator. One of the best varieties of soy beans to sow with millet is the mammoth yellow. A mixture of soy beans and millet will make an excellent quality of hay, and is easier cured than that from cowpeas. You should sow from a half bushel to three pecks of soy beans per acre, and a gallon to a gallon and a half of millet seed.—Ed.

Sandy Soil For Fruits.

Sandy soils are good fruit soils. They are early, and are better adapted to the finer fruits and berries. Good results follow careful cultivation. Peaches require high, dry and moderately fertile soil, and do best on top of hills.—Southern Fruit Grower.

J. M. Barrie is extremely fond of his new Lochshire.

The King of Belgium is developing a taste for painting.

Colonel Loudon has finished his year in the French Presidency.

Mr. Leland receives daily no fewer than 1000 newspapers and 1000 letters.

Senator Arthur P. Gorman has seen a $5,000 worth of land rise in value.

The Pope has consented to sit to Carolus Duran, the French artist, for his portrait.

PRIZE SECURED BY MORGAN.

Financier Pays High Price for Old Crystal Cup.

Herewith is a picture of the Crystal Cup bought by J. Pierpont Morgan the other day in London for the highest price ever paid for such an object, $81,000.

The cup is catalogued as a biberon—that is, a drinking vessel with a spout, for an object of midsixteenth century workmanship. It is 16¼ inches long and about a foot tall, or, to be more exact, 12¾ inches high. The reproduction at a little distance, presents much the outline of a turtle poised upon a pedestal, with an ornate support for a figure of Neptune surmounting the turtle's back. Persons who have seen a giant sea tortoise may get some idea that form an idea of the shell's outline, without reference to color. The catalogue describes the cup as "roughly resembling a monster."

The head of the diminutive monster forms the spout of the vessel, and the "monster shape," in the words of the catalogue, "is lost in the fluted, shell-like roof of the general outline." The back of the neck, and spread over the forward end, or shoulders, of the body, are wings. The stem is uniform, and the base is carved with cockle shells in low relief. The statute of Neptune, which surmounts the cover, depicts the sea god astride a dolphin, and the dolphin rests upon, or rises from a wave pattern base. The cup and cover are gold mounts of simple forms, but enriched with stray work in opaque and translucent enamels, set with precious stones.

The upper side of the handle—on which is the figure of Neptune astride the dolphin—and the upper end of the basal stem, which show through the crystal body of the vase, are also chased and enameled.

BAT CANNOT BREAK.

Invention Will Please Heavy-Hitting Base Ball Players.

The base ball fan, or, more correctly speaking, the base ball player, will hail with delight the non-breakable bat that has made its appearance. This new, desirable and hitherto unknown quantity of a base ball bat is attained by cutting a spiral groove in the wood and inserting therein, flush with the surface of the bat, some strengthening material, such as steel wire or steel ribbon. The spiral is made commencing from a point just above the handle, so as not to interfere with a good comfortable grip, to a point just below where the ball ordinarily strikes.

Of course to be exercised, of course, in fastening the ends of the strengthening material wound in the groove to prevent the developments of weak spots, particularly at the handle extremity. The groove, of course, is not enough to distract appreciably from the normal strength of the wood in whatever section used.

Blacksnake's Big Breakfast.

Two boys in the woods, Harry and [illegible] boys, discovered a gray squirrel's nest in a tree. Climbing up to it they found a big blacksnake's head protruding from the nest. They killed the snake until it fell to the ground and then killed it. They made a post-mortem examination of the carcass and found that the snake had made breakfast off four young squirrels; and was evidently awaiting the return of the parents. The snake measured five feet seven inches in length.—Dennisville correspondence Philadelphia Telegraph.

Drove Into Swarm of Bees.

Joseph Willitts, mail carrier between Wrightstown and Bordentown, this afternoon, near Chesterfield, drove into a swarm of bees.

The horse, wagon and the driver were literally covered with bees, and he thinks it was nothing short of a miracle that himself and horse were not put to death.—Bordentown correspondence Philadelphia Telegraph.

Mr. Jung's Rooster.

Mr. Jung of Liberty recently purchased a rooster of dealers in thoroughbred poultry. A few days after he became the owner of the fowl he discovered an egg in the nest where the fowl was confined, as there had no companions it must have been the egg itself. Mr. Jung says the hen is getting eggs right along.—Kingsley Leader.

BURROS FOND OF BEER.

Las Vegas Proud of the Thirst of Buster and Broncho.

Two beer guzzling burros are among the chief objects of interest at Las Vegas. Buster and Bronco are the names of these two curiosities in the animal line, whose admirers are ready to go broke at any time betting on the claim that they can drink more beer than any other kind of animals that may visit the camp.

Two-legged animals of any variety are not barred, so deep and profound is the belief of the sports in the thirst and liquid capacity of Buster and his side kicker, Bronco.

These imitation mules were among the first arrivals in Vegas. "Old man" Morgan, a conspicuous character among the fortune hunters, started with them for the gold diggings, but decided to stop at the site of the railroad town.

While Morgan is the nominal owner of the burros, the whole population claims an interest in them. As both animals are of a gentle disposition, all the newcomer has to do to ingratiate himself in their esteem is to spend the price of two bottles of beer—a bottle for Buster and one for Bronco.

The owner avers that their appetite for beer is natural. The sports of the camp declare in one voice that if there is anything cultivated about their unusual appetite it is the most beautiful specimen of cultivation that they have ever seen.

It is yet an unsolved question as to which of the two can dispose of the most beer, and every saloon man in Vegas has a standing offer to supply the stuff if some tenderfoot is prepared to furnish the cash with the order. —Los Angeles Examiner.

Sword of Honor for Stoessel.

The sword has been designed by Flarze, a French artist. It was seen and greatly admired by King Edward during his recent visit to Paris.

Big Pennsylvania Rattler.

One of the largest rattlesnakes seen in this section for many years was killed near here Friday by Irvin Shipley.

At present a number of men are employed to cut hoop poles on what is known as "Hog Back." While the men were engaged shortly before noon Friday they were startled by the cry of a companion in distress. Looking around they saw one of their number shinning it up a friendly dogwood tree, while near the base of the tree lay a venomous looking rattlesnake.

Seizing a club Irwin Shipley quickly despatched the reptile, which measured over three feet, and as a reward for his services he is now in possession of eleven rattles and a button.—Ohiopyle correspondence Connecticut Courier.

Died After Encounter With Snake.

A few minutes after killing a large snake in the yard of his summer residence at Aliquippa, Pa., George Wood, a school director in the Thirty-first ward, died very suddenly of a hemorrhage, which, it is believed, was brought on by the excitement.

He reached Aliquippa shortly before 6 o'clock and on entering the yard of his summer home was startled to see a reptile in the path. He killed it and continued on his way to the house. He plainly showed his excitement and suddenly became ill. He was attacked by hemorrhages and died before a physician could be summoned.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Lion of Cheronea.

One of the most interesting restorations in Greece is the recent putting in place of the Lion of Cheronea. It commemorated the Battle of Cheronea (B. C. 338), in which Demothenes took part as a heavy-armed soldier.

FACE THAT NEVER CHANGES

Wind and Waves Beat in Vain Against "Old Man of the Sea."

Among the curious rock formations along the New England coast, probably none arouse more interest among summer visitors than the striking profile of "The Old Man of the Sea," which is clearly beheld when the observer looks at a large boulder at a certain angle on Nubble island, York beach, Me. The mad waves in times of storm beat with fury against the old man's face, but he never changes his stolid countenance.

DOG THAT GOES VISITING.

Displays No Partiality, and Makes Calls in Regular Order.

"There's a dog in our neighborhood," says a lady who resides on one of the residence streets uptown, "that has a regular round of visits to make every morning.

"I find out by comparing notes with a number of my neighbors that this particular dog makes a visit to each house every morning, and to some places he makes a call each afternoon. He is a good-natured fellow, and he will come in, act greatly pleased to see those who talk to him, accept with gratitude any bit of sweet or little morsel of meat that happens to be left from the breakfast, stay around a few minutes and then go on to the next house, where he goes through the same program. I suppose he makes the trips because he gets something to eat at each place and is petted and made a good deal of by all the women and children.

"There have been some changes in the neighborhood this spring and some of the old friends moved away, but that never bothered this dog. He made early calls upon the new families, and without the formality of an introduction. Within a week he had them all upon his calling list. I have watched from the windows many times and I find that he makes his calls in regular order."—Utica Observer.

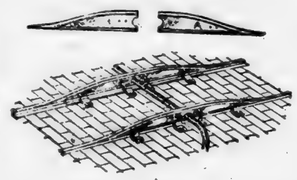
Fish Dragged Boy Into River.

Thomas Stewart, 9 years old, about 5 o'clock one evening was fishing on Pier 39, North Wharves. Unfortunately, and fish were not in a biting humor and Thomas fell into a doze. While he was thus meditating upon the sport of the rod and reel a large fish grabbed the bait which was slyly stuck on the hook of Thomas's line and started off for Cape May.

The fish did not know there was anything attached to the line. So suddenly did he start that Thomas did not have time to balance himself and consequently followed the line and incidentally the fish.

Fellow fishermen heard the splash and the cry "Man overboard!" was sent up by a dozen throats. A man seized a boathook and caught the clothing of the boy as he was disappearing for the last time.—Philadelphia Press.

Protect Fire Hose.



The stoppage of street cars in time of fire, due to stretching the fire hose across the car tracks, is a matter of great annoyance, if not expense, to the passengers. This is sometimes avoided by elevating the hose sufficiently to permit cars to pass under it. A simpler patented arrangement is to elevate the track over the hose, as indicated herewith.

Horses Know Their Business.

The firemen connected with the steamer Gov. Fairfield of Saco, Me., claim that they know before they leave the engine house whether the services of the steamer are really needed. This is due to the action of the pair of big blacks which draw the engine. When the fire has progressed so far as to be worthy of a respectable fire company's attention, the horses start off as willingly as any horses in the world, but when the alarm is false and the services of the firemen not needed they invariably balk.

20-Pound Connecticut River Salmon.

John Flynn received Monday afternoon a salmon caught in the Connecticut river in the vicinity of Lyme. It weighed nearly twenty pounds and was a fine specimen of its kind.

This is the first salmon caught in the Connecticut in two years. In days gone by the Connecticut was famed for its salmon, but of late years their presence has been regarded nothing short of a rarity.

It is quite probable this will be the only one caught this season.—Hartford Courant.

GOT IMMENSE PILOT FISH.

Hawaiian Shark Hunting Party Returned with Treasure.

Not only did the shark hunting party of Sunday kill the largest shark of the season, but incidentally they managed to bring to shore the largest pilot fish even seen in Honolulu.

For this latter killing, however, they appear to take no credit. The fish was attached to the dead body of the shark. The fish was caught and placed in a tank at Young Brothers' wharf, where it remains at present. It is about nine inches long and is of a dark brownish blue color. Its most remarkable characteristic is the large "sucker" which extends over the whole top of the head and by which he at will attaches himself to the body of the shark which he "adopts."

When put into a glass tank at Young's this morning after he had been taken with a net from the body of his huge friend, the fish acted in a frantic manner, dashing about the tank, presumably in a hopeless attempt to find another shark. Finally he seemed to get reconciled and attached himself to the wall of his glass prison.—Hawaiian Star.

CURIO IN OIL PAINTING.

Well Worked Out Study Framed in Bone of Whale.

Here is one of the most curious oil paintings in the world. The medium selected for the study is a piece of bone of a whale, which carries a frame of its own. The picture itself, a study of a lighthouse and a barren shore, is therefore very appropriately framed. —New York Herald.

Suit for Gallows.

A remarkable civil action has just been instituted at Lewiston, Mont., by County Attorney Ares against Tubbs Brothers, contractors. The old county jail was bought in by the contractors for $10,000. According to their understanding, they were to have all of the old timber in the jail yard, and so they carried the gallows. This week the sheriff of Meagher county applied to Sheriff Slater for the use of the gallows for the execution of H. H. Metzger. It was then discovered that the gallows was missing. The county commissioners deny that the gallows was sold and bring an action to compel the contractors to return the gallows or pay its value.

City Dwellers' Eyes.

One of the chief causes of nervous fatigue is said by an optician to be due to the fact that, in city life, men's eyes are always fixed on near objects. When at rest the eyes move apart until they are parallel, as if they were looking at the horizon. All the time, therefore, that a person is looking at objects close to him the little muscles of the eye are doing tiring work. That is why the eyes feel rested by an extensive view of open country.

Find Stirs Archeologists.

Excavations made around Hermosillo, Mexico, have resulted in the unearthing of several old monuments bearing Chinese inscriptions. News of the finding of these monuments has caused some excitement among the archeologists because they are believed to prove the theory that Mexico in past centuries was inhabited by Orientals.

Keeping Events in Order.

By an unusual kink in the course of events the town of Stratford, Conn., is credited with three births, three marriages and three deaths for the month of April.

PROVIDES A NEW THRILL.

Novelty for the Delectation of Amusement Seekers.

The miniature railway and the undulating merry-go-round have pulled upon the public amusement seeker, who is so fickle in his taste that he is ever craving novelties. Without much merit other than its novelty a St. Louis inventor proposes to combine the miniature railway with the merry-go-round or flying horses in one device, affording this blase amusement park devotee a momentary sensation of a new kind. The carousal feature is mounted upon a truck, running upon tracks of some suitable type, and propelled with a tiny locomotive, cable or electric motor. As the train advances the unique car is caused to rotate, undulate and undergo all those diabolical movements that the patrons finds so exhilarating and mirth provoking. The safety of this device is a recommendation shared by but few of the modern pleasure railways, and the large amount of ground necessary for its enjoyable operation precludes its use outside of the spacious amusement park.

Cow's Brave Defense of Fawn.

During a heavy rainstorm Wednesday one of Mrs. Lawson's cows came home without her calf, only two days old. Yesterday the mother cow was grazing when there appeared a beautiful little fawn, chased by three hounds. Thinking, perhaps, it was her lost calf, the cow went to its rescue, as the little fawn was nearly run down. In the struggle for the possession of the fawn between the dogs and the cow two of the dogs were killed, while the third was so badly wounded it left the field of battle.

The cow brought the fawn to the stable yard, and now tenderly cares for it, nursing it as if it were its real mother. It will be allowed to run at large and will be raised with the cattle.—Roxbury correspondence Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Gourd Centuries Old.

Mrs. Elam, an old Cherokee woman, living near Rose, Indian Territory, is the owner of a gourd which, if tradition is correct, has been handed down from generation to generation in her family for nearly 400 years. The family tradition says the gourd was raised in the year 1516 in what is now Ohio, but, however that may be, it is very old in any event, as it has been in Mrs. Elam's possession for forty years, and was esteemed an ancient relic when given her. It is not a large gourd, and is a very dark red color and as highly polished as an old violin, though Mrs. Elam says that no polish save age has ever been applied to it.

New French Gun.

A new rapid fire gun has recently been invented by an ingenious Dane by the name of Rexer. The gun has been called for its originator. The Rexer is in reality a sort of large musket. In size it is rather small for a gun, as the illustration shows. It can be strapped to the saddle of an artillery horse, and in service each gunner is provided with a second horse, which is loaded with eight thousand cartridges.

The movement of the Rexer is automatic. It is believed to be a perfect firearm of its kind, and the heads of artillery look to it to dethrone guns now being used by all armies. With the Rexer it is possible to discharge shots at a rate of three hundred a minute.

Good Substitute for Lobster.

A Damariscotta, Me., man proposes to save the lobster from extinction by providing a substitute. This he finds in the crabs which swarm the Maine coast. This crustacean has not been popular in the past solely, we are told, because of the labor necessary to get the meat from the shell. The Maine man is going to put the meat on the market "shucked" and claims that the present high prices of sea food makes his work profitable. The lobster will receive the benefit in both a decreased demand for lobster meat and in the removal of the crab which consumes much valuable lobster food.

Bibles Brought by Flood.

Providence is good in providing literature for those who are sojourning within the walls of the territorial prison.

As an example of what the tides may bring to the most appropriate places, the Colorado river bore a boxful of bibles from some unknown up-river point to ground on a sandbar opposite the Arizona penitentiary. A Yuma Indian found the box and left it at the prison, its natural destination. —Tucson correspondence Los Angeles Times.

STAMPS AS WALL PAPER.

Philadelphia Girl Has Unique Decoration for "Den."

For more than fourteen years, or, to be exact, since March 26, 1891, Miss Sadie Disston of Keystone street has arduously collected canceled postage stamps, with the purpose of covering the walls of her "den." At last the task has been completed and the room presents an appearance resembling the mosaic tapestry of olden times.

The room is 10x15 feet. The paper was made into panels 28 inches wide, on white linen, which were then placed together by a narrow walnut molding. The stamps were accumulated so quickly that by the end of the first year two panels were finished, the first containing 6,004 stamps. The ground of the panel design is made up of English penny stamps. By July, 1894, seven panels were completed. Almost every country is represented. In the center of one panel is a blue triangular Cape of Good Hope, and on another a white Royal Mint, London.

After Miss Disston found that there would not be any difficulty in getting the required number of stamps, having one week received through the mail 14,000, little care was taken in the number stuck on each panel, until the total reached 99,998.—Philadelphia Record.

Noted Piece of Wood Carving.

The elaborate piece of work here shown was carved from a solid piece of boxwood with the aid of an ordinary pen knife and is valued at $10,000. It is said to have been the cause of a wager in London as to whether it was one piece of wood or no. To prove that it was solid it was placed in a caldron of boiling oil and allowed to remain there for several hours, when it was withdrawn still complete.

Wedding Gifts From Pet Animals.

Several of the spring brides have received very handsome presents from the pet dogs and cats and other animals in the households of friends. Two pet dogs recently sent a bride asparagus tongs, the cats selected a cake basket of antique pattern and the canary bird made a happy choice of after-dinner coffee cups. So that when a whole battalion of animals are attached to a fashionable home, and something may be expected from each, it is really a matter of serious consideration.—Town and Country.

Enjoys "Simple Life."

A Bowdoin college student took a notion the other day that he would practice the simple life for a change. He sold all his fine furniture, removed his pictures and photographs from the wall, carpets from the floor and draperies from the windows. Even the electric light fixtures went down in the crusade against luxury. He now sits in a straight-back chair in a room lighted at night by candles and retires early. He says that he never fully enjoyed life before.

81, Has Coat He Wore at 4.

Calvin Wells of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., 81 years old, is still vigorous for his age. He has a coat which he wore when he was four years old, and which is in perfect condition.

It was made by a tailor in Northampton, and was of most correct mode for those days, being double-breasted and swallow-tailed. The dimensions are: Waist, 16 inches; length of front, 6 inches; back, 7 inches; sleeve, 8 inches.

Lamp From Gezer.

Gezer was existing when Joshua led Israel over Jordan. One of the Pharaohs took it and gave it to his daughter when she married Solomon. Solomon strengthened it as a frontier fortress.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Elder, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

Thursday, July 27, 1905.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

UNION CLUBBING LIST....

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Home & Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Dixie Home	1.00
THE UNION Saturday News	1.25
THE UNION And Weekly Age Herald	1.25
THE UNION And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.80
THE UNION And Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION And Tri-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

THE NEW COMPANY.

Saturday, the 22d, a new corporation called the Farmers' Warehouse and Fertilizer Company was formed with headquarters at Thorsby. The capital stock is $10,000, divided in 400 shares at $25 each, non-assessable. It is authorized to build and operate Fertilizer factories, warehouses, cotton gins, oil mills, etc. There are 38 names as incorporators, the great majority being farmers. The Board of Directors consists of J. F. Peterson, B. N. Martin, G. W. Phalin, T. M. Driver, J. H. Parnell, Sam W. Collins and J. W. Hayes. J. Bice, President; I. S. Gerald, Treasurer; J. D. Collins, Secretary. The meeting left the selection of a General Manager to the Directors. The people of Thorsby and tributary communities are very enthusiastic over the new enterprise, and on Saturday after the incorporation papers were made out persons were putting down their names for stock and depositing 20 per cent to bind their offers. Thorsby is an ideal place for a COTTON MILL for many reasons, but the chief one, and a reason which will appeal to all mill operators is the "help;" the city of Thorsby has a large Scandinavian population, and like President Roosevelt they don't believe in "race suicide," and in case of the location of a cotton mill at Thorsby these people could increase almost any number of their kindred that are now living in the bleak northwest to come to the "sunny south" by assuring them of steady employment. These people, taken as a whole, don't look for a place where they can live without work, but expect to work for what they get, and are noted for their steadiness as employes. Now, push for a cotton mill. We'll not only raise cotton in Chilton county, but we'll spin it also, and get that profit, and have a home market for the products of the orchards and truck gardens.

THE CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The ninth annual convention of the Chilton County Sunday School Association held at Maplesville July 22 and 23 was by far the most successful in the history of the organization.

Fifty delegates represented the following twenty schools: Pleasant Grove, Shiloh, Sardis, Valley Creek, Mulberry, Macedonia, Cox's Chapel, Riderville, Maplesville, Pilgrim's Rest, Clanton Baptist, Verbena Baptist and Methodist, Salem, Mt. Carmel, Ebenezer, Alpine, Thorsby and Fairview.

Many visitors from adjoining villages and communities evinced unusual interest in the convention and gave the speakers the inspiration of a crowded house at each session.

Judge Deason's absence, on account of illness, was regretted, but the reins of government were placed in the very capable hands of Mr. F. M. Stillwell of Selma, a prominent worker in the Dallas County Association, and Chilton is sincerely grateful to Dallas for lending her this able presiding officer, whose genial manner and thorough understanding of what was needed gave the proceedings the ease and smoothness of well ordered machinery.

Judge Joseph Carthel, the State Secretary, whose successful work has resulted in Alabama being the best organized state in the South, was present and gave the convention the strength and interest of his wide knowledge of this modern Sunday school movement. His earnestness and force, his clear demonstration of practical plans and methods make his work valuable and helpful.

Mr. W. E. Holloway, of Montgomery, who was instrumental in organizing the association ten years ago, was present on Sunday, giving an interesting description of his class of one hundred members in the Court Street Sunday school.

The reports of the District Presidents showed that some progress has been made toward the goal of our ambition to make Chilton county a banner county.

All of the districts except Clanton beats 4 and 11, have been organized and nearly all the schools in these districts are ever green. It is earnestly hoped that before the state convention meets in April, 1906, that all the districts will be organized and a convention held in every one.

A very interesting part of the program was an "experience meeting," so to speak, when the superintendents talked to us about their schools, told us some of the difficulties they encountered, of many things that encouraged them and of the good resultant in their communities from the influence of the Sunday schools. Among those responding to this were Messrs. Groom, Fox, Collier, Strock, Milling, Adams, Broadhead, Wilkins, Miller and Glass.

Rev. Davis, the minister of the church wherein the sessions were held, made an instructive and entertaining talk Sunday afternoon, kindly supplying the place of an absent speaker.

Financially the association is prospering. The sum of fifty dollars was pledged for state and county work, thirty being paid the treasurer before adjournment.

The officers elected for the coming year are:

President—T. U. Crumpton, Maplesville.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mary C. Gibson, Verbena.

Executive Committee — Chairman Dr. A. Horn, Thorsby; Tipton Mullins, Clanton; Dr. H. W. Caffey, Verbena; Judge L. H. Reynolds, Clanton; Judson Strock, Clanton.

Vice presidents, who are also presidents of the districts: No. 1, W. H. Shaw, Jemison; No. 2, G. L. Speer, Maplesville; No. 3, J. Bice, Thorsby; No. 4, E. B. Deason; No. 5, Dr. H. W. Caffey, Verbena; No. 6, H. J. Groom, Maplesville.

The citizens of Maplesville opened their homes to the delegates and visitors with cordial welcome and gracious hospitality, making each one seem an honored guest. Dinner was served each day at the church and the abundance of good things provided was further evidence of the hospitable intent of those good people. Most heartily do we thank them for their very great kindness to the strangers within their gates.

Especially do we wish to assure Mr. J. W. Mitchel, Mr. T. U. Crumpton and Mr. George W. Fox, of our sincere appreciation of their untiring efforts to add to the welfare and comfort of the guests and to promote the success of the convention.

SECRETARY.

RANDOLPH.

We are pleased to meet the dear readers of THE UNION again. The long-distance telephone from Selma to Birmingham is here now, and it makes Randolph seem more important. Luther Palmer has greatly added to the appearance of his residence and the postoffice building by having them nicely painted. The Southern Railway has built a nice section house between the depot and Howison's. R. M. Hubbard and Frazier Fitts were in town Monday. The Baptists held a successful meeting at Shady Grove (Rev. J. E. Champion, pastor) last week and several were baptized. Mesdames S. M. Adams and S. J. Heath made a short visit here Sunday. This is one of Mrs. Adams' former homes, and of course it was a pleasure to meet her again. A very successful meeting was recently held a few miles north of town in a grove. The leading ministers were Revs. Sterkey and Lumpkin. B. F. Rasberry, of Hubbard, was a pleasant caller Monday. Lewis Meroney came up from Selma Friday on a visit to his mother. Mrs. J. P. Barrett, of Thorsby, accompanied by her son (Charles) and daughter (Miss Maude) visited friends here last week. Miss Pearl Mason is visiting the family of C. W. Brand. Isaac Waldrup and daughters visited relatives here last week. With best wishes to THE UNION.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

ALL-DAY SINGING.

An all-day singing will be held at Liberty church on the 1st Sunday in August. Everybody invited, and bring your books and baskets. Don't forget.

tf ELBERT LITTLEJOHN.

Thorsby, Ala., July 24, 1905.

Editor Union:

Please give me a few lines in your paper. The alliance met at Rocky Mount church on July 19-20, and had a grand time, a good attendance and everything points to an upbuilding of the Alliance in this county. The new officers are: Moses Robinson, President; J. Bice, Vice Pres.; J. W. Sorrells, Secretary-Treasurer and Business Manager; G. W. Thomas, Chaplain; J. H. Thomas, Lecturer and Organizer; W. H. Conway, Assist Lec. and Org.; W. H. Bean, Doorkeeper; W. L. Honeycutt, Asst. D. K.; G. W. Campbell, Sergeant at Arms; J. A. Rodgers, J. E. Robinson and J. N. Scott, Executive Committee. The Alliance voted to send Bro. J. H. Thomas to Auburn for the ten days' farmers' school which opens there July 25, and on his return will visit every community in the county in the interest of the Alliance; I hope every person who now, or ever did, believe in the principles of the Alliance will go out and hear him, it will sure do you good. Bro. Armstrong will be at Collins Chapel on the Friday before the 1st Sunday in August (4th) and will make two addresses, one on the alliance, and one on agriculture. So all come and hear him. You will not be disappointed, for he will tell you something good.

Yours truly,

J. D. COLLINS.

COOPERS.

Editor Union:

Our farmers are about through work. Watermelons are ripe and we're having a good time with crops good, though needing rain. The Revs. Hudson Hughes and T. J Deason have just closed the series of meetings they've been holding here, and seem to have accomplished much good. There were five accessions to the church. Cooper and Providence clubs played ball here last Saturday. It was a hot game, the score being 10 to 7 in favor of Providence.

PLAYER.

JEMISON.

Editor Union:

We've been dry, but had a fine rain and am now all right. Well, brother farmers, we won a big thing by holding our cotton this year, but we must not quit our organization now, but keep it up and stick to it. We can control if we only stick together. We don't want too much for our crops, but we do want the full value. We should be content with 10 cents for our last year's crop. Now, let's fix so that we can govern the price on what we pick this year. It will sure make a big difference. Just think how many thousand dollars has been made in Chilton county alone by not selling at 7 cents or less. Hurrah for old Chilton, 2 warehouses and fertilizer plants. Now, brother farmers, come and take stock in your own warehouse at Thorsby. It is a grand enterprise, and we can make of it what we will. We have paid enough profit in the past to build a good many factories. We Thorsby folks are not against any other business, but we intend to work for our own business, and our business will go when we say "go." Things ain't like they were 15 years ago. Then we had the money class against us, but now they see their mistake and don't fight us. "United we stand, divided we fall." Let's do our duty to ourselves and our county and take stock either in our own enterprise or the other, but anyway get in line with one of them. Respectfully,

T. M. DRIVER.

Gate City, Ala., July 21, 1905.

Editor Union:

Herewith please find $1.00, for which send me THE UNION and Yellow Jacket one year. The two make a splendid combination. "The Union" supplies the sauce and the Yellow Jacket the "ginger," which keeps the opposition pretty well warmed up all the time. By the way, I meet up with my old acquaintances from Chilton occasionally about Birmingham which refreshes my recollections of by gone days. I met my old friend and schoolmate, John Gullahorn, Jr., a few days ago here in Gate City, whom I'd not seen in 24 years. When we attended school at Clanton under the Rev. Mr. Montgomery, and then John was but a small boy, but we had not forgotten each other's faces. We talked of the people of those days and the many changes which time has brought about in Chilton county. He told me that Clanton had two banks and a number of substantial brick business houses all built in the past few years, and that general improvement has been made on the farms throughout the whole county. I am so deeply impressed with the marvelous outcome of Clanton, Thorsby and surrounding country that it has created within me a desire to visit old Chilton some time during the coming fall, and renew my acquaintance with as many of my old friends and relatives as I can possibly meet. I've been reading in your paper of many all-day singings in different portions of the county, and I've been very much impressed with the idea of asking the singing people through your paper, to appoint a time and place, say some time in October, for an all-day singing, believing that this would be the most effectual means by which I could be able to meet with the greatest number of my friends and relatives. I hope to soon get a response from some of the singers along this line, for there is nothing I enjoy more than to mingle with the people in an all-day song service. Well do I remember the first singing class I ever taught. It was near Thorsby about 25 years ago, yet there are many of those still living in that same community who attended my school and whose memory I fondly cherish, and there are many others who have crossed over into the "Great Beyond." With best wishes to THE UNION and its many readers I am very respectfully,

BLANTON RIGGINS.

RUNAWAY MINOR.

All persons are hereby for bidden to harbor, employ or in any wise give aid or assistance to John Jackson, a minor son of the undersigned under penalty of the law.

E. F. JACKSON,

7 3 05 tf Clanton, Ala.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A British Board of Trade return shows that during 1904 453,877 emigrants left the United Kingdom, nearly half of whom went to the British colonies. Twenty-six per cent of the number went to Canada.

Woman has at last become alarmed at her own ascendency; she sees herself becoming "a power," with man meekly useless at her feet, and now she desires to reclaim her femininity before it is lost, observes the London Lady's Pictorial.

It is estimated that the Indian army, as reorganized by General Lord Kitchener, will require an increase of $10,000,000 for maintenance, states the Indianapolis News. The expenses of the establishment last year were $1,000,000 more than for any former year.

That America is not only the land of liberty, but of health, the survival of so many thousands of Confederates forty years after the closing of the war emphatically tests, concludes the Louisville Courier.

Women teachers of the United States are not paid as much as street cleaners. This in one sentence condenses the information in the huge report of the committee on salaries, tenure and pensions appointed by the National Educational Association at its Boston meeting two years ago.

A Kansas City judge has decided that "there are no loans in courtship and that anything which is given cannot be recovered." The girl who is asked in court to return courtship gifts should not only get the costs on the plaintiff, but she should recover cash damages for the humiliating publicity, adds the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

Truly these are sad days for royalties, thinks the Boston Transcript. Behold the shah of Persia in all the glory of forty-six large and thirty-two small rooms in a Vienna hostelry, unable to persuade the landlord to take his personal jewels as security for a day's board and lodging; and finally rescued from his embarrassment by the kindly offices of a plain, ordinary banker.

According to the New York Sun many immigrants change their names on arriving in this country because of the difficulty they find in getting them properly spelled. A good many residents of the East Side (New York City) have adopted as their surnames the names of streets. In Rivington street there is a tailor, Isaac Delancey; in West Broadway, a cap manufacturer, Solomon Ludlow; a tobacconist not far away sports the name of Abraham Clinton, and there is an an Israel Christie in Orchard street.

Kansas, which revolted against the octopus of oil, has revolted against the octopus of convention, declares the New York American. A Topeka minister invites men to attend his church in their shirt sleeves. Religion and discomfort are being gradually parted.

The fine points drawn by some of the Cuban judges are so fine you cannot see them with a magnifying glass, says the Havana Post. For instance, the Guanabacoa crime, where the fact was shown that the murderer had his knife sharpened just before killing his man, and the judges held that this act was not premeditation, but simply preparation.

The food on which the French Revolution fed fat was lack of food. With all the resources of the country drained to support a ruinous war and fill the pockets of Grand Ducal and other official grafters, industrial Russia is prostrate. Starvation faces multitudes, and with that spectre hovering over so many millions of Russians a strike quickly becomes part of the general protest against the hideous injustice of the system on which the tottering aristocracy rests, reflects the New York Press.

The Rev. G. L. Merrill, of St. Paul, Minn., sees in automobiles the fulfilment of the prophecy of Nahum, ii, 4: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." A reference to the chapter further discloses that in verse eight there is also a seeming allusion to these same chariots in the sentence: "Stand, stand, shall they cry; but none shall look back." No better description could be given of the conduct of the average chauffeur and his companions.

In spite of the fact that the utilization of water power for the creation of electric energy has increased to an extraordinary degree in recent years, it is to be noted that the power so far used is only an infinitesimal fraction of the aggregate water power of the world, says the Daily True American, of Trenton, N. J. There has been a remarkable development in scientific research and of the commercial application of principles well understood by electrical engineers, yet the aggregate water power utilized for electric energy in the world is probably 2,000,000 horsepower, which is about twice the steam power used in England and Ireland combined.

Academic Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President

Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer

We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WITH

The Union

FOR

$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.

If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address

The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

1011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

E. M. PINCKARD & CO.

General Merchandise and Cotton Buyers

CLANTON, - - - - - - ALABAMA

Why John D. Rockefeller is Not a Successful Man

By the Editor of Life.

THE Congregational ministers who petitioned the American board of commissioners for foreign missions not to accept from Uncle John D. Rockefeller a gift of one hundred thousand dollars to promote the dissemination of the gospel in foreign parts, raised an interesting issue. Their petition recited that Uncle John "stands before the public under repeated and recent formidable indictments in specific terms for methods which are morally iniquitous and socially destructive," and that "the acceptance of such a gift involves the constituents of the board in a relation implying honor toward the donor, and subjects the board to the charge of ignoring the moral issues involved."

There is no question about the wide prevalence of a conviction that there is something vitally wrong about Uncle John and his pile. His methods are believed to have been culpable. We presume they were. But it is the formidable, the awful, effectiveness of them that has made most of the trouble. Worse men than he have made much money by worse means, and we haven't bothered, but his methods have been applied with such consummate shrewdness and ability as to make him stand out as the arch-type of effectual avarice. Nobody, except his business rivals, is afraid of Uncle John, but people generally are very much afraid of what he stands for. They think his example has been extremely pernicious, and though some of them realize that the rapid development of a rich country and its amazing opportunities are what have made possible the phenomena he illustrates, they don't want him to be held up a model to pattern after.

The accumulation of such enormous fortunes as we have today, by such means as have been used to gather some of them, is not popular. It is unpopular because it fosters a ridiculously inequitable distribution of the country's available wealth, and because it imperils the stability of democratic government. To play the game well is commendable. To stack the cards isn't. Mr. Rockefeller has played the commercial game to admiration. We respect his skill. But we all suspect, that, not content with being surpassingly skilful, he has stacked the cards at times when it seemed expedient, and he thought it could be done with impunity. Thinking thus about him we cannot consider him, because he has done more than any other American to make Socialism, a lump of money that he has no real use for, at a cost to reputation which he could not afford. He is not beloved, not respected, not even hated, but is regarded by most of the community with half-humorous derision. For an able man to come in his old age to that, is pretty tragic. The Socialists rejoice in him, because he has done more than any other American to make Socialistic doctrines seem reasonable. For the same reason he greatly bothers conservative politicians and voters of all parties, who feel the need of providing against the multiplication of such phenomena as he, and are much perplexed to do it without restricting personal initiative too much. Altogether, we are sorry for Uncle John and would help him if we could.

COUNTY AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.

...g Term—Third Monday in May.
...Term—Fourth Monday in No...
...—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...ector—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...k—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

...ing Term—Second Monday in ...
...l Term—Second Monday in Sep...
...cellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...ister—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.

...Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

...ond Monday February, first Mon... April, first Monday June, second ...day July, second Monday August, ... Monday November.

County Officers.

...ge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...easurer—W. T. Callen.
...eriff—J. M. Morgan.
...Editor—J. O. Middleton.
...x Assessor—A. C. Mims.
...x Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

...st District—W. H. Conway.
...cond District—Alex Glasscock.
...ird District—R. P. Kendrick.
...urth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

...of. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

...P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

...n. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

...stors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would like published. Also if there are any changes in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

...th-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley, R. F. D. No. 1.

...anton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

...Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 1st Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

...Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman 1st Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

...Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 1st Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

...New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 1st Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

...Pleasant Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 1st Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

...Shoal Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 2nd Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

...Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas 1st Sunday. J. W. Littlejohn, clerk.

...Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas 1st Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

...Verbena Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

...Walnut Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

...Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; ...Saturday before the second Sunday; J. ...Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

...Liberty Mount M. E. Church—Rev. ...Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song ...service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

...Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—1st Saturday, Clanton.

...Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

...Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—First Saturday, Clanton.

...Maplesville Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—First Saturday, Billingsley.

...Verbena Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Saturday on or before full ...Marbury.

...Thorsby Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Saturday on or before full moon, ...

...Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Tuesday on or before full moon, ...

I. O. O. F.

...Clanton Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

...Jemison Lodge, No. 304—Second and ...Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

...Big Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ...Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

...Thermo Tribe, No. 90—First and ...Thursdays sleep. Visiting chiefs ...cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. ...A. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

...Clanton Lodge, of Thorsby—Second ...Fourth Saturdays.

ama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

ANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President

sion Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

on free; living expenses $92.00 sion. For information address it

mbination Offer

sh the Twice-a-Week ue of the Globe-Democrat WITH Union FOR

One Year Only $1.50

Democrat is issued Semi-Week- very Tuesday and Friday. It is nd has no equal or rival as a ern Newspaper.

of the World's Fair, all the news nd all the news of all the earth, emocrat during the coming year.

THE TIME.

d get your best home paper and f the World's Fair City, both Clanton, Ala.

cobs & Bros. and Rugs.

AGENTS—

stic Book Cases and Cabinets.

MINGHAM, ALA.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

KARD & CO.

se and Cotton Buyers

ALABAMA.

Why Rockefeller is Successful Man

itor of Life.

...ers who petitioned the American ...s for foreign missions not to accept ...Rockefeller a gift of one hundred thou... ...the dissemination of the gospel in ...g interesting issue. Their petition re... ...stands before the public under re... ...indictments in specific terms ...morally iniquitous and socially de... ...The acceptance of such a gift involves ...the board in a relation implying honor ...to the charge of ignoring the moral ...

...prevalence of a conviction that there ...John and his pile. His methods are ...ame they were. But it is the formid... ...that has made most of the trouble. ...ey by worse means, and we haven't ...applied with such consummate shrewd... ...ost as the arch-type of effectual ava... ...is afraid of Uncle John, but people ...t he stands for. They think his exam... ...though some of them realize that the ...and its amazing opportunities are what ...e illustrates, they don't want him to be ...

...s for men as we have today, by such ...of them, is not popular. It is unpop... ...accountable distribution of the country's ...the stability of democratic govern... ...ndible. To stack the cards isn't. Mr. ...d game to admiration. We respect his ...tent with being surpassingly skilful, he ...t seemed expedient, and he thought it ...ng thus about him we cannot consider ...any other American to make Socialistic ...e for at a cost to reputation which be... ...not respected, not even hated, but is re... ...th half-humorous derision. For all able ...pretty tragic. The Socialists rejoice in ...any other American to make Socialistic ...ame reason he greatly bothers conserva... ...s, who feel the need of providing against ...as he, and are much perplexed to do it ...too much. Altogether, we are sorry for ...could.

CLANTON AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

...Term—Third Monday in May. ...Term—Fourth Monday in No...

...g. L. Brewer, Tuskegee. ...—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville. ...Sam W. Collins, Clanton.

Chancery Court.

...Term—Second Monday in ...

...Term—Second Monday in Sep...

...ellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides. ...ter—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.

...Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

...Monday February, first Mon... ...April, first Monday June, second ...July, second Monday August, ...Monday November.

County Officers.

...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds. ...urer—W. T. Callen. ...—J. M. Morgan. ...tor—J. O. Middleton. ...Assessor—A. C. Mims. ...Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

...District—W. H. Conway. ...nd District—Alex Glasscock. ...rd District—R. P. Kendrick. ...th District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

...J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

...R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

...W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

...ers and clerks are cordially ask... ...and the editor any news regard... ...ther churches which they would ...ublished. Also if there are any ...in these notices please send cor...

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

...Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd ...E. R. Popwell, clerk, Billings... ...R. D. No. 1.

...on—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st ...d Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

...nut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, ...day. H. A. Harris, clerk.

...ty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman ...day. W. M. Wood, clerk.

...donia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, ...day. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

...Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, ...day. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

...ar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, ...day. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

...n Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 3rd ...J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

...'s Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas ...day. W. W. Littleton, clerk.

...t Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas. ...day. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

...ant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...day. T. J. Headley, clerk.

...Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st ...G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

...—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; ...before the second Sunday; J. ...nathy, clerk, Verbena.

...Mount M. E. Church—Rev. ...ell, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song ...every 2nd and 4th Sunday at... ...Prayer meeting every Wed... ...night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

...R. A. Chapter, No. 116— ...Saturday, Clanton.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...rth Saturday, Cooper.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...t Saturday, Clanton.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...t Saturday, Billingsley.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...Saturday on or before full ...Marbury

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...urday on or before full moon.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...day on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.

...Lodge—First and third Sat...

...Lodge, No. 304—Second and ...Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

...ick Camp, No. 190—First and ...days

I. O. R. M.

...Tribe, No. 90—First and ...days sleep. Visiting chiefs ...invited. E. B. Langston, C. ...R. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

...Lodge, of Thorsby—Second ...Saturdays.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to July 26, '05, 8,017.
Price same date, 10 1-4c.
Total receipts last season, 6,648.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

Mrs. Townsend brought her little daughter, Luella, to town Thursday and Dr. J. P. Hayes extracted a snag nearly 2 inches long from the child's foot. A very painful wound, but she is doing well.

Squire I. O. Rutherford was a visitor Thursday.

W. D. Dunlap was a welcome caller Thursday.

G. W. Edwards was in Clanton on Thursday.

Squire J. N. Dennis left here Tuesday for Auburn, where he will take the 10-day farming course at the experiment station. Bro. Dennis is an apt student and will carry away with him every bit of useful information that the professors give out, and apply it practically on his farm. He raises things on his farm. Last week he brought THE UNION the finest flavored watermelon we've tasted in a long while, and last February he took a scant two acres of land, broadcasted 700 pounds of home-mixed guano, sowed it in oats and cut 68 dozen bundles from the patch. How is that?

J. D. Wyatt was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

Sam W. Collins spent Saturday at Thorsby.

B. J. Honeycutt visited his father's place Friday.

Bush Baker and family were in town Monday. Mr. Baker paid a visit to Marble Valley in Coosa county a short time back and reports a good time.

W. Z. Childress and S. H. Riggins were in Clanton Monday.

R. C. Riggins was in town Monday.

W. J. and A. T. Headley were welcome callers Monday.

Wm. Moore, of Coopers, was a pleasant visitor Monday. He has been a little under the weather lately.

L. C. Cleckler, J. M. Burnett and Dalton Giles were in Clanton Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Wilson's infant died last Wednesday and was buried in New Salem cemetery Thursday evening.

Jim Caton and wife lost their daughter Mary, 4 years old, by death Wednesday, and buried her at New Salem cemetery Thursday afternoon.

Lee Hayes was in Clanton Monday.

J. W. Sorrells, the new business manager of the county alliance was in town Monday. He says the order is booming, and they had a big meeting last week.

W. N. Childress was a pleasant visitor Monday.

How does it feel to be held up in your own melon patch?

Squire J. J. McDowell was in Clanton Tuesday.

N. G. Ward and son, Walter, have gone to Blount county to spend a few days.

J. B. Gray has been appointed postmaster at Mountain Creek, in the place of T. J. Henderson.

R. J. Williams was in town Tuesday.

Jesse and Monroe Hayes were in Clanton Tuesday. They are the carrier and substitute for the new R. F. D. route that starts from Maplesville Aug. 15.

G. T. Elderry, general manager of the Chilton Warehouse and Fertilizer Co., is in Clanton, and is hustling the building arrangements. The L. and N. are putting in the side track for the plant.

One of Robert Popwell's living horses ran into a box car at the R. R. crossing on Main street and broke his back. The occupants of the buggy were Douglas Harper and a traveling salesman. Douglas was bruised a little and the other had his collar bone broken. Popwell has had some hard luck lately with his animals; had one driven to death a few weeks since, and now this accident.

Miss Nell Mullins is very ill with typhoid fever, and her condition causes her family and numerous friends much anxiety.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Pinckard have been at Tuskegee all this week, where they went to attend the funeral of Mrs. Pinckard's sister, Miss Debardeleben, who died very suddenly last Saturday.

Judge Reynolds is on the "Re-union" lately. Saturday he was at the Soldiers' Home at Mountain Creek, and the forepart of this week he spent at the Tuskegee gathering. Our judge is very popular in the state.

Mrs. John Garner returned Tuesday from a visit to Montgomery.

Elbert Littlejohn was in Clanton Wednesday.

W. R. Jackson, of Jemison, spent Wednesday in Birmingham.

There was a fight in Clanton Wednesday morning between B. C. Crawford and G. O. Glover. It seems that while Mr. Crawford is postmaster at Maplesville Mr. Glover is anxious to supplant him, and there you are.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

G. W. Reedy and Miss Sallie Lassiter.

COLORED.

Joe Hill and Florence Foshee. E. L. Williams and Wilder Dupree.

CHILDRESS CEMETERY.

All interested in the old Childress grave yard are asked to meet there the Wednesday after the second Sunday in August (16th) and help clean up and repair the lots.

tf

A NICE ESCALLOP.

Mix together two and one-half cups each of finely minced ham and bread crumbs; pack in deep patty pan tins; pour in a little milk; break an egg over each and bake in a moderate oven.

CHINESE CUSTARD.

Wash very thoroughly in boiling water a cupful of rice, then allow it to stand in cold water for a few minutes; stir in a quarter of a cupful of sugar and two quarts of milk. Pour the mixture into a deep baking dish, and bake for an hour in a moderate oven. When done, spread butter over the top. Any desired flavor may be used.

PINEAPPLE PIE.

For this delicious dessert merely lay slices of the pineapple, which has been carefully cored and pared, around in a rich piecrust. Sprinkle thickly with sugar and bake. Whipped cream sweetened and flavored may be heaped over the outer crust just before the pie is served.

ADIRONDACK SHORTCAKE.

This is an old form of shortcake, but a most appetizing one if well made. Large, plain, very thin wheat pancakes, delicately fried, are covered with a layer of crushed and sweetened strawberries. One pancake is placed upon another and the whole sprinkled with powdered sugar. They are suitable for luncheon or supper.

SWEETBREADS WITH CREAM SAUCE.

Before preparing sweetbreads for the table they should always be blanched. Put them in boiling water and cook slowly for fifteen minutes. Then throw them into cold water and remove all the pipe sand fleshy fibre. When this is done the sweetbreads can be cooked in any way preferred. For frying, sprinkle them lightly with salt and pepper, roll them in the beaten yolk of an egg and then in fine breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat. When they are a light brown place them in coarse brown paper that will absorb the grease for a moment or two, and then serve them on a platter after pouring some well made cream sauce over them.

A SIMPLIFIED MAYONNAISE.

The old, laborious drop-by-drop process of making mayonnaise dressing has been superseded, says the Woman's Home Journal, by the method described below. It will be a boon to lovers of salad. In a bowl mix one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of paprika and the raw yolk of two fresh eggs; then beat in two tablespoonfuls each of vinegar and lemon juice; add about one and one-half cupfuls of olive oil, one teaspoonful or more at a time, beating it in with an egg-beater. By adding all the acid before the oil, and using a good egg-beater, the danger of curdling is eliminated, and the oil can be added in generous quantities from the start.

USEFUL HINTS.

For cleaning out the corners in furniture and window sashes use hardwood pointed skewers, such as butchers use.

Rub white spots on furniture with essence of peppermint or spirits of camphor, or hold a hot plate from the stove over them.

Sweeping with the carpet sweeper will be more effectual if the sweeper is pushed in the same direction as the warp of a rug—not against it.

A sponge or face flannel which has become slimy through constant use of soap should be well rubbed with salt and then rinsed in cold water. By this process it becomes practically new.

Soapbark jelly is the best all-round cleansing agent that a woman can keep on hand. It may be prepared by putting a handful of soap-bark in a quart of boiling water and letting it cool.

Cover the top of the ice-chest or refrigerator with white oilcloth, tacking it on with brass headed tacks.

A deep jardiniere is suggested as a pleasing substitute for the waste paper basket, and has the additional commendation of being washable.

After being thoroughly cleaned, rugs should be put away in bags made of new, unwashed, unbleached cotton cloth.

Kerosene will cut the grease in the drain-pipe of a sink, and should be used at least once a month.

When Turkish towels grow thin from long usage, they may be made to serve better by dipping in thin starch and using unironed.

The ability to decide at once which of several duties is most important and most worth while is a talent to be assiduously cultivated by every woman.

If by mistake you get a soup too salt add a few slices of raw potato and cook a few minutes longer. The potatoes will take up the surplus salt.

Sweetened melted butter is made precisely after the same method as melted butter for savory sauces, the only difference being that castor sugar and flavoring essences are used instead of salt, etc.

Americans and American capital are going into Ceylon to assist in the development of the tea growing industry this year as never before.

PROMINENT PEOPLE.

J. M. Barrie is extremely fond of his native Forfarshire.

The King of Belgium is developing a mania for building.

President Loubet has finished his sixth year in the French Presidency.

King Edward receives daily no fewer than 3000 newspapers and 1000 letters.

Edward Everett Hale thinks that everybody should sleep ten hours a day.

John Alexander Dowie has secured options on $500,000 worth of land in Mexico.

The Pope has consented to sit to M. Carolus Duran, the French artist, for his portrait.

The Emperor of Abyssinia has decorated the German Emperor with the Star of Ethiopa.

Chauncey M. Depew still holds more directorates than any other man in the United States.

The King of Belgium is developing a mania for building that recalls King Ludwig II. of Bavaria.

Theodore Roosevelt has been made an honorary member of the Texas Cattle Raisers' Association.

M. Combes, recently Premier of France, has returned to the practice of medicine in his native village.

Lord Kitchener is making an annual custom of a "Peace day dinner," to celebrate the conclusion of the South African War.

Ambassador Whitelaw Reid has given $500 for the endowment of a bed for American sailors in the Union Jack Club, London.

The King of Spain has inherited his father's remarkably sure eye and steady hand, and he is already one of the best shots in his kingdom.

The Czar of Russia, it is said, holds some $6,000,000 worth of stock in the Pennsylvania Railroad, the New Jersey Central, the New York Central and the Northern Pacific.

TIMBER FOR SALE!

Over a hundred acres of Virgin Swamp timber for sale. Apply to T J. Billingsley, Clanton, Ala, Route 3. tf.

ANGELICA WINE!

Pronounced equal to the best made in Europe, by good judges of wine. Price $2.00 per gallon, discount for larger quantity. Guaranteed to keep. Address A. P. R. DAHL, tf. Calera, Ala

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 12, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz.: Isaac B. Martin, Homestead Entry No. 32916, for the S. E. 1-4 of S. E. 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23 N. of R. 13 East.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Zack S. Avery, Clayton Glasscock, Hubbard Glasscock, Norman Bradford, all of Jemison, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER, Register.

7-13-05-6t

Notice No. 26043.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz: Dalee Millar, Homestead Entry No. 35550, for the W. 1-2 of N. E. 1-4, E. 1-2 of N. W. 1-4, Section 10, Tp. 23 N. of R. 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Rebecca J. Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; C. Buck Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; James Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala., Thomas Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER, Register.

7-13-05-6t

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alabama

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.,

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers.

County and Office Supplies a Specialty.

Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association

of Alabama.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3rd, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' Dwellings, Outbuildings and Contents and Live Stock against Loss by Fire, Wind and Lightning. The Cheapest, Safest and Most Sensible Method of Insurance Known to Man.

Average Yearly Cost for Four Years 56-100 of 1 percent.

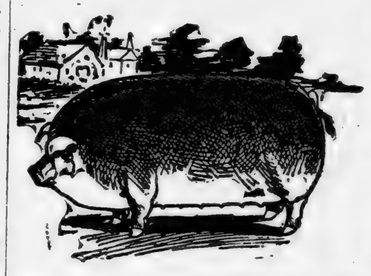
Full particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c, Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,

Maplesville, Alabama.

Gelder's Restaurant,

Good Meals at Reasonable Prices.

110 North 20th Street,

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND FERTILIZERS

FOR SALE.

Troy Special & Mule Brand

"Are the Best on Earth."

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - - Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

L. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Alabama.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Mrs. Emma Sawyer

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a brick-dust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case." Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.

Mrs. Pinkham gives free advice to women; address in confidence, Lynn, Mass.

Nine-tenths per cent. of the British nobility are childless.

Cures Eczema, Itching Humors.

Especially for old, chronic cases take Botanic Blood Balm. It gives a healthy blood supply to the affected parts, heals all the sores, eruption scabs, scales; stops the awful itching and burning of eczema, swellings, suppurating, watery sores, etc. Druggists $1 per large bottle, 3 bottles $2.50, 6 bottles $5.00, express prepaid. Sample free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

Coal has been discovered near Adrianovkva in the Transbaikal territory.

FOR THE LIVER AND BOWELS
NOTHING CAN EQUAL
MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR
IT PROMPTLY CURES CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, INDIGESTION, SOUR STOMACH, AND ALL DERANGEMENTS OF THE STOMACH AND BOWELS. 50 CENTS A BOTTLE AT ALL DRUG STORES.

PIMPLES
BLACKHEADS

Cuticura SOAP

To treat Pimples and Blackheads, Red, Rough, Oily Complexions, gently smear the face with Cuticura Ointment, the great Skin Cure, but do not rub. Wash off the Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water, and bathe freely for some minutes. Repeat morning and evening. At other times use Cuticura Soap for bathing the face as often as agreeable. No other Skin Soap so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective.

Cuticura Soap combines delicate medicinal and emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. Two Soaps in one at one price—namely, a Medicinal and Toilet Soap for 25c. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Mailed Free, "How to Preserve, Purify, and Beautify."

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES, Standard Goods Only. Free Catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO., 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

If afflicted with weak eyes use Thompson's Eye Water

AIDS NATURE'S WORK

EFFECT OF ACETYLENE RAYS ON GROWTH OF PLANTS.

Grow to Twice Actual Weight of Those Exposed to Sunlight Only — Latest Victory For This New and Beautiful Illuminant.

The experiments recently made at Cornell University prove that the beautiful rays from the gas, acetylene, are as effective as sunlight on the growth of plants, and this may soon become a subject for serious consideration by all progressive cultivators of the soil.

The results of the experiments are astonishing, inasmuch as they show conclusively the great increase of growth attained by supplementing "The Light of Nature" with "The Light of Acetylene" during the hours in which the plants would otherwise be in darkness. For instance, a certain number of radish plants subjected to acetylene light during the night grew to twice the actual weight of the same number of radishes given daylight only, all other conditions being equal, and peas had blossomed and partially matured pods with the help of acetylene light, while without the added light not even buds were apparent.

Acetylene is already taking its place as an illuminant for towns from a central plant, for lighting houses, churches, schools and isolated buildings of all kinds, and it is being used successfully for many other purposes.

A striking and important feature of acetylene is the ease and small expense with which it can be made available compared with the great advantages derived from its use. The machine in which the gas is generated is easily installed.

A Steamer Among the Andes.

The steamer Inca, built at Hull, England, for service on Lake Titicaca, the largest lake in South America and the loftiest body of water on the American continent. This lake lies between two cordilleras of the Andes, at an altitude of 12,900 feet above the sea. The boat was sent under its own steam to Mollendo, a seaport town of Peru, where it was taken to pieces and carried on lama back up the mountains. It made 3,000 separate packages and was conveyed 150 miles. A railroad has been built from the seacoast to the lake, and the boat is part of the system. Lake Titicaca is seventy miles in length and has several good sized villages on its shores.

A Young Michigan Giant.

Louis Mollenen, the tall Michigander, is only nineteen years of age and is still growing quite rapidly. He is now seven feet eight inches in height and weighs 370 pounds. As may be seen, he is well proportioned, and he is reputed to be as strong as an ox. He has worked underground as a miner ever since he was a small boy, and that rather unfavorable mode of living has not stunted him. His parents are undersized, his mother weighing less than a hundred pounds.

Odd Government Account.

Among the receipts in the French colonial budget there figures a sum of four lacs of sicca rupees, equavalent at the present time to about $133,135, paid by the British Indian government. This money is paid annually in virtue of a treaty made in 1815, by which France conceded to England the exclusive right to buy the salt manufactured in what remained of the French possessions in India.

One room at Tsarskoe, the Czar's palace near St. Petersburg, has walls of lapis lazuli and a floor of ebony inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Another has walls of carved amber, and the walls of a third are laid thick with beaten gold.

CHANGED HUSBAND.

Wife Made Wise Change in Food.

Change of diet is the only way to really cure stomach and bowel trouble.

A woman says:

"My husband had dyspepsia when we were married and had suffered from it for several years. It was almost impossible to find anything he could eat without bad results.

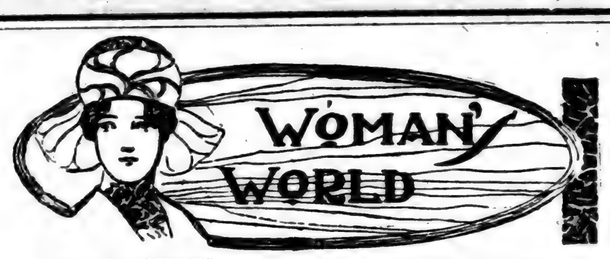
"I thought this was largely due to the use of coffee, and persuaded him to discontinue it. He did so, and began to drink Postum Food Coffee. The change did him good from the beginning, his digestion improved; he suffered much less from his nervousness, and when he added Grape-Nuts food to his diet he was soon entirely cured.

"My friend, Mrs. —— ——, of Vicksburg (my former home), had become a nervous wreck also from dyspepsia. Medicines had no effect, neither did travel help her. On my last visit home, some months ago, I persuaded her to use Grape-Nuts food. She was in despair, and consented. She stuck to it until it restored her health so completely that she is now the most enthusiastic friend of Grape-Nuts that I ever knew. She eats it with cream or dry, just as it comes from the package—keeps it in her room and eats it whenever she feels like it.

"I began eating Grape-Nuts food myself when my baby was two months old, and I don't know what I should have done without it. My appetite was gone, I was weak and nervous and afforded but very little nourishment for the child. The Grape-Nuts food, of which I soon grew very fond, speedily set all this right again, and the baby grew healthful, rosy and beautiful as a mother could wish. He is two years old now and eats Grape-Nuts food himself. I wish every tired young mother knew of the good that Grape-Nuts would do her."

Names given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.



TINSEL PICTURES.

Tinsel pictures are among the curious and interesting works of art now being unearthed by the thousands of searchers for antiques. The woman who is fortunate enough to have had some of the possessions of her ancestors handed down from the beginning of the last century will find these pictures, with others in which the figures are formed from hair framed in funny old moldings built from acorn or tiny opalescet shells.

The tinsel picture is really a quaint, colored or steel engraving, decorated with glittering spots of tinsel, while the garments of the personages figuring therein are treated to insertions of silk and satin, together with adornments of lace and metallic thread.

A clever young woman in England has recently revived this art, and her work is even finer than that seen in the very old pictures. She employs genuine old prints for her backgrounds while the gorgeous raiments of the figures are embroidered and inset with every conceivable form of silk, brocade, lace, net, velvet, cloth of metal, and even ivory and real jewels, the old-fashioned costumes allowing any amount of elaboration. Several of her pictures have been brought over by American tourists.

Copies of the old masters, such as Van Dyck and Holbein, and prints of famous early actresses, furnish many of her backgrounds, though curious fashion plates of the 1830 period present wonderful possibilities in this delicate but effective art work.

Among the oldest engravings is one dated 1540, which shows the mayoress of London in calling costume. The background is left undecorated save for a wash of water color on the stiff "Noah's Ark" trees. The mayoress, however, is arrayed in dead rose silk over green, her brown and gold bodice being practically concealed by a lace tippet and her head adorned by a silken hat.

An 1830 print shows Mrs. Andrew Jackson in hooped skirt and voluminous sleeves. The double-flounced skirt of pink silk has a front panel of satin brocaded in pink velvet roses, and each flounce is edged with gold thread in leaf design. Over these flounces, but not covering the panel, is an all-lace skirt of fine Brussells net finished with wide lace edging. This net also covers the pink silk sleeves and bodice, and forms a deep circular bertha edged with gold thread about the square low neck. The big picture bonnet is built of Brussels lace edging, trimmed with tiny green and pink flowers and wee satin bows tied under the chin with green satin streamers. Considering that these prints are usually not over 16 inches in length, their decoration is a work of infinite detail and marvellous delicacy.—Bridgeport Telegram.

DRESSING TABLE MOTTO.

"Fasten the ends" is the motto which the tidy girl hangs over her dressing table. She never suggests a frayed or mussy ribbon, not matter how exquisite its coloring. Even the men are quick to note trifling carelessness in grooming, while the untidy girl, is severely criticised by members of her own sex.

For this reason inventors and shopkeepers are constantly offering first aids to tidiness, and any little appliance and trimness of a woman's appearance commands a good sale, says the Philadelphia Press.

As the face naturally attracts the first glance, the arrangement of the hair and the adjustment of the hat and veil are points upon which the tidy girl expends infinite pains. Next to the importance of keeping the hair in good condition ranks that of dressing it neatly, and the present fashion of arranging the hair low requires an exceptional number of combs. The best arrangement calls for four combs of uniform size about two inches square. Two of these are used to keep rolls in place, and two in good order the many stray locks which persist in falling about the forehead and over the ears.

The comb of the hour among girls who prefer simplicity in dress, is of light amber, severely plain, but highly polished. To match these come very long hairpins with knob ends like balls. The fancy comb of celluloid and the cheap jeweled comb are not considered good form, and only for dressy occasions does the girl who possesses such an extravagance bring forth her comb of real tortoise shell or amber, studded with gems. Never would she wear such a comb with a severe tailored gown or shirtwaist suit.

WALKING SHOES.

Warm days make some think of low shoes, and this year they are lovelier than ever. The latest thing are walking pumps. These come in black patent leather, Russian calf, and white canvas or linen, and are a sort of compromise between a dainty slipper and a common sense low shoe. They have the Cuban heel and mediumweight sole, and are cut out like a slipper, leaving the instep exposed. A flat made ribbon bow of the same color as the pump is the only decoration, says the Boston Traveler.

The walking pump, it is seen, is of real use for semi-dress wear, but it should never be allowed to fill the place of the blucher. These alone are correct to be worn with simple everyday woolen walking skirts.

Of the two the blucher is undoubtedly the more popular, although it differs from the Oxford only in having an open vamp. The black and tan are favorites in this style in the heavyweight class, and come with two, three or four holes, laced up with wide silk strings or ribbons. In the lighter weight Oxfords and and kidbluchers there are patent leather and kid in black, white, dark brown, tan and champagne. In the evening slipper one finds dozens of colors besides the standard black and white, which, with the hosiery, must match my lady's gown.

None of the seasonable footwear, with the exception of the daintiest slippers, has the true French heel. The Cuban heel rules this season, and thankful indeed are the majority of women, for few of them can balance gracefully on the slender curved sticks which are supposed to make the foot look pretty and small.

Another aid to beauty, however, may be seen in the present style of footwear, and that is the narrowing of the toe. The bulldog toe, the shape which was affected to such an extent by nearly all women several years ago, has gone, never to return, says a shoe dealer, and in its place has come the daintier, more feminine, narrow toe.

LITTLE FOLKS DRESSES.

The princess petticoat is an important item, and is made in linen or white silk. The simplest princess petticoat is cut with gores all in one, from neck to hem. Another model has an added flounce, and a third way to make it is with a long, plain waist sewed to a skirt, gathered at the waist, the garment being sleeveless or otherwise.

Overalls in art linen, honeycombed or gauzed, with or without yokes of lace, and colored in cress green, turquoise blue, or raspberry pink, are useful.

One of the prettiest coats for a little girl below her teens is cut with a stole front into which is gathered the actual fronts and back of the coat, the stole being stitched at both edges and fastened with small buttons put in in gulmps of three. The sleeves are full and conclude in frills. With this is worn a little bonnet.

Never since embroidery was invented has it been more used for any purpose than for adorning the garments of the little ones. Borderie anglaise is proper for little girls, a collar being absent or present, according to preference, while the shape of the yoke is now round, now square, and the edge scalloped or plain.

Bishop sleeves and short puff sleeves are the two leading vogues in connection with frocks for little children. Nothing of its class has superseded in favoritism the long waisted French frock with a sash drawn down to the hips and tied into a big bow at the back or a knot at the left side. A simple dress of this sort of pale blue china silk has an insertion yoke of lace to match, the cuffs to the bishop sleeves being also of lace.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WISDOM OF THE NURSERY.

Children are apt to become saucy and ill mannered when their elders do not set them a good example.

A child that learns verses and hymns as punishment is quite certain to take a lifelong dislike to such things thereon.

Avoid taking children into crowded shops when it is possible, as it not only tires the child but exposes it to impure air and infectious diseases.

Remember that medicine suitable for a grown person is too strong for a child, and never try to administer such a dose without the advice of a physician.

Have a secure guard round the nursery fire, if there is one, and a firmly latched gate at the head of the stairs when the baby begins to crawl about.

And when a child is "fidgety" do not take it with you when paying calls; it causes discomfort, both to the hostess and yourself.—Indianapolis News.

SUITS FOR MORNING WEAR.

The morning suit for street wear will be severely plain, especially so in the linen suits, which are finished with a deep hem and stitching. Russet shoes will be a feature of the street attire, but they differ from those of former years, not only in being of a much darked shade, but also in having the flat bow to the instep. With the tailor suit a soft leather belt is usually selected, which may be ornate or plan, according to the taste of the wearer.—Washington Times.

FASHION NOTES.

Apricot yellow is playing a prominent part in the costumes found in the fashionable trosseau.

The smart bridesmaids' gowns are of some soft, sheer stuff of some brilliant color; and often adorned with sashes.

Household Matters

Wooden Bedsteads.

It is a relief after the long regime of the iron and brass beds to see wooden beds offered for cottage furnishings. The new beds are very simple in design, and are as pretty as possible. Forest green, walnut stain and gray maple are favorite woods.

To Clean Mattresses.

Mattresses are difficult to clean, and even some work to brush properly, owing to the creases around the upholsterer's buttons. If they are not constantly and completely covered by protectors the dust will gradually enter every crease. One piece of unbleached cotton sheeting should be stretched over the entire mattress. The end of the sheeting should first be pinned to the top of the mattress, the rest drawn to the foot, under the mattress, and up again to the top, where the upper and under ends should be neatly basted together. After all wrinkles are smoothed out, the edges of the sheeting along the sides of the mattress are roughly basted together. There should be two protectors for every mattress, so that when one is in the wash the other can take its place.

Concerning Polished Floors.

Hard wood floors of either pine, maple, birch or oak should never be varnished. Therein lies the pitfall which the landlord, seeking for cheap and speedy results, prepares for our feet, since the black corners and white spots are sure to come in time even with the best of care. Waxing is the only proper method if we may start afresh, and with new floors the process is comparatively simple. We are advised by the best authorities to provide against future grease spots by applying first two coats of a mixture containing equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine, combined with a japan drier. The drier must not be omitted or the oil will combine with the wax, and the results will be anything but satisfactory. After allowing this mixture to dry over night all the pores of the wood may be filled with one of the prepared fillers. The polish is more even if this is done, but to avoid making the floors excessively slippery it is sometimes omitted. Some woods do not need it. When the floor is thoroughly dry it is ready for the paste of wax and turpentine, which may be applied with a cloth in an even coat, not too thick, and allowed to dry over night. Another coat is put on the next morning and allowed in turn to dry, when the whole is thoroughly polished with a weighted brush and woolen cloth, rubbing always with the grain. If this is thoroughly done it will not be necessary to repeat the process for a year, and then only partially if the floors have not been roughly treated.—Harper's Bazar.

Rag Carpet.

There are in almost every house old garments, sheets and pillowcases that might be utilized in making a rag carpet, and there is no floor covering which in point of mobility or economy can compare with it. When a garment that cannot be worn again comes from the wash, cut off the buttons and bands, and tear it in strips from one-half to three-fourths of an inch wide; the finer they are, the prettier the carpet will be. Put them in a bag or box with a closely fitting cover, so they will be protected from the dust. The work of sewing them is neither tedious nor difficult. When you have enough for a carpet, mix them thoroughly, that the colors may be evenly distributed. Take them to the sewing machine, and lap and sew the ends of the strips. Continue until you have about a pound sewed, then clip the threads and wind into a ball. Rich, dark colors, sewed indiscriminately and warped with a dark chain, produce a good effect, and is desirable for bedrooms, but is too dark for a room which is in constant use. A dark carpet shows dust more than a light one. Black and white warp, woven in brick work, is pretty for striped carpets, or all brown or black may be used and will look better than bright colors. Be sure to make the weaver use the best warp, for the warp wears out first, and have him put five hundred threads in a carpet one yard wide. One pound of warp will be enough for three yards of carpet, and one and one-fourth pounds of rags will weave a yard of carpet.

Fruit Ice Cream—The very best fruit ice cream is made by whipping cream and partially freezing it. Meanwhile mash the fruit with plenty of sugar and stir it into the cream, and complete the freezing process. When cream is whipped it goes further, besides making a lighter ice cream. The fruit does not require much freezing.

Green Peppers—Who has not learned to use green peppers has something to learn in the cookery line. Peppers cut in rings with dull scissors and combined with lettuce and French dressing are as good a simple salad as one could wish for. A delicious made-over dish of chicken is constructed with the aid of green peppers. Cut off the tops of the peppers and scoop out the membrane. Parboil for about five minutes. Cut up the chicken, mix with boiled rice, and fill the peppers with the mixture. Place in a baking pan and pour in enough stock or water, immerse the peppers half-way, and bake for an hour.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 30.

Subject: Manasseh's Sin and Repentance. II. Chron. xxxiii., 1-13.—Golden Text, Prov. xiv., 34.—Memory Verses, 12, 13.—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Manasseh's evil reign (vs. 1-9). 1. "Manasseh was twelve years old" (vs. 1). Manasseh was the fourteenth King of Judah, counting Athaliah, the usurper. Between Ahaziah and Hephzibah we have intentionally the daughter of Manasseh. "Twelve years old" when he began to reign, three years after Hezekiah was miraculously restored to health, and fifteen years longer than any other king of Judah or Israel. 2. "Did that which was evil . . . like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel" (vs. 2). Manasseh followed all the abominations of the nations of Canaan, and went greater than them all. He "set up graven images" (vs. 3), "built altars for all the host of heaven" (vs. 3), "observed times, and used enchantments, and dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards" (vs. 6), "wrought much evil" (vs. 6), "seduced them to do more evil than did the nations whom the Lord destroyed before the children of Israel" (vs. 9). The particulars of his evil deeds are given in II. Kings 21: 3-7. "Made groves." "Groves" is rendered in the R. V. Asherah, and the Asherah was one of the forms of Ashtaroth, a female deity. Baal was a male and Ashtaroth a female divinity. An Asherah was a tree or wooden pole which was set up beside an altar as a symbol of the goddess. "Host of heaven." The heavenly bodies, the stars. 4. "Altars in the house of the Lord" (vs. 4). Manasseh placed the heathen altars in the very courts of the temple. "Shall my name be there forever" (2 Kings 21: 4). See also 2 Kings 21: 7; 2 Chron. 7: 16.

5. "In the two courts of the house of the Lord" (vs. 5). Lumby thinks this verse should be joined to the preceding verse, and that the idolatrous altars were on the roof of the porches of the temple and not in the courts. 6. "Through the fire" (vs. 6). Ezekiel 20: 26 seems to believe that in certain instances the children of Israel were actually burnt to death. See also Lev. 18: 21; 20: 2-5; Deut. 18: 10; 2 Kings 23: 10; Jer. 7: 31; 2 Kings 23: 10. "Valley—of Hinnom." This was a deep valley to the south and west of Jerusalem, the southeast extremity of which had the name of Tophet "in ancient times." See R. V. "Practised augury" (vs. 6). "Augury is divination by the clouds." "Enchantments" (vs. 6). He used incantations and charms. "Dealt with a familiar spirit." See 1 Sam. 28: 3. Saul had in his service those who professed to raise the spirits. "Wizards" (vs. 6). Wizards or knowing ones were those who professed to have secrets. Many of these came to Manasseh from Chaldea to practise their incantations and practices (Isa. 47: 12-14). Manasseh was thus guilty of "much evil." The heathen rites and ceremonies which Manasseh observed were often of the foulest character. "Set—image." The setting up of the graven image within the sacred precincts is dwelt upon as the most aggravating outrage of this wicked king. "Neither will I," etc. God had promised that this land should be his people forever (2 Sam. 7: 10). "If only" (2 Chron. 33: 8). All of God's promises are conditional. This condition was not met at the very first. Had they done so God they would never have gone into captivity, but would still have been in possession of the promised land. "To do worse." Through the pernicious influence of Manasseh they were led into worse forms of sin than even practised by the heathen nations. Tradition says that under Manasseh Isaiah was slain.

II. Manasseh's punishment (vs. 10-13). 10. "The Lord spake" (vs. 10). We can imagine the bitter grief and indignation of those who loved God of Israel. And then we are silent. In 2 Kings 21: 10-15 we are told that God sent prophets denouncing the fearful and threatening judgments in striking language.

11. "King of Assyria." Assyria was at that time under Esarhaddon. "Among the thorns." "In chains" (2 Chron. V. The shara, thornlike hooks with which prisoners were caught and led away like fish. "Fetters." Probably the fetters for the hands and fetters for the feet. "To Babylon." With the exception of Judah was added to the Assyrian empire.

III. Manasseh's repentance (vs. 12, 13). 12. "Besought the Lord." In the midst of exile and imprisonment Manasseh had leisure for reflection. The calamities forced on him by God recalled his past life, convincing him that the miseries of his dethronement and captivity were owing to his own sin and unprecedented apostasy from the God of his fathers. "Humbled himself greatly." Afflictions are one of the means we should never from our midst. Even their midst we see our nothingness.

IV. Manasseh's restoration (vs. 13). 13. "He was entreated of him." It is possible that any sinner who will truly forsake sin and turn to God may find merciful mercy, after the most aggravated don from God to a man like Manasseh was not credible. Why was Manasseh permitted to live? Why was he not cut off? Would the Bible teaching be more helpful if the characters were not personified? Manasseh, Christ to meet failure and sin? Though affliction drives us to God, it will not therefore follow that we sincerely seek Him, for affliction is sent to bring us to Him. "Brought him to Jerusalem." Why did he not go back to God and his duty at once? Why must he be brought back to God? Ah, friends, how readily God is to forgive! How slow we are to come returning sinners, and how long it takes to show mercy! Let no one despair when Manasseh found favor with God showed forth his praise (1 Tim. 1: 16; Isa. 1: 18). "Knew—God." No process of nature; no teaching of priests and rulers; no act of ceremonial cleansing; no engaging in forms of religion; no listening to sermons nor reading Scriptures brought him the knowledge. He had to be brought to the edge. He had to be brought to the position where nothing but the mighty power of God could deliver him. God will bless God through all eternity. Even the days of trouble that lead us to obey (Psa. 50: 15). But how much better it is to obey at once, thus avoiding such afflictions unnecessary.

Landslide in Naples.

Naples, Italy.—A landslide on Monday destroyed the factory that was built in 1900 at a cost of $200,000 and otherwise caused great damage.

Bomb Thrown in Center of Crowd.

Byelostok, Russia.—A bomb was thrown in the center of the crowd today, killing several persons and severely wounding a number of others, including the chief of police.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Mrs. Emma Sawyer

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a brick-dust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case." Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.

Mrs. Pinkham gives free advice to women; address in confidence, Lynn, Mass.

Nineteen per cent. of the British nobility are childless.

Cures Eczema, Itching Humors.

Especially for old, chronic cases take Botanic Blood Balm. It gives a healthy blood supply to the affected parts, heals all the sores, nutrition seals scales, stops the awful itching and burning of eczema, swellings, skin scratching, watery sores, etc. Druggists $1 per large bottle, 3 bottles $2.50, 6 bottles $5.00, express prepaid. Sample free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

Coal has been discovered near Adrianovka in the Transbaikal territory.

TO LIVER AND BOWELS
NOTHING CAN EQUAL
MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR
IT PROMPTLY CURES CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, INDIGESTION, SOUR STOMACH AND ALL DERANGEMENTS OF THE STOMACH AND BOWELS. 50 CENTS A BOTTLE AT ALL DRUG STORES.

PIMPLES
BLACKHEADS

Cuticura SOAP

To treat Pimples and Blackheads, Red, Rough, Oily Complexions, gently smear the face with Cuticura Ointment, the great Skin Cure, but do not rub. Wash off the Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water, and bathe freely for some minutes. Repeat morning and evening. At other times use Cuticura Soap for bathing the face as often as agreeable. No other Skin Soap so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective.

Cuticura Soap combines delicate medicinal and emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. Two Soaps in one at one price—namely, a Medicinal and Toilet Soap for 25c. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Mailed Free, "How to Preserve, Purify, and Beautify."

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free Catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO. 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

AIDS NATURE'S WORK

EFFECT OF ACETYLENE RAYS ON GROWTH OF PLANTS.

Grow to Twice Actual Weight of Those Exposed to Sunlight Only — Latest Victory For This New and Beautiful Illuminant.

The experiments recently made at Cornell University prove that the beautiful rays from the gas, acetylene, are as effective as sunlight on the growth of plants, and this may soon become a subject for serious consideration by all progressive cultivators of the soil.

The results of the experiments are astonishing, inasmuch as they show conclusively the great increase of growth attained by supplementing "The Light of Nature" with "The Light of Acetylene" during the hours in which the plants would otherwise be in darkness. For instance, a certain number of radish plants subjected to acetylene light during the night grew to twice the actual weight of the same number of radishes given daylight only, all other conditions being equal, and peas had blossomed and partially matured pods with the help of acetylene light, while without the added light not even buds were apparent.

Acetylene is already taking its place as an illuminant for towns from a central plant, for lighting houses, churches, schools and isolated buildings of all kinds, and it is being used successfully for many other purposes.

A striking and important feature of acetylene is the ease and small expense with which it can be made available compared with the great advantages derived from its use. The machine in which the gas is generated is easily installed.

A Steamer Among the Andes.

The steamer Inca, built at Hull, England, for service on Lake Titicaca, the largest lake in South America and the loftiest body of water on the American continent. This lake lies between two cordilleras of the Andes, at an altitude of 12,900 feet above the sea. The boat was sent under its own steam to Mollendo, a seaport town of Peru, where it was taken to pieces and carried on lama back up the mountains. It made 3,000 separate packages and was conveyed 150 miles. A railroad has been built from the seacoast to the lake, and the boat is part of the system. Lake Titicaca is seventy miles in length and has several good sized villages on its shores.

A Young Michigan Giant.

Louis Mollenen, the tall Michigander, is only nineteen years of age and is still growing quite rapidly. He is now seven feet eight inches in height and weighs 370 pounds. As may be seen, he is well proportioned, and he is reputed to be as strong as an ox. He has worked underground as a miner ever since he was a small boy, and that rather unfavorable mode of living has not stunted him. His parents are undersized, his mother weighing less than a hundred pounds.

Odd Government Account.

Among the receipts in the French colonial budget there figures a sum of four lacs of sicca rupees, equavalent at the present time to about $133,135, paid by the British Indian government. This money is paid annually in virtue of a treaty made in 1815, by which France conceded to England the exclusive right to buy the salt manufactured in what remained of the French possessions in India.

One room at Tsarskoe, the Czar's palace near St. Petersburg, has walls of lapis lazuli and a floor of ebony inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Another has walls of carved amber, and the walls of a third are laid thick with beaten gold.

CHANGED HUSBAND.

Wife Made Wise Change in Food.

Change of diet is the only way to really cure stomach and bowel trouble.

A woman says:

"My husband had dyspepsia when we were married and had suffered from it for several years. It was almost impossible to find anything he could eat without bad results.

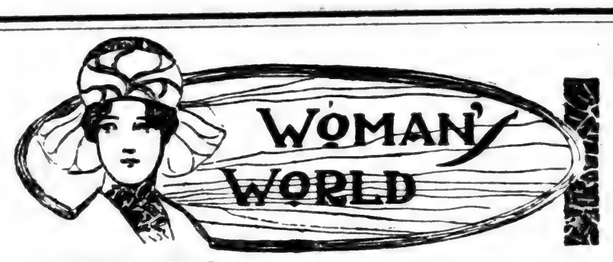
"I thought this was largely due to the use of coffee, and persuaded him to discontinue it. He did so, and began to drink Postum Food Coffee. The change did him good from the beginning, his digestion improved; he suffered much less from his nervousness, and when he added Grape-Nuts food to his diet he was soon entirely cured.

"My friend, Mrs. —— ——, of Vicksburg (my former home), had become a nervous wreck also from dyspepsia. Medicines had no effect, neither did travel help her. On my last visit home, some months ago, I persuaded her to use Grape-Nuts food. She was in despair, and consented. She stuck to it until it restored her health so completely that she is now the most enthusiastic friend of Grape-Nuts that I ever knew. She eats it with cream or dry, just as it comes from the package—keeps it in her room and eats it whenever she feels like it.

"I began eating Grape-Nuts food myself when my baby was two months old, and I don't know what I should have done without it. My appetite was gone, I was weak and nervous and afforded but very little nourishment for the child. The Grape-Nuts food, of which I soon grew very fond, speedily set all this right again, and the baby grew healthful, rosy and beautiful as a mother could wish. He is two years old now and eats Grape-Nuts food himself. I wish every tired young mother knew of the good that Grape-Nuts would do her."

Names given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.



TINSEL PICTURES.

Tinsel pictures are among the curious and interesting works of art now being unearthed by the thousands of searchers for antiques. The woman who is fortunate enough to have had some of the possessions of her ancestors handed down from the beginning of the last century will find these pictures, with others in which the figures are formed from hair framed in funny old moldings built from acorn or tiny opalescet shells.

The tinsel picture is really a quaint, colored or steel engraving, decorated with glittering spots of tinsel, while the garments of the personages figuring therein are treated to insertions of silk and satin, together with adornments of lace and metallic thread.

A clever young woman in England has recently revived this art, and her work is even finer than that seen in the very old pictures. She employs genuine old prints for her backgrounds while the gorgeous raiments of the figures are embroidered and inset with every conceivable form of silk, brocade, lace, net, velvet, cloth of metal, and even ivory and real jewels, the old-fashioned costumes allowing any amount of elaboration. Several of her pictures have been brought over by American tourists.

Copies of the old masters, such as Van Dyck and Holbein, and prints of famous early actresses, furnish many of her backgrounds, though curious fashion plates of the 1830 period present wonderful possibilities in this delicate but effective art work.

Among the oldest engravings is one dated 1540, which shows the mayoress of London in calling costume. The background is left undecorated save for a wash of water color on the stiff "Noah's Ark" trees. The mayoress, however, is arrayed in dead rose silk over green, her brown and gold bodice being practically concealed by a lace tippet and her head adorned by a silken hat.

An 1830 print shows Mrs. Andrew Jackson in hooped skirt and voluminous sleeves. The double-flounced skirt of pink silk has a front panel of satin brocaded in pink velvet roses, and each flounce is edged with gold thread in leaf design. Over these flounces, but not covering the panel, is an all-lace skirt of fine Brussells net finished with wide lace edging. This net also covers the pink silk sleeves and bodice, and forms a deep circular bertha edged with gold thread about the square low neck. The big picture bonnet is built of Brussels lace edging, trimmed with tiny green and pink flowers and wee satin bows tied under the chin with green satin streamers. Considering that these prints are usually not over 16 inches in length, their decoration is a work of infinite detail and marvellous delicacy.—Bridgeport Telegram.

DRESSING TABLE MOTTO.

"Fasten the ends" is the motto which the tidy girl hangs over her dressing table. She never suggests a frayed or mussy ribbon, not matter how exquisite its coloring. Even the men are quick to note trifling carelessness in grooming, while the untidy girl, is severely criticised by members of her own sex.

For this reason inventors and shopkeepers are constantly offering first aids to tidiness, and any little appliance and trimness of a woman's appearance commands a good sale, says the Philadelphia Press.

As the face naturally attracts the first glance, the arrangement of the hair and the adjustment of the hat and veil are points upon which the tidy girl expends infinite pains. Next to the importance of keeping the hair in good condition ranks that of dressing it neatly, and the present fashion of arranging the hair low requires an exceptional number of combs. The best arrangement calls for four combs of uniform size about two inches square. Two of these are used to keep rolls in place, and two in good order the many stray locks which persist in falling about the forehead and over the ears.

The comb of the hour among girls who prefer simplicity in dress is of light amber, severely plain, but highly polished. To match these come very long hairpins with knob ends like balls. The fancy comb of celluloid and the cheap jeweled comb are not considered good form, and only for dressy occasions does the girl who possesses such an extravagance bring forth her comb of real tortoise shell or amber, studded with gems. Never would she wear such a comb with a severe tailored gown or shirtwaist suit.

WALKING SHOES.

Warm days make some think of low shoes, and this year they are lovelier than ever. The latest thing are walking pumps. These come in black patent leather, Russian calf, and white canvas or linen, and are a sort of compromise between a dainty slipper and a common sense low shoe. They have the Cuban heel and mediumweight sole, and are cut out like a slipper, leaving the instep exposed. A flat made ribbon bow of the same color as the pump is the only decoration, says the Boston Traveler.

The walking pump, it is seen, is of real use for semi-dress wear, but it should never be allowed to fill the place of the blucher. These alone are correct to be worn with simple everyday woolen walking skirts.

Of the two the blucher is undoubtedly the more popular, although it differs from the Oxford only in having an open vamp. The black and tan are favorites in this style in the heavyweight class, and come with two, three or four holes, laced up with wide silk strings or ribbons. In the lighter weight Oxfords and and kidbluchers there are patent leather and kid in black, white, dark brown, tan and champagne. In the evening slipper one finds dozens of colors besides the standard black and white, which, with the hosiery, must match my lady's gown.

None of the seasonable footwear, with the exception of the daintiest slippers, has the true French heel. The Cuban heel rules this season, and thankful indeed are the majority of women, for few of them can balance gracefully on the slender curved sticks which are supposed to make the foot look pretty and small.

Another aid to beauty, however, may be seen in the present style of footwear, and that is the narrowing of the toe. The bulldog toe, the shape which was affected to such an extent by nearly all women several years ago, has gone, never to return, says a shoe dealer, and in its place has come the daintier, more feminine, narrow toe.

LITTLE FOLKS DRESSES.

The princess petticoat is an important item, and is made of linen or white silk. The simplest princess petticoat is cut with gores all in one, from neck to hem. Another model has an added flounce, and a third way to make it is with a long, plain waist sewed to a skirt, gathered at the waist, the garment being sleeveless or otherwise.

Overalls in art linen, hemstitched or gauzed, with or without yokes of lace, and colored in cress green, turquoise blue, or raspberry pink, are useful.

One of the prettiest coats for a little girl below her teens is cut with a stole front into which is gathered the actual fronts and back of the coat, the stole being stitched at both edges and fastened with small buttons put in in gulmps of three. The sleeves are full and conclude in frills. With this is worn a little bonnet.

Never since embroidery was invented has it been more used for any purpose than for adorning the garments of the little ones. Borderie anglaise is proper for little girls, a collar being absent or present, according to preference, while the shape of the yoke is now round, now square, and the edge scalloped or plain.

Bishop sleeves and short puff sleeves are the two leading vogues in connection with frocks for little children. Nothing of its class has superseded in favoritism the long waisted French frock with a sash drawn down to the hips and tied into a big bow at the back or a knot at the left side. A simple dress of this sort of pale blue china silk has an insertion yoke of lace to match, the cuffs to the bishop sleeves being also of lace.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WISDOM OF THE NURSERY.

Children are apt to become saucy and ill mannered when their elders do not set them a good example.

A child that learns verses and hymns as punishment is quite certain to take a lifelong dislike to such things later on.

Avoid taking children into crowded shops when it is possible, as it not only tires the child but exposes it to impure air and infectious diseases.

Remember that medicine suitable for a grown person is too strong for a child, and never try to administer such a dose without the advice of a physician.

Have a secure guard round the nursery fire, if there is one, and a firmly latched gate at the head of the stairs when the baby begins to crawl about.

And when a child is "fidgety" do not take it with you when paying calls; it causes discomfort, both to the hostess and yourself.—Indianapolis News.

SUITS FOR MORNING WEAR.

The morning suit for street wear will be severely plain, especially so in the linen suits, which are finished with a deep hem and stitching. Russet shoes will be a feature of the street attire, but they differ from those of former years, not only in being of a much darked shade, but also in having the flat bow to the instep. With the tailor suit a soft leather belt is usually selected, which may be ornate or plan, according to the taste of the wearer.—Washington Times.

FASHION NOTES.

Apricot yellow is playing a prominent part in the costumes found in the fashionable trosseau.

The smart bridesmaids' gowns are of some soft, sheer stuff of some brilliant color; and often adorned with sashes.

Household Matters

Wooden Bedsteads.

It is a relief after the long regime of the iron and brass beds to see wooden beds offered for cottage furnishings. The new beds are very simple in design, and are as pretty as possible. Forest green, walnut stain and gray maple are favorite woods.

To Clean Mattresses.

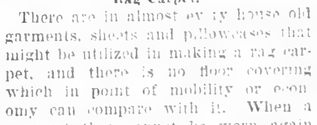
Mattresses are difficult to clean, and even some work to brush properly, owing to the creases around the upholsterers buttons. If they are not constantly and completely covered by protectors the dust will gradually enter every crease. One piece of unbleached cotton sheeting should be stretched over the entire mattress. The end of the sheeting should be pinned to the top of the mattress, the rest coming to the foot of the mattress, and up each side to the top, where the upper and under ends should be neatly basted together. After all wrinkles are smoothed out the sides of the mattress are neatly basted together. There should be two protectors for every mattress, so that when one is in the wash the other can take its place.

Concerning Polished Floors.

Hard wood floors of either pine, maple, birch or oak should never be varnished. Therein lies the pitfall which the landlord, seeking for cheap and speedy results, prepares for our feet, since the black corners and white spots are sure to come in time even with the best of care. Waxing is the only proper method if we may start afresh, and with new floors the process is comparatively simple. We are advised by the best authorities to provide against future grease spots by applying first two coats of a mixture containing equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine, combined with a japan drier. The drier must not be omitted or the oil will combine with the wax, and the results will be anything but satisfactory. After allowing this mixture to dry over night all the pores of the wood may be filled with one of the prepared fillers. The polish is more even if this is done, but to avoid making the floors excessively slippery it is sometimes omitted. Some woods do not need it. When the floor is thoroughly dry it is ready for the paste of wax and turpentine, which may be applied with a cloth in an even coat, not too thick, and allowed to dry over night. Another coat is put on the next morning and allowed in turn to dry, when the whole is thoroughly polished with a weighted brush and woolen cloth, rubbing always with the grain. If this is thoroughly done it will not be necessary to repeat the process for a year, and then only partially if the floors have not been roughly treated.—Harper's Bazar.

Rag Carpet.

There are in almost every house old garments, sheets and pillowcases that might be utilized in making a rag carpet, and there is no floor covering which in point of mobility or economy can compare with it. When a garment that cannot be worn again comes from the wash, cut off the buttons and bands, and tear it in strips from one-half to three-fourths of an inch wide; the finer they are, the prettier the carpet will be. Put them in a bag or box with a closely fitting cover, so they will be protected from the dust. The work of sewing them is neither tedious nor difficult. When you have enough for a carpet, mix them thoroughly, that the colors may be evenly distributed. Take them to the sewing machine, and lap and sew the ends of the strips. Continue until you have about a pound sewed, then clip the threads and wind into a ball. Rich dark colors, sewed indiscriminately and warped with a dark chain, produce a good effect, and is desirable for bed rooms, but is too dark for a room which is in constant use. A dark carpet shows dust more than a light one. Black and white warp, woven in brick work, is pretty for striped carpets, or all brown or black may be used and will look better than bright colors. Be sure to make the weaver use the best warp, for the warp wears out first, and have him put five hundred threads in a carpet one yard wide. One pound of warp will be enough for three yards of carpet, and one and one-fourth pounds of rags will weave a yard of carpet.



Fruit Ice Cream—The very best fruit ice cream is made by whipping cream and partially freezing it. Meanwhile mash the fruit with plenty of sugar and stir it into the cream, and complete the freezing process. When cream is whipped it goes further, besides making a lighter ice cream. The fruit does not require much freezing.

Green Peppers—Who has not learned to use green peppers has something to learn in the cookery line. Peppers cut in rings with dull scissors and combined with lettuce and French dressing are as good a simple salad as one could wish for. A delicious made-over dish of chicken is constructed with the aid of green peppers. Cut off the tops of the peppers and scoop out the membrane. Parboil for about five minutes. Cut up the chicken, mix with boiled rice, and fill the peppers with the mixture. Place in a baking pan and pour in enough stock or water, immerse the peppers half-way, and bake for an hour.

THE SUNDAY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON FOR JULY 22

Subject: Manasseh's sin... II. Chron. xxx... Prov. xiv., 34—Mem... —Commentary on the...

I. Manasseh's... vs. 1-20. I... teenth King of... Athaliah, the... Ieah and Hez... Ionally the... "Twelve years... three years of... heavily upon... ...ation of Israel... ...ations... ...ground... ...and Ephraim... ...Manasseh... R. V. As... Jews of A... Babylon... ...Ashe... ...wood in pots... ...s jo... ...chief of... ...stars... ...Ashe... ...for the... ...Judah was... pure...

III. Manasseh... 12. ...Jerusalem... ...title of... ...seven had... calamities fo... his past life... ...misuses of... ...tivity were... ...precedented... his fathers... ...iv." Affl... we should... their midst w...

IV. Manasseh... 19. "He was... sible that... forsaken sin... ...ceal... ...doa from God... ...was... ...was... Would the... were not... ters, and... Christ to... Though affl... will not the... ...to... ...to God... ...Jew... ...Look to God... be brought... how readily G... come returning... to show mer... despair when M... penance, for... him God show... (1 Tim. 1: 16; Is... know—God." No... er; no teaching of... no act of... engaging in forms... ening to sermons... Scriptures brought... edge. He had to be... tion where nothing but the power of God could... Such are the days of trouble that will bless God through all... the days of trouble that... obey (Psa. 50: 15... ter it is to obey at once, than such afflictions unnecessarily.

Landslide in Naples.

Naples, Italy.—A landslide... day destroyed th... was built in 1900 at a cost... and otherwise caused great...

Bomb Thrown in Church.

Bielostok, Russia.—A... thrown in the center of the... day, killing several persons... verely wounding a number... including the chief of police...

THE PULPIT.

SUNDAY SERMON BY ROBERT H. CARSON.

Subject: Paul the Preacher.

N. Y.—Sunday in Grace Church, the pastor, Robert H. Carson, took for his subject the Preacher. His... Acts xxiv. 25: "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." Mr. Carson...

I. Manasseh's... vs. 1-20. I... teenth King of... Athaliah, the... Ieah and Hez... Ionally the... "Twelve years... three years of... heavily upon... ...ation of Israel... ...ations... ...ground... ...and Ephraim... ...Manasseh... R. V. As... Jews of A... Babylon... ...Ashe... ...wood in pots... ...s jo... ...chief of... ...stars... ...Ashe... ...for the... ...Judah was... pure...

III. Manasseh... 12. ...Jerusalem... ...title of... ...seven had... calamities fo... his past life... ...misuses of... ...tivity were... ...precedented... his fathers... ...iv." Affl... we should... their midst w...

IV. Manasseh... 19. "He was... sible that... forsaken sin... ...ceal... ...doa from God... ...was... ...was... Would the... were not... ters, and... Christ to... Though affl... will not the... ...to... ...to God... ...Jew... ...Look to God... be brought... how readily G... come returning... to show mer... despair when M... penance, for... him God show... (1 Tim. 1: 16; Is... know—God." No... er; no teaching of... no act of... engaging in forms... ening to sermons... Scriptures brought... edge. He had to be... tion where nothing but the power of God could... Such are the days of trouble that will bless God through all... the days of trouble that... obey (Psa. 50: 15... ter it is to obey at once, than such afflictions unnecessarily.

Landslide in Naples.

Naples, Italy.—A landslide... day destroyed th... was built in 1900 at a cost... and otherwise caused great...

Bomb Thrown in Church.

Bielostok, Russia.—A... thrown in the center of the... day, killing several persons... verely wounding a number... including the chief of police...

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Mrs. Emma Sawyer

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a brick-dust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case." Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.

Mrs. Pinkham gives free advice to women; address in confidence, Lynn, Mass.

Nineteen per cent. of the British nobility are childless.

Cures Eczema, Itching Humors.

Especially for old, chronic cases take Botanic Blood Balm. It gives a healthy blood supply to the affected parts, heals all the sores, eruption scabs, scales; stops the awful itching and burning of eczema, swellings, suppurating, watery sores, etc. Druggists $1 per large bottle, 3 bottles $2.50, 6 bottles $5.00, express prepaid. Sample free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

Coal has been discovered near Adrianovkva in the Transbaikal territory.

FOR THE LIVER AND BOWELS
NOTHING CAN EQUAL
MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR
IT PROMPTLY CURES CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, INDIGESTION, SOUR STOMACH AND ALL DERANGEMENTS OF THE STOMACH AND BOWELS. 50 CENTS A BOTTLE AT ALL DRUG STORES.

PIMPLES BLACKHEADS

Cuticura SOAP

To treat Pimples and Blackheads, Red, Rough, Oily Complexions, gently smear the face with Cuticura Ointment, the great Skin Cure, but do not rub. Wash off the Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water, and bathe freely for some minutes. Repeat morning and evening. At other times use Cuticura Soap for bathing the face as often as agreeable. No other Skin Soap so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective.

Cuticura Soap combines delicate medicinal and emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. Two Soaps in one at one price—namely, a Medicinal and Toilet Soap for 25c. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Mailed Free, "How to Preserve, Purity, and Beauty."

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO. 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

AIDS NATURE'S WORK

EFFECT OF ACETYLENE RAYS ON GROWTH OF PLANTS.

Grow to Twice Actual Weight of Those Exposed to Sunlight Only — Latest Victory For This New and Beautiful Illuminant.

The experiments recently made at Cornell University prove that the beautiful rays from the gas, acetylene, are as effective as sunlight on the growth of plants, and this may soon become a subject for serious consideration by all progressive cultivators of the soil.

The results of the experiments are astonishing, inasmuch as they show conclusively the great increase of growth attained by supplementing "The Light of Nature" with "The Light of Acetylene" during the hours in which the plants would otherwise be in darkness. For instance, a certain number of radish plants subjected to acetylene light during the night grew to twice the actual weight of the same number of radishes given daylight only, all other conditions being equal, and peas had blossomed and partially matured pods with the help of acetylene light, while without the added light not even buds were apparent.

Acetylene is already taking its place as an illuminant for towns from a central plant, for lighting houses, churches, schools and isolated buildings of all kinds, and it is being used successfully for many other purposes.

A striking and important feature of acetylene is the ease and small expense with which it can be made available compared with the great advantages derived from its use. The machine in which the gas is generated is easily installed.

A Steamer Among the Andes.

The steamer Inca, built at Hull, England, for service on Lake Titicaca, the largest lake in South America and the loftiest body of water on the American continent. This lake lies between two cordilleras of the Andes, at an altitude of 12,900 feet above the sea. The boat was sent under its own steam to Mollendo, a seaport town of Peru, where it was taken to pieces and carried on lama back up the mountains. It made 3,000 separate packages and was conveyed 150 miles. A railroad has been built from the seacoast to the lake, and the boat is part of the system. Lake Titicaca is seventy miles in length and has several good sized villages on its shores.

A Young Michigan Giant.

Louis Mollenen, the tall Michigander, is only nineteen years of age and is still growing quite rapidly. He is now seven feet eight inches in height and weighs 370 pounds. As may be seen, he is well proportioned, and he is reputed to be as strong as an ox. He has worked underground as a miner ever since he was a small boy, and that rather unfavorable mode of living has not stunted him. His parents are undersized, his mother weighing less than a hundred pounds.

Odd Government Account.

Among the receipts in the French colonial budget there figures a sum of four lacs of sicca rupees, equavalent at the present time to about $133,135, paid by the British Indian government. This money is paid annually in virtue of a treaty made in 1815, by which France conceded to England the exclusive right to buy the salt manufactured in what remained of the French possessions in India.

One room at Tsarskoe, the Czar's palace near St. Petersburg, has walls of lapis lazuli and a floor of ebony inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Another has walls of carved amber, and the walls of a third are laid thick with beaten gold.

CHANGED HUSBAND.

Wife Made Wise Change in Food.

Change of diet is the only way to really cure stomach and bowel trouble.

A woman says:

"My husband had dyspepsia when we were married and had suffered from it for several years. It was almost impossible to find anything he could eat without bad results.

"I thought this was largely due to the use of coffee, and persuaded him to discontinue it. He did so, and began to drink Postum Food Coffee. The change did him good from the beginning, his digestion improved; he suffered much less from his nervousness, and when he added Grape-Nuts food to his diet he was soon entirely cured.

"My friend, Mrs. ———, of Vicksburg (my former home), had become a nervous wreck also from dyspepsia. Medicines had no effect, neither did travel help her. On my last visit home, some months ago, I persuaded her to use Grape-Nuts food. She was in despair, and consented. She stuck to it until it restored her health so completely that she is now the most enthusiastic friend of Grape-Nuts that I ever knew. She eats it with cream or dry, just as it comes from the package—keeps it in her room and eats it whenever she feels like it.

"I began eating Grape-Nuts food myself when my baby was two months old, and I don't know what I should have done without it. My appetite was gone, I was weak and nervous and afforded but very little nourishment for the child. The Grape-Nuts food, of which I soon grew very fond, speedily set all this right again, and the baby grew healthful, rosy and beautiful as a mother could wish. He is two years old now and eats Grape-Nuts food himself. I wish every tired young mother knew of the good that Grape-Nuts would do her."

Names given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

TINSEL PICTURES.

Tinsel pictures are among the curious and interesting works of art now being unearthed by the thousands of searchers for antiques. The woman who is fortunate enough to have had some of the possessions of her ancestors handed down from the beginning of the last century will find these pictures, with others in which the figures are formed from hair framed in funny old moldings built from acorn or tiny opalescet shells.

The tinsel picture is really a quaint, colored or steel engraving, decorated with glittering spots of tinsel, while the garments of the personages figuring therein are treated to insertions of silk and satin, together with adornments of lace and metallic thread.

A clever young woman in England has recently revived this art, and her work is even finer than that seen in the very old pictures. She employs genuine old prints for her backgrounds while the gorgeous raiments of the figures are embroidered and inset with every conceivable form of silk, brocade, lace, net, velvet, cloth of metal, and even ivory and real jewels, the old-fashioned costumes allowing any amount of elaboration. Several of her pictures have been brought over by American tourists.

Copies of the old masters, such as Van Dyck and Holbein, and prints of famous early actresses, furnish many of her backgrounds, though curious fashion plates of the 1830 period present wonderful possibilities in this delicate but effective art work.

Among the oldest engravings is one dated 1540, which shows the mayoress of London in calling costume. The background is left undecorated save for a wash of water color on the stiff "Noah's Ark" trees. The mayoress, however, is arrayed in dead rose silk over green, her brown and gold bodice being practically concealed by a lace tippet and her head adorned by a silken hat.

An 1830 print shows Mrs. Andrew Jackson in hooped skirt and voluminous sleeves. The double-flounced skirt of pink silk has a front panel of satin brocaded in pink velvet roses, and each flounce is edged with gold thread in leaf design. Over these flounces, but not covering the panel, is an all-lace skirt of fine Brussells net finished with wide lace edging. This net also covers the pink silk sleeves and bodice, and forms a deep circular bertha edged with gold thread about the square low neck. The big picture bonnet is built of Brussels lace edging, trimmed with tiny green and pink flowers and wee satin bows tied under the chin with green satin streamers. Considering that these prints are usually not over 16 inches in length, their decoration is a work of infinite detail and marvellous delicacy.—Bridgeport Telegram.

DRESSING TABLE MOTTO.

"Fasten the ends" is the motto which the tidy girl hangs over her dressing table. She never suggests a frayed or mussy ribbon, not matter how exquisite its coloring. Even the men are quick to note trifling carelessness in grooming, while the untidy girl, is severely criticised by members of her own sex.

For this reason inventors and shopkeepers are constantly offering first aids to tidiness, and any little appliance and trimness of a woman's appearance commands a good sale, says the Philadelphia Press.

As the face naturally attracts the first glance, the arrangement of the hair and the adjustment of the hat and veil are points upon which the tidy girl expends infinite pains. Next to the importance of keeping the hair in good condition ranks that of dressing it neatly, and the present fashion of arranging the hair low requires an exceptional number of combs. The best arrangement calls for four combs of uniform size about two inches square. Two of these are used to keep rolls in place, and two in good order the many stray locks which persist in falling about the forehead and over the ears.

The comb of the hour among girls who prefer simplicity in dress is of light amber, severely plain, but highly polished. To match these come very long hairpins with knob ends like balls. The fancy comb of celluloid and the cheap jeweled comb are not considered good form, and only for dressy occasions does the girl who possesses such an extravagance bring forth her comb of real tortoise shell or amber, studded with gems. Never would she wear such a comb with a severe tailored gown or shirtwaist suit.

WALKING SHOES.

Warm days make some think of low shoes, and this year they are lovelier than ever. The latest thing are walking pumps. These come in black patent leather, Russian calf, and white canvas or linen, and are a sort of compromise between a dainty slipper and a common sense low shoe. They have the Cuban heel and medium weight sole, and are cut out like a slipper, leaving the instep exposed. A flat made ribbon bow of the same color as the pump is the only decoration, says the Boston Traveler.

The walking pump, it is seen, is of real use for semi-dress wear, but it should never be allowed to fill the place of the blucher. These alone are correct to be worn with simple everyday woolen walking skirts.

Of the two the blucher is undoubtedly the more popular, although it differs from the Oxford only in having an open vamp. The black and tan are favorites in this style in the heavyweight class, and come with two, three or four holes, laced up with wide silk strings or ribbons. In the lighter weight Oxfords and and kidbluchers there are patent leather and kid in black, white, dark brown, tan and champagne. In the evening slipper one finds dozens of colors besides the standard black and white, which, with the hosiery, must match my lady's gown.

None of the seasonable footwear, with the exception of the daintiest slippers, has the true French heel. The Cuban heel rules this season, and thankful indeed are the majority of women, for few of them can balance gracefully on the slender curved sticks which are supposed to make the foot look pretty and small.

Another aid to beauty, however, may be seen in the present style of footwear, and that is the narrowing of the toe. The bulldog toe, the shape which was affected to such an extent by nearly all women several years ago, has gone, never to return, says a shoe dealer, and in its place has come the daintier, more feminine, narrow toe.

LITTLE FOLKS DRESSES.

The princess petticoat is an important item, and is made in linen or white silk. The simplest princess petticoat is cut with gores all in one, from neck to hem. Another model has an added flounce, and a third way to make it is with a long, plain waist sewed to a skirt, gathered at the waist, the garment being sleeveless or otherwise.

Overalls in art linen, honeycombed or gauzed, with or without yokes of lace, and colored in cress green, turquoise blue, or raspberry pink, are useful.

One of the prettiest coats for a little girl below her teens is cut with a stole front into which is gathered the actual fronts and back of the coat, the stole being stitched at both edges and fastened with small buttons put in in gulmps of three. The sleeves are full and conclude in frills. With this is worn a little bonnet.

Never since embroidery was invented has it been more used for any purpose than for adorning the garments of the little ones. Borderie anglaise is proper for little girls, a collar being absent or present, according to preference, while the shape of the yoke is now round, now square, and the edge scalloped or plain.

Bishop sleeves and short puff sleeves are the two leading vogues in connection with frocks for little children. Nothing of its class has superseded in favoritism the long waisted French frock with a sash drawn down to the hips and tied into a big bow at the back or a knot at the left side. A simple dress of this sort of pale blue china silk has an insertion yoke of lace to match, the cuffs to the bishop sleeves being also of lace.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WISDOM OF THE NURSERY.

Children are apt to become saucy and ill mannered when their elders do not set them a good example.

A child that learns verses and hymns as punishment is quite certain to take a lifelong dislike to such things later on.

Avoid taking children into crowded shops when it is possible, as it not only tires the child but exposes it to impure air and infectious diseases.

Remember that medicine suitable for a grown person is too strong for a child, and never try to administer such a dose without the advice of a physician.

Have a secure guard round the nursery fire, if there is one, and a firmly latched gate at the head of the stairs when the baby begins to crawl about.

And when a child is "fidgety" do not take it with you when paying calls; it causes discomfort, both to the hostess and yourself.—Indianapolis News.

SUITS FOR MORNING WEAR.

The morning suit for street wear will be severely plain, especially so in the linen suits, which are finished with a deep hem and stitching. Russet shoes will be a feature of the street attire, but they differ from those of former years, not only in being of a much darked shade, but also in having the flat bow to the instep. With the tailor suit a soft leather belt is usually selected, which may be ornate or plan, according to the taste of the wearer.—Washington Times.

FASHION NOTES.

Apricot yellow is playing a prominent part in the costumes found in the fashionable trosseau.

The smart bridesmaids' gowns are of some soft, sheer stuff of some brilliant color; and often adorned with sashes.

Household Matters

Wooden Bedsteads.

It is a relief after the long regime of the iron and brass beds to see wooden beds offered for cottage furnishings. The new beds are very simple in design, and are as pretty as possible. Forest green, walnut stain and gray maple are favorite woods.

To Clean Mattresses.

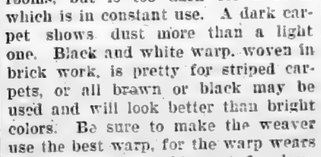
Mattresses are difficult to clean, and even some work to brush properly, owing to the creases around the upholsterer's buttons. If they are not constantly and completely covered by protectors the dust will gradually enter every crease. One piece of unbleached cotton sheeting should be stretched over the entire mattress. The end of the sheeting should first be pinned to the top of the mattress, the rest drawn to the foot, under the mattress, and up again to the top, where the upper and under ends should be neatly basted together. After all wrinkles are smoothed out, the edges of the sheeting along the sides of the mattress are roughly basted together. There should be two protectors for every mattress, so that when one is in the wash the other can take its place.

Concerning Polished Floors.

Hard wood floors of either pine, maple, birch or oak should never be varnished. Therein lies the pitfall which the landlord, seeking for cheap and speedy results, prepares for our feet, since the black corners and white spots are sure to come in time even with the best of care. Waxing is the only proper method if we may start afresh, and with new floors the process is comparatively simple. We are advised by the best authorities to provide against future grease spots by applying first two coats of a mixture containing equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine, combined with a japan drier. The drier must not be omitted or the oil will combine with the wax, and the results will be anything but satisfactory. After allowing this mixture to dry over night all the pores of the wood may be filled with one of the prepared fillers. The polish is more even if this is done, but to avoid making the floors excessively slippery it is sometimes omitted. Some woods do not need it. When the floor is thoroughly dry it is ready for the paste of wax and turpentine, which may be applied with a cloth in an even coat, not too thick, and allowed to dry over night. Another coat is put on the next morning and allowed in turn to dry. when the whole is thoroughly polished with a weighted brush and woolen cloth, rubbing always with the grain. If this is thoroughly done it will not be necessary to repeat the process for a year, and then only partially if the floors have not been roughly treated.—Harper's Bazar.

Rag Carpet.

There are in almost every house old garments, sheets and pillowcases that might be utilized in making a rag carpet, and there is no floor covering which in point of mobility or economy can compare with it. When a garment that cannot be worn again comes from the wash, cut off the buttons and bands, and tear it in strips from one-half to three-fourths of an inch wide; the finer they are, the prettier the carpet will be. Put them in a bag or box with a closely fitting cover, so they will be protected from the dust. The work of sewing them is neither tedious nor difficult. When you have enough for a carpet, mix them thoroughly, that the colors may be evenly distributed. Take them to the sewing machine, and lap and sew the ends of the strips. Continue until you have about a pound sewed, then clip the threads and wind into a ball. Rich, dark colors, sewed indiscriminately and warped with a dark chain, produce a good effect, and is desirable for bedrooms, but is too dark for a room which is in constant use. A dark carpet shows dust more than a light one. Black and white warp, woven in brick work, is pretty for striped carpets, or all brown or black may be used and will look better than bright colors. Be sure to make the weaver use the best warp, for the warp wears out first, and have him put five hundred threads in a carpet one yard wide. One pound of warp will be enough for three yards of carpet, and one and one-fourth pounds of rags will weave a yard of carpet.



Fruit Ice Cream—The very best fruit ice cream is made by whipping cream and partially freezing it. Meanwhile mash the fruit with plenty of sugar and stir it into the cream, and complete the freezing process. When cream is whipped it goes further, besides making a lighter ice cream. The fruit does not require much freezing.

Green Peppers—Who has not learned to use green peppers has something to learn in the cookery line. Peppers cut in rings with dull scissors and combined with lettuce and French dressing are as good a simple salad as one could wish for. A delicious made-over dish of chicken is constructed with the aid of green peppers. Cut off the tops of the peppers and scoop out the membrane. Parboil for about five minutes. Cut up the chicken, mix with boiled rice, and fill the peppers with the mixture. Place in a baking pan and pour in enough stock or water, immerse the peppers half-way, and bake for an hour.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 30.

Subject: Manasseh's Sin and Repentance—II. Chron. xxxiii., 1-13—Golden Text, Prov. xiv., 34—Memory Verses, 12, 13—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Manasseh's excesses (vs. 1-9). 1. "Manasseh was twelve years old" (vs. 1). Manasseh was the son of Hezekiah and Hephzibah, who was exceptionally the daughter of Zion. "Twelve years old." He was only three years after Hezekiah's wonderfully restored to health. He reigned longer than any other king of Israel. 2. "Did evil" (vs. 2). He followed all the abominations of the nations of Canaan, and greater than them. "Right and knew about the "Baalim." The pillars "Made graves." "Made R. V. Asheroth is one of the forms of Ashtaroth, a Baal was a male and divinity. An Asherah wooden pole which beside an altar as a sy "Host of heaven" (D stars. 4. "Altars in placed two heathen temples." "Shall my chapter 7: 16.

5. "In the two courts Lumby thinks this verse preceding verse, and trons altars were erected of the temple and no 6. "Through the fire son to believe that a stances the children were actually burnt to first stain and that 106: 38; Jer. 7: 31; 2 "Valley—of Hinnom" vine on the south and lem, the southeast ex had the name of Tophet times." See R. V. tion by the clouds." He used incantations familiar spirit." See had in his service the to raise the spirits or knowing ones who secrets. Many of these from Chaldea to pa tions and practices to Manasseh was the "Much evil." The ceremonies which Y were often of the foul "Set—image." The carved up the crah within the sacred dwelt upon as the most outrage of this wicked "Neither will I," etc. ised that this land forever (2 Sam. 7: 10 V. All of God's pro tional. This condition at the very first. Had God they would never captivity, but would still possession of the promised "To do worse." The cious influence of M led into worse forms even practiced by th ites. Tradition says that Manasseh Isaiah was sawn asunder.

II. Manasseh's punishment (vs. 10. "The Lord spoke" imagine the bitter grief and indignation of these God of Israel. And lent. In 2 Kings 21: 10-15 named prophets denouncing tasy and threatening in striking language.

11. "King of Assyria." Asserhaddon at that time ruled Egypt. "Among the thorns." "In chains" V. The shars, thralike hooks which prisoners were caught like fish. "Fetters." Probably cles for the hands and fetters for feet. "To Babylon." With the Judah was added to the Assyrian empire.

III. Manasseh's repentance (vs. 12. "Besought the Lord." In the fude of exile and imprisonment assoh had leisure for reflection calamities forced on him a review his past life, convincing him of miseries of his dethronement and tivity were owing to his awful unprecedented apostasy from the his fathers. "Humbled himself greatly." Afflictions are our best if we should never from upon their midst we see our mothers

IV. Manasseh's restoration (vs. 13. "He was entreated." It is sible that any sinner who will forsake sin and turn to God will fused mercy, after the record don from God to a man like Ma does this not explain why he was permitted to live the life Would the Bible have us look to were not personified by the ters, and grace personified by Christ to meet their need. Though affliction drives us to will not therefore reject us if sorely seek Him, for affliction to bring us to Him. Jerusalem." When Manasseh back to God and his kingdom be brought back to his throne how readily God is to accept come returning sinners, and to show mercy. Let no one despair when Manasseh himself pentance, found favor with him God showed forth His (1 Tim. 1: 16; Isa. 1: 18). knew—God." No presents of er; no teaching of priests and no act of ceremonial circumcision engaging in forms of religion ening to sermons nor read Scriptures brought him that edge. He had to be brought to tion where nothing but the power of God could deliver him will bless God through all eternity the days of trouble that lead obey (Psa. 50: 15). But how ter it is to obey at once, thus such afflictions unnecessary

Landslide in Naples.

Naples, Italy.—A landslide day destroyed the jury mast was built in 1900 at a cost of and otherwise caused great

Bomb Thrown in Center of Byelostok, Russia.—A b thrown in the center of the day, killing several persons verely wounding a number including the chief of police.

THE PULPIT.

PITTSBURG SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. ROBERT H. CARSON.

Subject: Paul the Preacher.

Ilion, N. Y.—Sunday in Grace Presbyterian Church, the pastor, the Rev. Robert H. Carson, took for his subject "Paul the Preacher." His text was Acts xxiv:25: "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee." Mr. Carson said:

The book of apostolic labors gives us a glimpse of Paul in many attitudes. We have him pictured before his conversion and after, and whether we see him at his manual occupation of tentmaking, or in his frequent journeys by land and sea, or addressing vast audiences in splendid cities, or in chains in palaces or in prisons, wherever we see a man whom we can safely know to be one of earth's truest and noblest souls.

Now he is standing before a king and has no less wicked and there is that in his demeanor, in action which makes us proclaim his intimity and its power.

[illegible] frequently weakness, want of gentleness and charity, are not the proper attendants of a man of spirit, and oftimes a Christian slow of speech, or adroit in the presence of evil lest he show a boldness unbecoming. He proposes himself to be a [illegible] of Him who was meek and lowly, yet there is no warrant for such conduct in the example of Christ or the teaching of His apostles. In what strikes a reader most in the book of apostolic acts is the bold spirit which the first preachers of gospel exhibited. We see Peter [illegible] in the presence of his own as well as in the presence of enemies of the Christ, and holding them of the inside of [illegible]. And what said Christ Himself: he not to send peace on earth but sword." He was Christ-[illegible] and what He was, so should followers be. The Christian, is the truth in love, but in the face of evil he must never [illegible] fear, for unless his words [illegible] ears, nor [illegible] nor dread the [illegible].

Apostolic boldness, then, is the first that we would note in the words we have chosen as our text. We in the presence of a man who ter of his life. He speaks to whose word is law, who [illegible] to seal his doom, and yet how so as to make that monarch [illegible]. Ah, friends, a man who his cause to be right can afford to be courageous and bold at all times is wondrous fearless reads no sacrifice, whether of fame or even of life itself, if God be honored and righteousness crowned. Look back on that [illegible] of fearless witnesses for God how strongly this element of predominated. Of such was assoh Isaiah was sawn asunder. in the presence of Pharaoh, of was Nathan in the presence of of such was Elijah before of such was John the Baptist Herod, of such were the apostles and martyrs and glorious company reformers. Luther would go to Diet of Worms and vindicate his though as many devils bindered there were slates on the house Erfurt. When they laid John the man who made Scotland grave they said: "There lies one never feared the face of man." this fearlessness, this courage, not be confined to the leaders The humblest Christian may and should share, in this precious heritage. To this line of chosen the very chivalry of the saints—every man and woman who, like Josiah, dares to say: "So will not I, because of the fear of the Lord; who, being in obedience to the dictates of enlightened conscience to brave opinion and even the loss of office in standing by what they believe right. Such are the salt of the earth. Such is the leaven that is going to leaven the whole mass. These are the men whom God and man trust, and such men are the hope of the world. Herein, indeed, is the glory of Christianity seen, and, with God, in all the ages of Christendom in all the ranks of life men and women with their fearless courage have been found.

[illegible] comparatively easy to bear witness to the truth when a large public sympathy is with you. When on all sides you are surrounded by those who encourage you with cheering words; when you have nothing to lose and everything to gain; when the "offense of the cross," as Paul puts it, "has ceased." But when the public is unsympathetic, when friends are lacking, when there is everything to lose and [illegible] earthly to gain, then it is a different matter.

Beloved, by our own strength, by relying on our own arm we can do nothing. It is easy to say resist the devil and fast, but we can do neither one nor the other unless we are [illegible] in the faith. In the midst of a wicked and untoward generation, when evils, both social and political are eating out the very life of the nation, how shall we be courageous and bold, how shall we do our part to stem the torrent? Surrounded by evil in high places and in low, how shall we as followers of Jesus Christ get strength to do our duty? Assailed by temptation at every turn in the pathway of life, where shall we get courage to face the temptation and to say with boldness and with decision, "get thee behind me, Satan?" In our own strength we cannot do it. There is a power for good, to be a factor in the upbuilding of righteousness, to [illegible] one in the conflict with temptation, we must know God and trust God. The knowledge of God is revealed in the person of Jesus Christ, and then we will be able to stand fast in the evil day. This knowledge is the knowledge that saves, and this alone will make us courageous as this poor prisoner was. It makes the monarch tremble, and the words of our text were in the first place, a sample of apostolic boldness, and in the second place we have a sample of apostolic [illegible].

The wife of Felix was a Jewess

THE SUNDAY SCH

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COM
FOR JULY 30.

Subject: Manasseh's Sin and Re
11. Chron. xxxiii., 1-13.—Gold Prov. xiv., 34.—Memory Vers
—Commentary on the Day's L

I. Manasseh's excessive id
(vs. 1-9). 1. "Manasseh." Th Jewish King of Judah (not Ahaziah the usurper), son of king and Hephzibah, who was born the daughter of "Twelve years old." He was these years after Hezekiah was unto Jehovah, and restored to health. He r longer than any other King of or Isaiah. 2. "Did evil." E copied all the abominable practi the heathen around him, but his more than theirs because h knowledge from the true Judah." The literal form for
"Made graven." "Made Ashe R. V. Asherah is one of the forms of Ashtoreth, a heathen go Baal was a male and Asherah a f
An Asherah was prob which a pole was built or was planted side or otherwise as a symbol of a "Host of heaven." The sun, mo stars. 4. "Altars in the house perted the heathen altars even Temple." "Shall my name be."
Jer. 7: 10.

"In the two courts." Pro
Lindsay thinks this verse explai preceding verse, and that the heathen altars were erected in the of the temple and not in the holy
6. "Through the fire." There seem to believe that in certain causes the children offered to were usually burnt to death, o first slain and then burnt. Se 16: 38; Jer. 7: 31; 2 Kings
"Valley of Hinnom." This wa west of Jerusalem, with and west of J on the southeast extremity of and the name of Tophet. "Ob R. V. "Practiced
soothsaying." "Enchantm Revised, "observations and charm familiar spirit." See 1 Sam. 28: had in his service those who pre to have the spirits. "Wizards."
who professed the knowing ones who claimed to secrets. Many of those impostors from Chaldea to pursue their tions and practice their deceptio Manasseh was their liberal "Much evil." The heathen rit ceremonies which Manasseh ob were often of the foulest charac
"Set image." The setting up th idol within the sacred precin dwelt upon as the most aggr outrage of this wicked kin
"Neither will I," etc. God had said that this land should be forever (2 Sam. 7: 10). "If on V." All of God's promises are ditional. This condition was ex at the very first. Had they God they would never have go entirely, but would still have b possession of the promised la
"To do worse." Through the vicious influence of Manasseh the led into worse forms of sin tha even practiced by the original C tives. Tradition says that under Manasseh Isaiah was sawn asunder
II. Manasseh's punishment
11-13. 10. "The Lord spake."
Sensing the bitter grief and indignation of those who lov
God of Israel. And they were heed. In 2 Kings 21: 10-15 we named prophets denouncing th vere and threatening judgment striking language.

11. "King of Assyria." Assy at that time under Esarh
"Among the thorns." "In chai
V. The sharp, thornlike ho which prisoners were caught a like fish. "Fetters." Probably ches for the hands and fetters feet. "To Babylon." With th Judah was added to the Assyri pire.

III. Manasseh's repentance
12. "Besought the Lord." In exile of exile and imprisonme Jewish had leisure for reflectio calamities forced on him a re his past life, convincing him miseries of his dethronement a fidelity were owing to his awful provoked apostasy from the his fathers. "Humbled himself lv." Afflictions are our best we should never from upon th their midst we see our nothing
IV. Manasseh's restoration
13. "He was entreated." It is sible that any sinner who de forsake sin and turn to God w casual mercy, after the record door from God to a man like M
Was this not explain why M was permitted to live the life Would the Bible be the book it were not personified by such ters, and grace personified
Christ to meet their need?
Though affliction drives us to will not therefore reject us if sorely seek Him for affections to bring us to Him. "Brought Jerusalem." When Manasseh k conviction of God and his duty he s he brought back to his kingd how readily God is to accept and returning sinners, and h to show mercy. Let not great despair when Manasseh himse penance found favor with God showed forth long
(1 Tim. 1: 16; Isa. 1: 18). know—God." No preconcert of er; no teaching of priests and no act of ceremonial circumc engaging in forms of religion owing to sermons nor rea
Scriptures brought him thi edge. He had to be brought tion where nothing but the power of God could deliver h will bless God through all et the days of trouble that le obey (Psa. 50: 15). But how ter it is to obey at once, thu such afflictions unnecessary.

Landslide in Naples

Naples, Italy.—A landslide day destroyed the dry ba was built in 1900 at a cost o and otherwise caused great

Bomb Thrown in Center

Byelostok, Russia.—A b thrown in the center of the day, killing several person severely wounding a number including the chief of pol son.

THE PULPIT.

SERMON BY REV. ROBERT H. CARSON.

Subject: Paul the Preacher.

Elmira, N. Y.—Sunday in Grace Presbyterian Church, the pastor, the Rev. Robert H. Carson, took for his subject "Paul the Preacher." His text was Acts xxiv:25: "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee." Mr. Carson said:

"The book of apostolic labors gives us a glimpse of Paul in many attitudes. We have him pictured before his conversion and after, and whether we find him at his manual occupation of tent making, or in his frequent personal and open, or addressing cultured audiences in splendid cities, or pleading in palaces or in prisons—wherever we see a man whom we can safely know to be one of earth's greatest and noblest souls.

"Now he is standing before a wicked king and his no less wicked wife. There is that in his demeanor and action which makes us proud of manhood and its power.

"Physical weakness, with a gentleness and charity, are considered the proper attendants of a Christian spirit, and ofttimes a Christian view of speech, or altogether in the presence of evil lest he should show a boldness unbecoming in one who proposes himself to be a follower of the Lamb who was meek and lowly in heart. There is no warrant for any such conduct in the example of Christ, or in the teaching of His apostles. Indeed, what strikes a reader most in the book of apostolic acts is the boldness and spirit which the first preachers of the gospel exhibited. We see Peter and John in the presence of his own people as well as in the presence of the rulers of the Christ, and boldly charge them of the murder of the Just One, and what said Christ Himself: 'Think not to send peace on earth, I came not to send peace but a sword.' He was Christianity's Lord, and what He was, so should His followers be. The Christian is to speak the truth in love, but in the presence of evil he must never be silent through fear, nor mince his words to please ears, nor pander to their prejudices nor dread their criticism.

"Where boldness, then, is the first thing that we would note in the words which we have chosen as our text. Paul in the presence of a man who was master of his life. He speaks to a man whose word is law, whose nod is enough to seal his doom, and yet he does so as to make that monarch tremble. My friends, a man who has his cause to be right can afford to be courageous and bold. At all times is wondrous fearless and noble, no sacrifice, whether of time, fame or even of life itself, if it will be honored and righteousness earned. Look back on that sainted host of fearless witnesses for God and see how strongly this element of character predominated. Of such was Elijah in the presence of Pharaoh, of such was Nathan in the presence of David, of such was John the Baptist before Herod, of such were the apostles, martyrs and glorious company of reformers. Luther would go to the diet of Worms and vindicate his cause though as many devils hindered as there were slates on the houses in Erfurt. When they laid John Huss, the man who made Scotland free, they said: 'There lies one who feared the face of man.'

"This fearlessness, this courage, is not to be confined to the leaders of men. The humblest Christian may and should share, in this precious heritage. To this line of chosen men every chivalry of the saints—every man and woman who, like Paul, dares to say: 'So will not I do for the fear of the Lord; who in obedience to the dictates of an enlightened conscience to brave opposition and even the loss of friends, standing by what they know is right. Such are the salt of the earth. Such is the leaven that is to leaven the whole mass. Such are the men whom God and man delight to honor, and such men are the hope of Christianity seen, and, alas! not in all the ages of Christendom in all the ranks of life men are found with their fearless courage found.

"Relatively easy to bear witness when a large public sympathy is with you. When on all sides we are surrounded by those who encourage us with cheering words; when we have nothing to lose and all to gain; when the "offense of the cross," as Paul puts it, "has ceased," when the public is unanimous, when friends are lacking, when everything to lose and nothing to gain, then it is a matter of another matter.

"Not by our own strength can we do our own arm we can. It is easy to say resist the devil, but we can do neither of us the other unless we are clothed with the faith. In the midst of a crooked and untoward generation, both social and political, shining out the very life of God, shall we be courageous and bold? How shall we do our part in the present? Surrounded by temptations in high places and in low, how are we as followers of Jesus Christ to do our duty? Only by temptation at every step in the pathway of life, where we have courage to face the tempter and say with boldness and with decision 'Get thee behind me, Satan?' Of ourselves strength we cannot do it. But for good, to be a factor in the upbuilding of righteousness, to be in the conflict with temptation, we must know God and trust God and love Christ. He is revealed in the Bible, Christ, and then we will be strong and fast in the evil day. Added to this is the knowledge that Christ alone will make us as courageous as this poor prisoner before the monarch tremble. The words of our text we have in the first place, a sample of Paul's boldness, and in the second place a sample of apostolic

"The wife of Felix was a Jewess whom he had persuaded to leave her lawful husband. She, doubtless, was anxious to learn of this Jesus who had caused such a commotion among the people of her nation, and herein may have been the cause of the apostle's first invitation to the palace.

"It is said that the greatest wonder on earth is man himself, and indeed I believe this to be true. Take, for instance, this man, Felix, and he is but the type of a numerous family. No man who walks the earth to-day who may not find a representative in some Bible character, and if you diligently study the different characters recorded in the sacred book you can easily prove the truth of this statement. Felix lived in sin. Paul knew his man, and he suited his sermon to his audience. I am not sure that that sermon would escape criticism in these days. I am of the opinion that many good souls would say it was not evangelical. He was invited to preach concerning the faith in Christ, and his sermon was on righteousness, temperance and judgment to come—topics that any good man of any faith might well discuss. Many might say, is that Christian preaching? I say it is, and more than that, it is the kind that this age needs, and we need it every day. If Paul had begun an argument respecting Christ's divinity, or resurrection, or any kindred topic, he would probably have had a most interesting discussion with Felix, but think you that he would have made him tremble?

"Most men think that Christianity is theology. No; Christianity is morality in the light of eternity. And that is not the best preaching which delights us with its close reasoning and high speculation and profound theology; that is the best preaching which makes us, if we are living in sin, turn uneasily in our seats and tremble as we listen to its truths. The law is our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, and it is only when conscience is aroused within us that we seek the grace which is in Christ and which came by Christ. The end of preaching is not to make men theologians, the end of preaching is to build up character, and while some of us may be far enough on the road to hear sermons on the deep things of God, I am not pessimistic when I say that, taking the world in its totality, most of us are still where we need to be reasoned with concerning righteousness, temperance and judgment to come.

"'Preaching to the times' is a favorite expression nowadays. Its purpose seems to be that men are to be amused, as Felix had Paul in from the prison to amuse him. He and he alone preaches to the times who makes us restless by showing us the demands of God's eternal law and then points the way clear up to Calvary and to Him who said 'Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.' These are eternal verities and they fit all times. All others change and pass away with the changing hour; social, political, aye, even theological questions have their days and cease to be, but the eternal need is forgiveness and the everlasting want, rest for the soul.

"And so Paul reasoned of righteousness to a man living in sin, of temperance to a woman who lived to gratify every desire and wicked passion, and of judgment to come to two who never looked beyond the present world—the first steps, the first necessary steps to the pointing out of Him in whom alone is forgiveness and from whom alone we have the power to live so that at His coming in glorious majesty to judge the world we may not be put to shame.

"And now, in the last place, we notice that this preaching was convincing. That is clear enough, for a man does not tremble without occasion. A man does not tremble in the presence of spiritual truth except his intellect has been reached and his conscience touched. Paul did his duty, but Felix shirked his and turned his back upon the truth. He trembled, but he did not move. Are there not many men like him with us to-day? 'Go thy way,' said he, 'when I have a convenient season I will send for thee.' Is not that what we often hear. But when do those who say so find that that convenient season ever comes? What do we think of the man who in matters of this world, is given to putting off and waiting to another time? Our worldly wisdom tells us that such a man will never come to any good and no one has any confidence in him. You see through him, and smile at all his excuses for delay, and think you that if a man cannot deceive his fellows in this respect he can deceive God and his own soul? The Bible knows of no time but now. 'Now is the accepted time.' And this is true not only of the greatest of all transactions—our acceptance of Jesus Christ—but of all the duties that devolve upon us as Christian men and women. We may have to-day an opportunity of doing good, or of receiving good. If we let it slip that door that opened to us will be shut, and it will never be opened again. Lost opportunities do not return. Others may come, but the lost ones come not again. Let us, then, seize every opportunity, let us realize that the present only is ours, and as we hear the word of life let us embrace it in its fulness and live in its strength.

Consequences of Neglect.

Fatal consequences follow not only positive wrongdoing, but simple neglect of duty also. The ten foolish virgins in the parable were guilty of nothing but neglect, yet their lamps went out and they were shut out from the wedding. The man with one talent did nothing but omit the thing he ought to have done, yet he was cast out. Those who shall stand on the left hand of the Judge of the whole earth in the last day shall be accused only of omitting to minister to their Lord in His affliction, yet they shall go away into everlasting punishment. It is fatal to leave things undone.

In the Soul's Recesses.

What we want is the clear eye to see the goodness there is among men, and the wise, skilled hand to draw it forth; for deep down in the recesses of the spirit is the angel of the Lord, cramped and chained indeed, but only needing the charmed word to invest it with authority and power.—John Page Hopps.

Worst of Frauds.

The first and worst of all frauds is to cheat one's self. All sin is easy after that.—Scottish Reformer.

Where Women Predominate.

In all Quebec there are only ten more males and females. In Ontario, with large areas being opened up for settlement, there are about 10,000 more males than females. Manitoba is 22,000 females short. British Columbia is 50,000 short, while in the unorganized territories the females are outnumbered by two to one. All this goes to show that it is in the pioneer districts that the men predominate.

However, in spite of the balance of numbers against the women, there are in Canada 1,564,011 unmarried females of various ages. All things considered, it is unlikely that immigration as a purely matrimonial venture would be justified. In the early days of Canada's history, when shiploads of damsels were brought from France to espouse the king's soldiers, the experiment was scarcely a success.

Grammar by Rule.

The master who gives his pupils "simple rules" for determining questions which confront them, and particularly grammatical questions, is apt to find that such rules frequently disastrously fail to fit all cases.

Once an examiner was questioning the pupils of a country school. He wrote on the blackboard the sentence: "The fly has wings," and asked a class what part of speech each word was.

They parsed the "the" without any trouble.

"What part of speech is 'fly'?"

"Adverb," shouted all the class in unison. "What! Fly an adverb?"

"Yessir!" shouted the boys with great positiveness.

"What makes you think it is an adverb?"

"'Cause the master told us last week that all words that end in 'ly' are adverbs."

Carries $5,000,000 in His Pockets.

Even should the Sultan of Morocco be compelled to leave his country in a hurry as a result of present complications he will not do so in a penniless condition. Some time ago he sent to Paris a trusty messenger who invested nearly $5,000,000 in unset diamonds. These precious stones Abdul carries on his person constantly, although in such a country that is rather a dangerous thing to do.

The Adrianovkva coal field may supply the needs of the Siberian railway.

DISFIGURING ULCER

People Looked at Her in Amazement—Pronounced Incurable—Face Now Clear as Ever—Thanks God For Cuticura.

Mrs. P. Hackett, of 400 Van Buren St., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I wish to give thanks for the marvelous cure of my mother by Cuticura. She had a severe ulcer, which physicians had pronounced incurable. It was a terrible disfigurement, and people would stand in amazement and look after her. After there was no hope from doctors she began using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and now, thank God, she is completely cured, and her face is as smooth and clear as ever."

More than 10,000 pilgrims yearly ascend Mount Fujiyama, Japan.

Caution to Purchasers of Winchester Guns

We find Winchester Repeating Rifles and Shotguns are being offered by certain of the trade, not customers of ours, at cut prices, and that such guns have been altered since leaving the factory, including the changing and obliteration of the factory serial numbers.

Not knowing to what further extent these arms have been tampered with, we take this opportunity of advising the public in general that we assume no responsibility whatever connected with any such arms, and caution all buyers to see that the numbers have not been changed or obliterated.

All genuine Winchester Repeating Rifles and Shotguns are numbered and all Winchester Single Shot Rifles are numbered, except the Models 1900, 1902, 1904, and the Thumb Trigger Model.

WINCHESTER REPEATING ARMS CO.

Linevitch An Old Fighter.

General Linevitch, the Russian commander, has been in the army about half a century. As early as 1859 he was fighting the war-like Circassians and the wild tribes of Dagestan. In the Crimean war he was twice wounded. He is extremely popular with the rank and file, who call him "Papa Linevitch." The general is descended from an old Polish family, is of noble birth, and well educated.

Edward Admires Roosevelt.

King Edward is an admirer of Mr. Roosevelt, and follows the American president's movements with interest. He was considerably amused when he read once that at the invitation of the pastor of a new Dutch Reformed church, at Washington, "Brother Roosevelt" delivered an impressive address. "Anyhow," exclaimed his majesty, with a laugh, "I shan't follow him in that line."

Explorer Held for Ransom.

The African explorer, the Marquis de Segonzac, who was sent by the Moroccan committee in Paris, partly for political reasons, to explore the region south of the Moroccan Atlas, and who was captured and held for ransom, was accompanied by two Algerian linguists. Several of the party took a different route. It is believed that the capture was made solely for ransom. Judging by the last letters received from the Marquis he was able to get much new and valuable information regarding the region he traversed.

AN OLD MAN'S TRIBUTE.

An Ohio Fruit Raiser, 78 Years Old, Cured of a Terrible Case After Ten Years of Suffering.

SIDNEY JUSTUS.

Sidney Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, says: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble, of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys. These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the day time, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was bothered with rheumatic pains and dropsical swelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful and the secretions were discolored and so free that often I had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents.

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Caught Another Octopus.

The largest devil fish yet captured here was placed in the aquarium a few days since, says the Los Angeles Times. Its tentacles will cover a space of six or seven feet. The one that has been on exhibition for some months was put back into the ocean and given its freedom. The new tentacle which it was growing to replace one lost in capture had reached a length of about six inches.

Conductors on the German state railways are to be discharged unless they can pass an examination in the English and French languages. Some of them have been twenty years in the service.

FITS permanently cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Japan's gold production for the year was $5,976,000.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c. a bottle

Manchuria is gaining by the Russian-Japanese War

I am sure Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my life three years ago.—Mrs. THOMAS ROBERTS, Maple St., Norwich, N.Y., Feb. 17, 1900

Japan has never as yet been invaded by a foreign foe.

Write Quick FOR A Big Bargain

To better advertise the South's Leading Business College, four scholarships are offered young persons of this county at less than cost. WRITE TODAY.

GA-ALA. BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

TULANE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA.

Its advantages for practical instruction, both in ample laboratories and abundant hospital materials are unequalled. Free access is given to the great Charity Hospital with 800 beds and 30,000 patients annually. Special instruction is given daily at the bedside of the sick. The next session begins October 19th, 1905. For catalogue and information address

PROF. S. E. CHAILLE M. D., Dean.
P. O. Drawer 261. NEW ORLEANS, LA.

OUR SPECIALTY
3—4—5

Three two dollar shirts for five dollars.

MADE TO YOUR MEASURE.

Write for samples and measurement blanks.

MODEL SHIRT CO.
Dept. S. Indianapolis, Ind.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and sore spots, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh.

Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in pure water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all

TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES

For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box.

Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.

THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

ARE YOU SICK?

Men and women die every year, thousands of them—who might just as well live. It is their own fault, too! When sick they don't take the proper medicine. You must not consider the cost if sick, for your life is at stake. Get the best, but above all things do not permit the disease to run along without treatment. Our experience has taught us what Checkers will do. We know of no remedy in the world which will equal its marvelous action in the permanent cure of most all known chronic or fatal diseases.

BOTTLE FREE!

We want you to try Checkers. We want you to use this medicine because it has merit, because most any disease will vanish when Checkers commences to search the system. It will find out what is wrong inside—it goes to the bottom of every ordinary disease and makes the sick well. Call on your druggist for a sample bottle free—or write us. The better plan is to buy a mammoth dollar bottle to-day.

Checker Board and 24 Checker Men FREE

Call on your dealer or druggist for one of our full size heavy Checker boards, printed in colors, with 12 red and 12 blue Checker men, FREE. If he refuses to furnish same, write us and you'll be supplied.

Checkers Medicine Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Forbes Pianos

ARE MADE and SOLD by E. E. Forbes Piano Co. Direct

Saving you all the large profits made by commission men and dealers. When you purchase a FORBES you buy direct from the factory at factory prices, delivered free of all freight charges at your home.

SPECIAL OFFER:

To introduce the FORBES PIANO throughout the South, we offer 100 instruments at absolutely factory prices, to be distributed in separate districts. Write at once to know if your district is taken. The FORBES Piano is guaranteed in every respect—tone, action, workmanship, finish and material—and as a special effort to have these taken at once, we will place one in your home on your own terms, and if not entirely satisfactory will remove it without costing you one cent. Send your name on a postal today. Do it before your district is taken.

E. E. Forbes Piano Co.
DEPT. A 2
Birmingham, Alabama

Let Common Sense Decide

Do you honestly believe, that coffee sold loose (in bulk), exposed to dust, germs and insects, passing through many hands (some of them not over-clean), "blended," you don't know how or by whom, is fit for your use? Of course you don't. But is another story. The green berries, selected by keen judges at the plantation, are skillfully roasted at our factories, where precautions you would not dream of are taken to secure perfect cleanliness, flavor, strength and uniformity.

LION COFFEE

From the time the coffee leaves the factory no hand touches it till it is opened in your kitchen.

This has made LION COFFEE the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES.

Millions of American Homes welcome LION COFFEE daily. There is no stronger proof of merit than continued and increasing popularity. "Quality survives all opposition."

(Sold only in 1 lb. packages. Lion-head on every package.)
(Save your Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

LAZY LIVER

"I find Cascarets so good that I would not be without them. I was troubled a great deal with torpid liver and headache. Now since taking Cascarets Candy Cathartic I feel very much better. I shall certainly recommend them to my friends as the best medicine I have ever seen."
Anna Basinet, Osborn Mill No. 2, Fall River, Mass.

Best For The Bowels
Cascarets
CANDY CATHARTIC
THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c. 25c. 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped C C C. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y. 624

ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.

NEW ORLEANS.

Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE
HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.

There is absolutely no other school for Women and Girls in the South, if anywhere, offering so extensive a curriculum; thus the greatest benefits for the smallest outlay. Most approved modern improvements—Electric Lights, Hot Water heating, Complete outfit of Bath-rooms, etc., etc. Grounds of forty acres, by universal consensus, the most uniquely beautiful School Grounds in America. Offers to the ambitious thorough preparation for the great universities. Col. Th. Smith, A. M., Pres. (Alum. Univ. of Va.)

THE DAISY FLY KILLER destroys all the flies and affords comfort to every home—in dining room, sleeping rooms and all places where flies are troublesome. Clean, neat and will not soil or injure anything. Try them once and you will never be without them. If not kept by dealers, sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD SOMERS, 149 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Am. 30, 1905.

Bryant & Stratton

Business, Shorthand and Telegraphy College, Louisville, Ky., open the whole year. Students can enter any time. Catalog free.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS

THE LIMIT IN LEATHER

Sir Knight $4.00 SHOE FOR MEN

Simply the Limit.

IT'S IN A CLASS BY ITSELF. IT HAS..... NO COMPETITION

It is ALL Style, Service, Comfort, and is the Top Notcher of the

"ALWAYS JUST CORRECT"

CLOVER BRAND SHOE FAMILY.

Wertheimer-Swarts Shoe Co.

LARGEST FINE SHOE EXCLUSIVISTS
ST. LOUIS, U. S. A.

IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT WRITE TO US.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

EMPERORS MEETING.

In Discussing Situation German Emperor Urges the Czar to Peace and Reform.

NO INTENTION OF MEDDLING

Gives His Views Only When Requested—They Will Not Interfere With American Conference.

Berlin.—The foreign office here is advised that a meeting between Emperor William and Emperor Nicholas took place on Monday off the Swedish coast near the Island of Bjoerkoe. Emperor Nicholas wrote to Emperor William several days before that if during the latter's yachting in the Baltic he should approach the Russian shore he (Emperor Nicholas) would be pleased to meet him. The German emperor replied that he would be glad to cruise to any convenient point, and the Island of Bjoerkoe was suggested. It is understood that the conversation was to be entirely personal and intimate, and therefore no minister from either government was to be present, although the Russian minister of marine was in Emperor Nicholas' suite.

Sequel to Correspondence.

The meeting is a sequel to the correspondence that has been going on between the two emperors concerning peace, in which Emperor William urged Emperor Nicholas to take steps towards peace. Emperor William was then co-operating with President Roosevelt seeking to bring the belligerents to a discussion of terms of peace, and in the present meeting the Associated Press is authoritatively informed Emperor William will continue to advise peace should the Russian emperor ask for his further views, and it would be very natural that Emperor Nicholas should do so as a development of the correspondence which had already taken place.—

Emperor William went to the meeting, as the Associated Press is officially informed, prepared to say if he was asked that he thought Emperor Nicholas could attain a full understanding and reconciliation with the discontented portions of his people only through reforms. The German government is interested in seeing the neighboring country peaceful and prosperous, for it is toward the Russian empire that Germany's manufacturers look for great trade expansion in the future.

Is Not Interfering.

The German emperor is most reluctant to have either the Russians or others to think that he is volunteering suggestions regarding the internal affairs of Russia. He is not doing so, but will only give his personal views on their being asked for. Emperor William has the fullest information regarding the Russian situation, and may be able to give Emperor Nicholas statements of fact and deductions from them that are unknown to the Russian emperor.

So far as the rumors in other capitals that a scheme is afloat to combine several of the powers in giving Russia moral support against the Japanese negotiations soon to be opened at Portsmouth, N. H., concerning Germany are denied explicitly. Germany's policy of non-interference, as is often declared, remains the same.

Right Man Not Caught.

Gadsden, Ala.—There are no new developments in the Smith murder and rape case, except that a great number of suspects have been arrested, but so far the right person has not been caught. There is considerable comment upon the fact that the two sons of the dead woman have shown so little interest in the terrible manner in which their mother met her death. It was some time before they could be induced to come to town and look after her remains, and they did not attend the coroner's inquest, although summoned. The boys have left town, and their whereabouts are unknown. This has caused considerable comment of a very unfavorable kind.

The negro woman involved in the case states most positively that both these boys were out all night on the mountain with them, and if this is so they could not help but know something about the fearful death of the woman. It is said that these boys would go home drunk and beat their mother, and the doctor has been called in more than once to attend to the wounds of Mrs. Smith made by her sons.

Extra Session November 10.

Washington, D. C.—It is announced at Oyster Bay that the extra session of congress, which was to have been called first in March and then in October, is now set for November 10.

Open Cotton Bolls.

Eufaula, Ala.—B. A. Warren, of this county, who resides at Batesville comes to the front with the first open cotton bolls of the season. Mr. Warren exhibited two here this week that were fully open and quite ready to be picked. Under the influence of the hot sunshine that is now prevailing the staple will open rapidly, and the first new bale is not considered to be a great way off.

Fly-Wheel Bursts.

Cumberland, Md.—The big fly-wheel at the Maryland rail mill burst Saturday afternoon, a section weighing over a ton going out through the roof, striking the main girders and causing the roof to collapse, tearing down half the mill. About twenty-five men were caught under the roof, but none of them were killed, though Charles Whitman, Roy Daniel and James Twigg may be fatally hurt.

The mill caught fire, but there was little wood to burn. At least a dozen men were injured.

Head Cut Off by Train.

Nashville, Tenn.—Cut almost as smoothly, it is said, as if done with a knife, the head of Mack Copeland was severed from his body by a moving railroad train at Lovejoy, Tenn., late Saturday afternoon. Copeland had unconsciously stepped in front of the cars on a street crossing. Lovejoy is a station on the Crawford branch of the Tennessee Central railroad, about 100 miles east of here.

Havana Declares Quarantine.

Havana, Cuba.—On account of the existence of yellow fever at New Orleans quarantine has been declared against that port. The Southern Pacific liner Elcelsior, which arrived on Monday, had sixty young women students from a Texas college on board. The officials required them to remain on the vessel or to undergo the usual five days' detention at the quarantine station.

Montgomery Man Killed.

Montgomery, Ala.—As a result of injuries sustained when he was thrown from his buggy by a collision with an incoming Seaboard Air Line train at a crossing near Montgomery L. K. Boultire, a prominent citizen of Montgomery, died at an early hour Sunday morning in a local hospital, where he was carried from the scene of the accident.

Death of Colonel Lamont.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Col. Daniel Scott Lamont, secretary of war during President Cleveland's second administration, died suddenly at his home at Mill Brook, Duchess county, Sunday night at 9:15 o'clock. Heart failure was the cause of death.

Town Washed Away by a Cloudburst.

Louisville, Ky.—Georgetown, Ind., a town twelve miles west of New Albany, on the Southern railway, was almost washed away by a cloudburst. The water in the main street of the town was three feet deep, and great damage was done to stores and other property.

Little Indian creek, which runs near the town, became a torrent and, rising out of its banks, spread over the surrounding country, doing much damage. So far as can be learned no lives were lost.

A Big Deficit.

Washington, D. C.—The efforts of the officials of the government to prevent a large deficit for the fiscal year ended on June 30 last, have resulted strangely to Uncle Sam's finances, for in the nineteen days of the new fiscal year a deficiency has been accumulated more than half as large as that for the entire 365 days immediately preceding. The excess of expenditures over receipts in the nineteen days was $14,813,384.80.

For Taking Locomotive.

Birmingham, Ala.—J. J. Madden, the white man who accomplished the unusual feat of stealing a locomotive and making a record-breaking run from Flat Top to Littleton, was caught Friday at Tuscumbia and brought to Birmingham. He was placed in the county jail.

It is stated that Madden overpowered the engineer of the locomotive and, opening the throttle, burnt the rails to Littleton.

Automobile Explosion.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The burned body of 14-year-old Olive J. Johnson, of Lima, O., and five other persons suffering from burns and bruises were dragged from beneath a burning automobile, which plunged into a ditch on the river road about a half mile east of Broad Ripple, seven miles northeast of this city, Friday night, exploding the gasoline storage tank.

The party was speeding along the river road leading east from Broad Ripple when the machine struck a rut. The forward wheels were sent into the ditch, overturning the machine and throwing the occupants underneath. From the tail light the gasoline was ignited and two explosions followed, throwing burning oil over the young people pinioned beneath the car.

Bank of Lobelville.

Cornersville, Tenn.—A bank was organized at Lobelville, Tenn., Friday with a capital stock of $10,000. The following officers were elected: John H. Twilla, president; W. O. Britt, vice-president; John B. Butler, cashier.

New Live Stock Company.

Brundidge, Ala.—The Ramage Live Stock Company, of Brundidge, with a capital stock of $15,000, has filed a notice of its incorporation with the secretary of state. The company will erect stables and conduct a general livery, feed and sale business, handling buggies, etc. The incorporators are J. T. Ramage, A. G. Seay, E. M. Hightower, W. G. Hicks and M. F. Johnson.

NEWEST OF BATTLESHIPS

SOME FEATURES OF ENGLAND'S FIGHTER TRIUMPH.

The Number of Rounds Fired from Each Gun Per Minute Gives an Average of Five Without Any Difficulty—Railway for Housing the Guns InBoard When at Sea.

The great length of the Triumph, 436 feet between perpendiculars, is very observable as one approaches her when afloat, and gives the impression of a somewhat low freeboard. Such, however, is not in reality characteristic of this war vessel. Her freeboard at the bow is 21 feet 6 inches, but as she has a rising sheer aft, the freeboard at the stern is 19 feet 6 inches, and the height of the centres of the two 10-inch guns forward above the load waterline is 23 feet 6 inches, the corresponding centre height aft being about two feet less. The height of centres of the main deck battery 7.5 inch guns is 13 feet 2 inches, or rather more than that of the main deck battery 6-inch guns of the King Edward VII., making, however, the angle of heel required to bring the centre of the muzzles to water level rather less than that of the last named ship, in consequence, of course, of the much greater length of the 7.5-inch guns.

A striking feature of the Triumph is the main deck open battery containing ten 7.5-inch guns. It is enclosed by 7-inch Krupp steel armor on the sides, with diagonal bulkheads of 6-inch steel armor at the several gun-positions, but there is no longitudinal web of this strength isolating the guns in the rear, which is to be regretted. The ammunition is brought up to each separate position by electric hoists, which can work with great rapidity and are an immense improvement on the old whip hoisting gear.

The guns are lifted up to the overhead railway to be run in for housing inboard, when the vessel is at sea, by a small hydraulic engine, this replacing the differential blocks and hand chain gear for the 6-inch guns of Admiralty vessels. The ammunition also has a hoist for carrying the projectiles into position, but, as a matter of practice, we understand that the blue-jackets prefer to lift the 200-pound shell by hand, two men lifting it, one at the point, another at the base. Telescopic sights are placed upon the left side of the guns, which give the most admirable results in firing practice. The range covered by them is from 12,000 to 14,000 yards, but the most effective range of the 7.5-inch gun is rather within those limits. It is needless to say that, with ten guns of so large a size and the mess tables and all the fittings and gear of the enclosed battery, the space is rather crowded; but the tables fold up, so as to economize room, and the covers of the ammunition hoists are compact and well placed. The gun positions themselves have plenty of room. The number of rounds fired from each gun per minute gives an average of five without any difficulty, and the officers on board speak well of the 7.5 inch gun, as being quite as handy as a 6-inch.

The 14-pounder guns on board are practically similar to the ordinary 12-pounder gun employed in our Admiralty vessels, and will, we understand, take the same ammunition. The 6-pounder gun is a specialty, with a breech face to the interior of the gun, so that it could not possibly be blown out. It has a lever action somewhat similar to that of the ordinary 12-pounder. Pompons are employed in the tops and are not regarded with equanimity by the bluejackets, owing to their disagreeable noise and habits of jumping. This was found to be the case in South Africa, where many of the guns were put out of action by the smashing of the pivot and jaws by which the gun was secured to the carriage. On the bridge of the Triumph the noise is distracting when these guns are fired.

The cranes for lifting boats in and out are most serviceable. A steamboat weighing fifty tons can be picked up, swung round, and dropped into the water as easily as a dingy, and the hang-over is very far reaching. It is true that they present a larger surface to the fire of an enemy than an ordinary boom, but they are in duplicate, in case one should be disabled.

Five large dynamos supply the electric power for all the requirements of the ship, and an infinity of motors. All the ammunition hoists are operated by electricity, and many of the other movements on board are similarly worked.

There is rather a deficiency of power in the ventilating department on board, the fans employed and the ventilating trunks being of smaller size than those usually supplied to the Admiralty-built vessels. In point of fact, their absence in many places where usually found in our battleships is most conspicuous. The result is that below the armored deck the heat is intense, and what this part of the ship will be like when she is stationed in the tropics—if ever—it is impossible to conceive. Even in this cool country it is unpleasantly warm down below. And the only workshop is buried down at a considerable depth. The result of this is that the portable and movable part of the repertory of tools is brought up to the main deck and repairs are effected in this more salubrious climate.

The accommodation on board the Triumph is excellent. Bathrooms, lavatories and a capital smoke room are parts of the wardroom officers' attributes and the gunroom is a perfect palace. In the Chilian navy many officers who are in the wardroom in the navy of Great Britain belong to the gunroom mess.

While on board we were shown the spot where the Triumph was rammed by the heavy Trinity barge. It was beneath the counter. Happily, however the 3-inch armor plate extending to the stern received the barge's steel stem as it dove inward and only the upper strake of ordinary plating was crushed up. The 3-inch armor plate was cshrdo eta s eta setaaoinnoinnn was crushed up. The Triumph can keep up her twenty knots with comparative ease, and has done so.—London Engineer.

A LOGGING ENGINE.

Peculiar Machine That Draws Trains From the Bonner Camp.

The operation of logging trains on the Big Blackfoot railroad has been resumed, after a shutdown which has lasted during severe weather, says a Missoula despatch to the Anaconda Standard. This road, which was completed last year, is one of the most interesting short roads in the country. It runs from the hills through the Camas prairie country, a distanse of 13 miles, and carries trainloads of logs to be dumped into the Blackfoot river for the Big Blackfoot Milling company's plant at Bonner. Since the enlargement of the Bonner plant it will be possible to keep the railroad running most of the year, and probabilities are its trains will continue to haul logs to the river all summer and fall at the rate of 30 carloads per day.

The equipment of the railroad consists of two Shay engines and 50 logging cars. The engines are most interesting, as they are of a special make. They work by means of cog wheels, thus making it possible for them to haul over heavier grades than the ordinary type.

The grade at some places along the Blackfoot is about 4 percent, which is too great for an ordinary railroad engine. During the last two years the Big Blackfoot company has spent in the neighborhood of $300,000 on its railroad and mill improvements, and the plant is now in a position to run 12 months in the year. This is good news to those who depend upon the timbering industry in this end of the state, for, in addition to the men employed in the hills, there are in the neighborhood of 300 working in the factory and mill at Bonner.

The Big Blackfoot company has about 200 men at work in the hills at the present time cutting timber, and these men will cut enough to keep the road in operation most of the time. Logs are hauled from the hills to the McNamara landing on the Blackfoot river and from there they are driven down the river. At the landing now 23,000,000 feet of logs wait for the drive, and this amount will soon be increased by means of the railroad facilities. The capacity of the Bonner mill has become so great that it keeps an army of men at work supplying it with timber. However, the company owns enough timber tributary to the mill to supply it for a quarter of a century to come.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

More than two thousand skilled workmen have left the French silk factories of Roubaix and Turcoing within a year for the United States.

Thibet's 6,000,000 people have to support an army of 430,000 priests, who produce nothing but beautifully illuminated copies of the sacred writings. They hold all the public offices.

One of the show bottles in a Derby (Ct.) drug store contains the same coloring matter that was placed in it in 1864. It is just as bright a blue as it was the day the bottle was closed.

The saints have no fewer than 397 streets named in their honor in London. There are 105 Church streets, 56 Chapel streets, 66 King streets, 100 Queen streets, and nearly as many High streets.

The first Japanese newspaper was published in 1863, only forty-one years ago, and contained some news translated from the Dutch papers. To-day Japan has over one thousand five hundred daily newspapers and periodicals

The monks at the Hospital of St. Jean de Dieu, at Ghent, have in their leisure moments decorated the walls with gorgeous landscapes, glowing with color and full of life, formed entirely by means of the postage stamps of all the nations of the world.

A bell cast by the Boston patriot, Paul Revere, hangs in the bell tower of the Chapman street schoolhouse in Greenfield. There is another of his bells in the church at Sunderland. A third one was in the church at Northfield, which was burned several years ago.

The Belgians have long been accustomed to horse meat as food, but of late importations of the animals, mainly from England, have shown so many that were emaciated, weak and obviously unfit for food that the Superior Council of Agriculture has recommended that such importations shall cease, or that broken-down horses, unfit for work, shall be classified as cattle, in which case the high duty will keep them out.

A Secondary Consideration.

"Yes, the auto whizzed across the dock and plunged into twenty feet of water. And, by George, it wasn't injured the least bit."

"How about the passengers?"

"The passengers? I don't think the paper said anything about the passengers."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

SPORTING BREVITIES.

Fifty-three yachts race in the Larchmont (N. Y.) contest.

George B. Hill's Esoteric won the Sunshine Stake at Brighton Beach.

Sydney Paget's three-year-old filly Tradition won the Brighton Oaks.

Canadian riflemen won the Rajah of Kolopore's imperial challenge cup at Bisley.

F. B. Van Mater's three-year-old filly Handzarra won the Glen Cove Handicap at Brighton Beach, N. Y.

James R. Keene's three-year-old imported colt Sinister won the nine fur long handicap at Brighton Beach.

Mulcahy and Varley, of the Atalanta Boat Club, of New York, have won the Kaiser's Cups for doubles at Homburg.

Beals C. Wright and William A. Larned defeated Australian tennis experts in the second round for the Davis cup.

Favorable weather conditions and a fast track marked the racing at Narragansett Park, Providence, R. I., and the attendance was large.

Launch rowing and swimming races were given by the Larchmont (N. Y.) Yacht Club and witnessed by a large gathering of women and girls.

Isaac Mackie, of the Fox Hills Club, with a score of 308 for four rounds, won the open golf tournament at Van Cortlandt Park, New York City.

William Lakeland's filly Cousin Eva won the Venus Stake at Brighton Beach, and Frontenac defeated a large field in the six furlong handicap.

The economy record for automobiles was broken between Hartford, Conn., and Boston, Mass., in the Glidden tour to the White Mountains.

In the heavyweight class for automobiles a forty horse power Pope-Toledo, driven by Charles Soules, won the climb to Mount Washington. Ray Owen's sixteen horse power Reo won in the lighter class.

One Family Rule.

One of the necessary rules, then, for an orderly family life is that every member of the family should be free to absent himself whenever he feels like it and whenever his absence does not interfere with the rights of the rest of the family. And this rule ought to be especially insisted upon for the wife and mother. She ought to give her house a rest now and then by getting out of it, and breeze herself up by a little flight in the open. When she comes back, be sure she will be welcomed—or if she is not, then it is because she has not stayed long enough and the family has not yet got over feeling relieved. The husband ought to be allowed to go hunting and fishing without a sigh or a cling; the young boys should be free to visit, and even, when possible, to camp out in charge of some safe, unobtrusive man; the young girls, too, of course. It is good to know that there are camps for girls now in the Adirondacks, in charge of Vassar teachers, where they can get the good of the wilderness in perfect safety. The wise house-mother will see to it, as far as she is able, in these ways and a thousand others, that home, while a place of rest and also of duties, shall never become a prison.—Harper's Bazaar.

What we want is the clear eye to see the goodness there is among men, and the wise, skilled hand to draw it forth; for deep down in the recesses of the spirit is the angel of the Lord, cramped and chained indeed, but only needing the charmed word to invest it with authority and power.—John Page Hopps.

It is reported that the Czar of Russia, learning of the kindness and skill with which the Japanese have taken care of the wounded Russians who have fallen into their hands, has forwarded to the Japanese branch of the Red Cross 2,000,000 yen to be used in its work in the field of war. We trust that this report is true, for such an act is creditable alike to the Czar and the Japanese, says the Wall Street Journal. Truly there has been some abatement of the horrors of war when medical service is able to reduce the death rate by scientific sanitation, and skilful treatment of the sick and wounded, when the contending armies are able to treat their prisoners with the same care and kindness that they treat their own soldiers, and when the monarch of one of the warring nations is willing to make a magnificent present to the Red Cross of the enemy. Such things touch the heart of the world, and make life seem, after all, worth the living, if only to witness these splendid deeds which shine with even more splendor than the glory of great victories.

Commercial Club OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.

Thorsby Wine Co.
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props.

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. H. ORR SHOE

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wisham
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forman
Brick Yard

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

T

VOL. III.

ATTENTION!

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama (Chilton County Branch) will be held at the court house in Clanton at 10 a. m. on Saturday, Aug. 5, 1905. A full attendance is desired to pass upon the annual report.

W. M. WILSON, President.
tf.

A CLASH IMMINENT

Mississippi Quarantine Guards Reported as Having Invaded Louisiana Territory

FIRST CASE AT MONTGOMERY

Hails From Chicago and Caught Yellow Fever at New Orleans—Other Case at Shreveport.

Memphis, Tenn.—A special to the Commercial-Appeal from Baton Rouge, La., says:

A clash between the Mississippi and Louisiana authorities over quarantine regulations is imminent.

A private dispatch was received in the city today stating that Mississippi soldiers, employed as quarantine guards, had invaded Louisiana territory with arms, and that boats were now trolling the mouth of Rigolets bayou and Pear river off the Louisiana coast to prevent Louisiana boats from entering.

Governor Blanchard at once communicated with Brigadier General Perrallat of his staff, and Captain W. Bostwick, commanding the state naval militia, directing them to investigate and report to him.

Governor Blanchard also sent the following telegram to Governor Vardaman, of Mississippi:

"Have reliable information that Mississippi quarantine guards, armed, crossed over to Louisiana side of Pearl river. I do not believe this done on orders, but was the thoughtless conduct merely of a few. To obviate unfavorable comment and friction please give order that your guards remain on their own side of the river."

Montgomery, Ala.—It was officially announced here Tuesday night that there is one case of yellow fever in Montgomery. The announcement came from the board of health together with the statement that there is not the slightest cause for alarm. This was followed immediately by the announcement from State Health Officer W. H. Sanders, saying that he believed the scientific steps taken by the premises are fully adequate and that "no occasion whatever exists for the declaration of a quarantine against Montgomery."

Shreveport, La.—Barney Tracey, a traveling man of Chicago, is in the detention camp just outside the corporate limits of this city suffering from yellow fever. There are no other cases in the detention camp, nor any other case in the city. Tracey has been isolated since his arrival here Sunday and the health authorities are confident that this case will be confined to this one person. The infection has been traced directly to New Orleans, although Tracey spent only a few hours in that city.

Baptist Convention Closes.

Brewton, Ala.—The first annual meeting of the Escambia County Sunday School convention was brought to a close at Flomaton Sunday after a very successful three days' session. This convention was organized last year and is composed of the superintendents, secretaries and ministers of the Baptist Sunday schools in the county. There were eighteen delegates present at this meeting, representing ten Sunday schools, besides a large number of visitors.

The Alabama State Fair.

Birmingham, Ala.—Preparations well in hand for a big state fair in Birmingham in October. Buildings are under construction, the race track is being graded and fenced and much work is being done which will provide an accommodating place for the most successful fairs for years to come.

Eugene Fies is president of the Alabama State Fair an dExhibition Association, with R. M. Williams secretary and general manager. A board of directors is behind Presidents and the various departments are working hard looking to the best fair this year ever con

, Alabam
Directory.

Commercial Clu
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIA
information furnished to pa
who desire to locate in the So

A. M. Johnso
Groceries and Delicate

J. J. STANLE
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBER
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, To
and Cigars.

Thorsby Wine
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Pro

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and To Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACI

E. H. Adams
General Merchandi
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N. HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

"MOLINE" Farming Imp
ments and "FLORENCE
Wagons in stock at all
times.
J. K. ORR SHOP

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wish
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby In
G. C. Michelson, Pro
Good Beds and Meals

A Langville & S
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUGGI

C. L. Forman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL, SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 3 1905 NO. 19

ATTENTION!

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama, (Chilton County Branch) will be held at the court house in Clanton at 10 a. m. on Saturday, Aug. 5, 1905. A full attendance is desired to pass upon the annual report.

W. M. WILSON,
President.

tf.

A CLASH IMMINENT.

Mississippi Quarantine Guards Reported as Having Invaded Louisiana Territory

FIRST CASE AT MONTGOMERY.

Hails From Chicago and Caught Yellow Fever at New Orleans—One Case at Shreveport.

Memphis, Tenn.—A special to the Commercial-Appeal from Baton Rouge, La., says:

A clash between the Mississippi and Louisiana authorities over quarantine regulations is imminent.

A private dispatch was received in the city today stating that Mississippi soldiers, employed as quarantine guards, had invaded Louisiana soil with arms, and that boats were patrolling the mouth of Rigolets lake and Pear river off the Louisiana coast to prevent Louisiana boats from leaving.

Governor Blanchard at once communicated with Brigadier General Perrallat of his staff, and Captain J. W. Bostwick, commanding the state's naval militia, directing them to investigate and report to him.

Governor Blanchard also sent the following telegram to Governor Vardaman of Mississippi:

"Have reliable information that Mississippi quarantine guards, armed, crossed over to Louisiana side at Pearl river. I do not believe this was on orders, but was the thoughtless conduct merely of a few. To obviate unfavorable comment and friction, please give order that your guards remain on their own side of the line."

Montgomery, Ala.—It was officially announced here Tuesday night that there is one case of yellow fever in Montgomery. The announcement came from the board of health, together with the statement that there is not the slightest cause for alarm. This was followed immediately by an announcement from State Health Officer W. H. Sanders, saying that it is believed the scientific steps taken in the premises are fully adequate, and that no occasion whatever exists for the declaration of a quarantine against Montgomery."

Shreveport, La.—Barrey Tracey, a traveling man of Chicago, is in the detention camp just outside the corporate limits of this city suffering from yellow fever. There are no other cases in the detention camp, nor any case in the city. Tracey has been isolated since his arrival here Sunday, and the health authorities are confident that this case will be confined to this one person. The infection has been traced directly to New Orleans, although Tracey spent but a few hours in that city.

Baptist Convention Closes.

Brewton, Ala.—The first annual session of the Escambia County Baptist Sunday School convention was brought to a close at Flomaton on after a very successful two session. This convention was organized last year and is composed of superintendents, secretaries and ministers of the Baptist Sunday schools in the county. There were delegates present at this meeting representing ten Sunday schools, large number of visitors.

The Alabama State Fair.

Birmingham, Ala.—Preparations are in hand for a big state fair in Birmingham in October. Buildings under construction, the race track graded and fenced and other work being done which will provide accommodating place for successful fairs for years to Eugene Fies is president of the Alabama State Fair an dExhibit Association with R. M. Williams secretary and general manager. A strong board of directors is behind President Fies and the various department managers are working hard looking to the best fair this year ever conducted in the state.

Cotton is Reported Excellent.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—From every section of this county there comes good tidings of a splendid cotton crop. The recent rains have caused a wonderful advancement in the crop outlook. The acreage, while slightly smaller than last year, will more than likely make up the difference because of the well fruited weed. There is some scarcity of labor, but this will not retard the advancement to any degree.

Cullman on a Boom.

Cullman, Ala.—Cullman is certainly on a boom. There is not a vacant house in the town and many new residences are being erected. Strangers are actually going from house to house begging for board, as all the boarding houses, hotels and restaurants are "full up."

Clarksville, Tenn.—Chas. R. Lackey and John S. Lawrence have purchased the Globe Telephone Company's franchise, wires, etc., at Cadiz, Ky., and will install a new plant without delay. The telephone plant at Cadiz was destroyed by fire several months ago, and since that time Cadiz has been without the use of telephones.

Kicked in Face By Mule.

Brewton, Ala.—Sam Parker, a negro employed at Sam Sowell's livery stable, was kicked by a vicious horse Saturday, the hoof striking him in the face, causing a compound fracture of the upper jaw bone and either fracturing or dislocating every one in the face. Medical aid was at once had and it was immediately seen that his recovery depended on hospital treatment, and as he could not obtain that here he was sent to the hospital in Mobile. There is very little chance for him to recover, even with the best of treatment.

Miss Cora Hubbard Dies.

Brewton, Ala.—Miss Cora Hubbard, a most estimable and popular young lady of Flomaton, died Saturday after an illness of five weeks from typhoid fever. She was buried Monday under the auspices of the Rathbone Sisters, of which she was a member. After a short service in the Baptist church the remains were taken to the family burying ground near Atmore and laid to rest, a number of the members of the lodge accompanying them. She was 22 years of age and a native of Escambia county.

New Cotton Oil Mill.

Wylam, Ala.—The Callahan company of Knoxville, Tenn., is preparing to erect a large cotton seed oil mill at this place, and it is understood that work on the plant will begin in a very short time. It is said that the plant is to cost something over $800,-plant is to cost something over $80,-000 and will be a very important industry for Wylam and the district. It is announced that when the work of construction begins it will be pushed to rapid completion.

Some One May Get in Trouble.

Montgomery, Ala.—It looks as though some one stood a chance to get into trouble about the extension of the quarantine to all points in Louisiana when the governor's proclamation does not place territory outside of New Orleans and that part of the coast between the Crescent City and Alabama in the prohibited class. If there is any question of the matter it seems very clear that there can be no prohibition from any other section or community than those specifically menticned in the proclamation of the chief executive of the state.

Only Twelve Veterans Left.

Evergreen, Ala.—Last Saturday, the 20th of July, was a day that will be long remembered by the surviving members of Company A, Fifth Alabama regiment. It was the time of the second reunion of those veterans. Only twelve of this once large company could be gotten together. Whether more than this number have survived the vicissitudes of life and their many wounds is not known. The reunion occurred at the house of their old commander, Captain T. M. Riley, in Monroe county.

Hurt While Coupling Cars.

Scottsboro, Ala.—H. S. Davis, a freight conductor on this division of the Southern, whose run is between Corinth and Decatur, was so badly hurt while coupling cars that he had to be brought up to Stevenson, his home, Sunday evening. While he is painfully hurt, it is thought that he will recover.

Rains Did Much Good.

Athens, Ala.—The farmers of this county are rejoicing over splendid rains which have revived both their spirits and the crop prospect in this section very much. Crops were failing rapidly and the rain was not any too soon. Late corn and cotton were both suffering.

ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

An Alleged Bigamist.

Wetumpka, Ala.—A white man by the name of Caldwell is lodged in the Wetumpka jail on a charge which is an unusual one in Elmore county. Caldwell came to the Beatsville neighborhood some years ago, settled there and married an Elmore county girl. They are now the parents of an attractive child. Some time ago an advertisement giving the description of a man appeared in the Atlanta Constitution. As the description fitted Caldwell exactly, a neighbor answered the advertisement and it developed that the man's wife, the mother of two of his children, is living in South Carolina. Sheriff Robbins was apprised of the situation and acting with promptness drove over to Beatsville and returned with a prisoner charged with bigamy.

Shooting at Epes.

Livingston, Ala.—A report reached here Thursday night of a serious shooting at Epes in this county. One Dr. Cook shot and seriously wounded a Mr. Lewis of that place. The particulars of the difficulty are not given, but it is understood that Dr Cook was drinking and after having had some trouble with Mr. Lewis approached him again when the difficulty was revived. Lewis is reported to have been shot through, besides having received several blows from the pistol in the hands of Dr. Cook. Dr. Cook was held under a bond of one thousand dollars. The recovery of Lewis is considered somewhat doubtful.

Squadron Reviewed.

Montgomery, Ala.—The review of the First cavalry squadron, A. N. G., by Brigadier General Louis V. Clark, was the most brilliant military affair seen in Montgomery during the last three weeks, during which time the citizen soldiery of Alabama has been in full possession of the capital.

Reviews as a general thing are very prosaic affairs. The one of Thursday was anything else. There was a medley of color, of movement, and of martial things that would delight the hearts of the most practical.

A gay crowd assembled to watch the maneuvers. The sides of the parade ground were lined with Montgomerians of every class and description. Society and the military mingled and there was a generous outpouring of ex-Confederates, who came to see how the boys of today rode.

Building at Albertville.

Albertville, Ala.—Albertville's burned district is being rapidly cleared up and the work of rebuilding will commence in a few days. Several handsome brick stores will be built instead of the frame buildings destroyed by the recent fire.

Riggs Bros. are already at work with a large force of hands building a large brick store to replace the one burned recently.

J. P. Emmett is having excavations made for the erection of a mammoth threestory brick structure just north of the Bank of Albertville.

Conductor Arrested.

Decatur, Ala.—Acting under instructions issued from State quarantine headquarters, Chief Inspector of Quarantine Wallace effected the arrest of Southern Railroad Conductor Martin Payne at the union station here on Thursday afternoon. Payne was arrested on two warrants sworn out by Chief Inspector Wallace, one in Colbert and the other in Madison county. The warrants charge that Conductor Payne illegally ejected from his train Quarantine Officers Lem Jones at Leighton and John Almon at Huntsville. At the time the officers were in the discharge of their duty, acting under state law. Constable John B. Hinds served both warrants on Conductor Payne.

Local Southern Railroad Attorney S. T. Wert was present at the station with bonds ready for Payne. Each bond was for $200. Payne was allowed to take his train on to Chattanooga after the warrants were served and the bonds properly filled out. The train was only delayed a few minutes.

End of the Artillery Encampment.

Montgomery, Ala.—Camp Robert F. Ligon, which has for the past six days harbored the First artillery, Alabama National Guard, ceased to exist at 4:50 o'clock Thursday morning. At that minute a bugle was blown and every tent in the camp was struck.

The men of the battalion and the camp were given a careful inspection by Inspector General R. F. Ligon and Captain J. C. Goodfellow. The camp was found to be cleanly and wholesome and the men and the equipment made a fine showing.

On Trial at Gadsden.

Gadsden, Ala.—The preliminary trial of L. H. Pinkerton and Oscar Brown, the two white men charged with the murder of Bill Smith, the negro barber, was commenced before Judge C. D. Clark Wednesday and is still on trial. There are some twenty-five witnesses in the case and so far only about ten have been examined. John R. Lowe, who is driver of the fire engine of the Gadsden fire company, was standing in his door when the shooting took place and swore positively that Pinkerton did the shooting, and G. W. Ensley, who was with Pinkerton and Brown, swears that Pinkerton did the shooting. No evidence has been brought out against Brown, who is defended by Colonel B. H. Nicholson.

Brewton Taking Steps.

Brewton, Ala.—A meeting of the Escambia County Board of Health was held here Thursday afternoon to discuss the yellow fever situation, and as a result the mayor and town council were requested to have the day and night marshals meet all trains and question passengers coming in and see that none are allowed to stop in Brewton who have been in the fever infected district.

There is no particular uneasiness on the part of the people here, but it is fully expected that they will assist in every way in putting the town in a good sanitary condition.

Farmers' Institute.

Auburn, Ala.—The third day's session of the Farmers' Summer School was marked by the record-breaking attendance since the establishment of the school three years ago. The actual number of farmers in attendance is 149. In addition to the representatives from thirty-three counties in the state there is quite a delegation present from the state of Georgia. The attendance includes representatives of fruit growing, stock breeding, truck gardening, and those engaged in the raising of the ordinary staples of cotton and corn. The county of Chilton is the banner county, with fifteen representatives present. Among many representative farmers present are J. M. Thornton, of Talladega; J. J. Robinson, Jr., of Lafayette; J. P. Maxwell, of Dallas county; Mr. Whitfield, of Marengo county; Mr. Dixon, Escambia county. A large representation is also present from Clarke county. The experiment stations at Athens, Albertville, Evergreen and Wetumpka are represented.

Queer Case at Girard.

Girard, Ala.—The judicial minds of Magistrates L. F. Knowles and Chas. Pittman, of this city, are puzzled over rather a queer case. John Griggs, a 17-year-old white boy, was arraigned before them yesterday on a charge of skinning a cow belonging to Miss Annie Hunt and selling the hide. He promptly pleaded guilty.

It seems that there is no law to cover this particular offense in the manner the magistrates would like. They reserved their decision for a few days. Homer Cheek, another boy, was charged with the same offense, but his trial was postponed.

Hale Was Respited.

Montgomery, Ala.—Because it is definitely known that Wesley Hale, a negro condemned to die on the scaffold in Birmingham on August 4 will be a valuable witness in an important case now pending in Jefferson county, he was on Thursday given a respite of sixty days by Governor Jelks in order that he may testify. He will testify against Andrew Shelton, suspected of being an accomplice of Hale. The respite was recommended by Judge D. A. Greene and Solicitor H. D. Heflin, of the Jefferson county criminal court.

Decatur's Progress.

Decatur, Ala.—On September 1 the new Carnegie library, costing $10,000, will be opened to the public. The arrangements have already been made for securing the books. On the day of opening there will be appropriate ceremonies. This is one of the finest buildings in the city.

The work on the new opera house for New Decatur has been started. The building will cost $20,000. It is being erected by a private stock company and it is expected that it will be open to the public by September 1, next. The stage will be on the first floor and there will be a gallery and balcony. At the present time there is not an opera house in either Decatur or New Decatur.

Within the next few weeks the new city hall for New Decatur will be completed. The building will be two stories high, built of brick, and will cost $5,000.

To Be in Shape Again.

Talladega, Ala.—The insurance companies have sent their adjustors and settled with the state for the losses sustained by the recent fire that destroyed the shops of the School for the Deaf and Dumb of this city.

Work was at once begun in tearing down the old walls and clearing off the new site for another building. The new building will be of brick, two stories in height, and 50x100 feet in dimensions. It will be built further back and made as near fireproof as possible.

Orders have been placed for new and improved machinery, which will be put in as soon as the walls are ready for it, and the hope is to have it as near ready as possible for the next session. Mr. McDonald says he hopes to have a model shop of it, since it has to be rebuilt.

Changes in Tuscumbia Offices.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Two important changes on the Memphis division of the Southern railway have been announced, effective August 1. Frank A. Devere, chief train dispatcher, has been transferred to the Mobile division, of which he has been made trainmaster, with headquarters at Selma. Mr. Devere has been in the service of the Southern for seventeen years, most of which time has been spent in the train master's office at Tuscumbia, he having been train dispatcher for fifteen years, the last four as chief.

R. C. Bibb, local agent at this point, has been promoted to the Huntsville agency of the Memphis division, which ranks second to that of Memphis in importance and salary. Mr. Bibb came to Tuscumbia from Leighton less than two years ago and his transfer to Huntsville is the second promotion within two years. He is to be succeeded at Tuscumbia by S. H. Hunt, local agent at Scottsboro.

Big Farmers' Meeting.

Anniston, Ala.—In compliance with the call of Capt. James Crook, president of the Calhoun County Association of Southern Cotton Planters, there will be a picnic and grand rally at Oxford Lake on Saturday, August 12th, to discuss the present conditions and future prospects of the cotton crop in this and adjoining counties.

Harvie Jordan, of Monticello, Ga., president of the Southern Cotton Association, and one of the largest cotton planters in the south, will be present to address the people on the work of the association. Hon. Sydney J. Bowie has consented to address the gathering as will Captain Crook and others who are well conversant with the needs and conditions of the southern planters.

Played Old Joke on Him.

New Decatur, Ala.—J. B. Butler, a young man from New York, came here a few days ago to take the position of bookkeeper at Cathcart's saw mill. He told the boys about the mill that he had hunted big game in the Adirondacks, etc. The other boys asked him if he had ever hunted snipe. He said he had not, but would like to do so. The other night a party was arranged, a hack secured and Butler was taken by the crowd to Blue Springs, about four miles from the city, where he was given the bag to hold. He got back to the city the best he could after the crowd had left him. It was about day, however, when Butler arrived in town. He never caught on to the joke, but said he did not care to stay in a place where brother hunters would run off and leave him to walk home. After arriving in town Butler caught the first train for New York city.

Florida Not to be Quarantined.

Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama will not quarantine Tampa or any section of Florida on the strength of the single case of yellow fever on record in that city. It is the opinion of Dr. W. H. Sanders, state health officer, that there is no urgent need to put a ban on the Florida city if there is no spread of the disease. Such a recommendation was communicated Friday to Governor Jelks in Blount Springs, and although there have been reports that Tampa would be restricted, no action will be taken on the part of the state.

Negro Endeavorers.

Montgomery, Ala.—At the second day's session of the Varick Christian Endeavor Society prominent visitors were present and made speeches. Bishop J. W. Alstrock, D. D. conducted the devotional exercises Thursday morning, assisted by Rev. William Finley, P. E., of Gainesville district, and Rev. M. S. Cast, the poet of the state.

Dies on Operating Table.

Selma, Ala.—J. T. Evans, Jr., fireman at the Estelle cotton mills, died of chloroform Friday night on the operating table of a local infirmary. The drug had been administered preparatory to an operation in a comparatively safe case, but appears to have been given in too great quantities. Deceased was 28 years of age.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law.
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House.
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
Office Hours 8 to 12 a. m.
1 to 5 p. m. CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

PURE GOODS
The following
SPECIAL BRANDS
always in stock.

Big Rock	I. W. Harper
Rose Valley	Upper Crust
Upper Ten	Kentucky Taylor
Joe Gideon	American Malt
Murray Hill	Budweiser Rye
Pleasant Hill	Deep Springs
Green River	AAAA Lincoln County
Jack Daniel No. 7	Wilson
Old Spring	Good Wood
Shaw's Malt	Club House Rye, 10 years old.
Jefferson County Rye	Cascade, 14 years old.

Old Harvest Corn, 5 years old

I carry a Full Line of Barrel Goods which I sell in Jugs from half gallon up. Mail orders promptly filled.

A. STEIN,
Bank Saloon. Calera, Ala.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS.
PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!

If you have timber lands for sale, want to buy a good home for $25.00 cash and the balance on long payments to suit purchaser, or if you want a position as log cutter, teamster or in saw mill or planing mill, write

The Marbury Lumber Co.,
Marbury, Ala.

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf

CALE ALLEN... ...GENIUS

The Whimsical Carriage-Maker Of Carmel-Town

By HOLMAN DAY

Now, a genius—well, if you'll show me any really smart man that hasn't a skew-angle on one corner or the other of him, then I'll set up the cider the next time you come around to my house. And a genius does even his courting a little different from the ordinary run of men; but we've got such an almighty matter-of-fact set of women in Carmel that you can't make them understand such things.

It always has been a little different with the men. We acknowledged that Cale Allen was a genius and put up with him. It was a mite tough on Doc Bragg to have to ride around in that sleigh, with the body made like a duck, and to have the boys go "Quack, quack!" after him; but Doc can take a joke, and we all know him in Carmel, and it didn't hurt his business any, and so it was all right.

Cale, you understand, has been our carriage and sleigh maker in Carmel for thirty years, and he'll do a job that you can't match this side the golden chariots. It isn't very hard to put up with the eccentricities of genius when you know you're getting something for your money. I bought one factory-made top-buggy; but that was enough for me. It was a good sample of crochet-work; but it wouldn't stand up any more than ice cream in a hay field. So I went back to Cale, and he built me a wagon that looked like a pumkin sawed in two and set on four wheels. He allowed that it would remind me that I was a pumkin-head.

I took it. I had to take it or nothing. That was Cale's style. Feller went to him and ordered a carriage or a sleigh, and he got it; but Cale never allowed him to say a word as to what the model should be. Being a genius, he insisted that he knew better than the customer. Of course, he had to stick more or less to straight patterns on carriages; but when snow-time came, then you would behold in Carmel the result of Cale Allen's ingenuity in invention. When Carmel folks drove into other towns with their sleighs the people would run to the windows. Once when we took Squire Avery over to the Etna Tomb in February, with a procession of sleighs from Carmel about half a mile long, we drew bigger crowds than Haskell's Hippodrome Circus.

There was the old red-cradle style for new-married couples and the rocking-chair style for old folks, and the minister drew one that had the Bible painted on the high back and a hymn book on the fender and a covering like a sounding board. He certainly always showed good taste, Cale did. Folks wondered where he ever thought up all the styles and all the colors he slapped on; but when you come to analyze the thing it always hit off the owner just right. When about fifty of those sleighs were hitched around the church door, a feller would kind of hanker for a piece of smoked glass to look at 'em through; but they certainly did add a lot to the landscape. Oh, yes, I suppose some folks did find it hard to get along with all of Cale's notions; but you had to consider that he was a genius and entitled to some of his crankiness, and then you didn't think anything more about it.

Widower, Cale was, and the women folks who had watched him for ten years allowed that he wasn't ever going to hitch up again. First wife didn't get along with him very well—genius, you know; and he kept her guessing all the time.

Well, the first any of us in the village suspected that a hen was on was when Alp Hanson's boy came into the grocery store one evening and snickered awhile side of the stove, and finally out and said he was just coming down past Widow Sprague's house and saw Cale going up the front walk. He said that Cale was hurrying like sin, as though he was afraid some one would see him, and struck a glary place on the walk and fell down, and a paper bag he was carrying busted, and more'n a peck of apples scattered every which way. Boy said that the way Cale talked to himself when he was picking up those apples was certainly comforting to cold ears. Boy brought along one of the apples that had rolled his way, and showed it to us to prove his story, for it certainly did sound unbelievable. The apples was a Tallman sweeting, and old Ike Elwell snuffed of it and said that he didn't know how it was in city places and high society, but when a widderer or an old bach started out in Carmel with a bag of sweet apples to call on a widder it meant more than simply passing the tome o' day.

"He's beginning to show attentions, that's what he's doin'," said Ike.

And that was the general opinion of all those in the grocery store at the time. Some remembered back, and those that couldn't remember could guess how it might be if they had the chance. Some of the citizens said they were a good mind to put the thing right to Cale the next time he came to the store; but there wasn't anything so mighty definite about it, and then you never know how a genius is going to take hectoring. We let things hang.

The next item that happened was nearer to the point.

Uncle Cy Bryant, who is a kind of near sighted old poke, came bumping into the store one evening a little later—it was in March, if I remember, about the time the crust got hard and icy—and he said he believed the Sprague sugar orchard was ha'nted. He was kind of all up in a heap about it, old Cy was. He said he was coming along the road at the foot of the slope and from away up amongst the trees came sky-hooting some kind of a contraption that looked like—well, old Cy called it "an assitrich."

"Ostrich, you mean don't ye?" asked the storekeeper.

"Wal, the long-shanked bird with a millinery store on his tail," said Cy. "Don't buther me when I'm tellin' a story!" So we kept still.

He went on to say that this thing seemed to be letting the blue yells out of him or her for all him or her was able. He explained that some of the yells were way up squawky-like and some were down gruff, and so he couldn't say as to whether it was him or her. Anyway there was a terrible to-do on, according to his tell. First it would scoot one way and then the other, and finally something, he couldn't tell what, shot off away from it, and then whilst he stood there in the road the ostrich thing came whoop! over the stone wall, ker-whish across the road, ker-wow over the opposite stone wall, and down into the meadow. And by that time he was so fussed up that he didn't stop to see any more and came along full pelt to the store. He said that the yells of the thing when it crossed the road were too much for his nerves. He didn't have any grit left to chase it.

Just as we were getting up a bee to go and investigate, the store door slammed open and in stomped Silas Sprague, the Widder Sprague's nineteen-year-old boy. "Where's Constable Britt?" he yelled.

"Right here," said Britt, shifting his chaw.

The Sprague boy was a big, larruping chap, and he cracked his fists together and hollered: "I've found out that I can lick him, and I've licked him good and plenty; but that ain't all there's going to be to this. I want him arrested now, and sent to State's prison for his whole dingblamed life!"

He was tearing out of the store, motioning for us to follow him; but Britt humped along and grabbed him.

"You ain't told me whether it's Napoleon Bonyparte or King George you want arrested yit," yelled Britt. "Do ye think I can work without any clues?"

"It's Cale Allen!" howled young Sprague. "And I want him put into State's prison where he belongs."

And then as near as we could get at it from him, it seems that Cale had come around to the Sprague house that evening with a new kind of a sled that he had tinkered together, and made Widder S. bundle up and come out, and he put her on board and sat on behind and started down through the sugar orchard, spite of all that could be said. Sprague boy said that the hill was one glare of ice with snow humped around each tree, the way it does, and all frozen smooth, and that the sled got to wiggle-jigging around and Cale fell off, and there was the widder, bundled all up and left on board and no way to steer.

The sled would dodge straight for a tree, strike a glary hump and whoosh around and make for another tree, and whoosh again, and there that woman went pellity-whoop for half a mile, just missing each tree by an eyelash, and off down across the road and over the meadow and whong-bunt into a haystack.

"And I started after her," said the Sprague boy, "and on the way I came across Cale Allen, where he'd been wrapped around a tree, and there and then I found out that I could lick him; and I done it to the queen's taste. And I got my mother back home, and there she's settin' on the bed, grabbing the foot-board and hollering so's you can hear her a mile, and thinkin' all the time that she's sliding down hill and missin' trees, and the neighbors say that near's they can tell she's liable to be slidin' down hill in her mind for all the rest of her life, and hollerin' like that, and he's broke up our happy home, and now I want him put into State's prison!"

After he got it all out of him we had to put snow down the back of his neck to bring him out of his hysterics.

Well, for a fact that was a sad story to hear about our genius. Of course, a genius has a good many rights that the ordinary man doesn't have; but it really did seem that this was a matter to be looked into. So a delegation headed by the constable started off to investigate and proceed in matters as the case should warrant.

As the coroners say, we first took a look at the remains. The Widder Sprague's house was full of neighbors, and she was still sitting on the bed with her muffler round her head, hanging to the foot-board, her mouth wide open and hollering: "Oh, my Lawd, there's a tree! Drag your feet! Whee! There's another tree! Ow! Stop me! Oh, my sakes! Drag your feet!"

Half the women were all saying: "Poor critter!" and the others were snapping "Missabul scoundrel!" You can figure pretty well on which ones to fit the names.

"They say it's a long lane that has no turnin'," said the constable; "but it seem to me it's a longer hill that ain't got any bottom."

"And trees on it thicker'n spines on a quill-pig, to jedge by her remarks," said another man.

"If any of ye's got the sperit of a louse," yelled Mis' Liza Bangs, "you'll march boots to the house of that missabul Cale Allen that's done this turrible deed and fetch him to the ring-bolt with a good round turn. He ought to be strung up higher'n Haman."

The way those women indorsed that would have done good to the souls of a Populist convention.

The first selectman came in just then, and they all lit on him.

"All is," said Mis' Bangs, "if you men folks don't stir your stumps almighty sudden the women of this town will take it up, and there'll be a b'lilin'-water bee that will take skin and bristles off'n one hog in this town!"

The selectman, who had just bought a new sleigh off Cale, with a crown and crossed gavels painted on it as a delicate compliment, tried to say something about the eccentricities of genius; but the women flew at him like setting hens at a barn rat.

"Genta," he said, turning to us men folks with a sigh, "I guess the vote of the meetin' is in favor of what you might call an official investigation. I will lead the way to our genius' house, and all those so minded may foller me."

The selectman had to fairly drive back two of the women to stay and take care of the widder, for fear she might try to jump off her mind-sled, as you might say, and get into trouble. It certainly was about the most popular excursion that was ever organized in the town of Carmel. Everyone wanted to go along.

It being an official party, headed by law and authority, we didn't stop to knock at Cale's house, but trudged straight in on the heels of the selectman, like ducks following a leader.

Cale was sitting on his bed, too. I have an idea that he was the most surprised man that ever held an evening reception in town. But you couldn't judge of his surprise by his expression. As a matter of fact, only one eye was showing, and that eye wasn't especially intelligent looking—it was mussed up too much. I guess that between the whops he got around the tree and the sharp edges of the crust and the attentions the Sprague boy paid to him on the way to rescue the widder, Cale had been finding life for the last hour "melancholy and forlorn," as the poet says.

The selectman took his place at the foot of the bed, and the delegates to the convention formed behind him.

"Mister Allen," said the selectman—"I will call you Mister Allen, this bein,' as you might say, an official visit, we have just come from a house of pain and sorrow."

"And what kind of a house do you think you've come into?" said Cale in a gruff bow-wow under his toweling. "Do I look as though I was celebrating a birthday with feast and frolic? Looks like a mighty spunky business stramming into a man's house in this fashion. When I want to entertain I'll send out invitations."

"Remarks are heard and duly noted," said the selectman; "but it so happens that there wasn't time for the usual preliminaries of polite society. We are willin' to take into account all the excuses that a genius has to offer, and you needn't take the trouble to recapitulate 'em. You can start right in and explain what in sanup you were thinkin' of when you set the Widder Sprague on that bobsled, or whatsoever it was, and left her to slam galley-west down through that orchard. There are those here that thinks it's deliberate attempt at assassination. What have you got to say for yourself?"

The chances are that in ordinary circumstances Cale would have lit on us and drove us out; but enough things had happened to him that evening to make him sort of supple. Some one in the crowd hinted that it had been found out that he could be licked by the Sprague boy, and that under those circumstances it wasn't good taste for him to ride a high horse any longer. So Cale ran his eye over us, noted that we were all looking pretty set, and he went on to give in his statement. But he was scornful.

"I don't suppose any of you have read books enough to understand that the scientists assert that there are more cases of insanity among women in the country districts than in any other classes?" said he.

"If they let you run loose much longer around here, I reckon the point will be pretty well proved," broke in Mis' Bangs, with a sniff.

"It ain't that way at all," snapped Cale. "Scientists say that women in the country, bein' tied down to home work and bein' alone so much, and havin' nothin' special to take up their minds, get to brooding and fall into nervous prosperation and go crazy. That's the size of it. Now you know that the Widder Sprague has been alone a good deal for the last ten years?"

"Say, is sweet apples good for balancin' the mind?" inquired old Ike Elwell.

Cale snapped that one eye pretty hard, and showed that he understood that we knew some things; but he kept on. "I could see that the Widder Sprague was gettin' run down and solemn and lonesome, and was dwellin' on things, and was fallin' into nervous prosperation just as fast as she could. And whilst the rest of the hogs in this place was goin' around with their noses held down to their own business and not payin' any attention to the sufferin's of their neighbors, I studied up on the thing, and I was bound to cure her of her brain-fag, as the scientists call it. The books say that in cases of that kind the patient needs to be roused up, taken out of hum-drum surroundin's, given some fresh and healthy excitement, and so forth and so on."

"Then the first prescription of Tallman sweetings failed, hey?" persisted old Ike.

"I understand what you're drivin' at, you old picked-nosed, scouting hyena!" yelled Cale. "It's got so in this town that there can't be any neighborin' without it bein' chawed over along with a plug of terbacker down at that grocery store. Now you shet up, Elwell, or I'll git off'n this bed of pain and cuff youh head into the shape of the Methodist steeple! When I'm talkin' science to you I want order.

"Now, I went round this evening to take the Widder Sprague out of herself, as you might say, and make life a little less solemn and mournful. I went to cheer her up with fresh air and healthy excitement, as the books advise. And see what comes of it? Bein' misunderstood and hooted at, and havin' my house invaded by a gang that don't understand science nor common politeness."

"It is generally admitted," said the selectman, "that the ones who introduce new ideas into the world always have to stand more or less abuse; but you'll have to admit, Cale, that the people in Carmel have always been mighty kind to you as a genius in the carriage and sleigh line. We have taken your new ideas in models and your schemes in color and have pulled our wallets and paid and never said a word. But this 'ere treatment for nervous prosperation seems to be affecting the peace and happiness of a home and the equilibrium of an immortal soul." He waited there and smacked his lips. Well, it did sound pretty slick! I don't know where he ever got hold of that string of words. "If you could see her settin' there on her bed, gaffing the footboard, and seein' trees ahead, and feelin' that she is still goin' for jomighty-sakes down a hill, you'd understand that this community feels justified in pickin' the thing up."

"I've discussed it with the family already," said Cale, with a good deal of hidden meaning, settling the bandage around his eye, "and I don't understand that the neighbors have any license to stick their noses in. It's wholly a family matter."

"Is it, now?" squealed Mis' Bangs. "Family matter, eh? Well, do you presume to set there and tell us that you've declared your intentions?"

"None of your business!" snorted Cale.

"Well, it is our bus'ness!" said Mis' Bangs, and she came right up to the side of the bed. "It's the bus'ness of the spinsters and widders of this town to see that one of their number ain't lied to and deceived and rode down hill to her everlastin' ruin and then deserted. You'll find it's our bus'ness, Mister Cale Allen, you that's been scornin' the women in this town for all these years! If you ain't declared yourself, then we've got as much to do with the Sprague family as you have."

"Do you mean to tell me," roared Cale, "that the women of this town think they've got the right to tell me how I shall do my courtin'?"

"Jammin' fool ideas down the men's necks and triflin' with the affections of helpless women are two diff'rent things," insisted Mis' Bangs. "You may be a genius, as they say; but you can't genify us around your little finger."

He jumped off the bed like a flash, and I thought he was going to cuff her ears, but that wasn't it. He ducked out of the door on the run; and we all took after him, for we couldn't think what was going to happen. Geniuses go crazy all of a sudden sometimes, and we didn't know but the town of Carmel was going to see more tragedy that evening than we had seen up to that time, and land knows we'd had enough!

He kept ahead of us easy down the road, turned into the Widder Sprague's house, tossed the Sprague boy into a snow-drift when the boy tried to stop him in the door, and when we got into the house he was standing beside the bed shaking the widder by the arm.

"Mis' Sprague!" he shouted.

The hiccups had come on her by that time, but she was still able to holler "Whoa!" and talk about trees chasing her.

"Widder Sprague," he said, coaxing-like.

But she only let out another howl.

"Joanne," said he.

She didn't holler so loud.

"Dear Joanne!" he said.

Her voice sunk down to a moan, and the hiccups made her sort of cluk like a setting hen.

He put his arm round her shoulder. "Dear Joanne," he said, "I'm a-steerin' her, and don't you be scared a mite."

She let her head lay over on his shoulder.

"I was thinkin', dearest Joanne," said he soothing her with his hand, "that when we got to the bottom of the hill, I'd say: 'Le's you and me slide together all the rest of our lives.' We're past fifty, and it's all down hill for us now. Yes, dear Joanne, when we get to the foot of the hill I'm a-goin' to ask you to marry me, and now," he hollered in her ear just as loud as he could yell, "we're—at—the—foot—of—the—hill!"

Well, sir, she came to like the snap of your finger, and smiled at him like a sick cat, and when he said: "Will ye marry me, Joanne?" she patted him on the cheek and laid her head down on his shoulder and said: "I'll make ye jest the best wife I know how to." And she was as calm as a pork sausage.

Cale stood up and shook his fist at us, one arm still around her.

"Now, blast your old pelts!" he yapped, "you've spied around and stuck your noses in and prodded at me till ye made me pop the question right square under your noses, and now I suppose you are satisfied. And if you are, get out! If this ain't a family matter now and from this time on, I'd like to have Mis' Bangs there tell me wherein it ain't."

Now, really, there didn't seem to be anything to say.

"Meetin' is adjourned siny die," said the selectman, and we went home, wondering at just what point the Widder Sprague began to sit up and take notice, but not being very well posted on nervous prosperation and mind troubles none of us could figure it very well.

History Repeated.

A learned clergyman was talking with an illiterate preacher who professed to despise education.

"You have been to college, I suppose?" asked the latter.

"I have, sir," was the curt answer.

"I am thankful," said the ignorant one, "that the Lord has opened my mouth to preach without learning."

"A similar event occurred in Balaam's time," was the retort.—Harper's Weekly.

Of the 136,561 freight cars ordered for American railroads last year 65,000 were of steel construction.

The lord chief justice of England was well known in his younger days as a boxer of note.

FADED COLORS FAVORITES.

The greens are prominent both in millinery and frocks, and many new shades are shown, differing only enough from the old tones, in some instances, to justify the statement that they are new. All of the bronze green tones from dark to light, the almond and willow greens, a line of elder greens, a fresh springlike tint, appropriately called printania, a warm glowing yellow moss green which is at times charming in its millinery uses, or sparingly used in mere relieving touches upon a white or neutral frock—all these are fashionable, and there is a vivid Russian green, successful in Paris, though not yet taken up extensively here.

All the pinkish lavenders are in fashion, and begonia, a reddish purple with a dash of gray, is considered extremely French—as French as it is unbecoming. One could not well say more.

The salmon or pompadour pinks, peach pink, melon pink, all the shades of rose, including dried rose leaf and old rose tones, the magenta pinks and reds, the old gold, apricot and banana yellows, with the orange tones shading from mandarin to brown, the bluet blues and a very popular medium shade of blue called saxe, the beige and straw colorings, dove grays—there one has a list of colorings most exploited this season, but one sees many shades not on this list.

The pink yellows and spring-like greens have been particularly affected for the bridesmaids' frocks at weddings, though one wedding for which the costumes were turned out by a well known house was in white and American beauty shades, and another color scheme selected by one of the brides is in pinkish lilac and pale cream yellow.—Washington Times.

POLITENESS IN CHILDREN.

There is such a thing as too much teaching and training, but mothers cannot afford to overlook certain important, indeed, absolutely essential points, in the bringing up of children. There should be a careful and constant surveillance when it comes to good manners and breeding, and any neglect in this direction is injustice to the child, says American Grange Bulletin and Scientific Farmer. Teach the little boys to be chivalrous, which is really only regard and kindness after all, and make them realize that it is below their dignity as young men to push themselves forward, and overcrowd girls and women of any age or condition in any place.

Teach them to raise their hats; to sit up and not lie down in their seats; to express appreciation for kindness done them, and always to excuse themselves for unconscious or accidental neglect of their "manners." Show them the vulgarity of attending to any part of their toilet in public places. Make them realize that bad manners are an indication, not only of lack of training, but of their own ambition to be gentlemen. And above all things, teach both girls and boys consideration for infirmity, and show them the great unkindness in laughing and jesting at the expense of some unfortunate or afflicted person.

I do not mean to crowd their minds with set rules for every act of their lives, but to develop their sensibilities and sympathies and understanding, so that their good behavior will be a spontaneous expression. Any other method invariably fails, for character and real culture cannot be simulated. Tell the little girls that "lady" means a loaf-giver, and therefore implies the nobility of heart, and that fine clothes or beautiful gowns can never make up for not being a true lady.

The work is really very simple after all, and requires only timely and convincing suggestions, that will be appreciated by the child when constant preaching and nagging would invariably fail. Of all things, avoid this last method—nagging—for it is not only irritating to any child, but it is only disastrous to the right development of young minds.

A ROYAL CHINESE AUTHORESS.

The Empress Consort of the Emperor Yung Lo of the Ming dynasty in A. D. 1405, committed to paper her thoughts on the behavior of women, under the title of "Instructions for the Inner Apartments," i. e., for women. These are arranged under twenty headings, with an additional chapter on the education of girls. The Empress lays much stress on gentleness, good temper, economy, kind treatment of the young and of relatives, but thinks that speech unrestrained is the real rock upon which most women split.

"If your mouth is like a closed door your words will become proverbial; but if it is like a running tap no heed will be paid to what you say."

In her additional chapter on education, which is really a more or less doggerel poem of about 350 lines, our authoress will be considered very disappointing by some. So far from pleading for higher education for Chinese women, she urges only that a girl's governess should teach her pupil to practice filial piety, virtue, propriety, deportment, good manners and domestic duties as a preparation for her entry into married life. Then if she has no children to continue the ancestral line, she is not to show jealousy, but rather satisfaction if her husband takes a subordinate wife. Supposing that he dies before she, she will be left like earth without its heaven, and must transfer her dependence to her son and summon up her resolution to face widowhood until death. Mount Tai may crumble away or she may have to walk over sharp-edged swords, but this resolve must not pass from her. Examples are given of heroines of all ages who have died by hanging or drowning themselves rather than violate their marriage vows:

"Their bodies, indeed, suffered injury in life, but their names will be fragrant for 10,000 generations."—Nineteenth Century.

SOME THINGS THAT COUNT.

Small belongings of dress often make or mar a woman's appearance, therefore it is well that she should keep an eye on the little rules and fancies of fashion.

Gloves this season will match the costume. At least they will correspond with its shade. Some of the gloves have little turned back cuffs of contrasting color, and many of the long suede gloves are heavily embroidered. Embroidered silk gloves are shown in elbow length to meet the short sleeves of the new waists.

For neck trimming there is a wide choice of collars and ribbons. Lace which has seen service on old waists can be pressed into service for many stocks if applied on net or other heavy lace insertion. Lace ruffles, too, can be ripped from worn-out blouses and similarly utilized.

A new French fad is the wearing of black velvet bands around the throat. These of course are intended for use with "V" necked [illegible]. The velvet band is sometimes worn a little to the right of the front with loop ends allowed to drop almost to the waist.

Bead necklaces are being worn in Paris at present. These may be strung together as here, with a small crystal bead between each two of the plain ones. Quite long beads are the fad and short chains of graduated beads are also liked. A young girl's chain for a young girl is made by stringing roses of chiffon [illegible] at intervals on a silk cord. These are dainty adjuncts to an evening or muslin frock.—Washington Times.

EMERALDS COMING IN FASHION AGAIN.

Emeralds are coming so much into fashion just now that they are, as a natural consequence, rapidly rising in price, and promise to be one of the favorite and most expensive stones of the coming season.

The queen owns a parure of emeralds that is worth a king's ransom. Princess Charles of Denmark has one hundred emeralds of large size and first quality which forms a fleshly waist belt; and stones in the possession of the Duchess of Buccleuch and Lady Aberdeen are priceless.

The Duchess of Malborough, who seldom wears any jewels but her famous pearls and diamonds, caused a mild sensation at Dublin Castle one night last week by wearing a magnificent ornament of emeralds.

Lady Carew has a fine tiara of emeralds and she also owns an exceptionally splendid stone which was presented to her by the Shah of Persia. Mrs. William James has a trellis work collar of emeralds and diamonds, while Lady Carnavon, Lady Lodge, Mrs. Ronald Greville and Mrs. Arthur Paget al have small fortunes wrapped up in these green gems.

Square emeralds are a [illegible] craze. Mrs. George Keppel has a priceless square emerald, which she wears as a pendant on a fine chain.

FOR THE SHOPPING BAG.

A novelty intended to slip into the shopping bag is a flat little case, gun metal. One of the inner sides is fitted out with rows of bobbins and lie flat when the case is closed, but rise when a spring is touched, and becomes a stiff brush. This side is devoted to clothes, nails, or hair according to the needs of the owner. The opposite side furnishes a mirror, back of which lie concealed a nail file, a pencil, and other small aids.

FASHION HINTS.

The black and white checks are usually dressy, yet some extremely handsome gowns are made of this popular material.

A black and white checked taffeta had a large flower design over each of the check, the principal color being pale blue.

The gown most frequently seen in the street is the coat and skirt, worn over the thinnest of silk blouses.

Gowns and hats are in the best taste, with even the tendency toward overtrimming modified.

Mother's Instructions.

Hostess—Shall I help you to cake, Tommy?

Tommy—No'm. Let me help myself first. Ma told me not to ask meself more'n onct. You can help all you please afterward.

"A Little W...

[illegible]

Copyright, 1902, by [illegible]

Old Toni lay sick in his tent, and Anita sat upon her feet by his cot, waiting for the gorgio doctor whom she had herself gone to summon, all the herbal remedies of the camp having failed. Toni was ninety years old, and Anita was twenty, the daughter of the old gipsy's youngest son, who, with his wife, was dead, both having died the same year. The oldest daughter of Toni was queen of the band, but hers was a more than ordinarily sordid nature, and there was little time she had to spare from the business of getting silver from the gorgios. So, old Toni had come to depend upon Anita for every attention.

Anita had the shapeliest foot and ankle in the world, the most exquisitely rounded form, the prettiest hand; and her eyes gleamed like twin stars from a rose-tinted velvet sky. Sandor Costello, the young musician of the band, never tired of looking at her. But the girl feared him. He was lazy, and earned absolutely nothing. His violin alone made him tolerable in the camp, for he affected the "dandy" in his dress, and a sinister leer lurked habitually in his eyes.

As Anita sat by her grandfather, waiting for the coming of the doctor, Sandor came and gazed in upon them. If Toni should die, he could force the girl to marry him. And why should he not die? He was old enough. Anita looked up when Sandor darkened the tent opening. But when she saw him she shuddered and looked again into the face of her grandfather.

But presently, Sandor was nudged gently aside by the doctor who entered the tent. A scowl from the musician's eyes followed him, and again the gipsy's form darkened the doorway. Dr. Graves felt old Toni's pulse. Then he turned toward the front of the tent and motioned Costello away.

"Give us light here," he said sternly.

The man glided away, but his hand caressed the handle of a small stiletto as he did so. Anita saw the movement and shuddered again.

Toni was very ill, and the doctor shook his head doubtfully. But he prepared something and explained to Anita how it should be administered. "I will come again to-night," he said, and turned to take his leave.

Then Anita caught his arm and detained him. Old Toni had fallen asleep; and the girl spoke in a anxious voice.

Anita.

"You must not let him die—you must not let him die, will you?"

Her earnest eyes looked into his, and he saw all the marvelous beauty of them. A sudden fire leaped to life in his soul, and the weight of his small hand on his forearm filled him with strange ecstasy. He dropped his right hand upon hers, where it rested on his left arm and said:

"I will all the attention and all the [illegible] command can save him, he shall not die."

"Oh, if you will save him, I will bless you and count the stars for you ancestral line, she is not to show jealousy, but rather satisfaction if her husband takes a subordinate wife. Supposing that he dies before she, she will be left like earth without its heaven, and must transfer her dependence to her son and summon up her resolution to face widowhood until death. Mount Tai may crumble away, or she may have to walk over sharp-edged swords, but this resolve must not pass from her. Examples are given of heroines of all ages who have died by hanging or drowning themselves rather than violate their marriage vows:

WOMAN'S WORLD

"Their bodies, indeed, suffered injury in life, but their names will be fragrant for 10,000 generations."—Nineteenth Century.

SOME THINGS THAT COUNT.

Small belongings of dress often make or mar a woman's appearance, therefore it is well that she should keep an eye on the little fads and fancies of fashion.

Gloves this season will match the costume. At least they will correspond with its shade. Some of the newest have little turned back cuffs of contrasting color, and many of the long suede gloves are heavily embroidered. Embroidered silk gloves are shown in elbow length to meet the short sleeves of the new waists.

For neck trimming there is a wide choice of collars and ribbons. Lace which has seen service on old gowns can be pressed into service for smart stocks if applied on net or on wide heavy lace insertion. Lace motifs, too, can be ripped from discarded blouses and similarly utilized.

A new French fad is the wearing of black velvet bands around the throat. These of course are intended for use with "V" necked blouses. The velvet band is sometimes tied a little to the right of the front with loop ends allowed to drop almost to the waist.

Bead necklaces are being much worn in Paris at present. These may be strung together at home, using a small crystal bead between each two of the plain ones. Quite large beads are the fad and short chains of graduated beads are also liked. A pretty chain for a young girl is made by stringing roses of chiffon together at intervals on a silk cord. These are dainty adjuncts to an organdie or muslin frock.—Washington Times.

EMERALDS COMING IN FASHION AGAIN.

Emeralds are coming so much into fashion just now that they are, as a natural consequence, rapidly rising in price, and promise to be one of the favorite and most expensive stones of the coming season.

The queen owns a parure of emeralds that is worth a king's ransom. Princess Charles of Denmark has one hundred emeralds of large size and first quality which forms a flexible waist belt; and stones in the possession of the Duchess of Buccleuch and Lady Aberdeen are priceless.

The Duchess of Malborough, who so seldom wears any jewels but her famous pearls and diamonds, caused a mild sensation at Dublin Castle one night last week by wearing a magnificent ornament of emeralds.

Lady Carew has a fine tiara of emeralds and she also owns an exceptionally splendid stone which was presented to her by the Shah of Persia. Mrs William James has a trellis work collar of emeralds and diamonds, while Lady Carnavon, Lady Ludlow, Mrs. Ronald Greville and Mrs. Arthur Paget al have small fortunes wrapped up in these green gems.

Square emeralds are a current craze. Mrs. George Keppel has a priceless square emerald, which she wears as a pendant on a slender chain.

FOR THE SHOPPING BAG.

A novelty intended to slip into a shopping bag is a flat little case of gun metal. One of the inner sides is fitted out with rows of bristles, which lie flat when the case is closed, but rise when a spring is touched, and becomes a stiff brush. This may be devoted to clothes, nails, or hair, according to the needs of the wearer. The opposite side furnishes a mirror, back of which lie concealed a nail file, pencil, and other small aids.

FASHION HINTS.

The black and white checks are not usually dressy, yet some extremely handsome gowns are made of this popular material.

A black and white checked foulard had a large flower design overlaying the check, the principal color being pale blue.

The gown most frequently seen is the severe tailor suit and skirt worn over the thinnest of lingerie blouses.

Gowns and hats are in the best taste, with even the tendency toward overstriking modified.

Mother's Instructions.

Hostess—Shall I help you to some Tommy?

Tommy—No'm. Let me help myself first. Ma told me not to help myself more'n once. You can help me all you please afterward.

"A Little While"

A little while to work, to play,
To gather roses—with the thorns;
To dream that we are more than clay,
To flout ill-fate and nature's scorns.

A little while to earn a name,
To lose it 'mid the gibbering crowd;
A little while for praise and blame,
A little while for sun and cloud.

A little while for speed and rest,
For peace and strife, for mingled chimes;
For knowledge, and the worldless zest
Of ecstasy in poet rhymes.

A little while—the play is done;
The world rolls onward as before
And only hearts that beat as one Can change the phrase to "Evermore!"

—London Daily News.

THE GORGIO DOCTOR

BY CHARLES SLOAN REID

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Old Toni lay sick in his tent, and Anita sat upon her feet by his cot, waiting for the gorgio doctor whom she had herself gone to summon, all the herbal remedies of the camp having failed. Toni was ninety years old; and Anita was twenty, the daughter of the old gipsy's youngest son, who, with his wife, was dead, both having died the same year. The oldest daughter of Toni was queen of the band, but hers was a more than ordinarily sordid nature, and there was little time she had to spare from the business of getting silver from the gorgios. So, old Toni had come to depend upon Anita for every attention.

Anita had the shapeliest foot and ankle in the world, the most exquisitely rounded form, the prettiest hand; and her eyes gleamed like twin stars from a rose-tinted velvet sky. Sandor Costello, the young musician of the band, never tired of looking at her. But the girl feared him. He was lazy, and earned absolutely nothing. His violin alone made him tolerable in the camp, for he affected the "dandy" in his dress, and a sinister leer lurked habitually in his eyes.

As Anita sat by her grandfather, waiting for the coming of the doctor, Sandor came and gazed in upon them. If Toni should die, he could force the girl to marry him. And why should he not die? He was old enough. Anita looked up when Sandor darkened the tent opening. But when she saw him she shuddered and looked again into the face of her grandfather.

But presently, Sandor was nudged gently aside by the doctor who entered the tent. A scowl from the musician's eyes followed him, and again the gipsy's form darkened the doorway. Dr. Graves felt old Toni's pulse. Then he turned toward the front of the tent and motioned Costello away.

"Give us light here," he said sternly.

The man glided away, but his hand caressed the handle of a small stiletto as he did so. Anita saw this movement and shuddered again.

Toni was very ill, and the doctor shook his head doubtfully. But he prepared something and explained to Anita how it should be administered.

"I will come again to-night," he said, and turned to take his leave.

Then Anita caught his arm and detained him. Old Toni had fallen after night, no matter where we camp."

Somehow, Graves felt a strange joy filling his heart, and it was with peculiar earnestness that he whispered:

"Ah, precious, you offer me a tremendous reward."

"He is the only friend I have in the band," continued Anita, "the only one to protect me from Costello, him you saw at the door just now."

"He loves you?"

"So he declares, but I fear him as a wolf with sharp fangs."

"He shall not harm you."

Anita drew a little way from him. "I do not understand," she said.

The Gorgio doctor.

"I, too, love you," declared the doctor. "And if Toni dies, I shall protect you with my life."

Anita stared at the ground and was silent. And Graves turned once more toward the door.

"I shall come again to-night," he repeated.

All the afternoon, Anita thought over what the gorgio had told her; and, while the memory of his words brought a strange joy to her heart, she ever and anon shook her head gravely.

"Gorgios make love lightly," she said to herself; yet the handsome face of the young doctor haunted her.

Toni was no better at night, and Dr. Graves sat a long time by his bedside. Anita sat a little distance away and looked from the face of the doctor to that of her grandfather and back again. And outside, beyond the dim glare of the candle light that came from the tent, a pair of glittering black eyes, from beneath the brow of a swarthy countenance, looked in upon the group.

At last, the doctor arose. Toni had gone to sleep again, and was breathing quietly.

"Old Toni has a chance to live," said Graves, approaching Anita.

The girl's eyes beamed her thanks. For a moment the man stood and looked down into these eyes. Then he caught her hand passionately.

"I love you, little Romany maid," he said. "No gorgio maiden has made my heart beat like this. Think about it until old Toni gets well, and see if you cannot love me for more than the fee you promised."

Anita's heart beat quickly, and she lowered her eyes submissively, when he kissed her hand.

The camp was located in the edge of a bit of old forest half a mile from the village; and just as Dr. Graves was about to emerge from this wood into the open highway, a sudden whir in the air above his head caused him to spring back and throw up his hand just in time to catch in his grasp a brown sinewy wrist and prevent the descent of a slender steel blade which had been aimed at his heart. The powerful grip of the doctor wrenched the wrist of the other in such a manner that the gipsy dropped to his knees in pain, and the weapon fell from his hand. It was Costello, and his eyes, dancing from pain, still gleamed vengeance. With his free hand Dr. Graves secured the fallen weapon. Then he walked rapidly away toward the village, leading his prisoner unresistingly, to be delivered to the sheriff a few minutes later.

Old Toni improved for a few days, then began to sink rapidly; and it became evident that the old gipsy would never rise again.

It was a quiet Sabbath morning when he died. Dr. Graves sat on a camp stool a few feet away, and Anita kneit on the ground beside the cot. All had been silent for some moments in the tent, when the old man raised a finger, pointing toward Anita, and turned his eyes toward Dr. Graves. The doctor drew near, for the old man had something to say. The words came in a whisper.

"Her mother was gorgio," said old Toni. "Take care of her."

Dr. Graves dropped to his knees beside Anita.

"Give her to me for my wife, Toni," he said eagerly, at the same time taking the girl's hands in his own.

Tears filled Anita's eyes, but she looked through them trustingly into the eyes of the man beside her. And thus they remained for some moments, while old Toni's dying eyes looked from one to the other slowly. At last he nodded his head in assent, and breathed his last.

Presently Dr. Graves drew Anita into his arms and gently stroked her dark hair, as her head rested confidingly against his breast.

Anita.

and the girl spoke in a low, anxious voice.

"You must not let him die—you will not let him die, will you?"

Her earnest eyes looked into his, and he saw all the marvelous beauty of them. A sudden fire leaped to life in his soul, and the weight of her small hand on his forearm filled him with strange ecstasy. He dropped his right hand upon hers, where it rested on his left arm and said:

"All the attention and all the skill my command can save him, little one, he shall not die."

"Oh, if you will save him, I will love you and count the stars for you night

LOCOMOTIVE IN THE GAME.

Baseball Story Told So Many Times Maryland Believes It.

In the baseball annals of Texas, Baltimore county, is an incident which, whether an actual occurrence or not, has been repeated so often that it is invested with a force of fact.

On a hot Fourth of July back in the 80s, when the catcher held his position behind the bat without mask, and the pitcher knew of no curve or toe plate, there was a game of ball between the Texas Sluggers and the Timonium Little Potatoes, But Hard to Peel.

The Sluggers had got in some good stick work early in the game, and the visitors were just feeling the big Texas pitcher. It was the fifth inning and the Little Potatoes had two men on the bases, one on second and the other on first, when one of their home run hitters, who had been asleep up until the moment, struck the ball

It cleared the entire field, and would have fallen on the railroad track, but just at that moment a train came along and the ball disappeared in the smokestack of the engine.

The train was going at a lively speed up grade, and the force of the puffs ejected the ball. The momentum of the train carried it until it fell into the third baseman's hands, and a double play was the result.

After much kicking from the Little Potatoes as to whether the play was fair, the side was retired, as the double play made three hands out.—Baltimore Sun.

Legal Triumph.

The attorney for the denfense shook his finger at the complaining witness and raised his voice a little higher.

"Let us get this right," he said. "You state on oath that you had the defendant arrested because he was hounding you with threats to do you up. Is that right?"

"Yes, sir."

"You repeat the assertion that he was hounding you?"

"Yes, sir."

"You saw the weapon that was found on him when he was arrested, didn't you?"

"I did."

The attorney rose to his feet, leaned forward and glared at him with an expression terrible to behold.

"Now, sir," he thundered, "will you please tell this jury how the defendant could possibly have hounded you with a bulldog revolver?"

Her Rival.

She hasn't much beauty to boast of;
Her mouth is too awfully big;
Her hair, which she should make the most of,
Suggests, to my notice, a wig;
She goes in the awfulest rig;
The colors she wears are distressing.
She hasn't the sense of a pig.
I think, in the matter of dressing.

She's awkward—the way that she walks
Gives sensitive people a spasm;
I know that whenever she talks
I feel I must yawn like a chasm.
Her humor's a mere protoplasm
That hasn't developed at all;
Her wits—well, I doubt if she has 'em—
At least they're remarkably small.

So how she could be an attraction
I can't for the life of me see,
I know, to my great satisfaction,
She can't hold a candle to me.
But tastes do not always agree,
And then there's the blindness of Cupid.
I'll never believe it can be,
But men are so terribly stupid.

New Fad in Wedding Receptions.

A new social experiment was tried in New York the other day and apparently met with success. The bride at a large wedding did not live in that city. Her very conservative family, which has lived for years in a home on the Hudson, shuddered at the idea of a wedding reception in a restaurant. It happened that a house on Fifth avenue owned by a friend of the family was for rent. It was completely furnished. So it was rented for the day and there the wedding reception was held in the exclusiveness of a handsome home which might have belonged to the family.

Japs Had to Celebrate.

When the news of the great Japanese naval victory reached Pittsburg a company of acrobats from the island empire were appearing afternoon and evening in a circus. On being assured of the Russian overthrow they promptly went on strike for a day, positively refusing to work. Instead they proceeded to decorate the city a vivid red, carefully refraining from from any breach of the law, however. They were allowed full liberty.

Father of Twenty-Four.

Charles F. Holm of Massachusetts, the father of twenty-four children by one wife, enlisted in the navy in 1837. This date of enlistment probably is earlier than that of any living man.

PENALTY PAID FOR FAME.

Renunciation Is Necessary for Genius in Literature.

Why is so much of our present literary output so unrelated to literature, so depressingly banal, so devoid of distinction, power and vitality? Is the answer merely that greatness is rare in all ages, and this chances to be a period of exceptional sterility? Or is it the result of the marked vulgarity of prevailing ideals? Not only our writers measure success by popularity, but the trend of criticism itself is to magnify the importance of a wide appeal.

A high degree of excellence has never won quick or wide applause; witness Shakespeare, Milton, Shelley, Keats, Browning, Swinburne. It cannot be too often or too emphatically repeated that literature, real additions to the realms of letters, must forego cheap successes. A difficult and determined withdrawal from prevailing ideals is demanded of those authors who would fain see English letters reinstated in the realm of bartered glory. Before we can have another poet like Browning we must have another man content to do his work unknown for twenty years and willing to pay for his own publishing. Before we have a second Tennyson we shall have to have another man who shall as well understand that there are no cheap and quick methods of forcing the poetic faculty, that the best of our thoughts come to us in a state of wise passivity and reverent waiting. The superficial and deeper parts of our nature do not function at one and the same time. A Mary and a Martha are not combined in their highest powers in one personality. Greatness demands renunciation. We cannot flap around with the daws and yet be an eagle with eye fixed on the sun. All really fine production, says Harper's Weekly, demands a definite choice and firm adhesion, and it bears no nearer relation to popular applause and liking than a frog in a swamp to a nightingale in an oak grove.

Latest Physical Culture Fad.

Recently an American visitor in London complained in the press that English people blew their noses with singular freedom in restraurants and other public places. Thereupon one of the newspapers said: "The American visitor who is astonished at the Englishman's performance with the pocket handkerchief is evidently unaware that this very performance is the latest thing in physical culture. Adenoids, the fashionable malady of the twentieth century nursery, is now said by many experts to be largely caused by insufficient blowing of the baby nose, and nose blowing forms a class exercise in most enlightened systems of drill. That American visitor should attend one of Fraulein Wilke's classes at the Southwestern Polytechnic, Chelsea, to see the 'trombone blast' being done as elegantly as it can be done. He would be greatly edified by the spectacle of thirty or forty ladies in gymnastic costume all blowing their noses at the word of command."

Alway.

Little pink feet
That have trotted all day,
Wee dimpled hands
That are tired of play,
And teeth white as pearls,
And tousled gold curls,
You're dad's queen of girls
To-night and alway.

Now, and alway
Just dad's queen of girls!
Weary of play
Your tousled gold curls
Lie spread on my breast;
And sweetly to rest
As day reddens the west
Drifts dad's best of girls.

Dear, for all time,
For all time and alway,
When weary, come climb
As you climb, dear, to-day
Up in your dad's lap
When wanting a nap
Or to ward off mishap,
Or when weary of play.

Always to me,
All your life to your dad,
Laughing with glee
Or sorry and sad;
Bring all to me, dear,
Your bright days and drear,
Your joy and your fear,
And make your dad glad.

—Houston Post.

From the Mouths of Babes.

Adults, groping blindly in superior wisdom for the right word in the right place, may learn much from the unpremeditated remarks of the nursery.

Jane's eight years had not been noted in the family circle for their evidences of self-restraint, and one recent afternoon she was particularly naughty. And so it was that Mistress Jane's invitation to a children's party was nearly unhonored by that diminutive but fiery little person. But papa had a talk with her, and she was "honestly sorry," and to the party she went.

"My!" exclaimed a small friend; "you're fearfully late! Why?"

Jane was brevity and accuracy itself in her reply. "Oh," said she, "I had a pain in my temper; but it's all right now."—The Sunday Magazine.

Fortune from Small Beginning.

Charles M. Bailey of Baileyville, Me., has made from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 as a manufacturer of oilcloth. He began in 1847 in a little barn, and now his factory covers twenty-four acres of floor space. Mr. Bailey is 85 years old but works every day, and when necessity arises still takes his place at the bench with his employes. One man has worked for him over half a century.

Money for Bible Society.

The American Bible Society has just received a gift of $300 from a man to whom forty years ago, while lying a wounded soldier in the hospital of Vicksburg, a New Testament was given. He wishes the money to be used as soon as possible in placing the gospel in the hands of wounded soldiers in Japanese hospitals.

CHANGE IN CHINESE LAWS

Barbarous Modes of Punishment Long in Use in the Celestial Empire Have Lately Been Abolished

Wu Ting-fang, long Chinese minister in Washington, has succeeded in inducing the imperial government at Pekin to abolish some of its cruel punishments. An imperial edict of April 24 gives Wu and Shen Chiapen credit for suggesting the changes and then proceeds: "At the beginning of the dynasty when our soyereignty extended within the great wall, the most severe punishment was beheading. In the year of Hsin Jui, however, when we revised the laws, we permitted the introduction of those punishments which had been prevalent in the Ming dynasty, hence ling chi (cutting to pieces) was allowed for certain crimes. It has always been distasteful to us to resort to these punishments, and it does not fulfill our imperial idea of showing mercy to the people. Now that we are once more revising the laws, therefore, we hereby order that for all variations of the crime of taking life, beheading shall be the extreme penalty in future; ling chi, exposure of the detached head and mutiliation of the corpse must be abolished forever."

As a consequence of this abolition all the other punishments are moved down a grade in severity. The laws where the words ling chi occur, for instance, will have chan chueh, or simple decapitation, substituted. The penalty of chan hsiao, or what might be termed compound decapitation, or the entire removal of the head and exposure of the same, must hereafter read chao chueh or strangulation on sentence. This is supposed to be a far more honorable death than decapitation and was formerly reserved for princes and other great men. Strangulation, however, has its own subtle distinctions, and the penalty of chao chueh will be hereafter modified to chiao chien hou, or awaiting in prison under sentence of strangulation. This difference is the difference between certain death and having a chance of reprieve.

Among other complications of Chinese law and its execution is a unique and rather racy method of dealing with prisoners by lottery. Once a year the vermilion pencil of imperial authority is waved over a chart on which the names of convicted criminals are written, and those which it includes in a haphazard sweep are executed forthwith. The rest are either reprieved altogether or their executions are postponed for another year.

Another important reform is the abolition of the "condemned" brand on the faces of prisoners. Hitherto all who have been sentenced to banishment for robbery and other serious crimes have been tattoed on the face, in order to mark them as criminals for life.

SYSTEM THAT DIDN'T WORK

Fatal Flaw in Young Man's Scheme for Remembering Names and Faces

Some of the feats in remembering names and faces of persons only seen once performed by bank clerks and persons in similar positions are astonishing, but it is a fact that very few of them owe this faculty to any of the artificial systems of mnemonics so widely advertised. Either the gift is a natural one or is acquired at the expense of much hard work.

The cashier of a downtown bank who is noted for his memory for names and faces got talking the other day about his faculty and confessed that it had been acquired with much labor.

"When I was a young fellow," he said, 'I was secretary to the president of a New Jersey bank, and I made up my mind that a good memory for names and faces would be a valuable asset, and set to work to supply what nature had not given me. I invested $50 in an elaborate system of mnemonics, and the first opportunity I had to use it was when my employer sent me to a hardware store on a personal errand.

"My system consisted in associating the man in my mind with some simple article connected with his trade and prefixing or suffixing a letter or more as necessary. For instance, Sanders the grocer would be associated in my mind with sand, and I would of course remember to add the three letters needed to form his name.

"Well, I framed up a plan on this system to remember the hardware man's name, and in two weeks I came back again. My system was working beautifully. I walked in as brisk as you please and hailed my friend.

"'How are you, Mr. Snails?' I said.

"Something in the man's face made me fear that there had been a slip somewhere, 'Are you not Mr. Snails?' I asked.

"'Young man,' he said, 'you are too blamed fresh. My name is Stacks.'"

GREAT SCHEME THAT FAILED

Uncle Joe's Brilliant Idea to Escape Conscription Foiled by Stupidity of Medical Agents

"Speaking of conscripts," said the sailor, as he laid down a book on Russia, "did I ever tell you about my Uncle Joe?

"Well, Uncle Joe, in the time of the Civil War, had a friend named Hiram Haines. Hiram was conscripted, but, when he came to take the medical examination, he didn't pass. The doctors said he was no good for a soldier. They said he wasn't strong enough to fight.

"Hiram told Uncle Joe about this, and Uncle Joe said, after thinking a little while:

"'Look a-here, Hi, I'm conscripted, too, and my examination is set for next Thursday. What'st the matter with you taking it in my name? I'd pass sure, if I took it myself, for I'm as strong as an ox. But if you took it for me, fakin', you know, why I'd get off.'

"'But the risk,' says Hiram. 'Think of the risk, Joe. Oh, by Jimmy, no, I couldn't do it.'

"'There ain't no risk,' says Uncle Joe. 'In these confused times, with the army doctors examinin' thousands of conscripts a day, there ain't no risk whatever. Come on, Hiram. Oblige me. I'll give you $200 if you do.'

"Such a lump of money as that brought Hiram to terms. He said he'd take the examination in Uncle Joe's name, and sure enough, he done it, first gettin' his pay in advance." He wasn't detected, either. But, by jingo, this time the doctors passed him. This time they declared him sound in wind and limb, and the makin's of a fust-rate soldier.

"That is why Uncle Joe has been so down on war all his life. He lost, you see, $200, and had to fight four years."

RUSSIAN CAPITAL IS GAY

Present Conflict, With National Prestige at Stake, Has Very Little Depressing Effect.

War or no war, the aristocratic Russian pursues his pleasures with an abandonment that speaks of unlimited resources or unlimited recklessness. The pleasures of the table are protracted to an inordinate degree. A lunch, in which the courses are plentifully watered with champagne, will spread itself through the afternoon. You may barely escape at 5 o'clock, though you began to eat at 1. The host never sits down, plying his guests with a succession of good things, liquid and solid. Even the afternoon tea in middle-class circles is a very formidable undertaking. It includes dishes of various sorts, in which meat will certainly figure, and Russian tea, served in a glass with lemon, is but the pale comparison to sparkling champagne. The appearance of the streets tells of wealth, too. No finer equipages exist anywhere than those which, horsed with coal-black steeds, dash at full speed, in lofty disregard for the mere foot passenger, down the central strip of wood pavement in the principal "prospects," as the wider streets are denominated. Holding the reins in his two hands, with arms outstretched, the driver, mediaeval in dress, has the summary methods of a Roman charioteer. Indeed, there is something of imperial Rome in this second capital of the czar.—Correspondence from the Pall Mall Gazette.

TO THE UNASSUMING DAISY

"Repair My Heart with Gladness and a Share of Thy Meek Nature."—Wordsworth

With little here to do or see
Of things that in the great world be,
Daisy! again I talk to thee,
For thou art worthy.
Thou unassuming commonplace
Of nature, with that homely face,
And yet with something of a grace,
Which love makes for thee!

Oft on the dappled turf at ease
I sit, and play with similes.
Loose types of things through all degrees.
Thoughts of thy raising:
And many a fond and idle name
I give to thee for praise or blame,
As is the humor of the game,
While I am gazing.

A nun demure of lowly port,
Or sprightly maiden of love's court,
In thy simplicity the sport
Of all temptations;
A queen in crown of rubies drest,
A starveling in a scanty vest,
Are all, as seems to suit thee best,
Thy appellations.

A little cyclops, with one eye
Staring to threaten and defy,
That thought comes next—and instantly
The freak is over,
The shape will vanish—and behold
A silver shield with boss of gold,
That spreads itself, some fairy bold
In fight to cover!

I see thee glittering from afar—
And then thou art a pretty star;
Not quite so fair as many are
In heaven above thee!
Yet like a star, with glittering crest,
Self-poised in air thou seem'st to rest;
May peace come never to his nest,
Who shall reprove thee!

Bright flower! for by that name at last,
When all my reveries are past,
I call thee, and to that cleave fast,
Sweet silent creature!
That breath'st with me in sun and air,
Do thou, as thou art wont, repair
My heart with gladness, and a share
Of thy meek nature!

—William Wordsworth.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Elder, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

Thursday, August 3, 1905.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

UNION CLUBBING LIST....

The Union And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
The Union And Home & Farm	1.00
The Union And Dixie Home	1.00
The Union Saturday News	1.25
The Union And Weekly Age Herald	1.25
The Union And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
The Union and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.50
The Union And Twice-a-Week Globe-Democrat	1.50
The Union And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
The Union And Tri-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

A CARD FROM COL. SMITH.

Clanton, Ala., Afg. 1, 1905.

Editor Union:

There seems to be considerable comment among the people of Chilton County concerning the political position occupied by me today.

For the information of the people of this County, I desire to say that I am unalterably opposed to the organized Democracy of this County as it now exists, and never again do I expect to support it by my vote or influence. I will not be a slave to the bosses who misrule the Democracy of this County.

While I am not a politician, yet I expect to do all in my power to help keep the government of Chilton County in the hands of the people where it rightly belongs, and from now forward I shall be found fighting in their ranks.

I believe the Union is the official organ and champion of the people's rights in this County, hence I make this statement through its columns.

Yours very truly,

A. C. SMITH.

CLEAN UP.

In almost every city and town of Alabama good citizens are cleaning up their premises, cutting weeds and burning trash, and if any stagnant water is found, treating such a place to a dose of oil. Chilton county is naturally an extremely healthy country, with its sandy soil and good drainage, but we must not presume too much on our natural advantages. In every town nature should be aided to get rid of those impediments to good health which are brought into being by the gathering together of people in the close proximity of a town. So, let every one clean up. "One ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," as New Orleans can testify.

THANK YOU.

We were the pleased recipient of some mighty fine white grapes lately, a box being given us last Friday by Mr. L. Brunberg, the winemaker of Thorsby; and Tuesday morning a crate reached us from Mr. P. W. Peterson, a prominent orchardist of the same place. Gentlemen, accept our thanks for the kindness shown, and, as the Irishman put it, "May you live to eat the hen that scratches over your grave."

THE NEW COMPANY.

Saturday, the 22d, a new corporation called the Farmers' Warehouse and Fertilizer Company was formed with headquarters at Thorsby. The capital stock is $10,000, divided in 400 shares at $25 each, non-assessable. It is authorized to build and operate Fertilizer factories, warehouses, cotton gins, oil mills, etc. There are 38 names as incorporators, the great majority being farmers. The Board of Directors consists of J. F. Peterson, B. N. Martin, G. W. Phalin, T. M. Driver, J. R. Parnell, Sam W. Collins and J. W. Hayes. J. Bice, President; I. S. Gerald, Treasurer; J. D. Collins, Secretary. The meeting left the selection of a General Manager to the Directors. The people of Thorsby and tributary communities are very enthusiastic over the new enterprise, and on Saturday after the incorporation papers were made out persons were putting down their names for stock and depositing 20 per cent to bind their offers. Thorsby is an ideal place for a COTTON MILL for many reasons, but the chief one, and a reason which will appeal to all mill operators is the "help;" the city of Thorsby has a large Scandinavian population, and like President Roosevelt they don't believe in "race suicide." and in case of the location of a cotton mill at Thorsby these people could induce almost any number of their kindred that are now living in the bleak northwest to come to the "sunny south" by assuring them of steady employment. These people, taken as a whole, don't look for a place where they can live without work, but expect to work for what they get, and are noted for their steadiness as employes. Now, push for a cotton mill. We'll not only raise cotton in Chilton county, but we'll spin it also, and get that profit, and have a home market for the products of the orchards and truck gardens.

THORSBY NEWS.

The Directors of the Farmers' Warehouse and Fertilizer Company met on Monday and transacted a good deal of important business in regard to that enterprise. Among other things appointed a building committee consisting of J. F. Peterson, T. M. Driver and J. R. Parnell. This was absolutely necessary, as the material is coming on the ground every day. The grape harvest is in full swing here and there is some fine fruit being gathered. The editor of THE UNION spent Friday here, viewing the new depot and other improvements; and expressed great admiration of the appearance of Gust. Berlin's new house as viewed from the Thorsby Inn. J. Bice took a day off Friday and went a-fishing. He's been working pretty hard lately and needed a change. The shares of the Farmers' W. and F. Co. are being taken by the farmers in all the surrounding beats. "See us grow." S. E. Norton went to Chicago Tuesday. Miss Lenore Goodwin left this week for southern Alabama. The Baptist S. S. picnic had a good time Wednesday. Miss Anna Howard is expected home Wednesday, and her many friends will be delighted to welcome her back home. Miss Lida Neill is missed from her place in the Hornsby store. Mr. Max Stabler, of Montgomery, is a visitor at the home of Dr. Stabler. Dr. Junkerman is on the sick list. Rev. Newton, of Kingsley, has been preaching at the college lately in place of Rev. Clark. Miss Ellen Forsman is spending her vacation at home. Rev. C. K. Holland will preach in English at the Norwegian church on next Sunday evening. Rev. H. F. H. Hartelius will officiate at the Swedish church. The ball game between Thorsby and Union Clubs was 12 to 10 in favor of Thorsby. Arthur Williams, of Portland, Ind., is visiting his parents here. The Denison Lumber Co. is doing the best business now they've had. This company distributes about a thousand dollars a month here.

"REX."

CORINTH.

The all-day singing at Corinth on the 5th Sunday in July was a grand success. The assemblage was called to order by P. M. Jones, of the committee on arrangements. The other members of the committee were E. A. Norris and W. B. Jones. T. L. Robinson was appointed chairman of the meeting, which was then opened with prayer by E. L. Jones. Lee Robinson entertained the people 25 minutes; N. J. Jones 25 minutes. Recess 10 minutes. R. T. Grant led for 25 minutes and A. L. Robinson 25 minutes. Dismissed for dinner. A good dinner and a chat with the pretty girls helped the feelings of the young men. On reassembling T. M. Pyron and J. S. Jones entertained the people an hour in the old "Sacred Harp." Recess for 10 minutes, and then T. L. Robinson sang a short but very good lesson. R. T. Grant entertained 25 minutes. The Misses Fanney Belle Robinson and Martha Pyron served as organists the entire day. A joyful day spent in the service of the Lord. Let us give thanks to the Lord for these blessings forever.

J. A. JONES, Sec'y.

BEAT 9 ITEMS.

Plenty of rain and crops looking better. G. D. Collins spent several days in Birmingham last week. Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Barrett visited relatives in Birmingham last week. J. W. Hays and wife went to Clanton Saturday. Our protracted meeting was well attended and we had good preaching, for which we are indebted to the Revs. W. H. Newton and Gus Gibson. Come again, brethren. Glover Collins made a business trip to Maplesville Saturday. Mrs. F. R. Collins and sons, J. R. and Dewey, went to Chilton's capital Saturday. Several from here attended the funeral of E. A. Knight at New Salem cemetery on Saturday. The services were conducted by the Masons.

NIM ROD.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

Crops are looking well after the showers. O. P. Scott visited his son, David, who resides at Active, this week and reports good crops there, and had a good time catching a coon. Some of our people were at Mount Moriah Sunday to the singing and report a fine service. It shows that Archie Glasscock has taught good singing there. Well, we're glad to see and hear of old Chilton "booming" as she is. Those new enterprises at Thorsby and Clanton are all right. Let's all take stock in one or the other and help build up our county. Let's all stick together in our organizations, the Alliance and the Cotton Association. We're getting 10 cents for cotton just because we said (and stuck to it) that we wouldn't sell for less. We won this fight and we can win the next if there is "stickability" enough about us.

"DAD'S PLOW BOY."

BUDGET OF FUN

THE HIRED VARIETY.

Summer girls are seldom true,
I know whereof I speak—
Last summer out of twenty-two
But one was ours a week.
—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ACCOMPLISHED HER PURPOSE.

"She said she would bring him to her feet, and I understand she did."

"Yes, she did."

"Who told you about it?"

"No one; I saw him tying her shoe myself."—Houston Post.

SOMETHING WRONG.

Tom—Miss Summers must be quite ill. She has no appetite at all.

Dick—A girl isn't always ill when she has no appetite.

Tom—But she has no appetite even for ice cream and candy.

AN ACIDULOUS OBSERVATION.

"Why is Mr. Meekton so anxious to umpire a baseball game?"

"Because," answered Mrs. Meekton's dearest friend, "it's the only chance he gets to have the last word."—Washington Star.

SIMPLY NOWHERE.

Foreigner (watching a strike riot)—Is it possible such things can happen in a civilized country?

Native—Oh, oh, Mister, ye ort to see us celebratin' a Fourth of July!—Chicago Tribune.

TOO MOUNTAINOUS.

Slangey—Yes, I tramped through Switzerland once.

Newitt—Come off! You never did.

Slangey—Sure I did; on the level.

Newitt—That proves you're lying. It's simply impossible to tramp through Switzerland on the level.—Philadelphia Press.

THOSE BOSTON GIRLS.

Nettie—What do you think of the Spooners, anyway?

Edith—Well, I don't know. When I'm mad with Lizzie I find myself thinking what a splendid man her husband must be to put up with her, and when I'm miffed with him I begin to look upon Lizzie as an angel.—Boston Transcript.

AT THE ACADEMY.

Miss Jones—How came you to think of the subject, Mr. De Brush?

Eccentric Artist—Oh, I have had it in my head for years.

Miss Jones—How wonderful! What did the papers say?

Eccentric Artist—Said it was full of "atmosphere" and suggested "space."—London Punch.

THEN AND NOW.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed the woman at the kitchen door. "This is the second time you have called here this week!"

"Well, dat ain't so worse," answered the hungry hobo. "Dere wuz a time when me best girl kicked ef I didn't show up twice a day!"—Chicago News.

THEIR IDEAL.

The superintendent was giving the children a little talk on "true heroism."

"Boys," he said, "what would you call a young man who did his duty well and bravely, without flinching, expecting no great credit for it, and content to let others win the applause of the multitude?"

"A baseball catcher!" shouted all the boys.—Chicago Tribune.

LOT OF USELESS THINKING.

"Your little birdie has been very, very ill," she wrote to the young man. "It is some sort of nervous trouble, and the doctors said I must have perfect rest and quiet, and that I must think of nothing. And all the time, dear Gussy, I thought constantly of you."

The young man read it over, and then read it through very slowly, and put it in his pocket, and went out under the silent stars, and kept thinking, and thinking, and thinking.—London Tit-Bits.

THE NEW BABY.

The Mother—Isn't he just perfect?

The Father—Great kid!

The Uncle—What! Another?

The Aunt (on the mother's side)—He favors all of us.

The Aunt (on the father's side)—He favors all of us!

The Nurse—He's a poor sleeper.

The Bachelor Friend—I'm sorry for them.

The Cook—He's a darlint! (I'll give 'em notice tomorrow.)

The Doctor—Shall I charge $50 or $100?

The Cynic—Well, it isn't his fault.

The Clergyman—Another soul.

The Milkman—Another customer.
—T. M., in Life.

Which?

In an English inn, where some laborers were sitting one evening, mathematics became the topic of conversation, when one of the company propounded the old-time problem: "If a herring and a half cost a penny and a half, what would three herring cost?" There was a silence for several minutes while all sat smoking and thinking. At last one of the thinkers spoke: "Bill, did you say 'errin' or mackerel?"

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Henry James says the English of American newspapers is appallingly bad. Perhaps, but it makes more interesting reading than the "splendidly good" English of Mr. James' novels, comments the Commoner.

A train run at the rate of the Chicago fliers would bring Boston and New York within four hours of each other, says the Boston Transcript. It would also, in the present state of bridges and roadbed, increase the chances of a horrible calamity by about four hundred per cent.

There is certainly something wrong about either tailoring or the law, if the number of cases in which judges give decisions adverse to the tailors' interest is any criterion to go by. Now the question is, Which side is the fault on? queries the Tailoring World.

American railroad men have the genius and capacity to do anything that humans can do, asserts the Indianapolis News. If they will now give their time and patient endeavor to establish and maintain safety devices they will excel in this particular as they have in many others.

When men refuse to give the President credit for the good he does and assign mean motives for good actions, they discredit themselves to such an extent that, when they point out real errors of thought an daction, nobody believes them, avers the Christian World.

The Japanese have changed the meaning of our words, says the Pathfinder. Port Arthur was "impregnable," but they took it. Hand-to-hand fighting was "obsolete," but they have up-to-dated it. And they are still blue-penciling our Occidental conceptions.

A very trite saying is that the honor of public men should be as sensitive as that of a woman, and there is a great deal in it, since they involve not only themselves but the country for which they appear before the world as representatives, remarks the San Francisco Argonaut.

A little girl of eleven in North Carolina whose presence of mind saved a train from a frightful disaster is to be rewarded by the grateful company with the desire of her heart—a college education, relates the Baltimore American. In the midst of horrors and giant selfishness of the world it is pleasant to come across such instances of youthful heroism and of the fact that sometimes corporations have hearts, if not souls, and are touched by this unselfish heroism.

Argentina is a white man's country, declares the Buenos Ayres Southern Cross. The white races thrive under its skies. The average of human stature, of physical strength, and of intelligence is increasing; the races who are throwing in their lot with this country are raising the standard of their physical perfection, while morally the average plane of our ethics bears favorable comparison with that of our rivals. It will be our own fault if ours is not the leadership of South America.

That "spontaneous generation" story which has been sent by cable to this country, should be taken with a large grain of salt, declares the New York Tribune. A variety of tests made in the last few years lead to the belief that radium exerts a destructive influence on animal tissue and life, and when it has any effect at all on vegetation that effect is pernicious. Among the most significant experiments on record are those of M. Danysz, a veteran bacteriologist, who is connected with the Pasteur Institute in Paris. He found that though the action of radium on microbes was not always fatal it invariably checked their further development. If a less experienced investigator at Cambridge University has apparently obtained a different result, it is to be feared that there is something wrong with his method. His conclusions should be distrusted until confirmed by an expert of undoubted standing.

We need a new word for a new thing. Civilization has served its purpose. We want a better word for a better form of progress. The city has furnished the pattern of civilization. The citizen has been the principal promoter of that progress which has been so greatly exalted, and which in our time has been so often pronounced a failure. Civilization has not failed. It has done its work and done it well, but now we need something better, continues the Christian Register. We do not now make life in the city our ideal. The more citified society becomes the less it answers to the new and better demands for culture, comfort, simplicity, and humane methods of social organization. Civilization attends to rules of business, the enforcement of the law, to rules of order and the regulation of the strife which goes on between man and man in the perennial battle of life. Civilization is based upon the rules of the game. Give us a new word for that new influence which comes with the attempt to make goodness and the Golden Rule the bonds of union and the welfare of all men the object of unversal action.

Academic
Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President

Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer

We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WITH

The Union

FOR

$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.

If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address

The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

2011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

"Our Uncle Sam"

"Vague Loyalty," Compared with Feeling For Other Countries.

By Dr. Talcott Williams.

THE Frenchman, when called upon to repond to the toast in honor of his native land, pictures to himself a feminine figure, and glows with enthusiasm for La Belle France. The German speaks of his fatherland with mingled affection and that respect for paternal authority which is never entirely absent from the German conception of government. The mind of the Briton turns to his mother country with the love born, to a great extent, of a wonderful reign animated by the spirit of a great woman. But the American—the American speaks of Uncle Sam. If he has any feeling of affection for this abstraction it is a very mild one. Any idea of paternal authority is even more slight, and probably no one ever thought of an American administration mothering any one.

We think of Uncle Sam as a benevolent relative who has a mild feeling of affection for his nephews and nieces, but, like other uncles, expects them to hustle for themselves. He gives us a Christmas present once in a while—river and harbor bills, to make water flow in some places where nature never intended that it should—but in general he doesn't expect any one to look to him for guidance and support, and the last thing he would expect would be immediate and unquestioning obedience.

Along with this feeling for Uncle Sam goes a cousinly feeling for his nephews and nieces, and a readiness to welcome new cousins, provided they exhibit a capacity to hustle for themselves, though we have now come to the point where there is a serious doubt as to how many new cousins it is wise to

ACCORDING to the teachings of the New Testament, we must believe that wealth, whether it be given to us in the form of beauty, material wealth or genius, is merely a trust. If you think back to the days of your childhood you will remember many of your schoolmates who started in life on what seemed to be an equal footing. As you think of them now, some of them have succeeded while others have failed, and you find yourself unable to explain the reason. The power which has enabled these people to succeed is a gift many are inclined to believe. You are merely a steward, and must use your wealth for the good of others. I do not mean that we should have common of interests.

The great danger of all wealthy organizations, whether religious or not, is that they will become exclusive. That they will bar the poor and create a monopoly for the rich. There are two kinds of churches. One is open to all. The other makes use of the law of exclusion as well as that of incl... was once pastor of such a church. When I was rector of Grace ch... sexton once ordered from the building a poorly dressed woman who was ... ing in one of the pews. When I remonstrated with him, he replied: "Wh... we permit it, they will soon be praying all over the place." I want to ... open door and a welcome for all. Let a man worship in his shirtsleeves ... wishes.

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.
...g Term—Third Monday in May.
... Term—Fourth Monday in No...
...—L. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...ellor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
...g Term—Second Monday in ...
... Term—Second Monday in Sep...
...ancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...gister—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.
...t Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
...cond Monday February, first Mon... April, first Monday June, second ...day July, second Monday August, ... Monday November.

County Officers.
...ge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...reasurer—W. T. Callen.
...heriff—J. M. Morgan.
...olicitor—J. O. Middleton.
...ax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
...ax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
...rst District—W. H. Conway.
...econd District—Alex Glasscock.
...hird District—R. P. Kendrick.
...ourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
...rof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
...P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
...on. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.
...nators and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would ... published. Also if there are any ...rs in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.
...eth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd ...day. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billings...
...R. F. D. No. 1.
...lanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st ... 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.
...hestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, ... Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.
...berty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman ... Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.
...acedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, ... Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.
...ew Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, ... Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.
...oplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, ... Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.
...ion Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, ... day. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.
...ollins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas ... Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.
...ion Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas ... Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.
...easant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.
...rs Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st ...day. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.
...thel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; ...day before the second Sunday; J. ...abernathy, clerk, Verbena.
...cky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. ... Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song ...ice every 2nd and 4th Sunday af... ...ons. Prayer meeting every Wed...day night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.
...anton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—... Saturday, Clanton.
...eande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Fourth Saturday, Cooper.
...anton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...First Saturday, Clanton.
...ntury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...First Saturday, Billingsley.
...eeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...534—Saturday on or before full ..., Marbury.
...lson Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Saturday on or before full moon, ...on.
...nton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Tuesday on or before full moon, ...on.

I. O. O. F.
...lson Lodge—First and third Sat...
...nton Lodge, No. 204—Second and ... Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.
...k Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ... Mondays.

I. O. R. M.
...ocmo Tribe, No. 90—First and ... Mo... ...s sleep. Visiting chiefs ... ...ited. E. B. Langston, C. ... J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.
...e Lodge, of Thorsby—Second ...h Saturdays.

Girl's Industrial
chool.
CVALLO, ALA.
TERSON, A. M., D. D., President
, Thursday, Sept. 14th. living expenses $92.00
For information address nation Offer wice-a-Week

e e-Democrat nion
Year Only $1.50
at is issued Semi-Weekuesday and Friday. It is no equal or rival as a Newspaper.
World's Fair, all the news
the news of all the earth,
at during the coming year.
E TIME.
your best home paper and World's Fair City, both

Clanton, Ala.

os & Bros.,
nd Rugs.
NTS—Book Cases and inets.
NGHAM, ALA.

Practical Watchmaker
and Optician
Eyes Correctly
Fitted
Mail orders promptly filled

le Sam"
mpared with Feeling.
Countries.

called upon to repond to the toast in nd, pictures to himself a feminine fignthusiasm for La Belle France. The fatherland with mingled affection and nal authority which is never entirely ian conception of government. The ns to his mother country with the love
, of a wonderful reign animated by the an. But the American—the American eling of affection for this abstraction nal authority is even more slight, and merican administration mothering any olent relative who has a mild feeling out, like other uncles, expects them to Christmas present once in a while—low in some places where nature never l he doesn't expect any one to look last thing he would expect would be in-

Sam goes a cousinly feeling for to welcome new cousins, provided they elves, though we have now come to the s to how many new cousins it is wise achings of the New Testament, we whether it be given to us in the form wealth or genius, is merely a trust.

the days of your childhood you will re our schoolmates who started in life on an equal footing. As you think of them have succeeded while others have failed elf unable to explain the reason. The nabled these people to succeed is a pow you are not free from responsibility, re merely a steward, and must use your not mean that we should have commun organizations, whether religious or not,

that they will bar the poor and crushed wo kinds of churches. One is open to exclusion as well as that of indif
When I was rector of Grace ch ng a poorly dressed woman who was nonstrated with him, he replied: "Why ring all over the place." I want to Let a man worship in his shirtsleeves if

OFFICERS AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

Term—Third Monday in May.
Term—Fourth Monday in No.

L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

Term—Second Monday in
Term—Second Monday in Sep.
cellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
ster—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan-

County Court.

Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

Monday February, first Mon-
April, first Monday June, second
July, second Monday August,
Monday November.

County Officers.

ge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
surer—W. T. Callen.
iff—J. M. Morgan.
tor—J. O. Middleton.
Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

t District—W. H. Conway.
nd District—Alex Glasscock.
rd District—R. P. Kendrick. rth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

tors and clerks are cordially ask-send the editor any news regard-their churches which they would published. Also if there are any in these notices please send cor-
tion.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd
day. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billings-
R. F. D. No. 1.

nton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

tnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

erty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman
Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

edonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman,
Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

w Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman,
Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

ar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee,
Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

on Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, Sr.
ev. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

ins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

on Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

asant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

n Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st
ay. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

del—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor;
ay before the second Sunday; J.
ernathy, clerk, Verbena.

ky Mount M. E. Church—Rev.
Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song ce every 2nd and 4th Sunday af-on. Prayer meeting every Wed-ay night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

nton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—
d Saturday, Clanton.

ande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

nton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Clanton.

bury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Billingsley.

man Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ll—Saturday on or before full
, Marbury.

son Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Saturday on or before full moon,
on.

ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Tuesday on or before full moon,
on.

I. O. O. F.

on Lodge—First and third Sat-
on.

on Lodge, No. 304—Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Jack Camp, No. 190—First and Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

mo Tribe, No. 90—First and h's sleep. Visiting chiefs vited. E. B. Langston, C.
H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

n Lodge, of Thorsby—Second h Saturdays.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 2, '05, 8,037.
Price same date, 10c.
Total receipts last season, 6,648.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

J. L. Vines and son, David, were in Clanton Thursday.

J. A. Neeley was in town Thursday. He says his little daughter Eunice, who broke her thigh a couple of weeks since, is doing nicely. Dr. N. S. Johnson has charge of the case.

J. M. Kicker and family, of Tuscaloosa, visited his father, J. W. Kicker, last week.

J. L. Neeley was in Clanton Thursday.

Rev. J. T. Eckford and wife, at the Methodist parsonage, have a little daughter, who arrived Thursday; not so very little, either, for she weighed over 8 pounds. Mother and child are doing well.

E. F. Jackson was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Littlejohn and Miss Dalee Childress were visitors in Clanton Saturday.

Mrs. W. J. Foshee went to Quincy, Coosa county, Sunday on a visit to her niece, Mrs. J. F. Lewis, of that town. A couple of weeks since Mrs. Lewis gave birth to triplets, two boys and a girl, all of good form and weighing 23 pounds in all. Mother and children are doing well.

Rev. B. F. Vickers was in Clanton Monday. He says his little daughter Esther, is slowly improving.

J. W. Collins, of Thorsby, was in town Monday.

I. E. Sarber, the champion well driller of Chilton county, drilled a well 53 feet deep (that gives a fine supply of water) in 2 1-2 hours, at Maddox's gin last week. He also put a well in for C. W. Hubbard the same week 91 feet deep.

Mrs. Jot A. Miller and daughters, Misses Mattie and Allee, of Holmville, I. T., have been spending a few days in this vicinity and are now visiting in Coosa county.

Clark Barnes has been appointed carrier and Arthur Johnson substitute on Route No. 6.

Frank Hayes and Robert Littlejohn were in Clanton Monday.

R. B. Carden and sons, David and George, were welcome callers Monday.

Lyon will keep his gallery open all the time. Plenty of picture frames cheap.

H. I. Honeycutt took G. W. Kyle, of Thorsby, to the asylum at Tuscaloosa Saturday.

J. M. Maddox was in Clanton Monday.

Sam W. Collins was in Thorsby Monday attending the meeting of the Directors of the Farmers' Warehouse and Fertilizer Company, of whom he is one.

M. A. Killgore was in Clanton Tuesday. He says his wife has been in very good health for several weeks past. We hope he'll have a better report to make the next times he comes in.

W. R. Jackson, of Jemison, was in town Tuesday. He is agent for a mutual co-operative life insurance association, an organization that differs from the standard companies in this important respect, that over half the money you pay in don't go for "salary and suppers."

Henry Mahan, of Waddy, was in Clanton Tuesday, carrying around a badly scalded arm he got at his saw mill several days ago.

G. T. McElderry, of Talladega, arrived in Clanton Tuesday evening. He is looking after the new plant, but Judge Reynolds keeps pretty busy around there also. Well, that's the way to get things done.

A. D. Massey was in Clanton Wednesday.

J. D. Collins and son were in town Wednesday.

READ THIS.

Every man owes it to himself and family to master a trade or profession. Read the display advertisement of the six morse Schools of Telegraphy, in this issue and learn how easily a young man or lady may learn telegraphy and be assured a position.

Wiley Littlejohn and family are out in the country visiting his father.

L. B. Pounds is now tax assessor, he assuming office on August 1st, and A. C. Mims retires after a service of 9 years.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Thomas Edwards and Miss Annie Florence Peters. J. W. Wright and Miss Lizzie Hines.

COLORED.

King Johnson and Ophelia Pates.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The County Board of Education will meet at Clanton August 12th to dispose of all business pertaining to the schools or districts of Chilton county. tf

DEATH OF E. A. KNIGHT.

Mr. E. A. Knight died at his home near near Clanton Saturday (July 29) after a very short illness, in the 65th year of his age. The body was taken from his late residence Sunday morning by Clanton Masonic Lodge and carried to New Salem church, where Rev. T. J. Deason preached the funeral sermon, at the conclusion of which it was taken to the cemetery adjoining and laid in its final resting place with full Masonic honors in the presence of a very large assemblage of relatives and friends. The six pallbearers were members of Clanton Royal Arch Chapter, of which the deceased was a member. Bro. Knight, or Berry, as every one called him, had a host of friends and he will be sorely missed by them, for he was a good man and Mason, and did his duty as such to the full extent of his power. Many Masons from other lodges were in line with Clanton lodge helping render the last service to their brother Mason. He has been called off from labor here below to refreshment above in the Celestial Lodge, where peace and harmony forever reign. "Rest in peace, brother." We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved widow and children in this their great loss.

MONKEY MOTHER MUCH LIKE A HUMAN ONE.

Old Lady Was Astonished When the Simian Parent Did Just What She Would Have Done.

"Ma-ma! Mama!" is the most familiar cry at the New York Zoological Park these days. There are, counting all noses, upward of one hundred babies. These number the ducks, chickens, monkeys, wolves, buffalo and snakes. And the baby cry strangely resembles the human cry for "Ma-ma!" in some of these nurseries.

An old lady with the air of a martyr walked through the park yesterday with her daughter, who was evidently a college girl, for she wore "specs" and talked in a superior way about Darwin and Huxley. They entered the monkey house and there came across the babel of simian talk the clear, squeaky cry of the baby green monkey, born a weak ago.

"Hello!" said the old lady. "Whose baby is that crying? It is a shame to bring a baby into this place."

And she moved along the cages till she was in front of the cage of the green monkey. This simian seldom breeds in captivity and this green monkey is a curiosity. The baby awoke yesterday feeling ill. It clung close to its mother's arms and sobbed, while its little stomach was convulsed with spasms, which the kindly old lady outside the cage understood at once.

"The poor little thing! It has the stomach-ache!" she said. "I should rub its stomach if it was mine, now!"

And just then, to her utter astonishment, the wise-looking old mama green monkey took the baby on her knee and began gently to massage its stomach, now and then patting the little one on the back and then trotting it up and down. The old lady looked on in consternation.

"Daughter!" she exclaimed. "That's the humanest baby that I ever saw—and its mother is the humanest animal that ever was."—New York World.

WISE WORDS.

Separation come from setting up your fad as another man's faith.

The time best to attend to your neighbor's affairs is in your sleep.

Sentiment does not call for a roundabout method of being expressed.

A man is not doing his level best who is content to stay on the same level.

When a man falls in love with heaven he learns how he loves this earth.

The familiarity of some persons has an air of pleasant freshness and surprise.

Many a man thinks he is on the lookout for evil when he is only looking at evil.

There is always hope for a man so long as he can look at things with the eyes of a child.

The really busy man always has more time than the man who only thinks he is busy.

Strong language is not the most effective manner of showing either dislike or contempt.

The man who has only flowers in the garden of his life does not need to build a wall about it.

When God hangs His promises on the wall of the heart the devil's pictures have no attraction for the eye.

There is no creature on earth that might not look noble to use, had we love's insight.—Charles Carroll Everett.

We shall one day forget all about duty, and do everything from the love of the loveliness of it, the satisfaction of the rightness of it.—George MacDonald.

Strawberries Growing Beneath Snowbank

"I am going to tell you something that will sound almost like a fairy tale, but is every word true," said Miles Fisher. "I was up the Moffat road the other day viewing the magnificent scenery that delights the tourist all the way from here to Arrowhead, and I found an additional proof that the soil of Colorado will grow fruit in spite of everything.

"I got off the train above Tolland at a little station on the mountain side and found a snowbank, dirty and crusted over on the top. I scraped away the top of the snow to secure some fresh snow from the bottom of the pile, and in the handful of snow I caught up were a quantity of strawberries. The berries were just turning from green to red and were of good size. I believe no State in the Union can beat that. Strawberries growing under snowbanks is about the limit."—Denver Republican.

Satisfied With His Employers.

A Philadelphia clergyman, visiting an old schoolmate in Montana, was called upon to speak during revival services in a large camp of Swedish miners.

Looking straight at a powerful-looking man who sat in front of him, the minister asked:

"My friend, don't you want to worf for the Lord?"

The Swede thought a few seconds and replied slowly:

"No, I tank no, de Norden Pacific fallers is good enough for me."—Baltimore Sun.

TIMBER FOR SALE!

Over a hundred acres of Virgin Swamp timber for sale. Apply to T. J. Billingsley, Clanton, Ala. Route 3. tf.

Negro Kills Another.

Florence, Ala.—In a difficulty Friday at a negro barbecue at Leaven Grove church, this county, Henry Palmer was shot and instantly killed by Sam Harris, another negro. Harris was shooting at a negro named Windburn, when Palmer interfered in the interest of peace. The second shot missed Windburn and struck Palmer, with the above result.

ANGELICA WINE!

Pronounced equal to the best made in Europe, by good judges of wine. Price $2.00 per gallon, discount for larger quantity. Guaranteed to keep. Address

A. P. R. DAHL,
tf. Calera, Ala

If one may judge by the men's clothing advertisements, $65 a year would also pretty nearly dress Beau Brummel himself.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 12, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz.: Isaac B. Martin, Homestead Entry No. 32916, for the S. E. 1-4 of S. E. 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23 N. of R. 13 East.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Zack S. Avery, Clayton Glasscock, Hubbard Glasscock, Norman Bradford, all of Jemison, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

Notice No. 26043.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz: Dalee Millar, Homestead Entry No. 35550, for the W. 1-2 of N. E. 1-4, E. 1-2 of N. W. 1-4, Section 10, Tp. 23 N. of R. 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Rebecca J. Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; C. Buck Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; James Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala., Thomas Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

WANTED!

A live agent in every beat in Chilton county to write life insurance for the Mutual Benefit Association of Georgia. Cheapest insurance on earth. Good pay to hustlers. Write

W. R. Jackson,
Division Agent,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

5000 TELEGRAPHERS NEEDED

Annually to fill the new positions created by Railroad and Telegraph Companies. We want YOUNG MEN and LADIES of good habits, to

LEARN TELEGRAPHY AND R. R. ACCOUNTING

We furnish 75 per cent. of the Operators and Station Agents in America. Our six schools are the largest exclusive telegraph schools IN THE WORLD. Established 20 years and endorsed by all leading Railway Officials.

We execute a $500 Bond to every student to furnish him or her a position paying from $40 to $60 a month in States east of the Rocky Mountains, or from $75 to $100 a month in States west of the Rockies, IMMEDIATELY UPON GRADUATION.

Students can enter at any time. No vacations. For all particulars regarding any of our Schools write direct to our executive office at Cincinnati, O. Catalogue free.

The Morse School of Telegraphy

Cincinnati, Ohio. Buffalo, N. Y.
Atlanta, Ga. LaCrosse, Wis.
Texarkana, Tex. San Francisco, Cal.

8-3-05-tf

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

THE BIG STORE,

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alabama

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.,

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers.
County and Office Supplies a Specialty.

Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave. BIRMINGHAM, ALA

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association

of Alabama.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3rd, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' Dwellings, Outbuildings and Contents and Live Stock against Loss by Fire, Wind and Lightning. The Cheapest, Safest and Most Sensible Method of Insurance Known to Man.

Average Yearly Cost for Four Years 56-100 of 1 percent.

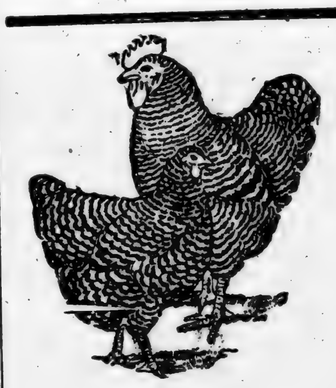
Full particulars furnished upon application to
WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

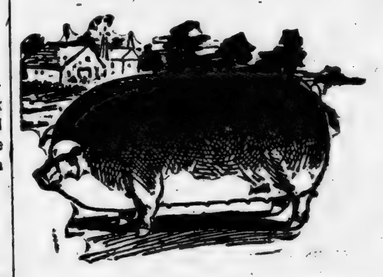


WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

Gelder's Restaurant,

Good Meals at Reasonable Prices.

110 North 20th Street,
BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND FERTILIZERS

FOR SALE.

Troy Special & Mule Brand "Are the Best on Earth."

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, Alabama.

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER.

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Alabama.

TORTURING HUMORS

Instantly Relieved and Speedily Cured by Baths with

CUTICURA

Soap to cleanse the skin, gentle applications of Cuticura Ointment to soothe and heal, and mild doses of Cuticura Pills to cool the blood. A single Set, costing but One Dollar often cures.

Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug and Chem. Corp., Boston, Sole Props.

Send for "The Great Humor Cure." Mailed Free.

WANTED—Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not living with any tribe, (2) of men who were drafted in Kentucky, (3) of mothers of soldiers who have been denied pension on account of their marriages, (4) of men who served in the Federal army, or (5) the nearest kin of such soldiers or sailors, now deceased.
NATHAN BICKFORD, Attorney, Washington, D. C.

The Durability of Banknotes.

That Uncle Sam's notes stand a great deal of rough and careless handling is a fact that impresses itself upon any one who has ever chanced to note the manner in which the average cashier pulls and jerks the bills before he pushes them through the window to the waiting patron. A single treasury note measures 3 1-8 inches in width and 7 1-4 inches in length. It will sustain without breaking lengthwise a weight of forty-one pounds; crosswise, a weight of ninety-one pounds. The notes run four to a sheet, a sheet being 8 1-4 inches by 13 1-2 inches long. One of these sheets lengthwise will suspend 108 pounds, and crosswise 177 pounds. It will be observed that a single note is capable of sustaining, crosswise, a weight of ninety-one pounds, which is twice the amount by nine pounds of the weight the note can sustain lengthwise, while in the case of the sheet the crosswise sheet lacks thirty-nine pounds of double the sustaining power of the lengthwise sheet.

Durability of Woods.

Some interesting experiments have been made to ascertain which wood lasts the longest. It was found that birch and aspen decayed in three years, maple and red beech in five years and elm and ash in seven years. Oak, Scottish fir and Weymouth pine decayed to the depth of half an inch in seven years; larch and juniper were uninjured at the end of seven years.

EVER TREAT YOU SO?

Coffee Acts the Jonah and Will Come Up

A clergyman who pursues his noble calling in a country parish in Iowa tells of his coffee experience:

"My wife and I used coffee regularly for breakfast, frequently for dinner and occasionally for supper—always the very best quality—package coffee never could find a place on our table.

"In the spring of 1896 my wife was taken with violent vomiting, which we had great difficulty in stopping.

"It seemed to come from coffee drinking, but we could not decide.

"In the following July, however, she was attacked a second time by the vomiting. I was away from home filling an appointment at the time, and on my return I found her very low; she had literally vomited herself almost to death, and it took some days to quiet the trouble and restore her stomach.

"I had also experienced the same trouble, but not so violently, and had relieved it each time by a resort to medicine.

"But my wife's second attack satisfied me that the use of coffee was at the bottom of our troubles, and so we stopped it forthwith and took on Postum Food Coffee. The old symptoms of disease disappeared, and during the 9 years that we have been using Postum instead of coffee we have never had a recurrence of the vomiting. We never weary of Postum, to which we know we owe our good health. This is a simple statement of facts." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each pkg.

MISS ELLA OFF, Indianapolis, Ind.

SUFFERED FOR MONTHS.

Pe-ru-na, the Remedy That Cured

Miss Ella Off, 1127 Linden St., Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I suffered with a run down constitution for several months, and feared that I would have to give up my work.

"On seeking the advice of a physician, he prescribed a tonic. I found, however, that it did me no good. On seeking the advice of our druggist, he asked me to try Peruna. In a few weeks I began to feel and act like a different person. My appetite increased. I did not have that worn-out feeling, and I could sleep splendidly. In a couple of months I was entirely recovered. I thank you for what your medicine has done for me."—Ella Off.

Write Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio, for free medical advice. All correspondence is held strictly confidential.

Struck the Sultan's Fancy.

The Sultan of Turkey recently granted an audience to Senator Bacon, of Georgia, and was so charmed with that genial American citizen that he incontinently conferred upon him the Grand Cordon of the Chefecat and gave Mrs. Bacon a lot of porcelain manufactured in the imperial potteries.

Absurd Theory.

An American professor has lately caused some excitement by proclaiming his opinion that the Garden of Eden was situated somewhere near the North pole.

THE PLAYWRIGHT-STAR.

Odette Tyler, Famous Actress, Values Doan's Kidney Pills.

Miss Odette Tyler is not only one of the best known dramatic stars in America, but has written and produced a successful play of her own. Miss Tyler has written the following grateful note, expressing her appreciation of Doan's Kidney Pills:

Odette Tyler

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—My experience with your valuable remedy has been equally gratifying to both myself and friends.

(Signed) ODETTE TYLER.

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents per box.

Lawyers' Fees.

The vast majority of lawyers do no better than make a fair living, and, if on average could be made, it would be found that a large number must earn ridiculously small sums. An estimate recently made showing that there are and five lawyers in New York who make $100,000 a year, not ten who make $75,000, not fifteen who make $50,000, and not twenty-five who make $25,000, is probably not far wrong. "Above all things," a successful lawyer remarked not long ago, "never take a lawyer's word about his salary. He doesn't mean to prevaricate, but the appearance of prosperity is so large a part of his capital that 'bluffing' about his income is a natural habit. I can tell you what I make in a year, but I shouldn't expect you to believe it, and I shouldn't wish you to believe it, because it would probably be unconsciously exaggerated."

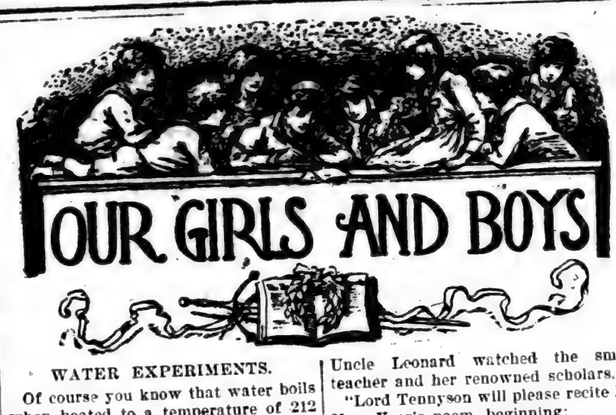
Referred to Roosevelt.

England has an anti-baby league. They propose that the government shall take active steps to decrease the birth rate, and that a penalty be inflicted on those who "overburden society with more than their fair share of offspring."

Cornstalk Paper.

Paper made from constalks is the latest outcome of American ingenuity. Such paper, it is stated, can be produced at one-third the cost of that from wood fiber and rags.

M. Combes, who until a short time ago was prime minister of France, is a physician. Now that the worries of the premiership no longer trouble him he is practicing medicine in his native village.



OUR GIRLS AND BOYS

WATER EXPERIMENTS.

Of course you know that water boils when heated to a temperature of 212 degrees. No matter how much heat you may apply to it then, the temperature will not be raised, but the water will only be the more rapidly turned into steam, for that is what boiling does.

There is a way, however, in which you may raise the temperature of water above 212 degrees, though most persons would tell you that it is impossible. To make the test and prove it, you will need a small chemical thermometer, that is, one without a tin case. These are sold at a moderate price in the stores, or, if you prefer, you can convert an ordinary thermometer into a chemical one by carefully scratching the divisions of the scale on the glass tube with a file, and then removing it from the tin case. If you will fit it in a tin case, so that it will float in the water without touching the bottom or the side of the vessel, it will be complete, like those that are used for taking the temperature of baths.

When you have your thermometer, boil some water for fifteen minutes, and then let it stand until it cools. Then keeping it perfectly still, heat it again, and you will find that the temperature will go a few degrees higher than 212, without causing the water to boil.

If you will now drop some piece of metal into the water, it will at once begin to boil. The explanation of this is that the air is expelled from the water when it boils, and the water with air in it boils more quickly than water without air in it, so that, at the second boiling, a higher temperature is reached before boiling begins. When you drop the scraps of metal into the water they carry air with them; besides, they reduce the temperature of the water to the boiling point.

Another experiment may be made by putting some salt or sugar into water, and then boiling it; you will find that it will take a higher temperature than pure water, for the reason that some heat is required to separate the salt or sugar from the water before the latter can be converted into steam. You may in this way prove for yourself the degree of heat for boiling various substances.

Still another interesting experiment consists in boiling some water in a glass flask; then, while it is boiling, cork it tightly, and remove it from the flame. When it stops boiling in the flask, pour some cold water over the outside, and it will begin to boil again. Or plunge the flask into cold water and the same thing will happen. You may be able to do this several times with the same flask. The explanation is that in a corked flask of boiling water there is some steam above the surface of the water, and the application of cold water causes this steam to condense, which at once removes some of the pressure from the surface, causing it to boil, as the bubbles of steam can then escape.

These experiments are all interesting and instructive.—New York Evening Mail.

ROSETTA POPE'S SCHOOL.

"What are you doing?"

It was Rosetta's uncle who asked the question.

Rosetta looked up with a little laugh.

"I'm playing school," she said.

Uncle Leonard came near, and gazed at her row of pupils, first in wonder, then with an amused smile.

"You have some very famous scholars," he observed.

A dozen or more "Author" cards were ranged on chairs before her, and each card pictured the face of a man or a woman prominent in literature.

"Is Tennyson at the head or the foot of the class?" he inquired, his eyes twinkling.

"Oh, at the head!" Rosetta answered. "I don't know what other people think, but I rank them first just as I like them, and then if they don't recite well they have to go down."

"Pray what do they recite?" her uncle asked. "Spelling and geography?"

"Of course not! They recite from their own works—here are the lessons!" and she laid her hand on a big pile of books at her right.

"Do you admit visitors?"

"Oh, yes, sir! Mamma often comes in. That's the visitor's seat," pointing to great armchair.

So from the other side of the room Uncle Leonard watched the small teacher and her renowned scholars.

"Lord Tennyson will please recite his New Year's poem, beginning:

"'Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky.'"

Whereupon Rosetta selected a book from the pile, and keeping her finger in the place, recited the lines with very little hesitation.

"Well done!" praised her uncle.

"Thank you," said Rosetta, blushing.

The next card bore the face of Alexander Pope, and the teacher said:

"Mr. Pope, you may recite two lines from your "Essay on Man," and again Rosetta spoke for her pupil:

"'Honor and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honor lies.'"

Then she turned to her uncle with a smile.

"I can't understand much of his," she explained; "but seeing our names are the same, I thought I'd have to put him in somewhere, and he's learned those lines so well, he stays up near the head."

Uncle Leonard burst out laughing, but was checked by Rosetta's warning finger.

"Mr. Cowper, please give us the first and last verses of 'John Gilpin.'"

Rosetta began bravely enough:

"'John Gilpin was a citizen
Of credit and renown;
A—'"

Silently she puckered her forehead, and then said, in a voice supposed to be stern:

"Mr. Cowper, you may go to the foot!" adding to her uncle, "I never can remember that, but I like it."

"And how often do you have this sort of thing?" asked Uncle Leonard.

"Oh, whenever I get lonesome. I guess I'd rather have you talk to me now," and with one sweep of the hand she gathered her famous pupils into a pack, and tossed it on the table.

"Tell me about Cousin Maud, please!" she coaxed.

"One thing about her is that she is lonely most of the time, we live so far from neighbors. I think I'll buy a set of 'Authors' on my way home, and tell her about this school of yours."

"Oh, do!" cried Rosetta. "And then when she comes down here next summer we can play it together. Mamma likes it, because she says it teaches me so much.'

"I should say so! I shall have to coach Maud at first; she doesn't know one author from another."

"Neither did I till I learned," said Rosetta.—Emma C. Dowd, in Youth's Companion.

WHAT THE TOWEL SAID.

The front door stood open and through it came a little breeze, a sweet breath of honeysuckle and clover. It brought the sound of merry voices, for school was out and the little folks were on their way home.

Dick came rushing in and threw his arms about his mother as he met her in the hall.

"Now, run up and wash your hands, Dickie, boy," said mother, "and brush your hair."

"Oh, why do I have to? I'm clean enough," said Dick, crossly, looking at his hands.

Mother caught them as he tried to put them behind his back, and Dick couldn't help laughing as she sang:

"Oh, where are the ten little, clean little men,
To lunch with me to-day?"

"I really didn't know they were so dirty, mother," Dick said, when he came down stairs again. "They are all gentlemen, though, and have put on their clean coats to take lunch with the ladies."

Mother and Doitie laughed, and so did little Madge.

When mother tucked Dick in bed that night she said:

"Dick, I have given you a clean towel, and please don't let your little men leave any advertisement on this one."

"Why, mother, what do you mean? How can they? What kind of an advertisement?"

"Well," explained mother, "after you had dressed for dinner to-day I saw something that wasn't English on your towel, and yet I could read it very plainly. It said, 'Dick's hands are clean; I did it.' I'll bring it in and see if you don't think that is what it says."

Dick thought very hard, and when mother came back holding up the towel for him to see, a little smile came creeping out of the corners of his mouth, for one end of the towel was very dirty.

"Mother, dear," exclaimed Dick, "my little men made a mistake and put their coats in the wrong place when they were coming to dinner with you. I'll see to it that they don't do it again." And he snuggled down into the pillow with a happy little chuckle as mother kissed him good night.—Eleanor Sutphen, in The Sunbeam.

Squirrels Are Fast Swimmers.

Though they do not readily enter water, but only when put to it from necessity, the squirrel and the rabbit are among the fastest swimmers of all land animals.

FARM AND GARDEN

CLOVER SILAGE.

I am thinking of filling a silo with clover, but have not had much experience in this section with clover as silage. Will you please give me some information about it, how to handle and silo it. E. W. Sidling.

Two or three of our correspondents say they have siloed clover in the usual way, cutting it as they cut corn with the silage cutter. They began cutting when the clover was in full bloom and just before hardening. The silage fed out well and kept in fine condition and was very satisfactory. The following is the experience of Mr. Richard Attridge, of East Flamboro, Ontario, Canada, given at a recent Farmers Institute. He said:

"Early last summer I was convinced that the season was not likely to be favorable to the growth of corn, and I made up my mind to use clover as a substitute for filling my silo. I made what inquires I could, but I was unable to find anyone who could direct me. Accordingly, I made up my mind to do a little experimenting in this direction. I waited till the clover was in full bloom—till what some would consider the earliest cutting time, but when others would believe was to early to begin the clover harvest. I engaged men and teams as I would for filling with corn, and on the day appointed waited till the dew was off the hay before starting the mowing machine. However, just about noon a heavy shower of rain came on, and nothing was done till after dinner. The first clover put into the silo was, therefore, quite wet. This part of the silage when I began using was quite black and useless; indeed, it was simply manure. The next few loads of clover were much dryer, and this turned out to be very good ensilage. In the meanwhile the sun and wind had thoroughly dried the standing clover. This was cut and hauled at once to the silo. The ensilage resulting from this proved to be thoroughly sweet and good, and desirable in every particular, having all the good points of good corn ensilage. The cattle eat it greedily, thrive well upon it, and it does not taint the cow's milk. I may say that I followed the usual methods of filling a silo of corn. I cut it the usual length, and had it well tramped in the silo."—Indiana Farmer.

HANDLING COLTS.

In an address to the Canadian Horse Breeders, Mr. Robt. Ness makes the following suggestions on the subject of handling colts:

I have found in my experience to halter a colt as soon as possible is the easiest way to get it under control. I think by haltering it when a few days old and getting it as soon as possible in a closed place to begin to take something more than its mother's milk, by the time you wean it it will take almost anything, and you will have no trouble when you wean it.

The weaning of a foal should be done gradually, as it is well to have the foal taught to eat all sorts of food before removing it from the dam, and it should be handled well and carefully from its birth. If such be carried out properly when weaning time has come, which should be at five or six months, confine the foal in a loose box in which there is nothing to get entangled amongest, and feed it on soft feed, which you have already taught it to eat. It is much better to separate them entirely. In the meantime the dam's diet should consist of dry food, and it is well to put her to work. The milk should be removed, but not milked dry every time. When dry food and work the secretion of milk will soon cease. From this time until the foal becomes a yearling it should be well fed, as a stunted foal never matures properly, and more colts are injured during the first six months by too scanty a supply of food than by the other extreme. As soon as the foal is properly weaned it should have the run of a good pasture, as there is no food better than grass, no medicine as good as exercise, fresh air and sunlight.

GOOD WORK IN HAY TIME.

The mower, tedder, hay loader and all implements used in making hay should have been made ready before harvest time. All extra help needed should be engaged so that work can be rapidly pushed along. Having all things ready you can commence work with much encouragement.

Hired help is scarce at this time of the year, so do not depend on hired help alone. The farmer who has many acres of grass to cut should have the following implements: Mower, tedder, rake, loader and hay fork or slings. This outfit will enable the farmer to make a vast amount of hay in a short space of time and much better hay also. The tedder is a most valuable implement, as it will kick up acres of grass in a very short time, which will dry much faster than it otherwise would.

First clear your meadow of all stumps, stone and sprouts, or you may break a sickle the first round you undertake, and you will be out one day at least. Have your mower in good running order, with sickle ground very sharp when needed. See that your tedder is all right, as you cannot well do without it; have your rake in good working order.

So many farmers only mow a small patch at a time then stop to [illegible] up, making the work progress slowly. We like to cut several at a time, if weather is favorable with a good degree of push stay on job until it is put into the barn. this is being put up [illegible] be kept going long enough to another field ready by the time first one is finished.—American Cultivator.

TESTING CREAM.

Bulletin No. [illegible] sity Experiment S[illegible] E. Van Norman, on [illegible] Ripeness of Cream [illegible] a very interesting one, [illegible] by writing the Uni[illegible] Indiana. The method of this very simple and w[illegible] interesting to dairy[illegible] Norman in the [illegible] test:

"This test is [illegible] creamery conditions. [illegible] is no reason why the [illegible] making a considera[illegible] ter, sufficient to [illegible] should not become [illegible] test even though he may [illegible] regularly. If he is supplying a [illegible] trade at a satisfactory price [illegible] desirable to use every means to [illegible] uniformity of product.

During the ripening of cream milk sugar in it is converted into lactic acid by bacteria. The measurement of the amount of acid developed during the ripening is the nearest approach we have to a measure of the ripeness of the cream. For example, pose Mann's acid test and Farrington's alkali test have been used with marked success. Where either of these tests are regularly used, the almost universal experience is that the quality of the butter runs more uniform in form, and loss of fat in the buttermilk is less than where the maker depends on his nose and his taste to determine the ripeness of the cream.

We have used in the Dairy School and the Station laboratory at Purdue for a year and a half past, a modification of the tests on the market, which has simplified the work and contributed to accuracy of results.—Indiana Farmer.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Roots are very valuable in winter for feed to sheep, hogs, cows and horses and poultry. They carry the summer's succulence into winter, making more appetizing and beneficial the feeds of that season. Food free from dirt fails to perform its function for the best of proper digestion and assimilation. Roots fed in moderate quantities during winter will always help to correct disorders. If fed to cows or horses they should be pulped or sliced thinly to prevent danger of choking of animals.

Sand or coarse gravel is also necessary to furnish poultry during winter, in order to maintain their health and thriftiness. In fact they cannot digest and assimilate their food without the aid of the former. From experience I have found that a large number of deaths among young fowls in winter are directly due to the [illegible] of furnishing them with enough coarse sand and gravel at a time of the year when they have to be confined in the house on account of severe weather.—Lewis Olsen in the Epitomist.

A SEED SOWER.

A good method of sowing such seeds as turnips, in the absence of a drill, is to procure a half pint bottle with a long neck, and to insert a quill in the cork, preferably from a hen feather. In sowing the seed, tip the bottle to the desired distance for each plant, and let three or four seed only fall at a time. If they germinate they should be thinned out to one plant at a place.—Exchange in the Epitomist.

One Too Many.

Senator Hans[illegible] of North Dakota, has long been the [illegible] country newspapers. [illegible] other duties have prevented [illegible] it much attention also [illegible] ed on divers [illegible] [illegible] "I've had some [illegible] place, too," the Senator [illegible] to a friend; "men [illegible] an important [illegible] Then I've had [illegible] gether make good [illegible] particular, a man named [illegible] Linkwood was more [illegible] simplicity. He owned [illegible] 'equine horse,' [illegible] tramp killed in [illegible] said that the unfortunate [illegible] tained a fracture [illegible] umn.' Another of his [illegible] was 'tripping the light [illegible] toe."

"You probably didn't [illegible] long?" suggested the friend.

"Oh, I didn't mind these [illegible] But when the daughter of [illegible] citizen was married and [illegible] the bridal procession [illegible] down the aisle to the [illegible] strains of Mendel[illegible] & Son's march,' I decided that we had [illegible] the parting of the ways."—Times.

Dowie has paid $400,000 [illegible] and has been discharged [illegible] ruptcy.

Last year 37,415 emigrants [illegible] at Irish ports, but 51[illegible] not of Irish birth.

The Czar has [illegible] scripts lately.

THE PULPIT

QUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. CHARLES G. AMES.

The Glory of Simple Rectitude

[illegible], Mass.—The following helpful [illegible] was delivered Sunday by the Charles G. Ames. It is entitled Glory of Simple Rectitude," and preached from the text, "Blessed they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." St. v, 6.

"Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." The man who says has a claim on the reverent and kind attention of all mankind. He is a voice to the universal reason and conscience; he inspires the highest and holiest hope. Heaven and earth may pass away, but the words that live are themselves immortal. Like the utterances of the sibyl they are simple, unadorned, unperfumed, yet reaching through the ages, because true.

This is one sign of truth. It affects us as a part of the permanent order of things; it is all of one stuff with the Word and with our own proper nature. It has the ring of reality. It is sunlight it carries its own evidence; and to the same mind it recommends itself as sunlight does to the seeing eye; but it is concealed from the grossness by its own simplicity and transparency. Who realizes the [illegible] and miracle of the common day? The same war we have become too familiar with some of the most obvious and important aspects of spiritual truth. These Beatitudes of Jesus seem to be worn smooth. We have heard them from our intimacy, their truth and beauty appeal to unrespondent hearts.

If we could have stood, one day long ago among the Syrian peasants, on the side of a hill in Galilee, and listened to these sayings as they fell fresh and new cut as newly minted gold from the living lips of the new prophet, perhaps we, too, should have been astonished at the doctrine," we should have "wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth." It does not seem as if Nature herself had at last found a voice, and as if a voice were speaking straight to the children, saying clearly and cheerfully, soberly and solemnly, what all vaguely think or feel, but can never put into words?

If these Beatitudes are remarkable for what they do not say. The sense of Jesus seldom run in the grooves of old commonplace. He does not sit there, like the scribe of the rogue, complacently reciting in us that make men sleepy, the virtue and piety of a dead ancestry. It were enough to have Abraham as a father and Moses for a lawgiver. He pronounces no blessing on [illegible] respectability, decorous conformity, doctrinal soundness, loyalty to standard, fidelity to the traditions, even diligence to the routine of observance and devotion. Any priest in his audience must have felt that a blessing was put upon his great office, as the speaker had forgotten to do it honor. The temple, the altar, and the sacred books are all mentioned with respect, yet they somehow fall into the background. Humanity is brought prominently fronting Divinity, as if the human heart might see God and the inner life might know the cause of their unrest.

Any man in that company must have hung his head as the rebuke came home to him. Complacent worldly men proud of their estates or their learning doubtless stood there, resenting that He would confirm the world's vulgar judgment which says, blessed are the prosperous, the popular, the cultivated and the comfortable." But no. The lips that opened in blessing made them shrink as if He had uttered a curse. Every world fell with a blow on their idols. The virtues which had strutted so proudly before God and man began to unmask their ugly vices as He went on to say: "Blessed are the men of humble mind. Blessed are the men of good will, the merciful, the pure in heart. Yea, blessed are they that hunger and thirst for righteousness, so that for the sake of being right they dare and bear all losses and pains, and willingly let their names be cast out as evil."

No comfort here for the self-righteous, the self-satisfied, the self-willed, the self-seeking. But scattered through the company were men and women who felt their emptiness and poverty, who took no credit for their ancestry, their accomplishments or their social standing, who hardly dared so much as to lift up their eyes to heaven. Yet, as they listened all the world above them, and within, seemed to change. The awful Jehovah, whom they had thought of as throned afar in threatening majesty, seemed a smiling Father who wished His children to be like Him and to be as perfect as Him. They drew in deeper draughts of the country air; their very emptiness seemed to bake so much more room for God and goodness. Their cry of need changed into childlike trust.

He was indeed a messenger of glad tidings. Here was a doctrine worthy of man as it was worthy of God.

And does not all the best thought of our own time still travel in the same way? Has the weary search of mankind through the ages found anything better than a righteousness which is rooted in sonship to the Highest, and which blossoms into service to the lowest? Has not our clearer conception of the divine ever been with an expansion and idealization of the highest qualities of the human? The one fact which we most certainly know is our own existence; and that fact, if we look deep enough and honestly enough, we shall find the revelation and witness of God. For when a man rightly reverenced the decrees of conscience, he has heard the Voice; when he has really made acquaintance with his own nature, he has seen the [illegible]

There are times when I feel entirely [illegible] with this inward proof of [illegible] There are high moments [illegible] there is need of no other evidence of God than the fact that I am [illegible] And there are times when the [illegible] of a good man, or something seen [illegible] face of a child, or some style [illegible] that affects me like a revelation [illegible] with it conviction and assurance. Along [illegible] always the per[illegible] what I am ma[illegible] out of the s[illegible] plainly that t[illegible] I, too, should [illegible] the reproof co[illegible] and along wi[illegible] consness com[illegible] hunger shall [illegible]

To suppose [illegible] the moral cha[illegible] creatures is [illegible] if not indiffer[illegible] vided all nee[illegible] must have g[illegible] to find the r[illegible] walk in that[illegible] were indiffer[illegible] be so; for ou[illegible] found in see[illegible] our own hei[illegible] rightness of [illegible] beings and [illegible] of the univer[illegible] place. Ever[illegible] worth desiri[illegible] ter, in being [illegible]

The world [illegible] comes said t[illegible] of us depend[illegible] we take it [illegible] we can hav[illegible]

"When th[illegible] True and [illegible] Then all [illegible] Upspring [illegible]

A rough [illegible] meeting ho[illegible] "It was a [illegible] the snow la[illegible] the Lord [illegible] Hitchcock [illegible] the leaders [illegible] Is there o[illegible] report to [illegible] happy co[illegible] at some t[illegible] the great [illegible] irradiated [illegible] shone from [illegible]

If a man [illegible] and still [illegible] wait for [illegible] concern to [illegible] he knows [illegible] shiper. B[illegible] gers and [illegible] already he[illegible] of all tr[illegible] God need [illegible] about the [illegible] believers, [illegible] honesty [illegible] and the [illegible]

Once a [illegible] and all [illegible] cipline [illegible] is to hel[illegible] than the [illegible] and he [illegible] practices [illegible] moving, [illegible] perfect [illegible]

Here a[illegible] cure, for [illegible] dissatisfa[illegible] two mas[illegible] heartily [illegible] longer de[illegible] ance. He [illegible] to occupy [illegible] doing wh[illegible] Having [illegible] and lead[illegible] step on[illegible] next ca[illegible] timally [illegible] hearted [illegible] by the [illegible] more a [illegible] Father's [illegible]

Here [illegible] over our [illegible] shall we [illegible] glory of [illegible] again re[illegible] ago, and [illegible] of most [illegible] whose d[illegible] a long c[illegible] one of l[illegible] is gone. [illegible] is heavy [illegible] reply I [illegible] for just [illegible] sure of [illegible] would [illegible] might c[illegible] hopes in [illegible] not ask [illegible] yourself [illegible] no duty [illegible] in giving [illegible] He has [illegible] in all t[illegible] ter she [illegible] matter [illegible] that sh[illegible] in it st[illegible] a burde[illegible] patience [illegible] the end.

There [illegible] He who [illegible] not lov[illegible] gers for [illegible] he long [illegible] wrong. [illegible] sweeten [illegible] that ri[illegible] of bel[illegible] the go[illegible] kindled [illegible] flamed [illegible] and ev[illegible] vigor [illegible] and w[illegible] that c[illegible] by it. [illegible] if it [illegible] toward [illegible] God. [illegible] all bel[illegible] and co[illegible] ing of [illegible] is righ[illegible] righte[illegible] the [illegible] come. [illegible] on ear[illegible]

"[illegible]
Flor[illegible] could [illegible]
it wo[illegible]
very [illegible]
God [illegible] paths [illegible] has d[illegible]
you a[illegible] done [illegible] hard. [illegible]
never [illegible]

To [illegible]
life, [illegible]
step [illegible]
in g[illegible] quiet [illegible] trust [illegible] is lo[illegible]
The [illegible]
can [illegible] late.[illegible]

GARDEN

patch at a time then stop to c up, making the work progress slowly. We like to cut several at a time, if weather is favorable with a good degree of push stay pon until it is put into the barn.
this is being put up the mower be kept going long enough to another field ready by the th first one is finished.—American Agriculturist.

TESTING CREAM.

Bulletin No. 104, of Purdue U ue Experiment Station, by Pr
C. Van Norman, on an "Alkali T Properties of Cream," just publish a very interesting one, and may be worthy the Universities at Lafa Indiana. The method of this t easy, simple and will be found interesting to dairymen. Prof.
Norman in the bulletin says o test:

"This test is particularly adap ed to ... conditions. However, is no reason why the dairyman making a considerable amount o cream sufficient to justify the should not become familiar wit it, even though he may not it regularly. If he is supplying a c cream at a satisfactory price desirable to use every means to uniformity of product.

During the ripening of crea milk sugar in it is converted int lic acid by bacteria. The me ment of the amount of acid dev during the ripening is the neare proach we have to a measure ripeness of the cream. For th pose Mann's acid test and F ton's alkali test have been used marked success. Where either these tests are regularly used, the almost universal experience the quality of the butter runs mo form, and loss of fat in the butt is less than where the maker de on his nose and his taste to dete
the ripeness of the cream.

We have used in the Dairy and the Station laboratory at P for a year and a half past, a modification of the tests on th ket, which has simplified the wo contributed to accuracy of result diana Farmer.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

'Roots are very valuable in wi feed to sheep, hogs, cows and horses and poultry. They carry mer's succulence into winter, more appetizing and beneficial t feeds of that season. Food freq fails to perform its function fo of proper digestion and assimi
Roots fed in moderate quanti winter will always help to corre
If fed to cows or horses they sho pulped or sliced thinly to prev danger of choking of animals.

Sand or coarse gravel is abs necessary to furnish poultry w winter, in order to maintain health and thriftiness. In fact cannot digest and assimilate without the aid of the former.
experience I have found that number of deaths among pou winter are directly due to the of furnishing them with enough sand and gravel at a time of th when they have to be confined house on account of severe er.—Lewis Olsen in the Epito

A SEED SOWER.

A good method of sowing suc as turnips, in the absence of a to procure a half pint bottle neck, and to insert a quill in th preferably from a hen feather.
sowing the seed, tip the bottle desired distance for each pla three or four seed will fall may germinate they should be to one plant at a place.—Eunice in the Epitomist.

One Too Many.

Senator Hanscomb, of Nor kota, has long been the own country newspaper. Of late editorial duties have prevented hi from paying attention and he has sent a letter of inquiry to one the editor's itinerant journali
"I've had some good men purpose," the Senator once o to a friend; "men capable of an important place on a city
Then I've had some who did n
Then I've had some who did n seem to make good. I remember particular, a man named Lin Linswood was never satisfie simplicity. He would refer 'equine horse,' and in the ca camp killed in a railroad a said that the unfortunate m caused a ripple of the 'sm ranch.' Another of his pet exp was trapping the light, bo low.

"You probably didn't kee long," suggested the friend.

Oh, I didn't mind these e
But when the daughter of a citizen was married and he the bridal procession 'pro down the aisle to the strains of Mendel & Son's march,' I decided that we had the parting of the ways."—
Times.

Dowie has paid $400,000 and has been discharged fro ruptcy.

Last year 37,415 emigrants at Irish ports, but 515 of th not of Irish birth.

The Czar has issued scripts lately.

THE PULPIT

RECENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. CHARLES G. AMES.

The Glory of Simple Rectitude

Boston, Mass.—The following helpful was delivered Sunday by the Charles G. Ames. It is entitled Glory of Simple Rectitude," and scribed from the text, "Blessed that hunger and thirst after ousness, for they shall be filled."
6.

Blessed are they that hunger and after righteousness, for they be filled." The man who says a matter on the reverent and attention of all mankind. He more to the universal reason conscience; he inspires the highest of hope. Heaven and earth pass away, but the words that We are themselves immortal.
the utterances of the sibyl they simple, unadorned, unperfumed, ring through the ages, because one sign of truth. It affects part of the permanent order it, and of one stuff with and with our own proper
It has the ring of reality.
taught it carries its own evi-and to the sane mind it rec-itself as sunlight does to the but it is concealed from by its own simplicity
Who realizes this marvel of the common day?
we have become too
some of the most oband important aspects of spirit-
These Beatitudes of Jesus to be worn smooth. We have from our intimacy: their and piercing appeal to unrespond-

I have stood, one day long Syrian peasants, on the in Galilee, and listened as they fell fresh and as newly minted gold from lips of the new prophet, we, too, should have been at the doctrine," we should at the gracious words out of His mouth," as if Nature herself found a voice, and as if were speaking straight to clearly and cheer-solemnly, what all or feel, but can words?
Beatitudes are remarkable do not say. The sen-seldom run in the commonplace. He does like the scribe of the recently reciting, in men sleepy, the vira dead ancestry, to have Abraham and Moses for a law-no blessing on ability, decorous con-soundness, loyalty to
to the traditions,
to the routine of oband devotion. Any priest in must have felt that a upon his great office, as had forgotten to do it
The temple, the altar, and the are all mentioned with they somehow fall into Humanity is brought Divinity, as if the could see God and the im-know the cause of their man in that company must his head as the rebuke Complacent world-of their estates or doubtless stood there,

He would confirm the judgment which says, prosperous, the popucultivated and the comfort-But no. The lips that opened made them shrink as if He a curse. Every world fell on their idols. The vir-had strutted so proudly and man began to unmask
as He went on to say:
are the men of humble mind, of good will, the merciful, the heart. Yea, blessed are they and thirst for righteous-for the sake of being and bear all losses willingly let their cast out as evil."
here for the self-right-self satisfied, the self-willed,
But scattered through were men and women
emptiness and poverty,
for their ancestry.
or their social dared so much as eyes to heaven. Yet, as all the world above seemed to change.
whom they had afar in threat-seemed a smiling
His children to be as perfect as Him-in deeper draughts their very emptiness so much more room
Their cry of into childlike stood a messenger of Here was a doctrine as it was worthy of not all the best own time still travel

the weary search of the ages found any-than a righteousness in sonship to the blossoms into ser-
Has not our clearthe divine ever been and idealization of the the human? The one most certainly know sentence; and that fact, if enough and honestly find the revelation
God. For when a man experienced the decrees of has heard the Voice;
by made acquaintance own nature, he has seen the

when I feel entirely inward proof of are high moments of no other evithan the fact that I am are times when the man, or something seen child, or some stir me like a footstep conviction and assurance. Along with this feeling comes always the perception that goodness is what I am made for. Not even a voice out of the sky could tell me more plainly that the Holy Being wills that I, too, should be holy. Along with the reproof comes the encouragement, and along with the hunger for righteousness comes the promise that the hunger shall be satisfied.

To suppose the Creator indifferent to the moral character and welfare of His creatures is essential atheism; but, if not indifferent, He must have provided all needed helps to virtue. He must have given His creatures light to find the right way and strength to walk in that way. But, even if He were indifferent, we cannot afford to be so; for our highest interest is to be found in seeking the completeness of our own being in and the harmony or rightness of our relations with all other beings and with the laws and forces of the universe in which we find our place. Everything worth having or worth desiring is involved in character, in being simply and soundly right.

The world comes right when the man comes right. What it is to each one of us depends on what we are and how we take it. We make our own hells, we can make our own heavens.

"When the soul to sin hath died,
True and beautiful and sound
Then all earth is sanctified.
Upsprings paradise around."

A rough-cast man rose in a country meeting-house to tell his experience: "It was in the north country, when the snow lay deep on the ground, that the Lord God found out Jonathan Hinckley and converted his soul. And the leafless trees gave praise to God." Is there one among us who might not report to himself something like this happy convert's story? Who has not at some time felt sure of his place in the great order, and seen all the world irradiated with a light which really shone from within the mind?

If a man has lost his faith in God and still holds fast his own integrity, well for the man. But, in this very concern to be true to the highest law he knows, he is unconsciously a worshiper. Blessed is the man who hungers and thirsts for righteousness, for already he holds in his soul the richest of all treasures. We who believe in God need not be seriously troubled about the fate or state of honest non-believers, for we may count their very honesty as a sign of the real presence and the finest inspiration.

Once accept the principle of duty, and all life becomes an honorable discipline and a steady advance. There is no higher rank on earth or in heaven than the rank of personal goodness: and he who loves it, seeks it, and practices it for its own sake is surely moving, however slowly, toward the perfect life.

Here also is the cure, and the only cure, for our restlessness and self-dissatisfaction. "No man can serve two masters." But he who falls heartily in love with virtue is no longer distracted by a divided allegiance. He has nothing else to do but to occupy himself with learning and doing what is right and reasonable. Having settled the central principle and leading purpose of his life, every step onward and upward makes the next easier; and the law of habit continually operates to confirm this deep-hearted choice. He is no longer driven by the lash of conscience; he is no more a servant, but a son, and the Father's house is his happy home.

Here too is the secret of victory over our trials and depressions. When shall we half realize the grandeur and glory of simple rectitude. Let me again repeat a tale of real life. Years ago, and far away, I knew a woman of most fine and excellent qualities whose deeply shadowed life was like a long crucifixion and martyrdom. In one of her letters she said, "My youth is gone, my hope is dead, and my heart is heavy; but I neglect no duty." In reply I said: "If you could ask God for just one blessing, and could be sure of that one and never of another, would you dare pray that your youth might come back, or that your earthly hopes might be renewed? Would you not ask for a living principle within yourself that would make you neglect no duty? And can you not see that, in giving you the love of righteousness, He has really given you the best thing in all the universe?" In her next letter she wrote that this view of the matter was new to her own mind, but that she accepted it as true, and found in it strength to take up her burden—a burden carried, as I believe, with patience, courage, and constancy to the end, which was not far away.

There is one thing more to be said. He who really loves righteousness cannot love it for himself alone; he hungers for its triumph over all the earth; he longs for the banishment of every wrong. Hence his zeal for justice is sweetened with good will to men, so that righteousness becomes one form of benevolence. The right is always the good. Hence the ethical passion kindled from the heart of Jesus has flamed out in abhorrence of wrong and evil, and has lent support and vigor to every movement for reform and welfare. "It is a spurious virtue that can contentedly see vice thriving by its side." The gospel is no gospel if it does not turn the hearts of men toward each other as well as toward God. It is no gospel if it does not unite all believers in wise, well-considered, and earnest movements for the cleansing of the world and the better ordering of all human life. Righteousness is rightness. To hunger and thirst for righteousness therefore is all one with the prayer that God's kingdom may come, and that His will may be done on earth as it is in heaven.

"Never Refused God Anything."

Florence Nightingale said: "If I could give you information of my life, it would be to show how a woman of very ordinary ability has been led by God in strange and unaccustomed paths to do in His service what He has done in her. And if I could tell you all, you would see how God has done all, and I nothing. I have worked hard, very hard, that is all; and I have never refused God anything."

Do Not Delay.

To-day is a good time to mend your life where it has need of it. Take the step into your Father's service. Do it in genuine honesty and faith. Don't quibble with your doubts. Don't mistrust yourself. Don't forget that Jesus is looking on. Don't wait any longer. The door is open. You can enter. You can do it now. To-morrow may be too late.—Rev. I. Mench Chambers.

Napoleon the Statesman.

It is a lamentable fact that but one side of Napoleon Bonaparte is well known to the public. In the public eye he is merely seen as the arch-angel of war—a fighter of battles, and a master of military tactics. Viewed as a statesman, Napoleon shines as resplendent as he does whilst rallying the old guard or directing his legions. Thomas E. Watson, in his "Napoleon," has given the other side of the great Corsican. The chapter devoted to the First Consul shows Napoleon as the master of finances and the promoter of public works that are today models all over the world. Napoleon was a statesman as well as a warrior. He possessed constructive ability of the highest order. His genius shone all over the world as a great statesman after he had conquered his enemies. Perhaps he was deficient in the arts of the diplomat. This part of his administration was trusted to others who betrayed him. However, despite all of this, he wrote his name as a constructive statesman, and as one of the greatest financiers that ever lived.

When King James Saw the Lion.

Just 300 years ago this month King James I of England visited the lions then kept in London Tower—the show from which is derived "the lions" in the sense of the sights of a place. The king had had an area built onto their cages for fights with bears, dogs and bulls, but the two lions that entered it on this day simply stood blinking. Two "racks of mutton" and "a lusty live cock" were successively thrown to them and devoured. After this the king caused a live lamb to be easily let down to them by a rope, and being come to the ground the lamb lay upon his knees and both the lions stood in their former places and only beheld the lamb, but presently the lamb rose up and went unto the lions, which very gently looked upon him and smelled on him, without sign of any further hurt. However, a lion-and-mastiff fight that followed was better "sport."

The Baroness Rosen, wife of the new Russian ambassador, is a strikingly attractive looking woman, and her daughter, Elizabeth, 16 years old.

FITS permanently cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Cabbages were introduced into England in the sixteenth century.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c. a bottle

Cromwell is said to have originated the board of trade idea.

Piso's Cure for Consumption is an infallible medicine for coughs and colds.—N. W SAMUEL, Ocean Grove, N. J., Feb. 17, 1900.

A baby was born the other day on a Gotham trolley car.

WOMEN

will find in MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR, the ideal laxative, a pleasant and thoroughly reliable remedy, without the least danger or possible harm to them in any condition peculiar to themselves.

Pleasant in taste, mild in action and thorough in results.

Tested for 35 years.

50c. and $1.00 per bottle at all Drug Stores.

MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR

"One Dose Convinces."

More than 5,000 persons annually disappear in the United States and are never heard from again.

15 YEARS OF TORTURE

Itching and Painful Sores Covered Head and Body—Cured in Week by Cuticura.

"For fifteen years my scalp and forehead was one mass of scabs, and my body was covered with sores. Words cannot express how I suffered from the itching and pain. I had given up hope when a friend told me to get Cuticura. After bathing with Cuticura Soap and applying Cuticura Ointment for three days my head was as clear as ever, and to my surprise and joy, one cake of soap and one box of ointment made a complete cure in one week. (Signed) H. B. Franklin, 717 Washington St., Allegheny, Pa."

In a Pittsburg office building a system of washing the air and removing all dust has been introduced.

Cures Blood Poison, Cancer, Ulcers.

If you have offensive pimples or eruptions, ulcers on any part of the body, aching bones or joints, falling hair, mucous patches, swollen glands, skin itches and burns, sore lips or gums, eating, festering sores, sharp, gnawing pains, then you suffer from serious blood poison or the beginnings of deadly cancer. You may be permanently cured by taking Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) made especially to cure the worst blood and skin diseases. Heals every sore or ulcer, even deadly cancer, stops all aches and pains and reduces all swellings. Botanic Blood Balm cures all malignant blood troubles, such as eczema, scabs and scales, pimples, running sores, carbuncles, scrofula. Druggists, $1 per large bottle, 3 bottles $2.50, 6 bottles $5, express prepaid. To prove it cures, sample of Blood Balm sent free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

Germany breeds 250,000 canaries every year.

Thousands of Women

ARE MADE WELL AND STRONG

Because of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Rests Upon the Fact that it Really Does Make Sick Women Well

Thousands upon thousands of American women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Their letters are on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office, and prove this statement to be a fact and not a mere boast.

Overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine, and compared with it all other medicines and treatment for women are experiments.

Why has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound accomplished its wide-spread results for good?

Why has it lived and thrived and done its glorious work for a quarter of a century?

Simply and surely because of its sterling worth. The reason no other medicine has even approached its success is plainly and positively because there is no other medicine in the world so good for women's ills.

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the uterine system, positively CURING disease and displacements and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures, and physicians who have recognized the virtue in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due. If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience that it will effect a cure.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhœa, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration, or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Anyway, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. It's free and always helpful.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE
HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.

There is absolutely no other school for Women and Girls in the South, if anywhere, offering so extensive a curriculum; thus, the greatest benefits for the smallest outlay. Most approved modern improvements—Electric Lights, Hot Water heating, Complete outfit of Bath-rooms, etc., etc. Grounds of forty acres, by universal consensus, the most uniquely beautiful School Grounds in America. Offers to the ambitious thorough preparation for the great universities. Col. Th. Smith, A. M., Pres. [Alum. Univ. of Va.]

THERE IS MONEY IN THE CORN STALK.
Write for free catalog. I. A. Madden, Atlanta, Ga.

Am. 31, 1905.

When you are at a loss to know what to serve for luncheon, dinner or supper—when you crave something both appetizing and satisfying—try

Libby's (Natural Flavor) Food Products

Once tried, you will always have a supply on hand

Ox Tongues Chili Con Carne
Veal Loaf Brisket Beef
Ham Loaf Soups

Your Grocer has them

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

The Secret of Good Coffee

Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored

LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees—the coffee that for over a quarter of a century has been daily welcomed in millions of homes—and you will make a drink fit for a king in this way:

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee.
Grind your LION COFFEE rather fine. Use "a tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used as a settler), then follow one of the following rules:

1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it boil THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.

2d. WITH COLD WATER. Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

3 DON'TS { Don't boil it too long. Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving. Don't use water that has been boiled before.

TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.

1st. With Eggs. Use part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.

2d. With Cold Water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water, and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.

Insist on getting a package of genuine LION COFFEE, prepare it according to this recipe and you will only use LION COFFEE in future. (Sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages.)

(Lion-head on every package.)

(Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE

WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and local soreness, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh. Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in pure water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all

TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES

For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box.

Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.

THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.

NEW ORLEANS.

Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.

25 CTS FISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free Catalogue to Dealers. BLEDSOE MFG. CO., 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

IF IT'S CHILLS YOU HAVE, IT'S OXIDINE YOU NEED

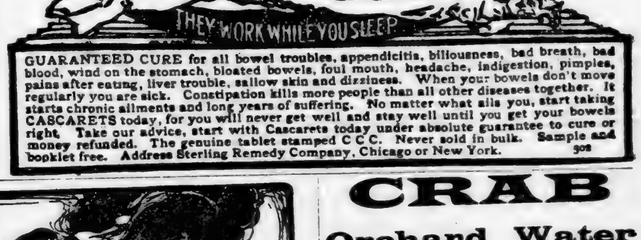
It is sold under ABSOLUTE GUARANTEE, and if you are not cured your druggist will refund your money. Made also in Tasteless Form. :::: Sold by all druggists for 50 cents per Bottle.

PATTON-WORSHAM DRUG CO.
MFRS, DALLAS, TEX. AND MEMPHIS, TENN.

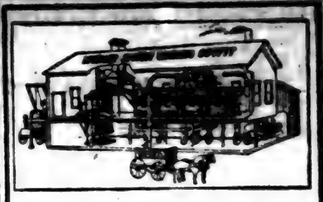
BEST FOR THE BOWELS

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC



GUARANTEED CURE for all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, bloated bowels, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow skin and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. It starts chronic ailments and long years of suffering. No matter what ails you, start taking CASCARETS today, for you will never get well and stay well until you get your bowels right. Take our advice, start with Cascarets today under absolute guarantee to cure or money refunded. The genuine tablet stamped C C C. Never sold in bulk. Sample and booklet free. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York. 908



You want only the best

Cotton Gin Machinery

Ask any experienced Ginner about

Pratt, Eagle, Smith Winship, Munger

We would like to show you what thousands of life long customers say. Write for catalog and testimonial booklet.

Continental Gin Co

Charlotte, N. C., Atlanta, Ga. Birmingham, Ala. Memphis, Tenn., Dallas, Tex.

CRAB Orchard Water

TRADE MARK

Is a Certain Cure for

3 DYSPEPSIA, SICK HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION. 3

Stimulates the Liver, cures Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Irregularities of the Bowels.

A natural product, prepared by concentration; a genuine natural water.

CRAB ORCHARD WATER CO., Louisville, Ky.

Avery & Company

SUCCESSORS TO AVERY & McMILLAN,

51-53 South Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga.

—ALL KINDS OF—

MACHINERY

Reliable Frick Engines. Boilers, all Sizes. Wheat Separators.

BEST IMPROVED SAW MILL ON EARTH.

Large Engines and Boilers supplied promptly. Shingle Mills, Corn Mills, Circular Saws, Saw Teeth, Patent Dogs, Steam Governors, Full line Engines & Mill Supplies. Send for free Catalogue.

Dropsy CURED Gives Quick Relief.

Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

OUR SPECIALTY

3—4—5

Three two dollar shirts for five dollars.

MADE TO YOUR MEASURE.

Write for samples and measurement blanks.

MODEL SHIRT CO.

Dept. S. Indianapolis, Ind.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

COTTON GOES HIGHER

No Doubt as to Strength of Market, Which Has a Good Undertone

NEW YORK IS NOW BULLISH.

Spinners Want the Stuff and It Has to Come at Big Prices.

New Orleans, La.—The cotton market has turned and is going up hill again. Prices opened slightly higher and much better with a good undertone to the market. While a few operators are on the fence, most of the opinions are bullish. The fears of an immediate stampede of the market are seemingly past due, to the good work of the bulls Saturday, who responded well and blocked every move of the bears. The market now has another chance to assert its natural strength which it was not slow in availing itself of, as the advance set in early during the morning session and has held well. A few reports show improved conditions in the crop generally, but the bearish effect of these reports are more than offset by the good outlook for the demand.

The sentiment in New York was decidedly bullish Saturday, which was caused to a great extent by the reports from Liverpool and the good demand for cotton goods. Bradstreet's says in this connection that special activity is noted in cotton goods, which are in demand at high prices with scarcity of desirable makes reported.

The technical position of spots is unchanged and very little business doing. The holders still act firm and can well afford to do so, as there is no obvious reason why there would be much of a decline in the staple, as the spinners will surely come in the market with further demands and the holders can at any time let go of their cotton at a much higher price than was even thought of at the beginning of the season. The holders are preserving a much better front now than was shown when the price was between 8c and 9c.

A dispatch from Fall River says: There was a marked advance in the price of regular goods during the week and everything points to higher prices, both for raw and finished material.

Thorough Tests Made.

New York.—With no less than twenty-five cases of possible yellow fever detained under observation in the quarantine island on Saturday, Dr. H. A. Doty, health officer of the ports, said that twenty-four hours must elapse before it could be determined whether any suspects were infected with the dread plague.

Two sailors, both apparently seriously ill, were taken today from the steamer Seguranca, which arrived from Colon and were isolated in the pest house on Sinburne island. Eight more of the crew who had been ill during the voyage, but who were convalescent, and seven passengers, two from the cabins, all of whom showed increased temperatures, were taken to Hoffman island for detention until the results of blood examinations are known. In addition to these, two suspects were taken to Hoffman today from the steamer Eldorado from New Orleans, and six cases from the steamer Avona, which recently arrived from Colon.

Big Land Sales in Jackson.

Scottsboro, Ala.—The following real estate deals have been made in the past week. The lands are all valuable timber lands:

J. L. Langston to J. C. Payne, 133 acres, $675; J. C. Isbell to J. W. Isbell, 30 acres, $720; J. W. Gilford to Henry R. Gilford, 40 acres, $100; Brantley Sanders to John A. Swafford, 12 acres, $500; Brantley Sanders to J. L. Langston, 30 acres, $100; Brantley Sanders to Langston & Swafford, 118 acres, $20,000; Joseph McCullough to W. L. Sanders, 437 acres, $30,000; W. L. Sanders to R. B. Sanders, 160 acres, $16,000; R. E. Sanders to W. L. Sanders 100 acres, $12,000; also 200 acres, $12,000.

Darden's Remains Arrive.

Lafayette, Ala.—The remains of William C. Darden reached here Saturday evening on the 6 o'clock train for interment. He died at his home in Oklahoma last Tuesday. Mr. Darden formerly resided here and had many relatives prominent in this city, a brother, George W. Darden, in Oneonta, Ala., one in Birmingham, Robert R. Darden, and one in Oklahoma, John B. Darden.

Child Bitten by Snake.

Clarksville, Tenn.—Beulah, the 10-year-old daughter of Edward Alexander, a well-known planter of Trigg county, Ky., was bitten by a copper head snake, and for awhile her life was believed to be in danger. The child was priming tobacco, and the reptile was coiled round the stalk and stuck its fangs into her finger. Her hand began to swell and but for the prompt arrival of a physician serious results would have followed.

PEACE TERMS UNKNOWN.

Sato Knows Nothing of What Japan Will Demand.

New York—Aimar Sato of the Japanese peace delegation made a statement to the Associated Press Saturday night in which he denies that he has ever, in any interview, given any outline of the terms upon which Japan will negotiate peace or that he has announced that Japan will make any demands whatever. He said:

"I wish to be clearly understood that I have never given out anything that could be construed as a demand of the Japanese peace commission or anything that could be taken as a condition upon which Japan would enter into negotiations for peace. I wish also to deny that I am the spokesman for Baron Komura. Sensational articles have been published which are fabrications, and in which I have been misquoted. I don't know upon what terms peace may be negotiated. I don't know that the Japanese envoys will consider peace terms. I know of no humiliating or other demands."

WAR OFFICE PREPARING.

Linevitch Will Be in Good Condition if Peace Negotiations Fail.

St. Petersburg.—The intimation of Mr. Sato, Baron Komura's secretary, that Japan will claim full indemnification for the cost of the war, besides the Island of Sakahalin, has gained recruits for the war party from among the class which had hoped Russia would be able to offer the railroads to Port Arthur and Dalny, the island of Sakahalin and other valuable considerations in lieu of a direct cash indemnity.

The war office is not slackening preparations for continuing the war in case peace negotiations are unsuccessful. The gap in General Linevitch's army at Mukden has been filled and the railroad is working to its full capacity carrying reinforcements to form fresh corps.

A dispatch from Irkutsk announces the completion of work on the trans-Baikal line.

VLADIVOSTOCK IN DANGER.

Japs Have Landed at Several Points and Are Working Inward.

Khersu, Manchuria.—The Japanese are apparently concentrating a considerable force far to the eastward with the aim of operating against Kirin and Ninguta and getting in between Vladivostock and the Russian Manchurian army.

It is reported that the Japanese have landed at several places in the Siberian littorel between Nicolaievsk Dekastries, and that the telegraph line to Nicolaievsk has been cut. These landings, however, are reported to be for small forces.

The rains are moderating and the roads are passable.

Officers Raid Still.

Huntsville, Ala.—Deputy Collectors Root and Anderson and Deputy Marshals Thompson and Arnold made a raid near Elkwood, Madison county, Thursday afternoon and captured a large illicit distillery that had just made a run.

The furnace had fire in it and the boilers were hot, but the operators had received warning of the approach of the officers and had made away with every movable article about the place.

T. W. Worden was arrested and a search of his premises revealed several gallons of fresh corn whisky. Worden was brought to Huntsville Friday night and committed to jail today after a hearing before Commissioner Greenleaf.

Official Changes.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Tax Collector Jim Ridley and Assessor Prince, who have filled their respective offices with credit, have wound up their business in full with the state and now retire to private life. W. A. J. Wann and W. D. Rorex, the new officers to the positions, will now take charge. All of the county officials were elected last November and shortly after assumed their respective offices except the collector and assessor, who under the law had their time of incumbency extended until the first of the coming month.

A Happy Reunion.

Lafayette, Ala.—The happiest reunion ever enjoyed by the Confederate veterans of Chambers county was held in this city Saturday. About two hundred and twenty-five were present, speeches were made, a big barbecue served and cigars by the citizens of Lafayette and all had a good time. The town was thronged with people, but the best order was maintained throughout the day, it being specially noticeable that there was no drunkenness nor profanity to mar the pleasures of the day for those grand old soldiers. Gen. G. P. Harrison, of Opelika, made the address of the day.

Cartwright Treasurer.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Sixty-five officers from all parts of the state are attending the first annual convention of the Tennessee Sheriffs' Association, which began here Friday. In the absence of President Cartwright, Sheriff J. F. Shipp, of Hamilton county, is presiding. The address of welcome was hellvered at the opening session by M. H. Doughty, mayor pro tem. of Chattanooga, and the response was by M. N. Whitaker.

BIRTHDAY OF THE CZAROWITCH.

Emperor is Still Credited With Design to Make Proclamation.

St. Petersburg.—The meeting of a special commission consisting of the ministers and members of the royal family which had been summoned for a final consideration of the project of the national assembly was held at Peteroff under direct presidency of the emperor. Another general revision of the project is now intended.

The emperor summoned his advisors to determine the question of the nature of the present action in the assembly which was left unsettled by the council of ministers and will take council before giving the imperial sanction to the project. If the verdict is favorable to the promulgation of reforms an imperial manifesto may, in accordance with the emperor's desire, to commemorate the birth of the Grand Duke Alexis Nicholaievitch in some signal way be made August 12, the birthday of the heir apparent.

As has been stated the Bouligin scheme has undergone modifications in the council of ministers which meet a number of objections of the liberals, the author of the original project proving to be the most conservative member of the council.

Emperor Nicholas is still credited with a design to go to Moscow to proclaim the national assembly, but no definite preparations will be made pending final acceptance of the project.

He Had a Thirst.

Florence, Ala.—The home of C. W. Mitchell, in East Florence, was entered several nights ago and a lot of bottled beer stolen from the ice chest. A trail of empty bottles, oot tracks and other evidence led to the abode of Emmet Massey, a young white man, and he was arrested. As the prisoner was being driven to the police station he leaped from the buggy and effected his escape. Friday morning at daybreak the officer met his quondam prisoner on the bank of the Tennessee river making his way to Sheffield, and again arrested him. This time the young man with a penchant for beer was landed in the city prison.

Fatal Ending of Negro Party.

Selma, Ala.—On the Ed Jones place across Joles creek, about three miles from the city, occurred a fatal shooting affray Sunday morning about 2 o'clock. All the parties concerned were negroes, the affair taking place at the end of a dance and pay party given in one of the negro houses on the place. Henry Howard, teamster for Mr. Jones, who runs a stall in the city market, did the shooting. It seems he had used Mr. Jones, wagon to take two negro youths from the eastern portion of the city over to the dance, the boys having agreed to pay him for hauling them. After the dance, in which, no doubt, the usual amount of liquor predominated Howard asked the two boys for their fare, and they said they would pay it when they returned to the city. Words followed, and so far as can be learned Howard pulled his pistol and emptied it point blank at the two negroes. Three of the balls took effect in the breast of Henry Howser, and one went through the fleshy part of the neck of the other negro, whose name was not learned.

Howard immediately left tor parts unknown, and the wounded negro, came to the city for medical attention and reported the shooting. The family of the dead negro took charge of the remains, and had them removed to the city.

Pursue Enemy on Sakhalin.

Tokio.—The following report has been received from the headquarters of the imperial army:

"Our force on the island of Sakhalin advanced on the 27th and hotly chased the enemy from early in the morning. Our vanguard occupied Delbenskoe the same afternoon. While our cavalry entered Rykoff, another detachment was sent against the enemy at Nomna, and Ivovskoe, dislodging the enemy's force holding Vyderaicovsky and vicinity, and immediately commenced pursuit. The enemy holding the latter place consisted of infantry with several guns. The temperature is 93 degrees Fahrenheit."

Huddleston for Macon's Sheriff.

Tuskegee, Ala.—Citizens here are expecting daily to hear of the appointment of W. E. Huddleston as sheriff of Macon county to succeed John T. Connor, deceased. It is intimated that Mr. Huddleston has the backing of the entire democratic county officials and the people generally.

Ensley, Ala.—The Rev. C. T. Chester, of Philadelphia, editor of Booklovers' Magazine, preached at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The noted divine and editor came to assist in the marriage of his son, C. H. Chester, to Miss Athens Curry, which took place Monday night.

Bitten By Ferocious Dog.

Girard, Ala.—George West, a young man of this city, was ferociously attacked last night by a dog supposed to have been mad and was bitten in several places on the arm and in the side. The dog was afterwards shot by Marshal Perry. The young man's friends are apprehensive that hydrophobia will develop.

PLAN TO GIVE NITROGEN TO THE SOIL.

Dry Cultures Which Produce It Now Shipped to Farmers by the Department of Agriculture.

An interesting and very instructive pamphlet has been issued by the Department of Agriculture on the value to the soils of the country of leguminous vegetables, or those which bear edible beans. It seems, according to the work to which reference has been made, that they play a very important part in the general scheme of fertility, although for a long period their value has been questioned, and by some scientists repudiated.

Nitrogen being the most important element in crop production, the primary object in investigating the conditions which appertain in plant culture is to determine the most practical manner of supplying nitrogen to the growing plants without detracting from the other elementary qualities of the soil. Plants of the leguminous family, when grown in contact with certain bacteria, form upon their roots small nodules, known as "nitrogen knots." These knots play an important part in supplying the plants with nitrogen, which is gathered from the air.

The experiments of the Department have been, therefore, directed so as to ascertain and devise some practical method of bringing about the artificial introduction of the necessary organisms into soils which were naturally devoid of them, and at the same time attempt to reconcile the vast amount of conflicting evidence regarding the exact nature of the organism, where the nitrogen is fixed, and similar problems.

A process was finally discovered by which dry cultures of the nitrogen-producing bacteria were made and preserved, and these are now packed and shipped to any part of the world. The Department of Agriculture is prepared to send instructions in their use to farmers.—Washington Star.

In a London Court Room.

The Judge—"What did he engage you to do?"

Witness—"The part of a Gibson girl."

Judge—"But what is a Gibson girl? I do not know what it is." (Laughter.)

Witness—"A type of American girl."

Mr. Powell—"I think there is an artist named Gibson who stands as M. Du Maurier used to stand here, and he has drawn some attractive ladies who are called Gibson Girls in America."

The Judge—"Oh, is that it?" (Laughter.)

Mr. Powell—"I may be wrong."

The Judge said it might make a little difference. He did not know whether people engaged for a piece are all engaged precisely on the same terms. For instance, whether the person who plays Hamlet was engaged on precisely the same terms as the person who was employed to say "My lord, the chariot awaits."—London News.

Brain Work and Longevity.

It begins to be understood by students of vital statistics that mental activity, instead of being an exhausting process tending to shorten life, is in the highest degree conducive to longevity if not complicated by excesses or intensified by the uncompensated friction of worry. In a case lately on trial in London involving damages for softening of the brain, attributed to an accident for which a corporation was responsible, this subject was very fully ventilated, and some of the most accomplished experts in England gave testimony. A consensus of opinion seemed to show that all alienists are agreed that the best way to keep the brain in good condition is to use it to the safe limit of its capacity.—New York Times.

Councilman's Struggle With a Carp.

A Councilman and carp had a battle royal at a mine hole known as Buzzard's Bay, in the outskirts of the borough of Freeland, Luzerne County, recently.

The Councilman was Adam Sachs, and the carp weighed 14 7-8 pounds. When hooked the carp made a desperate fight for its life and the Councilman had several narrow escapes from being pulled into the water and drowned.

The big fish got tired out before the Councilman did, however, and the latter is now able to tell the biggest fish story of any man in Freeland, and exhibit the carp to silence the skeptical, into the bargain.—Freeland Tribune.

Blois' Beautiful Staircase.

New and old, Blois is an amazing achievement of the human brain and the human hand. The great staircase in the courtyard, an outside one, forming an essential part of the elevation, is, of course, the masterpiece of wonder and delight. There is nothing like it in the world, and probably there never will be. The staircase of the Paris Opera—an interior one, by the way—would have everything to fear in the comparison. The other is a mass of the richest and of the purest ornament, with a beautiful proportion between its shadows and its lights. It is characteristic of the spirit in which such work was done that it is not always easy to give due gratitude to architect or to stone carver.—Century.

A Shipment of Turtles.

Passengers alighting at the No. 4 platform at Waterloo Station yesterday afternoon found the platform occupied by a long line of live West Indian turtles waiting for consignment to a London caterer.

The turtles lay on their backs on straw, and were afterward dragged along the platform on their backs by porters who held the front flippers.—London Chronicle.

Thorsby, Alaban

Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker
And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

The terrific chastisement of Russia enforces at least this moral, that bad government at home is a condition most unfavorable for success in wars abroad, says the New York Times. There is no natural reason why an autocrat should not wage war with brilliant success—indeed, in history autocratic rulers have been great warriors. But if an autocrat is to make war it is in the highest degree necessary that his autocracy should be efficient, that he should be a man of first-rate capacity in civil business. The example of the Czar of Russia, whose Government is one of the very worst in the world, makes all that very plain, indeed.

The President is right. The nation with an efficient navy has the most effective guarantee of peace, opines the Nashville American. Most wars are decided by sea power. The fate of the Civil War was probably decided by the United States navy. Spain was defeated by Dewey and Sampson. The most decisive battle btween Japan and Russia has just been fought on water. The great power of England lies in her mighty navy. Many wars have been decided by sea fighting. A pation without a navy has small voice in the world's affairs. The United States needs no large standing army, but it will find a strong navy more effective in protecting its rights and interests and in making for peace.

Some important questions are raised by a writer in Harper's Weekly who considers, apropos of an article by Mr. F. C. Penfield in the North American Review, the subject of the future paying capacity of the Panama Canal. It is calculated that the minimum annual cost of maintaining and operating the waterway will be $13,000,000. If the same tolls are charged as at Suez ($1.70 per ton on vessel tonnage), a business of 7,500,000 tons—about the amount of England's annual tonnage that passes through the Suez Canal—will yield not more than $12,750,000 yearly, which will mean for Panama an annual deficit of almost a third of a million dollars. It should also be borne in mind that Panama's earnings from passengers can never be considerable.

Will some one who has a genius for statistics, and is not a liar, reckon up all the money that is spent in the United States for hospitals, old people's homes, orphan asylums, general charities, pensions of all kinds, military, naval and civl, together with the property and income of all aid societies—everything, in fact, which relates to the support of the delinquent and dependent, the aged and poor of every kind—and tell us how far these sums would go toward giving a pension to every man and woman in the United States past sixty years of age? inquires the Christian Register. It would certainly give every one a pension that would have an appreciable value in warding off cold and hunger. We believe that a truthful statistician, gathering all the facts, and making a fair division of the income and a fair estimate of the number of men and women more than sixty years of age, would make a good case for a proposal to pool all charities and give definite pensions to all persons of due age. The Chinese make the pensioning of the elders an obligation in every family. At sixty the father is compelled to go out of business, and his children are compelled to support him. This reduces competition, and lays upon those who are supported in their childhood the duty of returning the gift in the old age of their parents.

Reports of the international chess tournament announces victories for Tschigorin and Janowski. Evidently there were no Japanese entries, comments the New York Tribune.

Commercial Cl
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIA
information furnished to who desire to locate in the

A. M. Johnso
Groceries and Delicate

J. J. STANL
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE

MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandise

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, T
and Cigars.

Thorsby Wine
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Pr

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and T
Articles.
LICENSED PHARMAC

E. H. Adams
General Merchandi
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSB
General Merchandi

J. R. PARNEL
General Merchandis

"MOLINE" Farming I
ments and "FLORENC
Wagons in stock at
times.
J. K. ORR SHO

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wis
Millinery and Notio

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Mea

A Langville &
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUG

C. L. Forsm
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal

TH

VOL. III.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Of General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Will Have New Line.

Opelika, Ala.—It was officially announced in this city today that contracts had been let and preparations made for constructing an electric car line between this city and Auburn which ten miles of track will have to be laid.

The capacity of Opelika Electric Co. will be increased threefold to furnish power for the road and light and power for Opelika and Auburn. The company is capitalized at $300,000. Work of construction is to begin within thirty days.

Shot by Policeman.

Wesley, Ala.—James Mann, a barkeeper in McVay's saloon on Seventeenth street, was shot twice by Police Officer G. D. Nelson at 1 o'clock Thursday morning in the saloon.

Mann was not seriously wounded. One shot entered the chin and glanced forward and made two or three separate wounds in the neck. The ball finally lodged against the collar bone. The other shot entered the hand, making a painful but not dangerous wound.

On Serious Charge.

Gadsden, Ala.—Harrison Tarvin, of Attalla, Calhoun County, was arrested and brought to the city Tuesday by Deputy United States Marshal R. Standifer and arraigned before United States Commissioner Pickard on a serious charge. It is alleged that while Tarvin was a passenger on the steamer Alabama a few days ago and while under the influence of whisky he proceeded to break up and destroy some of the property on the boat which the United States government requires the boat to carry, such as saws, axes, etc., and it was charged that he threw some of them into the river. He waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the United States court at Anniston in the sum of $1,000, which he made and was released.

Anniston's Station.

Anniston, Ala.—The Anniston quarantine station has been reorganized and placed under the local supervision of W. S. Thrasher, of Montgomery. Dr. Achor, formerly in charge, having been dismissed from the service on account of inefficiency. Mr. Thrasher holds his position under W. H. Brassell, state supervision of quarantine examinations, and Secretary of State W. H. Sanders, state health officer.

The local force has been enlarged and Mr. Thrasher now has representatives over the following trains: S. H. Cooper to Atlanta over the Southern; Louis Gelbke to Cartersville over the Louisville and Nashville; I. W. Brassell, from Heflin to Atlanta over the Southern; W. H. Jones from Rome to Decatur; S. H. Pearce from Anniston to Rome.

Will Build Big Warehouse.

Albertville, Ala.—A stock company composed of W. W. Currey, Dr. A. L. Coley, J. F. Hooper and Roberts Brothers, a number of Albertville's prominent business men on Thursday purchased fourteen lots, two blacksmith shops and some other property on the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis depot, and will begin at once the erection of a mammoth two-story fireproof warehouse. They will be ready for the fall trade and expect to do a big business.

Awarded Prizes.

Auburn, Ala.—In order to promote interest in the raising of agricultural products and in cultivation of acquiring knowledge and scientific application of judging stocks, chickens, etc., the college offered a number of valuable prizes at the recent meeting of the Farmers' Summer School. These prizes were competed for by gentlemen from all over the state and the interest was marked. There were fifteen competitors for the best ten ears of corn and the splendid specimens of this staple produced the fine possibilities of the country along this line.

Little Girl Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Scottsboro, Ala.—A most distressing accident occurred late Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. Tom Judge on Hood's Cave, three miles south of Scottsboro, in which a little girl was involved. It seems that Mr. Judge, the father of the child, had a sick horse, and in doctoring the animal had occasion to use some carbolic acid. Afterwards he set it aside, and little Miss 4-year-old daughter, got it and drank the contents, or a part—enough to kill her. She lived four hours and died in great agony.

COTTON GOES HIGHER

No Doubt as to Strength of Market, Which Has a Good Undertone

NEW YORK IS NOW BULLISH.

Spinners Want the Stuff and It Has to Come at Big Prices.

New Orleans, La.—The cotton market has turned and is going up hill again. Prices opened slightly higher and much better with a good undertone to the market. While a few operators are on the fence, most of the opinions are bullish. The fears of an immediate stampede of the market are seemingly past due, to the good work of the bulls Saturday, who responded well and blocked every move of the bears. The market now has another chance to assert its natural strength which it was not slow in availing itself of, as the advance set in early during the morning session and has held well. A few reports show improved conditions in the crop generally, but the bearish effect of these reports are more than offset by the good outlook for the demand.

The sentiment in New York was decidedly bullish Saturday, which was caused to a great extent by the reports from Liverpool and the good demand for cotton goods. Bradstreet's says in this connection that special activity is noted in cotton goods, which are in demand at high prices with scarcity of desirable makes reported.

The technical position of spots is unchanged and very little business doing. The holders still act firm and can well afford to do so, as there is no obvious reason why there would be much of a decline in the staple, as the spinners will surely come in the market with further demands and the holders can at any time let go of their cotton at a much higher price than was even thought of at the beginning of the season. The holders are preserving a much better front now than was shown when the price was between 8c and 9c.

A dispatch from Fall River says: There was a marked advance in the price of regular goods during the week and everything points to higher prices, both for raw and finished material.

Thorough Tests Made.

New York.—With no less than twenty-five cases of possible yellow fever detained under observation in the quarantine island on Saturday, Dr. H. A. Doty, health officer of the ports, said that twenty-four hours must elapse before it could be determined whether any suspects were infected with the dread plague.

Two sailors, both apparently seriously ill, were taken today from the steamer Seguranca, which arrived from Colon and were isolated in the pest house on Sinburne island. Eight more of the crew who had been ill during the voyage, but who were convalescent, and seven passengers, two from the cabins, all of whom showed increased temperatures, were taken to Hoffman island for detention until the results of blood examinations are known. I n addition to these, two suspects were taken to Hoffman today from the steamer Eldorado from New Orleans, and six cases from the steamer Avona, which recently arrived from Colon.

Big Land Sales in Jackson.

Scottsboro, Ala.—The following real estate deals have been made in the past week. The lands are all valuable timber lands:

J. L. Langston to J. C. Payne, 133 acres, $675; J. C. Isbell to J. W. Isbell, 30 acres, $720; J. W. Gilford to Henry R. Gilford, 40 acres, $100; Brantley Sanders to John A. Swafford, 12 acres, $500; Brantley Sanders to J. L. Langston, 30 acres, $100; Brantley Sanders to Langston & Swafford, 118 acres, $20,000; Joseph McCullough to W. L. Sanders, 437 acres, $30,000; W. L. Sanders to R. B. Sanders, 160 acres, $16,000; R. E. Sanders to W. L. Sanders 100 acres, $12,000; also 200 acres, $12,000.

Darden's Remains Arrive.

Lafayette, Ala.—The remains of William C. Darden reached here Saturday evening on the 6 o'clock train for interment. He died at his home in Oklahoma last Tuesday. Mr. Darden formerly resided here and had many relatives prominent in this city, a brother, George W. Darden, in Oneonta, Ala., one in Birmingham, Robert R. Darden, and one in Oklahoma, John B. Darden.

Child Bitten by Snake.

Clarksville, Tenn.—Beulah, the 10-year-old daughter of Edward Alexander, a well-known planter of Trigg county, Ky., was bitten by a copper head snake, and for awhile her life was believed to be in danger. The child was priming tobacco, and the reptile was coiled round the stalk and stuck its fangs into her finger. Her hand began to swell and but for the prompt arrival of a physician serious results would have followed.

PEACE TERMS UNKNOWN.

Sato Knows Nothing of What Japan Will Demand.

New York—Aimar Sato of the Japanese peace delegation made a statement to the Associated Press Saturday night in which he denies that he has ever, in any interview, given any outline of the terms upon which Japan will negotiate peace or that he has announced that Japan will make any demands whatever. He said:

"I wish to be clearly understood that I have never given out anything that could be construed as a demand of the Japanese peace commission or anything that could be taken as a condition upon which Japan would enter into negotiations for peace. I wish also to deny that I am the spokesman for Baron Komura. Sensational articles have been published which are fabrications, and in which I have been misquoted. I don't know upon what terms peace may be negotiated. I don't know that the Japanese envoys will consider peace terms. I know of no humiliating or other demands."

WAR OFFICE PREPARING.

Linevitch Will Be in Good Condition if Peace Negotiations Fail.

St. Petersburg.—The intimation of Mr. Sato, Baron Komura's secretary, that Japan will claim full indemnification for the cost of the war, besides the Island of Sakahalin, has gained recruits for the war party from among the class which had hoped Russia would be able to offer the railroads to Port Arthur and Dalny, the Island of Sakahalin and other valuable considerations in lieu of a direct cash indemnity.

The war office is not slackening preparations for continuing the war in case peace negotiations are unsuccessful. The gap in General Linevitch's army at Mukden has been filled and the railroad is working to its full capacity carrying reinforcements to form fresh corps.

A dispatch from Irkutsk announces the completion of work on the trans-Baikal line.

VLADIVOSTOCK IN DANGER.

Japs Have Landed at Several Points and Are Working Inward.

Khersu, Manchuria.—The Japanese are apparently concentrating a considerable force far to the eastward with the aim of operating against Kirin and Ninguta and getting in between Vladivostock and the Russian Manchurian army.

It is reported that the Japanese have landed at several places in the Siberian littorel between Nicolaievsk Dekastries, and that the telegraph line to Nicolaievsk has been cut. These landings, however, are reported to be for small forces.

The rains are moderating and the roads are passable.

Officers Raid Still.

Huntsville, Ala.—Deputy Collectors Root and Anderson and Deputy Marshals Thompson and Arnold made a raid near Elkwood, Madison county, Thursday afternoon and captured a large illicit distillery that had just made a run.

The furnace had fire in it and the boilers were hot, but the operators had received warning of the approach of the officers and had made away with every movable article about the place.

T. W. Worden was arrested and a search of his premises revealed several gallons of fresh corn whisky. Worden was brought to Huntsville Friday night and committed to jail today after a hearing before Commissioner Greenleaf.

Official Changes.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Tax Collector Jim Ridley and Assessor Prince, who have filled their respective offices with credit, have wound up their business in full with the state and now retire to private life. W. A. J. Wann and W. D. Rorex, the new officers to the positions, will now take charge. All of the county officials were elected last November and shortly after assumed their respective offices except the collector and assessor, who under the law had their time of incumbency extended until the first of the coming month.

A Happy Reunion.

Lafayette, Ala.—The happiest reunion ever enjoyed by the Confederate veterans of Chambers county was held in this city Saturday. About two hundred and twenty-five were present, speeches were made, a big barbecue served and cigars by the citizens of Lafayette and all had a good time. The town was thronged with people, but the best order was maintained throughout the day, it being specially noticeable that there was no drunkenness nor profanity to mar the pleasures of the day for those grand old soldiers. Gen. G. P. Harrison, of Opelika, made the address of the day.

Cartwright Treasurer.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Sixty-five officers from all parts of the state are attending the first annual convention of the Tennessee Sheriffs' Association, which began here Friday. In the absence of President Cartwright, Sheriff J. F. Shipp, of Hamilton county, is presiding. The address of welcome was delivered at the opening session by M. H. Doughty, mayor pro tem. of Chattanooga, and the response was by M. N. Whitaker.

BIRTHDAY OF THE CZAROWITCH.

Emperor is Still Credited With Design to Make Proclamation.

St. Petersburg.—The meeting of a special commission consisting of the ministers and members of the royal family which had been summoned for a final consideration of the project of the national assembly was held at Peteroff under direct presidency of the emperor. Another general revision of the project is now intended.

The emperor summoned his advisors to determine the question of the nature of the present action in the assembly which was left unsettled by the council of ministers and will take council before giving the imperial sanction to the project. If the verdict is favorable to the promulgation of reforms an imperial manifesto may, in accordance with the emperor's desire, to commemorate the birth of the Grand Duke Alexis Nicholaievitch in some signal way be made August 12, the birthday of the heir apparent.

As has been stated the Bouligin scheme has undergone modifications in the council of ministers which meet a number of objections of the liberals, the author of the original project proving to be the most conservative member of the council.

Emperor Nicholas is still credited with a design to go to Moscow to proclaim the national assembly, but no definite preparations will be made pending final acceptance of the project.

He Had a Thirst.

Florence, Ala.—The home of C. W. Mitchell, in East Florence, was entered several nights ago and a lot of bottled beer stolen from the ice chest. A trail of empty bottles, oot tracks and other evidence led to the abode of Emmet Massey, a young white man, and he was arrested. As the prisoner was being driven to the police station he leaped from the buggy and effected his escape. Friday morning at daybreak the officer met his quondam prisoner on the bank of the Tennessee river making his way to Sheffield, and again arrested him. This time the young man with a penchant for beer was landed in the city prison.

Fatal Ending of Negro Party.

Selma, Ala.—On the Ed Jones place across Joles creek, about three miles from the city, occurred a fatal shooting affray Sunday morning about 2 o'clock. All the parties concerned were negroes, the affair taking place at the end of a dance and pay party given in one of the negro houses on the place. Henry Howard, teamster for Mr. Jones, who runs a stall in the city market, did the shooting. It seems he had used Mr. Jones, wagon to take two negro youths from the eastern portion of the city over to the dance, the boys having agreed to pay him for hauling them. After the dance, in which, no doubt, the usual amount of liquor predominated Howard asked the two boys for their fare, and they said they would pay it when they returned to the city. Words followed, and so far as can be learned Howard pulled his pistol and emptied it point blank at the two negroes. Three of the balls took effect in the breast of Henry Howser, and one went through the fleshy part of the neck of the other negro, whose name was not learned.

Howard immediately left for parts unknown, and the wounded negro came to the city for medical attention and reported the shooting. The family of the dead negro took charge of the remains, and had them removed to the city.

Pursue Enemy on Sakhalin.

Tokio.—The following report has been received from the headquarters of the imperial army:

"Our force on the island of Sakhalin advanced on the 27th and hotly chased the enemy from early in the morning. Our vanguard occupied Delbenskoo the same afternoon. While our cavalry entered Rykoff, another detachment was sent against the enemy at Nomna, and Ivovskce, dislodging the enemy's force holding Vydenaicovsky and vicinity, and immediately commenced pursuit. The enemy holding the latter place consisted of infantry with several guns. The temperature is 93 degrees Fahrenheit."

Huddleston for Macon's Sheriff.

Tuskegee, Ala.—Citizens here are expecting daily to hear of the appointment of W. E. Huddleston as sheriff of Macon county to succeed John T. Connor, deceased. It is intimated that Mr. Huddleston has the backing of the entire democratic county officials and the people generally.

Ensley, Ala.—The Rev. C. T. Chester, of Philadelphia, editor of Booklovers' Magazine, preached at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The noted divine and editor came to assist in the marriage of his son, C. H. Chester, to Miss Athens Curry, which took place Monday night.

Bitten By Ferocious Dog.

Girard, Ala.—George West, a young man of this city, was ferociously attacked last night by a dog supposed to have been mad and was bitten in several places on the arm and in the side. The dog was afterwards shot by Marshal Perry. The young man's friends are apprehensive that hydrophobia will develop.

PLAN TO GIVE NITROGEN TO THE SOIL.

Dry Cultures Which Produce It Now Shipped to Farmers by the Department of Agriculture.

An interesting and very instructive pamphlet has been issued by the Department of Agriculture on the value to the soils of the country of leguminous vegetables, or those which bear edible beans. It seems, according to the work to which reference has been made, that they play a very important part in the general scheme of fertility, although for a long period their value has been questioned, and by some scientists repudiated.

Nitrogen being the most important element in crop production, the primary object in investigating the conditions which appertain in plant culture is to determine the most practical manner of supplying nitrogen to the growing plants without detracting from the other elementary qualities of the soil. Plants of the leguminous family, when grown in contact with certain bacteria, form upon their roots small nodules, known as "nitrogen knots." These knots play an important part in supplying the plants with nitrogen, which is gathered from the air.

The experiments of the Department have been, therefore, directed so as to ascertain and devise some practical method of bringing about the artificial introduction of the necessary organisms into soils which were naturally devoid of them, and at the same time attempt to reconcile the vast amount of conflicting evidence regarding the exact nature of the organism, where the nitrogen is fixed, and similar problems.

A process was finally discovered by which dry cultures of the nitrogen-producing bacteria were made and preserved, and these are now packed and shipped to any part of the world. The Department of Agriculture is prepared to send instructions in their use to farmers.—Washington Star.

In a London Court Room.

The Judge—"What did he engage you to do?"

Witness—"The part of a Gibson girl."

Judge—"But what is a Gibson girl? I do not know what it is." (Laughter.)

Witness—"A type of American girl."

Mr. Powell—"I think there is an artist named Gibson who stands as M. Du Maurier used to stand here, and he has drawn some attractive ladies who are called Gibson Girls in America."

The Judge—"Oh, is that it?" (Laughter.)

Mr. Powell—"I may be wrong."

The Judge said it might make a little difference. He did not know whether people engaged for a piece are all engaged precisely on the same terms. For instance, whether the person who plays Hamlet was engaged on precisely the same terms as the person who was employed to say "My lord, the chariot awaits."—London News.

Brain Work and Longevity.

It begins to be understood by students of vital statistics that mental activity, instead of being an exhausting process tending to shorten life, is in the highest degree conducive to longevity if not complicated by excesses or intensified by the uncompensated friction of worry. In a case lately on trial in London involving damages for softening of the brain, attributed to an accident for which a corporation was responsible, this subject was very fully ventilated, and some of the most accomplished experts in England gave testimony. A consensus of opinion seemed to show that all alienists are agreed that the best way to keep the brain in good condition is to use it to the safe limit of its capacity.—New York Times.

Councilman's Struggle With a Carp.

A Councilman and carp had a battle royal at a mine hole known as Buzzard's Bay, in the outskirts of the borough of Freeland, Luzerne County, recently.

The Councilman was Adam Sachs, and the carp weighed 14 7-8 pounds. When hooked the carp made a desperate fight for its life and the Councilman had several narrow escapes from being pulled into the water and drowned.

The big fish got tired out before the Councilman did, however, and the latter is now able to tell the biggest fish story of any man in Freeland, and exhibit the carp to silence the skeptical, into the bargain.—Freeland Tribune.

Blois' Beautiful Staircase.

New and old, Blois is an amazing achievement of the human brain and the human hand. The great staircase in the courtyard, an outside one, forming an essential part of the elevation, is, of course, the masterpiece of wonder and delight. There is nothing like it in the world, and probably there never will be. The staircase of the Paris Opera—an interior one, by the way—would have everything to fear in the comparison. The other is a mass of the richest and of the purest ornament, with a beautiful proportion between its shadows and its lights. It is characteristic of the spirit in which such work was done that it is not always easy to give due gratitude to architect or to stone carver.—Century.

A Shipment of Turtles.

Passengers alighting at the No. 4 platform at Waterloo Station yesterday afternoon found the platform occupied by a long line of live West Indian turtles waiting for consignment to a London caterer.

The turtles lay on their backs on straw, and were afterward dragged along the platform on their backs by porters who held the front flippers.—London Chronicle.

Thorsby, Alaba

Business Directory.

OLAF, SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

Commercial C
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELI
information furnished to who desire to locate in the

A. M. Johnso
Groceries and Delicate

J. J. STANL
GENERAL MERCHANDISE

MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandi

G. W. Freema
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks
and Cigars.

Thorsby Win
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, P

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Articles.
LICENSED PHARMAC

E. H. Adams
General Merchan
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSB
General Merchandi

J. R. PARNEL
General Merchandi
"MOLINE" Farming
ments and "FLORE Wagons in stock at
times.
J. K. ORR SHO

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market

Mrs. M. E. W
Millinery and Noti

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Me

A Langville &
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOER
Dealers in WAGONS and BUG

C. L. Fors
Brick Yard

J. BICE
Charcoal

The terrific chastisement of Russia enforces at least this moral, that bad government at home is a condition most unfavorable for success in wars abroad, says the New York Times. There is no natural reason why an autocrat should not wage war with brilliant success—indeed, in history autocratic rulers have been great warriors. But if an autocrat is to make war it is in the highest degree necessary that his autocracy should be efficient, that he should be a man of first-rate capacity in civil business. The example of the Czar of Russia, whose Government is one of the very worst in the world, makes all that very plain, indeed.

The President is right. The nation with an efficient navy has the most effective guarantee of peace, opines the Nashville American. Most wars are decided by sea power. The fate of the Civil War was probably decided by the United States navy. Spain was defeated by Dewey and Sampson. The most decisive battle btween Japan and Russia has just been fought on water. The great power of England lies in her mighty navy. Many wars have been decided by sea fighting. A nation without a navy has small voice in the world's affairs. The United States needs no large standing army, but it will find a strong navy more effective in protecting its rights and interests and in making for peace.

Some important questions are raised by a writer in Harper's Weekly who considers, apropos of an article by Mr. F. C. Penfield in the North American Review, the subject of the future paying capacity of the Panama Canal. It is calculated that the minimum annual cost of maintaining and operating the waterway will be $13,000,000. If the same tolls are charged as at Suez ($1.70 per ton on vessel tonnage), a business of 7,500,000 tons—about the amount of England's annual tonnage that passes through the Suez Canal—will yield not more than $12,750,000 yearly, which will mean for Panama an annual deficit of almost a third of a million dollars. It should also be borne in mind that Panama's earnings from passengers can never be considerable.

Will some one who has a genius for statistics, and is not a liar, reckon up all the money that is spent in the United States for hospitals, old people's homes, orphan asylums, general charities, pensions of all kinds, military, naval and civl, together with the property and income of all aid societies—everything, in fact, which relates to the support of the delinquent and dependent, the aged and poor of every kind—and tell us how far these sums would go toward giving a pension to every man and woman in the United States past sixty years of age? inquires the Christian Register. It would certainly give every one a pension that would have an appreciable value in warding off cold and hunger. We believe that a truthful statistician, gathering all the facts, and making a fair division of the income and a fair estimate of the number of men and women more than sixty years of age, would make a good case for a proposal to pool all charities and give definite pensions to all persons of due age. The Chinese make the pensioning of the elders an obligation in every family. At sixty the father is compelled to go out of business, and his children are compelled to support him. This reduces competition, and lays upon those who are supported in their childhood the duty of returning the gift in the old age of their parents.

Reports of the international chess tournament announces victories for Tschigorin and Janowski. Evidently there were no Japanese entries, comments the New York Tribune.

TH

VOL. III.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Of General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Will Have New Line.

Opelika, Ala.—It was officially announced in this city today that contracts had been let and preparations are on for constructing an electric car line between this city and Auburn which ten miles of track will have to be laid.

The capacity of Opelika electric plant will be increased threefold to furnish power for the road and light and power for Opelika and Auburn. The company is capitalized at $300,000. Work of construction is to begin within thirty days.

Shot by Policeman.

Bessemer, Ala.—James Mann, a barber in McVay's saloon on Seventeenth street, was shot twice by Police Officer G. D. Nelson at 1 o'clock yesterday morning in the saloon.

Mann was not seriously wounded. One shot entered the chin and glanced downward and made two or three separate wounds in the neck. The ball finally lodged against the collar bone. The other shot entered the thigh, making a painful but not dangerous wound.

On Serious Charge.

Gadsden, Ala.—Harrison Tarvin, of Attalla, Calhoun County, was arrested and brought to the city Thursday by Deputy United States Marshal J. S. Standifer and arraigned before United States Commissioner Pickard on a serious charge. It is alleged that while Tarvin was a passenger on the steamer Alabama a few days ago and while under the influence of whisky he proceeded to break up and destroy some of the property on the boat which the United States government requires the boat to carry, such as saws, axes, etc., and it was charged that he threw some of them into the river. He waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the United States court at Anniston in the sum of $1,000, which he made and was released.

Anniston's Station.

Anniston, Ala.—The Anniston quarantine station has been reorganized and placed under the local supervision of W. S. Thrasher, of Montgomery. Dr. Achor, formerly in charge, has been dismissed from the service on charge of inefficiency. Mr. Thrasher holds his position under W. H. Grassell, state supervision of quarantine examinations, and Secretary Dr. W. H. Sanders, state health officer.

The local force has been enlarged and Mr. Thrasher now has representation over the following trains: S. H. Cooper to Atlanta over the Southern; Louis Gelbke to Cartersville over the Louisville and Nashville; I. W. Bidwell, from Heflin to Atlanta over the Southern; W. H. Jones from Rome to Decatur; S. H. Pearce from Anniston to Rome.

Will Build Big Warehouse.

Albertville, Ala.—A stock company composed of W. W. Currey, Dr. A. L. Friday, J. F. Hooper and Roberts Brothers, a number of Albertville's prominent business men on Thursday purchased fourteen lots, two blacksmith shops and some other property on the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis depot, and will begin at once the erection of a mammoth brick fireproof warehouse. They will be ready for the fall trade and expect to do a big business.

Awarded Prizes.

Auburn, Ala.—In order to promote interest in the raising of agricultural products and in cultivation of acres and knowledge and scientific application of judging stocks, chickens, etc., the college offered a number of valuable prizes at the recent meeting of the Farmers' Summer School. These prizes were competed for by gentlemen from all over the state and the interest was marked. There were fifteen competitors for the best ten ears of corn and the fine specimens of this staple produced showed the fine possibilities of the state along this line.

Little Girl Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Tuskaloosa, Ala.—A most distressing accident occurred late Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. Tom Judge near Judge's Cave, three miles south of Tuscaloosa, in which a little girl was the victim. It seems that Mr. Judge, the father of the child, had a sick horse, and in doctoring the animal had occasion to use some carbolic acid. Forgetting he set it aside, and little Lula, the 4-year-old daughter, got it and drank the contents, or a part—enough to kill her. She lived four hours and died in great agony.

Alaban
Directory.

Commercial C
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELI
information furnished to who desire to locate in the

A. M. Johns
Groceries and Delicat

J. J. STANL
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE

MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandi

G. W. Freem
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks
and Cigars.

Thorsby Win
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, P

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Articles.
LICENSED PHARMA

E. H. Adams
General Merchan
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNS
General Merchandi

J. R. PARNEL
General Merchandi

"MOLINE" Farming I
ments and "FLOREN Wagons in stock at
times.
J. K. ORR SHO

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wi
Millinery and Notio

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Mea

A Langville &
BLACKSMITH
and HORSESHOER
Dealers in WAGONS and BUG

C. L. Forsm
Brick Yard

J. BICE
Charcoal

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 10 1905 NO. 20

STATE HAPPENINGS

General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Will Have New Line.

[illegible], Ala.—It was officially announced in this city today that contracts had been let and preparations were being made for constructing an electric car line between this city and Auburn, which ten miles of track will have been laid.

The capacity of Opelika electric plant will be increased threefold to furnish power for the road and light and power for Opelika and Auburn. The company is capitalized at $300,000. Work of construction is to begin within thirty days.

Shot by Policeman.

[illegible], Ala.—James Mann, a barber in McVay's saloon on Seventh street, was shot twice by Police Officer G. D. Nelson at 1 o'clock Monday morning in the saloon. Mann was not seriously wounded. One shot entered the chin and glanced upward and made two or three flesh wounds in the neck. The ball finally lodged against the collar bone. The other shot entered the arm, making a painful but not dangerous wound.

On Serious Charge.

Weden, Ala.—Harrison Tarvin, of Piedmont, Calhoun County, was arrested and brought to the city Thursday by Deputy United States Marshal W. S. Standifer and arraigned before United States Commissioner Pickard on a serious charge. It is alleged that while Tarvin was a passenger on the steamer Alabama a few days ago and while under the influence of whiskey he proceeded to break up and destroy some of the property on the boat which the United States government requires the boat to carry, such as oars, axes, etc., and it was charged that he threw some of them into the river. He waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the United States court at Anniston in the sum of $1,000, which he made and was released.

Anniston's Station.

Anniston, Ala.—The Anniston quarantine station has been reorganized and placed under the local supervision of S. Thrasher, of Montgomery. Dr. Achor, formerly in charge, having been dismissed from the service on charge of inefficiency. Mr. Achor holds his position under W. Bonnell, state supervision of quarantine examinations, and Secretary W. H. Sanders, state health officer.

The local force has been enlarged and Mr. Thrasher now has representatives over the following trains: S. Cooper to Atlanta over the Southern; Louis Gelbke to Cartersville over Louisville and Nashville; I. W. Bonnell from Heflin to Atlanta over Southern; W. H. Jones from Rome to Cartersville; S. H. Pearce from Anniston to Rome.

Will Build Big Warehouse.

Albertville, Ala.—A stock company composed of W. W. Currey, Dr. A. L. Gray, J. F. Hooper and Roberts Brothers, a number of Albertville's prominent business men on Thursday purchased fourteen lots, two blacksmith shops and some other property near the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis depot, and will begin at once the erection of a mammoth brick fireproof warehouse. They will build for the fall trade and expect to do a big business.

Awarded Prizes.

Auburn, Ala.—In order to promote interest in the raising of agricultural products and in cultivation of accurate knowledge and scientific appreciation of judging stock, chickens, corn, etc., the college offered a number of valuable prizes at the recent meeting of the Farmers' Summer school. These prizes were competed for by gentlemen from all over the state, and the interest was marked. There were fifteen competitors for the best ten ears of corn, and the splendid specimens of this staple product showed the fine possibilities of the state along this line.

Little Girl Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Ashboro, Ala.—A most distressing accident occurred late Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. Tom Judge near Cave, three miles south of Ashboro, in which a little girl was the victim. It seems that Mr. Judge, the father of the child, had a sick horse, and doctoring the animal had occasion to use some carbolic acid. After he set it aside, and little three-year-old daughter, got it and drank the contents, or a part—enough to kill her. She lived four hours and died in great agony.

Farmers Awarded Prizes.

Auburn, Ala.—In order to promote interest in the raising of agricultural products and in cultivation of accurate knowledge and scientific appreciation of judging stock, chickens, corn, etc., the college offered a number of valuable prizes at the recent meeting of the Farmers' Summer school. These prizes were competed for by gentlemen from all over the state, and the interest was marked. There were fifteen competitors for the best ten ears of corn, and the splendid specimens of this staple product showed the fine possibilities of the state along this line.

Coffin Found on Veranda.

Anniston, Ala.—Thursday morning Mr. Payne, who lives at Pleasant Gap, near here, found a little coffin on his veranda, together with a tree to which was tied a rope pictured on paper, with some threats to take his life if he did not leave the place by a certain day. Mr. Payne being a highly respected citizen and inoffensive in every way, is alarmed over the occurrence. Three negroes were arrested as the suspected guilty parties and were given a trial in justice court, but for the lack of evidence were acquitted.

A Gift to Florence.

Florence, Ala.—At the August meeting of the city council James A. Andrews made the city a gift of ten acres of land to be used as a park. The land is beautifully wooded and lies at the junction of Cypress and Cox's creeks. It is just across the Cypress creek from the pumping station of the Florence water works and is a very popular resort for picnic parties and the like. The grounds are about three miles north of Florence a little off the Jackson road and the only condition connected with the gift was that the city keep the short stretch between the Jackson road and the grounds in good condition. The gift was accepted by the city.

Illicit Outfit Captured.

Anniston, Ala.—A finely equipped moonshiner's outfit was captured five miles north of Edwardsville Thursday by Deputy Revenue Collector A. G. Montgomery, Deputy Marshal W. S. Standifer, George N. King and W. E. Burton. The outfit consisted of a 140-gallon galvanized iron still, a wood cap, a stone furnace, six fermenters, 250 gallons of rum, 150 gallons of spirit of beer and several minor utensils used in the manufacture of the rum. Jim Thomas, a white man, was arrested as the alleged operator of the still, and was tried before Commissioner Randolph Thursday afternoon and bound over to the United States grand jury in the sum of $150.

May Build Pavilion.

Demopolis, Ala.—There is a move on foot looking to the building of a pavilion here to be used as a skating rink and for other purposes which may come up, such as public speaking, church suppers, dancing, etc. A petition is being circulated asking for funds for this purpose, and it is being liberally signed. It is the intention to build it on the city's lot on Commissioners street, just north of Bluff Hall. In the event it is built, the use of the pavilion will be free.

Funeral of Jas. S. Kelly.

Anniston, Ala.—The funeral of Jas. S. Kelly occurred at the Baptist church at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. R. Ivey. The church could not hold the large crowd of friends that gathered to pay a final tribute of love to this grand old man. The services were solemn and impressive, and beautiful were the words spoken of the consecrated life and noble work of him who rests from all his labors.

West Point, Ga., Quarantines.

Mobile, Ala.—West Point, Ga., has quarantined against Louisiana and all infected territories. Persons from such sections will not be allowed to stop within the city limits without proper health certificates.

Prattville, Ala., has quarantined against Montgomery and other infected points. This does not include train crews or freight. The Mobile and Ohio railroad has been notified not to sell any tickets from Montgomery to Northport till further notice.

Tuskegee, Ala.—There was a great old time in Tuskegee opera house Thursday night when Dam No. 30, Independent Order of Beavers, was formally organized by H. W. English, Supreme Secretary, of Birmingham, and Editor Ware, of The Opelika News.

Entering First Bale.

Enterprise, Ala.—Enterprise received the first bale of new cotton Thursday. It classed middling, and was raised by M. O. Forehand, one of the best farmers of Coffee county. It was purchased by the Enterprise cotton mills at 15 cents per pound.

RUSSIAN BRAVERY.

Captain of the Nakimoff Could Not Be Dragged From His Post.

INCIDENTS OF THE SEA FIGHT.

As the Monomach Went Down She Was Cheered by the Victorious Japs.

Tokio.—One officer of the naval staff has made a statement, in which he pays a high tribute to some of Russia's officers participating in the battle of the Sea of Japan. His statement follows:

"There were several Russian officers whose conduct in the recent battle deserves to be held high as a model and example for all naval officers. Among them all the most noteworthy was the conduct of Captain Rodionoff, commander of the Nakhimoff. His gallantry is as praiseworthy as that of Commander Hirose. During the first day of the battle the Nakhimoff was exposed to the fire of the main squadron and sustained serious damage. During the night she was made the object of seven torpedo attacks, and was finally completely disabled, and drifted close to the Tsushima. The vessel was sinking, and Captain Rudionoff sent seventy of the crew to land at Tshim Thushima, remaining aboard himself with his chief navigator.

"When the Japanese approached the sinking vessel they asked the captain to leave the vessel, but he refused. The Japanese boarded the vessel and endeavored to drag him into a boat, but he resisted. The ship was listing badly and threatened momentarily to plunge into the sea. The Japanese were forced to draw off, and the captain went below to meet his death. Suddenly the ship went down and our men thought the gallant officer was drowned. But Providence willed otherwise. We found the captain and navigator floating in the water locked in each other's arms. They had embraced at what they thought was the moment of death and were partly unconscious when we rescued them."

There was a dramatic scene when the Monomach when down. The Sado Maru, which survived the remarkable eperience with the Vladivostok squadron, in which the Hitachi Maru was sunk, came upon some of the crew of the Monomach and rescued them. Among them was an engineer officer, who died, and the officers of the Sado Maru gave him a military funeral from the deck. Later the Saco picked up the Monomach, and getting a line to her endeavored to tow her to the Suhima. The Monomach was leaking badly, and the attempt to tow her was a failure. Suddenly there was a great explosion aboard the Monomach and she began to settle in the water. Seeing that she was going down Captain Kamaya ordered the men of the Sado Maru to line the decks, and calling the bugler directe dhim to sound taps. It was a pretty tribute to the ship, which had been gallantly fought, and to the men who gave up their lives in her.

Work at Henry Ellen Mines.

Henry Ellen, Ala.—Henry Ellen is building up rapidly and is taking on more of a business aspect daily. The railroad has been completed to the new mine and the company has begun shipping coal from that point. The daily production is to be large.

H. L. Ballman, the new superintendent for the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, is very busy getting everything in ship shape at the mines in this vicinity.

Parade Given for Taft.

Manila.—A large spectacular parade was held Monday morning in honor of the visit of Secretary of War Taft and party. Ten thousand men were in line, including military, marines, sailors, industrials and city provincial delegations. There were fifty floats and eighty bands in line. The parade was three hours passing the reviewing stand.

A Serious Accident.

Sulligent, Ala.—J. F. Pennington Jr., a farmer living ten miles from here, was run over by a passenger train at this place Monday morning at 2:40 o'clock, crushing his leg and foot so badly that it had to be amputated between the ankle and the knee.

Felled by a Barrel Stave.

Montgomery, Ala.—Robert White, a negro, was seriously injured Monday morning by a blow on the head struck by Charles Anderson, a negro. Both men are employed at a barrel factory in North Montgomery. The negroes engaged in a war of words and Anderson felled White with a barrel stave, striking him over the forehead.

Archbishop Has Fever.

New Orleans, La.—One of Saturday's victims was Archbishop P. L. Chapelle, whose case was reported by Dr. Larue, who is unable to trace the infection, as the archbishop had not been out of his residence but once in a week or more, when he took a short walk.

He had not been in the infected district, though there are cases of fever not far from his residence. Dr. Larue believes that a stray mosquito from an infected house was the cause of the archbishop's illness.

Memphis Closes Doors.

Memphis, Tenn.—This city has ordered its doors closed to the outside world beginning Monday at noon, and no person can enter unless holding a permit signed by Dr. H. Jones, president of the board of health, or Secretary Marcus Haas.

These certificates, it is announced, will only be issued in urgent cases and when it is positively known that the applicant has not been in a fever infected district.

This drastic action was taken by the city council Saturday night after receiving a numerously signed petition. The health authorities say that the city was never in a better sanitary condition. A large majority of the citizens, however, favor what is known as a shotgun quarantine, and in deference to their wishes a cordon of guards was placed around the city at noon Monday.

Dr. Marcus Haas said that the citizens who are abroad from Memphis after Monday can return to Memphis only with a permit. Such a permit will be forwarded in certain cases after the board of health makes full investigation. Any person leaving the city is required to secure a permit to reenter, and this permit will be issued when it is positively known that the applicant has visited no infected district.

One Death From Fever.

New York.—One man died of yellow fever at New York's detention hospital at Quarantine Monday, making the third case of yellow fever on ships entering New York this summer and the second death.

"This is the first time in five years," said Health Officer Doty, "that New York has been attended by more than one yellow fever case in a summer. William B. Smith, a pantryman, taken off the steamer Advance, from Colon, last Thursday with nine others, died Sunday with an acute case of yellow fever. Seven other members of this party are still under inspection, but I am positive that they are not suffering from yellow fever. The other two yellow fever patients came here early in the summer."

Not one of these fever cases, Dr. Doty said, has come from the fever districts of the United States. Panama has supplied them all, and this is the first time since 1897, according to the official health records at the port of New York, that fever cases from Panama have been either threatening or numerous.

Recovery from Injured Knee.

Demopolis, Ala.—Prof. W. A. McLeod has returned from his trip to Mobile. While in that city he had the misfortune to injure his knee while attempting to get off a train, and had to go to a sanitarium for several days. He has entirely recovered now. Professor McLeod will move his family to Mobile in a short time, as he has bought a half interest in the Mobile Military Institute, of which he will be co-principal.

Wants the Reward.

Montgomery, Ala.—C. M. Perryman, at the regular meeting of the city county of Montgomery Monday night, made application to the city fathers for the reward offered by Acting Mayor McIntyre for information in reference to yellow fever refugees in Montgomery. Mr. Perryman informed the authorities of the presence in Montgomery of Mrs. Leola Bowman, who came to the city from New Orleans via Atlanta. She was promptly sent out of the city.

Acting Mayor McIntyre offered a reward of $100 for information leading to the apprehension of such persons and Mr. Perryman wants the money. His petition was received and filed Robbery of Freight Car.

Selma, Ala.—A freight car full of meats of all description was found broken open Monday morning on the Western Railway of Alabama track behind the St. James hotel. The carload of meat had been consigned to Culverhouse & Hall, merchandise brokers.

Gone to Oxmoor.

Bessemer, Ala.—T. B. Turner left Monday for Oxmoor, where he will take charge of the commissary of the Tennessee company at that place. Mr. Turner has been with this company at the Robertson commissary for some years, and is a very popular young man, not only with the company, but with the public generally.

CZAR'S AMBASSADOR HERE

Sergius Witte and His Suite Arrive in New York City.

HOPES FOR SUCCESSFUL MISSION

Lion of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on the Way Over—A Genial and Democratic Man—Put Up at Hotel St. Regis—Camera Enthusiasts by the Score Snap the Envoy of Russia.

New York City.—Sergius Witte, Russia's chief peace plenipotentiary and President of the Committee of Ministers of the Russian Empire, who, with Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, will meet the Japanese envoys in Portsmouth, N. H., to arrange, if possible, a treaty of peace between Russia and Japan, arrived in Hoboken shortly before 5 o'clock in the afternoon on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. He went from the pier to his quarters at the St. Regis.

The first thing that M. Witte did after the crowd of newspaper men had asked him for an expression of his views was to deny, through Professor Frederick de Martens, a member of the Privy Council of Foreign Affairs, who is a member of the Russian suite, that he had given an interview which was sent by wireless telegraph from Sisasconset to the effect that the discussion on the peace treaty would not last a week because Japan's terms were intolerable.

At first M. Witte made this denial without reservation. It was read to him by Professor de Martens, to whom a copy of the published telegram had been handed, and after he had heard it through Professor Martens said:

"M. Witte instructs me to say that he never made any such statement. How could he do so without a knowledge of what Japan's terms are?"

On the revenue cutter which went down the bay to meet the Kaiser Wilhelm were M. Nicholas de Ladygensky, Consul-General of Russia in this city; Baron Schlippenbach, Russian Consul-General in Chicago, Ill.; Baron Schilling, Vice-Consul in this city; M. Kutzleb, agent of the Russo-Chinese Bank, and Gregory Wilenkin, Russian financial agent in Washington.

A Commanding Figure.

Standing on the port side of the ship when the party from the cutter boarded her was the commanding figure of M. Witte, who is almost universally admitted to be the foremost man in Russia. His personality is striking and commands instant attention, although he looks little like a Russian. He is a man of heroic proportions, being more than six feet tall and of heavy build.

His head and face strongly resemble Roscoe Conkling's. With his quiet dignity is a manner which seems almost like settled melancholy. This impression is heightened by his eyes, which are particularly soft and kindly and sad. A sparse, grizzled beard covers his face and his hair is gray and quite thin behind.

He wore a well-fitting suit of grayish tint, a round Panama hat, upstanding collar, a ready-tied black four-in-hand scarf and brown silk gloves. He leaned heavily on a black malacca walking stick.

M. Witte was the lion of the ship on the voyage, and his affability, his continued good humor and his democratic ways were commented on freely. Every day, and for the greater part of each day, he was in the office and the salon, where he evidently took much pleasure in conversing on many subjects with those who spoke French. In none of these conversations was the subject of the peace conferences touched on unless M. Witte gave some encouragement to such a trend in the talk, and it was said that no one abused his affability to the extent of asking any impertinent questions.

The envoy and his suite dined in their private dining room, but on the occasion of the Captain's dinner one of the passengers at the Captain's table offered M. Witte his seat. He accepted on the condition that he should not be expected to wear evening dress or make an address, and in return asked the gentleman who made the offer to dine with him in his private suite.

As the ship passed up the bay and the skyscrapers of the city came into view M. Witte expressed a desire to go up on the bridge and view the vast panorama of craft and edifice. He and the reporters and the secretaries of the party went up to the place where the Captain stood, and as each of the great buildings was pointed out to him he expressed his delight and wonderment.

As the vessel came up to the dock the band on board played the Russian national anthem. There was a great roar from the pier, where a crowd of Russians who had followed the vessel in the tug Lewis Pulver up the bay had gathered. When the gangplank was let down there was a rush of these members of the Slavonic Society to get on board in order to perform the rites of "Chleb a Sul," the ancient Slavonic custom of presenting bread and salt to the guest.

A slight accident to the running gear of the vehicle in which they were being driven to the St. Regis caused M. Witte and his secretary to change to another cab at Twenty-third street and Broadway.

M. Witte and the members of his suite were guests at an informal dinner given that night by Baron Rosen at the Union Club.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House,
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
Office Hours 8 to 11 a. m.
1 to 5 p. m. CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

PURE GOODS
The following
SPECIAL BRANDS
always in stock

Big Rock	I. W. Harper
Rose Valley	Upper Crust
Upper Ten	Kentucky Taylor
Joe Gideon	American Malt
Murray Hill	Budweiser Rye
Pleasant Hill	Deep Springs
Green River	AAAA Lincoln County
Jack Daniel No. 7	Wilson
Old Spring	Good Wood
Shaw's Malt	Club House Rye, 10 years old.
Jefferson County Rye	Cascade, 14 years old.
Old Harvest Corn, 5 years old

I carry a Full Line of Barrel Goods which I sell in Jugs from half gallon up. Mail orders promptly filled.

A. STEIN,
Bank Saloon. Calera, Ala.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS.
PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!

If you have timber lands for sale, want to buy a good home for $25.00 cash and the balance on long payments to suit purchaser, or if you want a position as log cutter, teamster or in saw mill or planing mill, write
The Marbury Lumber Co.
Marbury, Ala.

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

ROGER'S SONG.

Who loves the rose without a thorn?
Not I.
No guardian darts around her close,
For every passing hand she blows.
With every touch her bloom is strawn—
I love no rose without a thorn. Not I.

Who loves the bee without a sting? Not I.
'Tis but a stupid, idle drone
May live a feeble life alone,
And be so dull and poor a thing—
I love no bee without a sting. Not I.

Who loves a maid without a will? Not I.
A thornless rose, a stingless bee,
A will-less maid, are not for me;
Give me the sweet wild briar still—
I love no maid without a will. Not I.
—From "Sweetbriar," by Dorothea Gore Browne.

How Binks Milked the Cow.

THE "real" cow which the Binkses were to have with their summer farm finally appeared one evening, in company with a wild headed boy, and when she had been turned into the yard, Mr. Binks went up to the house and said:

"Well, she's here at last; and now for the romantic dairy business. Come out and look the winsome wee thing over, and see me do the milking act."

She was a cow with a "crumpled horn." More than that, she was undersized and scrubby, and her eye did not have that frank, innocent expression always to be found in the humble minded cow.

"I—I don't like her looks," was Mrs. Binks' verdict, after a long survey.

"What did you expect?" asked Binks. "Did you imagine she'd have two humps, like a camel, or a trunk, like an elephant? A cow is a cow. If you are looking for a rhinoceros or a buffalo you'll have to go further."

"I've seen cows before," replied the lady, with a little pepper in her tones. "She may be better than she looks; but I think you'll be disappointed in her. She's evidently very common stock."

"Oh, is she, eh? That shows how much you know about cows. She's pure Leghorn."

"I never heard of a Leghorn cow," exclaimed Mrs. Binks.

"Haven't you? that's wonderful! Perhaps you never heard of a Southdown or a Merino cow? There are lots of things for you to learn yet, especially about farming. I don't say this cow is handsome, or as graceful as an antelope; but what we are after is milk and cream. She's a Leghorn, if I know anything about cows, and she'll probably have to be milked about five or six times a day. I will now open the performance."

"I don't believe you have ever milked a cow in your life," she said.

"Don't you? Well, prepare for a surprise. The day you put on short dresses I milked sixteen cows and churned twenty pounds of butter. I may be rusty; but—"

"But what?"

"I was just thinking whether you milked a Leghorn cow on the right or left side. It's on the left, I think."

"All cows are milked on the right-hand side, Mr. Binks."

"Perhaps so; but we'll try this one on the left. I'll use that old soap box for a milk stool. You can sit down on that stone and sing while I play the dairymaid. This was one of the things that induced me to hire this farm for the summer—coming out to milk our own Leghorn cow as the shades of evening——"

The shades of evening didn't fall, but the cow picked up a hind foot, and sent the milk pail whirling twenty feet away, and as Mr. Binks dodged he fell off the box.

"By the mud of New Jersey," he shouted, as he turned over and got up, "but I'll have her life to pay for this!"

"I told you it was the wrong side," protested his wife.

"Wrong side be hanged! What's the difference to a cow? She's here to be milked, and she can't have her own way about things. If she tries that little game on me again I'll break her in two! We'll drive her into a corner over there. Come to remember, Leghorn cows always have to be driven into a corner to be milked."

This time Binks approached her on the right-hand side, and, after patting her hip in a fatherly way for a minute, he said:

"Whoa, now, and back up! That's the style! Mrs. Binks, you walk up and down and sing something. What this cow lacks is confidence in us. She can't tell what our designs are. Sing a couple of verses of 'Come Into the Garden, Maude,' and give her to understand she is among friends."

"And you be easy in taking hold. Some cows have to be petted, you know."

"I'll attend to the petting business. I know this is the right side, after all; but I'll have her taught to be milked on both sides within a week. I want no one-sided cows around me. Jee-whiz! what was that?"

The cow had lifted both hind feet at once, but missed both pail and Mr. Binks.

"You never milked a cow in all your life," exclaimed Mrs. Binks.

"Then I'll begin now, or perish in the attempt!" he shouted. "Confound her! does she think this is a circus, and she is trying to jump backward through a paper hoop? Back up, or look out for a storm. Now then, start that singing again. Never milked a cow! I'll show you whether I ever did or not!"

Mr. Binks started in with grim determination.

Once or twice in his life he had seen a man milk a cow. He distinctly remembered that it was all hand work, and that no machinery was employed either above or below. Mrs. Binks had finished the second line of the song, when the cow made a sudden movement with her left leg. It was a combination of football, sliding for a base, and forked lightning. The milk pail flew past her, and hit the fence with a bang, but Mr. Binks, and his box, and grim determination flew the other way. He wasn't exactly sure what had happened, and he asked no questions until his breath returned, and he could sit up.

Then he queried:

"Was it the—the cow?"

"It was the cow," answered Mrs. Binks. "I told you that you knew nothing about milking."

"She—she kicked me, did she?"

"She did. Give me the pail, and I'll see what I can do. You had better go in and lie down."

"I think I will for—for a minute or two, and then I'll come out and see who kicked the cow and made her kick me! I'll break her back with a hatchet!"

Mrs. Binks got the pail and box, and sat down to the cow. Ten minutes later she entered the house.

"Well, Mr. Binks, Green has given you a nice sort of a cow, hasn't he?"

"Did you milk her?" he groaned.

"There was no milk to be had. She hasn't been a milch cow. If I were you——"

"Stop! I am now in what is probably a dying state, having received a ten-thousand-pound blow in the pit of the stomach. If I die you will have accomplished your cold-blooded purpose; if I survive until morning you and I and the cow will have a little talk, and straighten things out.",

"But what did I do?"

"Never you mind. A woman who will kick a cow to make that cow kick and kill her husband is guilty of murder, and she's no wife of mine. Just keep away from me until I die or recover, and then this thing can be settled in about two minutes."

"And you say I kicked the cow?"

But Mr. Binks only glared at her for a moment, and then turned his face to the wall, and refused to speak again. The iron had entered his soul. —New York Weekly.

Blind Man Who Tells the Time.

Charles Bohannan, of Taylorsville, is totally blind. Light and darkness are the same to him, but he makes his certain way about the streets with the aid of a cane, and sometimes puts to shame men possessed of two good optics. Yesterday Charlie visited the county jail. After talking a while he pulled out his watch, an ordinary gold timepiece, with a double case, held it in his hands a moment in the usual way, and then snapped it shut with a sigh of relief.

"Well, it's time for me to start home," he remarked.

"What time is it, Charlie?" he was asked quizzically.

"One minute to three," was the prompt response.

Every watch in the crowd except Charlie's came into view. It required longer for the men with good eyes to verify Charlie's observation than it did for him to ascertain the time, but he was declared correct almost to the second.

"Good-by," and he was off, without waiting to hear the discussion his feat had precipitated.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

How Plants See.

An interesting theory of the mechanism by which the direction of incident light is perceived by plants has been put forward by G. Haberlandt, a German botanist. "He believes that the epidermic cells are, so to speak, the eyes of the plant. Thus, according to his view, when light strikes a leaf at right angles to the surface it results, from the plano-convex form of the epidermic cells, that the inner wall of each cell is illuminated more brightly in the centre than at the periphery. This makes it possible for the leaf to orientate itself in regard to light. Thus, suppose the plant to be moved so that the light now strikes the leaf obliquely, the bright patches of light on the inner cell walls will no longer be central. This change may be believed to constitute a stimulus calling forth a curvature of the leaf stalk by which the leaf is brought again to its normal position at right angles to the incident light. Thus, the leaf moves when the bright patch is not central, and comes to rest when each of its epidermic cells is centrally illuminated."—Nature.

Lightning Looped the Loop.

Wednesday night's electric storm was one of the worst and also one of the most peculiar that I have ever seen, and as I worked throughout the night I had unusual opportunities for its observation.

One of the strange features of the storm was the peculiar shape some of the flashes of lightning assumed. One flash actually looped the loop. Starting from the clouds, it traveled earthward, toward the south. Then it suddenly made an upshoot skyward and then coming down it completed the loop, crossing its own path and dying out in darkness as it neared the ground.—Chicago News.

Much Ado About Nothing.

An old woman who entered a country savings bank not long ago was asked whether she wanted to draw or deposit.

"Nayther; oi wants to put some money in," was the reply.

The clerk entered the amount and pushed the slip toward her to sign.

"Sign on this line, please," he said.

"Above or below it?"

"Just above it."

"Me whole name?"

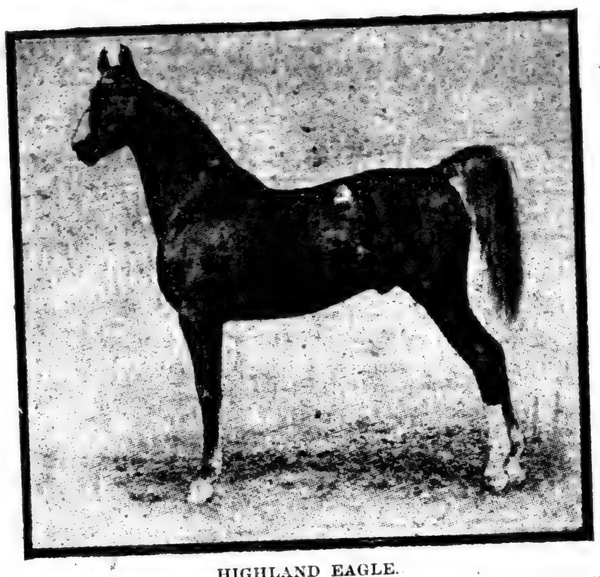
"Yes."

"Before Oi was married?"

"No; just as it is now."

"Oi can't write."—Harper's Weekly.

THE PERFECT HORSE.

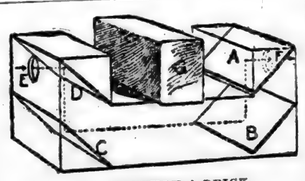


HIGHLAND EAGLE.

Selected by a jury of experts as the most perfect type of Kentucky saddle horse, and recently purchased by Thomas F. Ryan, of the New York Equitable Life, automobile and traction magnate.

HOW TO SEE THROUGH A BRICK

"To see through a brick wall" is an expression often used in a figurative way. How would you like to make a device that will enable you to apparently see through a brick, or any other opaque object? It may be easily done if you are at all handy with tools; all you need is a box with mirrors, and this is the way it is made.



SEEING THROUGH A BRICK.

Construct a hollow box, like the one you see in the illustration. One side is represented as removed, that you may see the interior arrangement. You can easily make the case, says the Home Journal, by sawing down a box and using the lid for the middle platform.

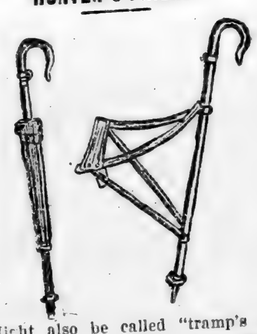
You will need four pieces of looking glass the width of the box, and these you fasten at an angle of forty-five degrees, as you see A, B, C and D arranged. The reflecting surfaces face each other and a small hole is made at each end of the box, E and F, each hole being fitted with a piece of plain glass.

Now, if you place an object before the opening F, you will, by looking in the opening E, see that object as if you were looking straight at it. This is because the object at F is reflected in the mirror A, which is reflected in B, which in turn is again reflected across the box to mirror C, and then up to D, and that image is seen by your eye at E. All of which, you see, is very simple.

If you now place a brick, or any opaque object, between the two ends of the box, as at G, you see, of course, that it makes no difference in viewing the image. But if you hide all this mechanism from your friends, and place the box for one to look through, he will be much amazed to find that he can see through box and brick to the image you have placed at the opposite end beyond the box.

Either E or F may be used to look through, as the object is always at the opposite end outside the piece of glass. Instead of a brick you may use a hat or a book, or even your hand, at G.

HUNTER'S FRIEND.



Might also be called "tramp's delight." It is more than a cane and a stool, for it can be drawn out to twice its pictured length to serve as an alpenstock or as a gun rest. Besides, it contains a dagger warranted to kill a deer or a dog. It would be perfect if it included, as it might, an umbrella and a tent. It weighs two pounds and is made in Germany.—Philadelphia Record.

President Roosevelt has proclaimed a new forest reserve in California.

SAYS MR. CITYMAN--GEE! I THINK FARMERS ARE SO FUNNY LOOKING —From Home and Farm.

Common Things.

How many of you have access to a carpenter's shop? It is so convenient to have such tools and still handier to know how to use them. I have been fortunate in this respect. Only yesterday I had need of the pliers. By noon I had used the hog ringers and the plane and drawing knife though I am no mechanic. The usual admonition is—"Be careful, and don't run onto nails." We once had neighbors that were continually borrowing and not careful about returning. My mother resolved that she'd be mistress of her own movements so she bought a saw, a gimlet, hammer, hatchet and auger. These she hid in the spare room under a mattress but the joke was on her. The hiding place was once discovered by a most dignified gentleman from a theological seminary who was sleeping on the bed.—Indiana Farmer.

A Paris automobile building firm is just about completing a 110-horse-

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

THE PLASTER CAT.

When I was as little as some of you are
I had something to keep for my own—
The most beautiful thing that the dreamman could bring,
In the loveliest dream ever known.

It was white, with black streaks (that came off on my cheeks),
When I hugged it too hard in warm weather;
Its collar was red, its smile was well bred,
And we were so happy together.

I'm coming to that—'twas a great plaster cat,
Oh, almost as big as myself!
At night she was placed on a chair near my bed,
And daytimes she lived on a shelf.

'Twas a very sad day when the shelf it gave way,
And she fell on the carpet and died.
I saved all the pieces, and more than a week,
Off and on between meals, I cried.

'Twas a long time ago, as maybe you know,
But I'm still hoping, sometime or other,
By searching the shops where they sell plaster cats,
I may possibly find me another.

But there's always a something that all of them lack;
They never are quite to my mind;
For either the spots are too big and too black,
Or the smile's not exactly refined.

And if smile and if spot are correct—but they're not—
It is sure to be true, I have found,
That the claws are all wrong and the paws are not right,
Or the tail is too long or to round.
—Valentine Adams, in St. Nicholas.

A PASTIME FOR RAINY DAYS.

Three of our readers were spending some vacation days in the country at an old farmhouse owned by an uncle. During fair weather they had lots and lots of delightful things to do out of doors, but at last there came a day when the rain came down in torrents and out-of-door pleasures were entirely out of the question.

What to do puzzled the youngsters at first. They explored the place thoroughly, but the minutes dragged and no solution came; nothing which promised fun. George, the younger man of the party, aged ten, was moodily catching flies, of which there were vast numbers, while his sisters, Helen and Beatrice, looked idly on.

"I wish you would not do that, George," said Helen at length. "You hurt those flies catching them that way, even if you do let them go at once, and it is cruel."

"Well, what's a fellow to do?" asked George, surlily. "You'll find me something better to do and I'll stop."

Suddenly Helen clapped her hands.

"Oh, dandy!" she cried. "I know something that is loads more fun and which won't hurt the poor little flies at all!"

She ran into the sitting-room and got a piece of light tissue paper, sending Beatrice for the glue pot. While Beatrice was gone Helen cut the paper into tiny bits half an inch square. She had twelve pieces, and on four she put her own initial, H., on four a big B. and a G. on the remaining four. Then she drew a circle with chalk on the table, the circle being about two feet in diameter.

When Beatrice returned with the glue Helen spread a very little over each bit of paper on the side not marked by the initial which each piece bore. Then she laid all twelve bits of paper in the circle, initials down, and on the glue side of each sprinkled a bit of pulverized sugar.

"Now," she said, "we have each four bits of paper marked with our initials. The flies will light on them to get the sugar and be stuck fast by the glue. Then they will try to get away, and whichever one of us has one of our four bits of paper first carried out of the circle by a fly wins the game!"

The others clapped their hands and drew chairs to the table all eagerness. No glumness now, no cross looks nor sharp words. All three watched, keen as hawks, for the first fly.

In a minute one lit on a bit of paper bearing a G., and George danced about like an Indian.

"Oh, look!" he cried. "I've got one! I'm going to win!" But the fly had two legs free, and instead of attempting to fly, he started to crawl away, dragging the paper after him. Just then another lit on one of Beatrice's pieces, got stuck fast and attempted to fly away, but he was a small fly and the paper was too heavy for him. He would wave his wings furiously and drag the paper two or three inches each time he tried, but then he would have to rest.

Still both flies were getting nearer and nearer to the circle's edge, although they were going in opposite directions, and the race was very exciting. Suddenly, swoop! down came another fly, alighting on one of Helen's papers. He was fast in a second, but he immediately flew away with it, going out of the circle like a sled, paper and all. Helen had won, but only by a very narrow margin, for an instant later George's fly crawled over the circle's edge.

Although Helen had scored the first point, the game was by no means over, for there were still papers left in the ring and flies were coming thick and fast. First one, then another player scored points, and the game ended by two flies carrying off the last remaining two papers marked B. Little Beatrice had won, for now all four of her papers were gone from the circle.

Helen, George and Beatrice know now what to do on rainy days during fly-time. Suppose you try it when you are in the position in which they found themselves.—New York Evening Mail.

THE FLY CARRIED AWAY HELEN'S BIT OF PAPER.

DOGS AS POLICEMEN.

The Philadelphia police are using dogs as helpers in their work. They have found that the famous St. Bernard dogs can be easily trained to discover unconscious men in alleyways or doorways or under wagons, who, because of drink, are succumbing to the cold, and if left uncared for, would soon be beyond recovery. Returning to his master, the dog speedily gives the policeman to understand that he is needed, by dragging at his coat until he follows him to the place where the unfortunate man is lying. And not until the latter has been transferred to the ambulance or the patrol wagon will the dog give his attention to other things.

With their marvelously keen scent these dogs are quick to detect the smell of fire, and therefore it has been easy to teach them to give warning to the police whenever they scent out the presence of an incipient conflagration. One dog, named Rex, has discovered no less than five fires before a sign of smoke had revealed the danger to the watchman. Discovered thus early, while still in a smouldering condition, the fire was easily quenched, and thousands of dollars' worth of property thereby saved.

The St. Bernard dogs are also effective in the recovery of lost children. A little training has taught them that a crying child in the midst of a crowd of people is probably lost, and they have several times brought to the station house some little boy or girl who has strayed away from home and friends.

The dog police auxiliary has not yet been officially recognized in Philadelphia, but it is, nevertheless, a very efficient branch of the service. The demonstration of the ability of the dogs and the interests of public safety will lead in the future to the use of the St. Bernards in other cities and towns as adjuncts to the police force.

A MAGIC QUARTER.

A marked quarter is borrowed from a large ball of worsted is bread. Presto!- The worsted is unwound, and out falls the money that a minute before was in the owner's pocket. How is the solution: First procure a number of skeins of thick worsted, next a piece of tin in the shape of a flat tube just enough for a quarter to pass through and about four inches long. Now wind the worsted on one side of the tube to a good-sized ball, having a quarter of your own in your right hand. You may now show the trick. Place the worsted anywhere out of sight, borrow a marked quarter, and, taking it in your left hand, look at it and say it is good." Place the one in your own hand on the end of the table farthest from the company, then fetch the worsted, and while so doing drop the marked quarter through the tube. Pull the tube out and wind the worsted a little to conceal the hole. Put the tube into a tumbler, and taking the quarter you left on the table, show it to the company (who will imagine it to be the borrowed quarter), saying "Presto! Fly! Pass!" Give the end of the worsted to one of the audience and request him to unwind it, which, being done, the money will fall out, to the astonishment of all.—Good Literature.

A Berlin doctor lays it down that the piano should never be played by a child under sixteen years of [illegible]

A Lover's L[illegible]

O long are the lengths of [illegible]
'Twixt me and the dream
And late as in [illegible]
Persistently
I could breathe [illegible]
Inspired by Alas, I must
How—how could

[illegible]
No [illegible]
Shall I grow [illegible]
Mix

A[illegible]
S[illegible]
[illegible]
Well, some[illegible]
That hardly would [illegible]

Shall I delve into botany
And quote from the [illegible]
Shall I cull from the [illegible]
Bright gems of [illegible]
Love-liness from a [illegible]
Lutist
In delicate hand [illegible]
To indicate how I [illegible]
With passionate flutte

Shall I study the [illegible]
Shall I brood [illegible]
Sighs
Shall I ponder the [illegible]
For tropes that [illegible]
Dear heart [illegible]
Is [illegible]
So I'll just wait [illegible]
To [illegible]

THE GIRL IN THE [illegible]

(Copyrighted, 1905, by [illegible])

They sat in the first row of the gallery. Now that the tumult of the rush was over, the girl had time to take off her hat and smooth her rumpled hair. She was still breathless and her cheeks were glowing. The man beside her turned and looked back triumphantly. "We did pretty well to get this far front," he said. "There's a whole lot of people standing up. There's always a big rush for an all-star show. Seems as if the theater couldn't hold all the folks that want to come."

"Yes," assented the girl vaguely. "You see it's all so new and—and strange. I've only been in the theater once before in all my life. That was when Uncle Ben took me to see Shore Acres. Oh, that was so real. I could almost believe it was true. Will this be like Shore Acres, do you think?"

The man spread his program out on his knee. "Well, no—not exactly," he answered. "You see, this is Romeo and Juliet. I ain't strong on Shakespeare myself, but I thought you might like to see it, Esther."

"Thank you, Mr. Stubbins," said the girl, with a grateful glance. She was a pretty girl, fair-haired and fragile—"peaked lookin'" was the way the people in her aunt's dingy boarding house described her—when they spoke of her at all; for as errand girl, dishwasher and general drudge, Esther was not used to much consideration. No one ever took any notice of her. She never had a lover. True, there had been a gawky student who took delight in drawing her thin, delicate profile, and who used to murmur "Spirituelle" when she passed him the pickles, but until Mr. Stubbins came no one ever gave her so much as a kind word. He used to speak to her when they met in the hall, and once he took her to walk in Central Park. It was after that that he had asked her to go to the theater with him. When this piece of news spread amongst the boarders, they exchanged significant glances, but when they heard that the play was to be Romeo and Juliet it seemed as if the climax had been reached. One of the married women sniffed reminiscently. "I remember me and Jim went years ago when we was first engaged, and we held hands all durin' the last act."

"If you marry Mr. Stubbins you won't have to work so hard," said an

Fair-haired and fragile.

other of the boarders, kindly. Esther opened her eyes in an astonished glance. She had never thought of marriage as a means of escape. Mr. Stubbins was not an ideal lover; he was puffy and red-faced, and had abnormally large hands and feet, still, as Esther shyly acknowledged to herself, he was kind—kinder than any one else had ever been, or was likely to be. As for the play—the words "Romeo and Juliet" had no significance. She had never heard of the immortal tragedy of youth and love. In her humdrum life beauty and romance were unknown. The mere fact of going to the theater kept Esther in a fever of e[illegible]

PARTMENT.

ll both flies were getting near nearer to the circle's edge, a gh they were going in opposi ections, and the race was very e ng. Suddenly, swoop! down ca ther fly, alighting on one of Helen rs. He was fast in a second, b immediately flew away with it, s out of the circle like a shot, pap l all. Helen had won, but only b ery narrow margin, for an insta r George's fly crawled over th le's edge.
although Helen had scored the fir nt, the game was by no means ove there were still papers left in th g and flies were coming thick an
t. First one, then another playe ored points, and the game ended flies carrying off the last remai two papers marked B. Little Be e had won, for now all four of h were gone from the circle!
Helen, George and Beatrice kne w, what to do on rainy days durin me. Suppose you try it when yo n the position in which they foun
—New York Evening Ma

DOGS AS POLICEMEN.

The Philadelphia police are usin dogs as helpers in their work. The ve found that the famous St. Be nd dogs can be easily trained to di over the muscovies men in alleyway doorways or under wagons, who, b use of drink, are succumbing to th old, and if left uncared for, wou not be beyond recovery. Returni to his master, the dog speedily give the policeman to understand that he s found by dragging at his coat until h follows him to the place where the m desperate man is lying. And not un the latter has been transferred to th custody or the patrol wagon will th dog give his attention to other things
With their marvelously keen scen the dogs are quick to detect the sm of fire and therefore it has been ea to train them to give warning to th police wherever they ferret out th presence of an incipient conflagratio
One dog, named Rex, has discovered more than five fires before a sign

HELEN'S BIT OF PAPER.

smoke had revealed the danger to t watchman. Discovered thus ea while still in a smouldering condit the fire was easily quenched, and th sands of dollars' worth of prope
them by saved.
The St. Bernard dogs are also eff ive in the recovery of lost childr
A little training has taught them th crying child in the midst of a cr of people is probably lost, and t have several times brought to the tion house some little boy or girl w has strayed away from home friends.
The dog police auxiliary has not been officially recognized in Phila phia, but it is, nevertheless, a very cient branch of the service. The d onstration of the ability of the ind the interests of public safety lead in the future to the use of the B rnards in other cities and town adjuncts to the police force.

A MAGIC QUARTER.

A marked quarter is borrowed a large ball of worsted is brou Presto! The worsted is unwound, out falls the money that a minut fore was in the owner's pocket. s the solution: First procure a skeins of thick worsted, next a of tin in the shape of a flat tube enough for a quarter to pass thro and about four inches long. Now the worsted on one side of the to a good-sized ball, having a qu of your own in your right hand.
way now show the trick. Place worsted anywhere out of sight, bo a marked quarter, and, taking your left hand, look at it and say is good." Place the one in your hand on the end of the table far from the company, then fetch the sted, and while so doing drop marked quarter through the tube the tube out and wind the worst little to conceal the hole. Put th into a tumbler, and taking the qu you left on the table, show it t company (who will imagine it to borrowed quarter), saying "P Fly! Pass." Give the end of th to one of the audience and reque to unwind it, which, being done money will fall out, to the ast ment of all.—Good Literature.

A Berlin doctor lays it down the piano should never be used child under sixteen years of a

A Lover's Letter

O long are the leagues of division
'Twixt me and the dream of my heart!
And fate, as in wintry derision,
Persistently holds us apart.
I could breathe my devotion far better
Inspired by her presence, I know;
Alas, I must tell her by letter:
How—how should it go?

Shall I call her "my friend?" That sounds shabby;
No ice (except ices) for me;
Shall I greet her as "sweet?" That seems silly
Although she's as sweet as can be.
Shall I mention a goddess—any Venus,
Or one of her mythical crew?
Well, somehow I fancy (between us)
That hardly would do!

Shall I delve into botany's pages
And quote from the language of flowers
Shall I cull from the love of the sages
"Bright gems of expression" for hours?
Love-lines from a bard, perhaps Swinburne,
In delicate hand shall I frame,
To indicate how I within burn
With passionate flame?

Shall I study the stars in their courses?
Shall I brood on the moon from the glen?
Shall I ponder the ethical forces,
For tropes that are fitting to pen?
Dear heart, naught about nor above you
Is fair as you whom I adore,
So I'll just write—I love you! I love you!
He Mine—and no more.

—Clinton Scollard.

THE GIRL IN THE GALLERY

BY CONSTANCE D. MACKAY

(Copyrighted, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

They sat in the first row of the gallery. Now that the tumult of the rush was over, the girl had time to take off her hat and smooth her rumpled hair. She was still breathless and her cheeks were glowing. The man beside her turned and looked back triumphantly. "We did pretty well to get this far front," he said. "There's a whole lot of people standing up. There's always a big rush for an all-star show. Seems as if the theater couldn't hold all the folks that want to come."

"Yes," assented the girl vaguely. "You see it's all so new and—and strange. I've only been in the theater once before in all my life. That was when Uncle Ben took me to see Shore Acres. Oh, that was so real. I could almost believe it was true. Will this be like Shore Acres, do you think?"

The man spread his program out on his knee. "Well, no—not exactly," he answered. "You see, this is Romeo and Juliet. I ain't strong on Shakespeare myself, but I thought you might like to see it, Esther."

"Thank you, Mr. Stubbins," said the girl with a grateful glance. She was a pretty girl, fair-haired and fragile—"peaked lookin'" was the way the people in her aunt's dingy boarding house described her—when they spoke of her at all; for as errand girl, dishwasher and general drudge, Esther was not used to much consideration. No one ever took any notice of her. She never had a lover. True, there had been a gawky student who took delight in drawing her thin, delicate profile, and who used to murmur "Spirituelle" when she passed him the pickles, but until Mr. Stubbins came no one ever gave her so much as a kind word. He used to speak to her when they met in the hall, and once he took her to walk in Central Park. It was after that that he had asked her to go to the theater with him. When this piece of news spread amongst the boarders, they exchanged significant glances, but when they heard that the play was to be Romeo and Juliet it seemed as if the climax had been reached. One of the married women sniffed reminiscently. "I remember me and Jim went years ago when we was first engaged, and we held hands all durin' the last act."

"If you marry Mr. Stubbins you won't have to work so hard," said an-

Fair-haired and fragile.

other of the boarders, kindly. Esther opened her eyes in an astonished glance. She had never thought of marriage as a means of escape. Mr. Stubbins was not an ideal lover; he was puffy and red-faced, and had abnormally large hands and feet, still, as Esther shyly acknowledged to herself, he was kind—kinder than any one else had ever been, or was likely to be. As for the play—the words "Romeo and Juliet" had no significance. She had never heard of the immortal tragedy of youth and love. In her humdrum life beauty and romance were unknown. The mere fact of going to the theater kept Esther in a fever of excitement. When the great night arrived she put on her best gown and her hands shooks over the fastenings. Her aunt, kindled into kindliness by the unexpectedness of the situation, helped her to dress. "It would be a big thing for you if he should ask you to marry him, Esty," she said. "Now, don't sit silent like a bump on a log when he's talking to you, and don't have that far-away look in your eyes that you have right this minute. He's not much for looks, but he'll give you a good home, and you know, Esty, I've got enough to do to look after myself, without taking care of you."

Mr. Stubbins was not an ideal lover.

"Yes, Aunt," said Esther, thinking more of the theater than of Mr. Stubbins.

And now at last the moment of moments had arrived. She was there, inside the theater! The lights—the space—the sense of waiting for one knew not what—all were intoxication. It was like a dream. She only half saw the hurrying ushers—the people taking their places. When the orchestra began to play she clasped her hands together with a quick, nervous gesture. Then came the magic instant when the overture died to a whisper, the footlights glowed luminously in the darkness, and the great curtain rose slowly, giving to view a street scene in Verona.

"Ah!" said Esther, in a little shivering whisper.

And in spite of all her aunt's instructions it was the only word she spoke all the evening. Mr. Stubbins gave up any attempts at conversation, and confined himself to staring about the house, and now and then watching the rapt face beside him. It was his voice which roused Esther when the final curtain fell.

"Pretty good show, that was," said he.

"Yes—oh, Mr. Stubbins," answered Esther, coming from her state of dream to the actual present of work and boarding houses. They spoke little on the way home. Mr. Stubbins was wondering what was the quickest and easiest way of making a proposal: Esther was thinking of the impassioned words of Romeo. On the steps of her aunt's boarding house, Mr. Stubbins paused. The street was very still. The ugly rows of houses opposite were touched by moonlight—such moonlight as silvered the streets of Verona. Mr. Stubbins cleared his throat. "Esty," he began, "I ain't much at love-making like that fellow we saw this evening, but I want to say right here that I think a whole lot of you, and I—I want you to marry me! Will you? It's—it's a bargain, ain't it, Esty?"

A bargain! The sharp tongue of her aunt, or the love of Mr. Stubbins? A life of drudgery, or—or the bargain that he offered? She heard a window open upstairs, and knew that her aunt was leaning out to listen. For an instant the girl had a fleeting vision of the play which had taught her what love was.

"Come, Esty," urged Mr. Stubbins, "one little word! Which is it to be, yes or no?"

The window above creaked ominously. Esther threw back her head like one accepting a challenge.

"No!" she said.

HOW SHE CHARMED HIM.

Girl Whose Extravagance Won Her a Wealthy Husband.

"If I knew how to write stories," says a pension office woman, to the Washington Post, "I'd write one about my cousin Mattie. We're about the same age, and for the last fifteen years we've been earning our own livings. Mattie has been a school teacher, and I've been in office. Every time we met we used to talk about what we meant to do with the money a bachelor uncle of ours was to leave us some day. Mattie always said she intended to spend every cent of her share having a good time that she could remember all the rest of her life.

"'If I invest it,' she used to say, 'I may lose. If I buy a splendid good time with it, nobody can ever rob me of the memory of it.'

"Two years ago our uncle died and left each of us about $4,000. I was too sensible to fool mine away. I put it into suburban lots that I couldn't sell now for more than half what I gave for them. Mattie took four months' leave of absence, bought herself a lovely wardrobe, and went to California for the winter. She said she meant to spend every cent she had in just four months, and she did. When her leave of absence was up she hadn't a penny left. Teaching now? No, sir-ee. She met a very rich man in California and married him. And what charmed the man was the frank way in which she told him about her money and how she was spending it. He said he'd been looking all his life for a woman with good common sense, and Mattie was the only one he'd ever found."

The Critic and the Lady.

Talleyrand, the noted Frenchman, possessed wit of so high an order that it has stood well the test of time, and his jokes are still good. The author of "Juniper Hall" gives two of his sayings to Madame de Stael.

He was a great admirer of Madame Recamier and Madame de Stael, the one for her beauty, the other for her wit. Madame de Stael asked him one day if he found himself with both of them in the sea on a plank, and could only save one, which it would be, to which he replied:

"Ah! Madame de Stael knows so many things, doubtless she knows how to swim."

When "Delphine" appeared, it was said that Madame de Stael had described herself as Delphine, and that Talleyrand was the original of Madame de Vernon.

Meeting the authoress soon afterward, Talleyrand remarked, in his most gentle tone of voice:

"I hear that both you and I appear in your new book, but disguised as women."—Montreal Herald.

A Lesson at the Primaries.

Mrs. Dobbs waited until dinner was over and her husband lighted his pipe before she handed over the note Willie brought from the teacher.

"My boy," said Dobbs, when he had read it. "I understand from this that you are excused from school until the Board of Education has an opportunity to consider your case."

"Yes, sir," answered Willie, who had begun to whimper.

"Do you know what the Board of Education is, my son?"

"No, sir."

Dobbs went into the kitchen and got a good stout piece of board. Then he summoned his son, and for several minutes he was busy with Willie.

"That, my son," he said, as he finished, "is the only board of education we knew of when I was a lad."

A Chocolate Party.

A chocolate party is a new idea for a Sunday school class or a church social. The helpers serve hot chocolate and cocoa with whipped cream, chocolate cake and chocolate ice cream. Sell chocolate candies of different varieties. It would be nice if they could make them at home. A very pretty touch could be given if the girls who wait on the tables would dress in the costume of the chocolate girl who appears on the tins of chocolate in the stores. The dress is simple—a full skirt, a white kerchief folded over the shoulders, a full apron and a white cap. The costumes need not be made for the occasion, but may be devised from the clothes on hand, or, if you prefer to make it, cheap material may be used, and the cut is so simple that it will be little trouble to make.

He Forgot the Deaths.

William R. Merriam was talking in New York about the last census.

"All sorts of odd and interesting things happen," he said.

"One of the collectors told me how he had visited a village, and how, on the completion of his work, a crowd of villagers had gathered around him, anxious to know how much their population had increased in the last ten years.

"'It has increased,' said the father of a large family, 'about a hundred, I suppose?'

"'No,' said the collector. 'It has only increased six.'

"'Oh, dear! There must be some mistake,' said the father, slowly; 'I have increased it more'n six myself.'"—Pittsburg Gazette.

The Fatal Highway.

A south Georgia singer says he tried to follow the old-time advice about "Keeping in the middle of the road," with the following result:

"I kept in the middle o' the road,
A mile an' a half from town,
An' a automobile, it come along,
An' knocked me upside down!

"I kept in the middle o' the road,
An' a hurricane hit a tree,
An' blowed it clean across that road,
An' killed a mule for me!

"No more in the middle o' the road,
You'll see me joggin' along;
I'd rather ride with a lightnin'-flash
Or a hurricane blowin' strong!'"
—Atlanta Constitution.

KNEW ONLY ONE BAR.

Convivial Irishman's Misunderstanding Quite Natural.

A Cincinnati man was describing the dinner in London that admitted Joseph H. Choate to the society of the Old Benchers of the Inner Ter—

"Mr. Choate was in his best—he said. "With epigrams, wit—and anecdotes he kept the table in a continuous roar.

"Perhaps he made his most telling impression with a story about an impoverished young Irish gentleman, the Honorable Denis Bellew.

"He said that Mr. Bellew, driven forth by poverty from his father's estate, went to London to seek his fortune.

"He had been a gay, convivial blade, and in the little home village he was missed. There was not a poacher nor a roisterer within ten miles that hadn't a soft spot for Denis in his heart.

Word one day passed about that up at the castle news had been received of Denis. The village at once became excited, and a deputation of a half dozen or so was soon on its way to see the old lord.

"'My lord,' said the spokesman, 'is it true ye've gotten news o' yer son Denis?'

"'Aye, true enough. News at last, boys,' said his lordship.

"'Faith, then, an' phwat might the bhoy be doin' up in London?' was the next question.

"'He has been called to the bar,' the lord answered proudly.

"The deputation looked at one another, for the phrase was new to them. Finally, in a loud whisper, one said:

"'Oi don't know what thot manes; but from what Oi remember of the bhoy, he didn't want no callin'.'"—Pittsburg Gazette.

The Age of Pretense.

Pretense is one of the fashions of the time. Pretense is becoming so perfected and so general that if a person should put off all pretense he would run the risk of being charged with affectation.

Next to having, the best thing nowadays is seeming to have. There is really some foundation in reason for this kind of pretense, since it has become the fashion of the world to measure a man's success in life by the dollars he has made.

Here is a cable message which tells of a new phrase of pretense:

"Paris—The existence of a new and curious business in Paris has just transpired. This is the hiring out of wedding presents to brides, so that they may impress their friends and their acquaintances with the number and value of their gifts. Jewelry, lace, furs, etc., are lent out for a consideration, and after they have served their purpose and been duly chronicled in the newspapers they are returned to the owners. It appears that a well-known Paris jeweler does a large business of this nature."—Washington Star.

Queer Proofs of Love.

Mme. Myriam Harry, the Parisian novelist who has traveled about the world a good deal, tells what evidences of affection are prized by men and women in different countries. In Jerusalem she once met a young Arab woman who had not a tooth left in her head. Mme. Harry's native servant said: "Lucky woman; her husband knocked all her teeth out. He does love her." In Cochin China Mme. Harry was told that there a husband was not believed to love his wife properly until he had made a present to her of a coffin. In Galicia, among the sect of masochists, a man values his wife's affection by the degrees of suffering which she causes him to endure. Mme. Harry there once heard a betrothed youth say to his affianced bride: "If you really loved me you would consent to bind me and flog me with this whip." At Stockholm one of Mme. Harry's friends is now suing her husband for divorce on the ground that "he does not love her soulfully."

The Patriot.

A resident of Ava, N. Y., was talking about the late Hiram cronk, the last survivor of the war of 1812.

"At the age of 100," said the Ava man, "Mr. Cronk still had an alert mind. Above all things he was a patriot. He believed firmly in the supremacy of our republic.

"An English traveler, out of curiosity, came to Ava to see Mr. Cronk one day. The old patriot praised America extravagantly and condemned England as an outworn and dying nation.

"The Englishman stood this talk as long as he could. Then he said, hotly:

"'Suppose our superb fleet were to land 25,000 British marines in New York—what would you Yanks do then?'

"'Do?' said Mr. Cronk. 'Why, dern it, our police would arrest them.'"—New Orleans States.

Delight All Around.

"Delighted," says the blossom as it gazes
on the sun,
Which brings the kind assurance that the chilly days are done.
"Delighted," says the fish that's gayly leaping in the stream;
"Delighted," says the butterfly, with iridescent gleam.
There's a gentle optimism that has crept into the time,
In the city's busy street and where the honeysuckles climb,
With welcoming approval you will hear its hearty chime:
"Dee-lighted!"

Despite the various cares that keep men sitting on the lid,
Despite the enemies to public welfare who lie hid,
We're building schools and colleges and,
what is better yet,
We're rearing boys well worthy of the knowledge they will get.
The nation's in its May day and its future's fair and free,
And its faults are slight when measured
'gainst the benefits we see,
And Uncle Sam is justified in feeling he should be
"Dee-lighted!"
—Washington Star.

Precepts Boys Should Study

From a place at the cobbler's bench at a mere pittance, William L. Douglas has risen to the highest executive position in the State of Massachusetts, that of Governor, and has made himself a millionaire.

His rules and precepts of success were given recently by him through the Boston Sunday American. They are rules that he has tried and tested, the rules which have elevated him to the highest position in the gift of the state, the rules which have won for him an enormous fortune.

The Governor is interested in boys. He declares that these rules are given for the benefit of boys. Here they are:

What are the secrets of success? Will I tell the boys of Massachusetts what I think they are? Recently in talking to a delegation of bright-faced boys, I told them that they should, in order to make the most of life, obey the old maxim, "Stick to your last."

Everything in nature is fitted to do one thing well and spends its whole life doing it. You never hear of the ant going into the honey-making business, nor of the bee building ant-hills for a change. Each one knows its place in the world and sticks to it, and that is what boys must do if they would accomplish great things.

And remember always to keep your ambition up to the top notch. What ever you do, try to do it better than the other fellow. At school make it a point to stand at the head of your class, and at play don't be satisfied until you can jump the farthest or throw the straightest. Then when you enter business life this matter of getting ahead will become a habit.

Now I want to give you another thing to think about while you're growing up and preparing to win fame and fortune in the commercial world. It is this: Don't try to do what you like—do what you can. That's a good companion-piece for "stick to your last." Don't let the attraction of something you don't know lure you away from the thing you do know. Once upon a time a young man whose father made pickles, and who had learned the pickle business from A to Z, decided that he'd like to go into the business of making molasses candy. He didn't know anything about it, but he liked molasses candy and thought it would be great fun to make it and sell it. So he proceeded to try his hand at the business. The result was disastrous. His candy wasn't good candy, because he didn't know how to make it properly, and, therefore, nobody wanted to buy. Finally he went back to the pickle business and made a fortune, because he certainly did know how to make good pickles, and everybody bought them.

Do what you can and stick to it. That's wisdom. About the most striking sentence I remember is this one, written by the great philosopher, Thomas Carlyle: "The king is the man who can." There's a whole volume of sound sense contained in those seven one-syllable words. All the elements of success are there set forth and the whole secret of greatness sticks out conspicuously from that simple sentence—"The king is the man who can."

Troubles of a Clergyman

A popular clergyman took a half dozen letters from his pocket, says the Boston Post.

"These are anonymous letters," he said. "They have come to me during the last three weeks. I am continually receiving strange anonymous letters—questions, usually, that I am requested to answer in the sermon of the next Sunday.

"Recently a young man wrote anonymously and said that when he was a boy of 16 he worked for a grocer. He stole from his grocer's cash drawer, a little at a time, over $300. Now he was prosperous and he desired to return the money. Would it be sufficient to return it as 'conscience money from an unknown source,' or should he make the grocer a confession? I answered that it would be sufficient to return the money.

"I got a letter last year in a woman's hand that asked me to preach against the sin of murder. 'One will hear you,' said the letter, 'who has murder in his heart, the murder of an innocent, white-haired old man.' I preached my best sermon against murder and I didn't neglect to draw a fancy picture of an old man with white hair being slain by a young chap.

"Sometimes, in these letters, ethical questions are propounded that stump me. A sailor, for instance, once wrote something like this: 'Two years ago, before I got religion, I married a sweet young girl, and we now have two beautiful children. I am a bigamist by rights, for in '97 I married a Malay girl in Port Said. She was a bad one, drunk all the time, and one night she cut my head open with a bottle in my sleep. So then I left her. Since I got religion I have tried to look her up, but she disappeared from Port Said five years ago, the same day a traveler was robbed of a silver watch and a bag of gold. Now, I want to do the right thing. Ought I to leave my present wife and try to find and reform the other one. Ought I to confess to my present wife?'

"I told this sailor he had sinned, but, under the circumstances, he had best keep quiet and say nothing unless his first wife turned up again.

"Thieves, murderers, bigamists, forgers and what-not write to me for comfort. It is amazing how miserable all these undiscovered and unpunished evil-doers are. It goes to show how wretched a thing sin is."

He Liked "Grudely" Beer

The venerable economist, Edward Atkins, who recently told woman how much she ought to spend on dress each year, met the other day a young girl.

The gown of this girl was simple and beautiful, and Mr. Atkinson, in his capacity of dress expert, admired it.

"A grudely gown," he said. "A pretty grudely gown."

"'But I don't know what 'grudely' means," the young girl objected.

"'Grudely' is an epithet of eulogy," said Mr. Atkinson. "It is an obsolete word, preserved in the story of the northern farmer as extinct flies are sometimes preserved in amber."

"But what is the story of the northern farmer?"

"I'll tell you," said Mr. Atkinson, smiling. "There was a northern farmer of the old school, who, as he rode Londonward on his gray mare, espied one morning a cozy inn. He stopped before the inn door, and rapped with his cropstick. A pretty maid appeared.

"'Has t'ou gotten any grudely good beer?" the farmer asked.

"'Yes, sir,' said the maid, as she dropped a curtsey.

"'Then fetch a quart, lass,' said the farmer.

"The quart was brought in a mug of polished pewter, and the farmer tossed it off, smacked his lips, and said, in a hesitating way:

"'It seems pretty grudely. Fetch another quart.'

"'This, too, was brought, and the farmer, after draining it, smiled.

"'It is grudely,' he said. 'A grudely beer. I'll get down and have some.'"
—Los Angeles Times.

One Cause of Appendicitis

Appendicitis is often due to bad teeth, said Dr. E. S. Thompson, lecturing at Gresham College, London. The same organisms, he said, were present both in defective teeth and in the diseased appendix, which proved that dental decay was capable of causing appendicitis.

"I see no evidence to show that our teeth are deteriorating to an alarming extent with the growth of civilization," he declared, and he pointed out that an even larger proportion of diseased teeth had been found among Egyptian and Roman remains than existed at present.

"Tobacco has an injurious effect on the digestion," he went on, "but I do not think that nicotine has any more effect on the teeth than alcohol. But tobacco certainly blackens the teeth, and so causes many persons who are careful of their personal appearance to brush their teeth more often than they would otherwise do."

He had found cod liver oil amazingly successful in promoting the growth of teeth in children, and he recommended the tooth brush drill as part of the curriculum of schools. Dr. Thompson also urged the practice of washing the teeth after meals, and rubbing them twice a day, and particularly the last thing at night.—London Mail.

The North Sea's Summons

The voice of the North sea calleth,
Solemn and full and slow;
"Come down to my icy caverns,
My grottoes and deeps below.
I will lay my head on your forehead
And on your fevered breast.
You shall sleep serene and quiet—
No dreams shall haunt your rest.

"I saw the boat of the Norseman
Afloat in the silent night;
I marked in the danger calmness,
In the eye undaunted light.
'Come down!' I cried. 'We're kindred,
Thou man of fearless brow!
The door am I of Valhalla!'"
How still his slumbers now!

"When the herring-boats outwander
I lift my mighty arms.
'How beats my heart for fishers,
The lovers of ocean charms!

The cold it has kept these waters
As pure as falling snow.
Come hither, intrepid seamen!"
Behold they lie below.

"No harbor am I for spices;
Upon my diadem
In filigree of frost I wear
The midnight sun for a gem.
The unknown north has fingers
That reach into my tide,
Oh, not for balmy pleasure
He clutches deep and wide.

"Ho, ye who fear not anguish,
Ye souls of steel, come forth!
As Jacob fought with the angel,
Come, struggle with the North!
Stand face to face with trouble
And meet death with a shout,
The gale that dims your courage
Shall blow the north star out!"
—Youths Companion.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

Clanton, Ala., Thursday, Aug. 10, 1905

UNION CLUBBING LIST....

The Union And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
The Union And Home & Farm	1.00
The Union And Dixie Home	1.00
The Union Saturday News	1.25
The Union And Weekly Age Herald	1.25
The Union And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
The Union and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.60
The Union And Twice-a-Week Globe-Democrat	1.50
The Union And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
The Union And Tri-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

TRUE COURAGE.

The man that has the courage of his conviction and announces where he stands is the man for those people to tie to who coincide in his views. Attorney A. C. Smith, in his card, says what so many of the better class of democrats have said privately for some time past, but his is the true courage that comes out in the open and lays bare the cancer of oligarchy that is fastened upon the democratic party of Alabama. He cuts to the bone in order that the festering sore may be removed by the scalpel of public opinion.

CURIOSITIES IN TAX VALUES.

Tax Commissioner Van Derveer has unearthed some peculiar (to put it mildly) values for taxation put on land owned by corporations in Chilton county. For instance, take the Alabama Mineral Land Company, which owns the mineral right on some 32,000 acres of land. It won't sell that right with the land, still they only value the right (for taxation) at one cent per acre, that is it pays for the rope tied to this 32,000 acres the munificent sum of $3.68 state and county taxes per year. This company also owned in fee simple last year about 19,000 acres, which it valued (for taxation) at $1.10 per acre or a little over $21,000, but in November, 1904, it sold 3,083 acres for $32,373.50. In short, it sold about one-seventh of the land for pretty near twice as much as they valued the whole (for taxation). Study this case. We'll later take up some other curious (but not rare) valuations for taxation purposes.

CHILTON COUNTY FARMERS.

Chilton county is at the fore in all things pertaining to the uplifting of the farmers' vocation. At Auburn's farmers' school our county led all others in attendance except the county in which Auburn is situated. Every one should read Mr. J. N. Dennis' letter in this paper, which he promises to follow up with others in due time. Mr. Dennis carried off the 2nd prize for the "best 10 ears of corn," and 3rd prize for judging "beef and dairy cattle," which, by the way, included hogs and sheep. He also came within 3 points of taking a prize for scoring chickens, all of which shows that he is an all around farmer. There were 340 farmers from all parts of Alabama in these competitions and only 9 prizes, so we have every right to feel proud of Bro. Dennis.

A NEW COMMANDMENT.

"There has been discovered among some ancient ruins what is supposed to be the eleventh commandment. The text is as follows: "Emas roi yltpmorp tseyap uoht sselnu repapswen a daer ton tlahs uoht.' It can be understood by beginning at the end of the last sentence and reading backward."

The above is clipped from the Dadeville Spot Cash, and if any of our readers can not make it out, call at the Union office and get the solution.

ENERGY.

Editor Union:

Just a few of the happenings. Prof. J. J. Mims has a very successful school at Enterprise. Prof. Henry Roberson has taught some good singing schools to our knowledge, but the school he has now is the best one of all. W. Y. Keel and family have returned home from their visit to Coosa county. Miss Claire Bullard, of Marbury, is stopping at her uncle's, M. C. Williams, and taking in the singing school. Very little sickness in this community, and when we don't have sickness or politics, we don't have much trouble; in fact, it would take two Irishmen and a jug of red whiskey to raise a row. I'm expecting politics to start at any time. I tell you, Mr. Editor, I've been looking wise for the last three months, and expecting somebody to name me for office, and if they don't I'm going to furnish the whiskey and there will be one of the biggest rows around old Energy you ever heard of. Well, Mr. Editor, I notice that a Florida writer says that the Republicans down there don't puff and blow much. They are contented with the federal offices. I wonder if they are like the Republicans that hold office here (I mean federal office); you see, Mr. Editor, when a democratic postmaster is arraigned before the federal court for selling whiskey, and he shows that he holds a government license, and they acquit him, but he resigns (?) his postmastership, and then they appoint another whose license has just expired. Of course, this seems pretty hard to the true Populists and Republicans; but let me say right here, boys, no matter how hard you get slapped in the face by some of the professed followers of the party, don't let it change the principles that you've been fighting for, lo! these many years. It's been said by some wise man that our Creator has unlimited knowledge, but Bro. Williams says "darned if he believes that he understands these democrats, even if he did create them." Parsons Bice and Bone have just closed a series of meetings at this place, and much good has been accomplished. I tell you it's a treat to see the people gather from the surrounding neighborhood and between sermons old friends have a general handshaking and inquiry about those at home, and talk of crops, and price of cotton; some of the more worldly-minded will talk about swapping horses, etc., and then there's the young folks, God bless them, what a pleasure to see those just in their 'teens stroll through the lanes and in the grove. It makes a fellow think of the days that are past for you, and of the restless nights you spent because that little maid with curly hair and hazel eyes had looked at some other boy more than at yourself. Well, it does make an old fellow long to be young again.

RED HEADED BOY.

Bethel, Aug. 8, 1905.

Editor Union:

The health of our community at this time is good.

Cotton is shedding badly; also shows much boll rot.

Early corn damaged from lack of rain. Late corn doing fairly well. The cow pea crop promises to be the largest ever grown here.

Many of our farmers are busy pulling fodder.

Farm hands are at a premium with plenty of buyers.

The farmer is the only person that is never without a job. He has no strikes or boycotts to worry over. No one is trying to get his place.

I had the pleasure of attending the farmers' summer school at Auburn July 25 to August 2; and I unhesitatingly say that there is not a farmer in our county but that would have been benefited by attending. One of the first lessons for us to learn is that we do not know it all.

While away I visited the school and experiment farm of Booker T. Washington and found that their work was thorough and up to date. They teach their students to work as well as to study.

Some of the speakers at Auburn and the subject of their lectures were as follows:

Joe Wing, of Breeders' Gazette, on silos and silage, the water supply for the house, raising sheep in the south, advice to breeders generally, and baby beef or calves for beef. Mr. Wing is a practical farmer who raised all his feed on his 320 acre farm to fatten 1,000 to 1,500 lambs per year; also has some alfalfa hay to sell.

F. J. Mirriam on trucking. Mr. Mirriam makes his living by truck farming, consequently is a practical and interesting lecturer.

Col. Thornton, of Talladega, another man who is proud to be a farmer, showed us how to put in tile drains properly; also gave field lessons on terracing. Others were Prof. Gaskell, of Washington, on forestry; Prof. Bentley, of Washington, on forage crops; Prof. Morgan, of Tennessee Experiment Station, on cattle ticks, yellow fever and malarial fever mosquitoes, tape worms and other worms.

Other lectures and subjects will be given in another article.

Yours for education for the farmers,
J. N. DENNIS.

CLANTON.

Editor Union:

Well, I can't stand it any longer. There's so much excitement in town and so much news, and when I see and hear such things as I have this last week, I can't sit still. Last Thursday morning I saw everybody was excited and such a rush for THE UNION. I didn't know what had happened, and thought maybe the editor had made some great break, but the excitement seemed to be mostly among the democrats and I could hear them say as I'd pass them on the street: "Have you seen where he's turned over?" and I though to myself, my! my!! has Judge Reynolds gone over to the democrats? Well, I struck out for the UNION office, but on my way I commenced to think, and remembered having seen the Judge with some leading democrats purring round him, and I said to myself this explains the whole matter. I arrived at THE UNION office about out of breath, but I called for a paper and when I looked on the editorial page, lo! and behold, I saw the reason for the excitement among the demmies. Col. A. C. Smith had come out in a card and said he was tired of democratic oligarchy, and had planted himself squarely in line with the people. Well, it's enough to excite a crowd like the democrats to have a man like Col. Smith to quit them and give his reasons to the public. You see, democrats around here don't care how bad you think they are as long as you don't say it out loud so that the people will hear. I hope every man in the county will read Col. Smith's card, for it has the right ring. He don't mince matters, but speaks right out in meeting. There are lots more men in that party who have said about the same thing in private talk. Now let them come boldly out. We are glad to have such men as Col. Smith with us, and invite all who think like him to come over. Well, we've had that famous dog case again, and when the case was called in the county court it looked like circuit court from the crowd. Say, we've got so smart at Clanton that not only the dogs know when to run and where to go, but the fleas actually knew when the dog trial was coming on and they gathered by thousands in the court room and made for the judge's seat and literally crowded him out. Talk about OUR dumb brutes being smart, why last Sunday an old SHEEP made a bet with a negro that he (the sheep) could outrun the negro, and so the negro and the sheep were carried out on the main street and the hat was dropped and off they went, but the sun was hot and the wool on the sheep was long, and the negro was sheared close, so he won out, but we had some fun anyway. I believe there are some folks that say Sunday is not the day for such things, but they are these old-fashioned folks that were brought up to keep the Lord's day holy. We had a bigger crowd than the preacher had in church, and it looks as if the preachers will have to go down to the depot to get enough to preach to sometimes. I mention these circumstances to show the importance of association. Just think if such dull brutes as sheep will learn how to gamble and run races just by a few days' association with us Clanton folks, and two or three dog trials will learn the fleas to come to the court house, what will association do for our boys and girls? But, then there are few places in this world as smart as Clanton. The next letter I am going to write will be about our duty to our political friends. But, remember it makes no difference how many come over to us, I must have an office.

JUST A VOTER.

LIBERTY HILL.

The all-day singing at Liberty last Sunday was a grand success. The assemblage of near 500 people was called to order by Chairman Elbert Littlejohn. T. J. Littlejohn entertained the people 30 minutes, Sam Parrish 30 minutes, recess 30 minutes, when C. W. Langston led for 30 minutes and T. J. Littlejohn 30 minutes. Dismissed for dinner. A good dinner and plenty of it was served by the good ladies, which was enjoyed by all. On reassembling R. J. Langston entertained the people an hour in the "Christian Harmony," which was enjoyed very much, especially by the old folks. Then Prof. J. L. Gore led for 30 minutes, G. W. Melton 30 minutes, Sam Parrish 15 minutes and C. W. Langston 15 minutes. Recess for 20 minutes. T. J. Littlejohn 15 minutes, Prof. J. L. Gore 15 minutes. Mrs. J. L. Gore and Mr. Willie Culp served as organists the entire day. A joyful day was spent in the service of the Lord. We extend our thanks to our visiting friends and invite them to all of our singings.

L. T. VICKERS, Secretary.

OAKLEY'S SWITCH.

Crops here are very good.

Had a fine rain on the 30th.

A. J. Lumpkin is putting in a large turnip crop.

James Aldrich, who for some time has been attending God's Bible school at Cincinnati, has returned to his home here, and has been conducting a series of successful meetings in the Curry community last week.

There was a successful and pleasant service held at A. J. Lumpkin's on the 30th. The service consisted in prayer, praise and testimony, and in conclusion a good talk by Mr. Lumpkin.

B. B.

RANDOLPH.

We are needing rain. Fodder pulling is now on. We are hearing of the first open cotton. Crops here are very good. The saw mill here is not running at present. Several of our people are several miles south of here working for the Howison & Gardner Lumber Co. J. C. Brand went to Tabernacle Saturday as a delegate to the Sabbath school convention. Miss Owens, of Selma, is visiting the family of J. C. Harrison. Mr. Treadwell, representing the orphanage at Summerfield, preached here Sunday. Sam Brantley, telegraph operator at Ashby, was in town Monday. Sam is a Chilton boy. He was badly crippled in childhood, which causes him to use a crutch. We wish him abundant success. Mrs. James Franklin, of Beat 9, and Mrs. Darthulia Gibson, of Mulberry, were among our visitors last week. Mrs. Samantha Waldrup, of Beat 2, accompanied by her son, Joseph, was in town Monday. Mrs. Waldrup is one of the oldest residents of west Chilton. Mr. Sutton Smitherman, of Briarfield, was a welcome visitor recently. We notice in last week's Union that Mr. Pounds has assumed the duties of his office. We predict for him a successful and faithful service as tax assessor. He is true as steel, loyal to his people, a man of deep thought and characterized by abundant kindness. We have heard him on the pulpit with able speakers, and have never known him eclipsed by any one. He is truly a servant of the great common people of Chilton. Mr. Mims, the retiring assessor, has many friends. He has been faithful and kind. The people's servant, and so he has the good wishes of his people. Professor J. T. Martin attended children's day exercises at Six Mile Sunday. Where is "Observer?" Let us hear from him again. By the way, Col. Smith's article has the right ring and doubtless will call forth a hearty response. "Let the people rule."

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

LOMAX.

News has been scarce in this locality for some time, so I've failed to make my appearance lately. I fear the waste basket, but trust to our Editor's well known patience. J. P. Robinson has retired from business and is now visiting in Talladega county. Several of Cane Creeks' boys and girls attended the singing here last Sunday evening. Our regular singings are on the first Sunday evening and third Sunday morning. Prof. J. W. Moore is teaching a very successful school here. The people east and west of here are greatly interested in education. A new school house going up one mile west, and another one mile east of here. Our people will soon be ready for local taxation for schools. It is the duty of every good citizen to push the schools forward that are to furnish the men and women for solving the problems of the future, and to shape the destiny of the commonwealth. Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Teel's little daughter, Cornelia Pearl, died August 2nd and was buried at New Salem cemetery. She was about two months old and had been a little sufferer all her days on earth. Her little hands were sweetly folded upon a silent breast, the little heart within has numbered its throbs and gone to rest. Her little eyes are closed forever to earth's unholy sight; two little cherub's wings now hover in Heaven's golden light. Her little feet were not permitted to travel upon the shores of time; a little gem released from trouble, has gone above to shine. Oh, what a comfort, Dear Redeemer, thy grace and love hath given; that when life's winter day is ended, we'll meet our children in heaven. Resting, resting, oh, how sweet; resting, sweetly resting.

OBSERVER.

CENTER POINT.

Editor Union:

Fodder pulling time is here, but watermelons are about gone. Coon hunting is good. I was roused up by Riley Jarrett the other morning about 3 o'clock. He wanted me to go hunting with him, so off we started and had not gone far when "Old Trump" struck scent and after a run of about half a mile treed the game. We cut down the tree, and lo, there were two big coons and our four dogs got at them, and such a fight as they had. I'm sure going again. Center Point and Blue Stave ball teams crossed bats the other day. Score 27 to 6 in favor of Center Point. Where the fun was was in the queer antics of Sam Gentry, a deaf and dumb player of Center Point. Come again, boys, and we'll make it still tougher next time. Mr. Editor, I was up at Highland school house the other day at the closing of Prof. Veazey's singing school, and was sure glad to see such a good class. That is a good community and it believes in progress. The "Red Rippers" and "Yellow Jackets" had a game of ball in the evening with victory for the R. R.'s. Well, stock law is quiet on both sides, but we're just waiting for cold weather. With best wishes for THE UNION and its readers.

C. W. L.

HURRAH FOR COL. SMITH.

Editor Union:

I saw a card from Col. C. C. Smith in your paper last week, in which he denounced the present day democracy. I want to say hurrah for Col. Smith. Now, I want to say to every reader of THE UNION that Col. Smith and myself stayed in the same office nearly 21 months. If there was ever a hard thought between us I don't know it. I think that I know him to be perfectly honest in every respect, so you can re-read his card and say: "There is an honest expression, from an honest man."

Respectfully,
MOSES A. KILLGORE.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 12, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz.: Isaac B. Martin, Homestead Entry No. 32916, for the S. E. 1-4 of S. E. 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23 N. of R. 13 East.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Zack S. Avery, Clayton Glasscock, Hubbard Glasscock, Norman Bradford, all of Jemison, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes

FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. - - - Alabama

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers.
County and Office Supplies a Specialty.
Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association
of Alabama.
CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.
Chilton County Branch
Organized February 3rd, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' Dwellings, Outbuildings and Contents and Live Stock against Loss by Fire, Wind and Lightning. The Cheapest, Safest and Most Sensible Method of Insurance Known to Man.

Average Yearly Cost for Four Years 56-100 of 1 percent.

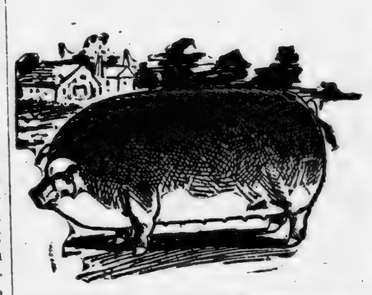
Full particulars furnished upon application to
WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

WOODLAWN FARM,

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama

Gelder's Restaurant,
Good Meals at Reasonable Prices
110 North 20th Street,
BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND FERTILIZERS
FOR SALE.
Troy Special & Mule Brand "Are the Best on Earth."
J. C. JONES,
Clanton, - - - Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.
DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER
We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address
I. E. SARBER CO.
Thorsby, Alabama

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.
1st Term—Third Monday in May.
2nd Term—Fourth Monday in Nov.
Judge—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
Solicitor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Clerk—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Spring Term—Second Monday in March.
Fall Term—Second Monday in September.
Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
Register—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.
First Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Second Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, first Monday November.

County Officers.
Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Solicitor—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would like published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. H. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 1st Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 3rd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 3rd Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 3rd Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 4th Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 2nd Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas 3rd Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 3rd Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 4th Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday, G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; Sunday before the second Sunday; J. T. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. J. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—3rd Saturday, Clanton.

Amazde Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —First Saturday, Billingsley.

Foreman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Tuesday on or before full moon, Clanton.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304—Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and 3rd Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Sequamo Tribe, No. 90—First and 3rd Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. M. B. Langston, C. S.; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Clanton Lodge, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

STORE,
The Procession.
ing, Hats, Sho
TURE, NECESSITIES.
ULLINS, Alabam
RINTING CO
and Lithographers.
upplies a Specialty.
BIRMINGHAM, AL
surance Associati abama.
ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
nd for the People.
unty Branch
bruary 3rd, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
lings, Outbuildings and C gainst Loss by Fire, Wind pest, Safest and Most ce Known to Man.
00 of 1 percent.
pon application to
C. EDLER, Clanton, Al
WOODLAW
FARM.
Barred
Plymouth Rocks
PURE BRED
Setting of 15 fresh eggs
50c. Packing for shipp
10c extra.
PURE BRED Duroc
Jersey
Hogs.
Write us for prices be you buy. Address,
W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alaba
Restaurant,
Reasonable Price
h 20th Street,
AM, ALABAMA.
RCHANDISE AN ILIZERS
R SALE.
l & Mule Bran
Best on Earth.
JONES,
Alaba
Prevents Fevers.
FURNISH PURE WAT
ter or no charge made.
Address
SARBER CO.

AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.
Term—Third Monday in May.
Term—Fourth Monday in No

—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Term—Second Monday in
Term—Second Monday in Sep

cellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides,
ister—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan

County Court.
Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
nd Monday February, first Mon
April, first Monday June, second day July, second Monday August,
Monday November.

County Officers.
ge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
surer—W. T. Callen.
riff—J. M. Morgan.
ctor—J. O. Middleton.
Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
st District—W. H. Conway.
cond District—Alex Glasscock.
rd District—R. P. Kendrick.
urth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would like published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley, R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 1st Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 2nd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 4th Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 5th Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 2nd Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 3rd Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Shiloh—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 2nd Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; Saturday before the second Sunday; J. M. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. J. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—1st Saturday, Clanton.

Chilkabee Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 304—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 304—First Saturday, Clanton.

Billingsley Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 704—First Saturday, Billingsley.

Freeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 704—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 704—Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 304—Tuesday on or before full moon, Clanton.

I. O. O. F.

Clanton Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

Verbena Lodge, No. 304—Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Montezuma Tribe, No. 90—First and third Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. S.; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Clanton Lodge, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 9, '06, 8,000.
Price same date, 10 1-8c.
Total receipts last season, 6,648.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

J. L. Burnett and son, Samuel, were pleasant visitors Thursday.

Rev. Job Reynolds, of Concord, spent Thursday in Clanton with his son, Judge Reynolds. The old gentleman looked over the town and said we were growing some.

H. W. Varden was a welcome caller Thursday.

Uncle Geo. Shaw, of Jemison, was in town Thursday looking over the new additions to our party.

Greene D. Melton, of Gold Branch, Coosa county, who has been visiting his brother, G. W. Melton, near Clanton, dropped in Thursday and subscribed for THE UNION.

H. Honeycutt, of Centerville, Bibb county, who was born and raised in Chilton, visited us Thursday and subscribed for THE UNION and Yellow Jacket. Bibb needs some missionary work.

G. F. Harris and son, J. W., were in Clanton Friday.

Former Sheriff Lee Hayes was in town Friday.

E. F. Taylor was a pleasant visitor Friday.

J. R. Collins was in Clanton Saturday.

THE UNION represents the PEOPLE of Chilton county. Subscribe for it and help the cause.

'Squire Alf and C. R. Childress were in town Friday.

G. W. Melton killed a rattlesnake at his place Friday night. He brought it to town Saturday. It was 4 feet in length with 10 rattles and a button. That's some snake.

C. C. Swint and W. R. Taylor were in Clanton Saturday. Mr. Swint informs us that J. M. Maddox is seriously ill. We hope he'll soon recover.

M. F. Lett was in Clanton Saturday and left some fine peaches in THE UNION office, and we are very much obliged. Come again, Bro. Lett.

S. S. Scott and W. T. Manning were welcome callers Saturday.

W. F. and J. C. Deshazo were pleasant callers Saturday.

"Buck" Arledge called in our office and held us up for "his widow's" church building. Buck is a good talker. We did not think any one could get money out of us in the present state of our exchequer, but he did.

W. R. King, of Weogufka, who has been visiting Clanton and vicinity for several days, went home Tuesday.

Miss Nell Mullins is convalescing slowly to the great delight of her many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reynolds, of Jemison, were visitors at his brother, the judge's, Sunday and Monday.

Tom McElderry, of Talladega, came to Clanton Monday to stay and help push the gin and ware house buildings.

'Squire B. E. Collum was in Clanton Tuesday.

Theodore A. Lefstad has been appointed carrier and A. T. Lefstad substitute carrier on R. F. D. No 1 at Thorsby.

Judge Honeycutt paid a flying visit to Clanton Tuesday and took his grand children home with him for a visit, as his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Henry I. Honeycutt, is quite ill and has been for several days.

Miss Anna Howard, of Thorsby, who has been at the lakes in Wisconsin for some time, returned home this week.

READ THIS.

Every man owes it to himself and family to master a trade or profession. Read the display advertisement of the six morse Schools of Telegraphy, in this issue and learn how easily a young man or lady may learn telegraphy and be assured a position.

G. D. Gerald, of Thorsby, was in Clanton Wednesday.

The Clanton and Columbia B. B. teams played at Columbiana Tuesday afternoon. Score 5 to 0 in favor of Columbiana. Seventeen Clantonites struck out.

Judge L. H. Reynolds and wife, with the Misses Winnie and Willie Reynolds, and Masters Grady, Claude and Oliver Reynolds, and their guests, the Misses Mattie Ware and Mattie Patton, of Jemison; Circuit Clerk Sam W. Collins, with the Misses Sallie and Rosa Cooley, of Clanton, were in the party that went to Mountain Creek Saturday to picnic at the soldiers' home.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

W. F. Jackson and Miss Roxie Ann Hosey. Dan Tillery and Miss Lulu Beadlescomb. O. F. Bates and Miss Dora Thacker. Pete Smith and Miss Eva Lawley.

COLORED.

Ed Mickey and Cora Mims. Ben Edwards and Zattie Allison. Rufus Carson and Minnie Massey.

COUNTY COURT.

The County Court was in session Monday, Judge L. H. Reynolds, presiding. A number of cases on the docket were disposed of as follows:

Ada Howell, trespass, waived to grand jury; Jodie Martin, disturbing religious worship, waived; John Vinson, assault and battery, waived; John Mims, assault and battery, waived; A. C. Marcus, abusive language in presence of a female, waived; V. O. Campbell and Ruf. McCary, petit larceny, nol prossed; Joe Walker, carrying concealed weapons, waived; Walter McGlothern, grand larceny, waived; Anderson Baker, assault and battery, waived; Thomas Robinson, disturbing religious worship, fine $20; Oscar Wilburn, abusive language, waived. Between the witnesses and spectators the court room was crowded and decidedly warm.

MISS HOWELL'S PARTY.

Miss Melissa Howell entertained most royally a host of her friends at the Soldiers' Home last Saturday.

There were many very intelligent and interesting people, among them several young teachers. Soon after the party arrived Mr. Brooks gave an address of welcome that every one enjoyed and appreciated. The whole house cheered him. Refreshments were prepared—watermelons for all. Lemonade and ice water all day. The Headly string band, with Miss Lena Headly presiding at the piano, made music that all were delighted to hear. After them Misses Robinson, Patton and Prescott gave us their choicest music on the piano. Then Miss Howell's words of welcome, together with Mr. Brooks' address made everybody feel at home.

Dinner was plentiful and delicious. Barbecued beef, boiled ham, pickles and bread supplemented the basket dinner so that all the inmates of the home took dinner with the party. The delicious cake of Miss Howell, which was so beautifully embossed, made us stand still and stare. The old soldiers seemed to forget they were old, but enjoyed the dinner with the zest of childhood. To the soldiers in the hospital waiters well laden with good things were sent; also to Mrs. Brooks, who was too feeble to join the throng, but sent her regrets and good wishes for an enjoyable day for everybody. Mr. Brooks, as the guest of Miss Howell, seemed to forget himself at dinner and was seen among the crowd watching them enjoy the feast, while he was enjoying himself thus. Miss Ware and Miss Sayers, after waiting on quite a number of soldiers, filled two waiters with a variety of good things and put them before him. Then he and the two young ladies did ample justice to the ham, chicken, pickles, cake, etc. After dinner we had a splendid speech by Judge L. H. Reynolds.

Messrs. Schneider and Baxley did all they could to add to the pleasure of the day, Mr. Schneider giving several numbers with the graphophone.

Mr. J. E. Robinson was one of our "first boys." He exerted himself to wait on the ladies and help make the day the happy success that it was. Mr. Welch's flowers added much to the pleasure of the ladies, many of them carrying away a beautiful bouquet as a souvenir. Late in the afternoon at the request of Miss Howell the party congregated in front of the main building, where Photographer Montgomery made a negative of the group. Then we left for the depot with hearts full of appreciation for Mr. Brooks' kindness, Am sure we all will never forget him. Miss Howell did all in her power to make the day one of gladness and seemed to take special pride in her school boys.

Some of the party could not be there on account of quarantine regulations which kept them from getting out of Montgomery. Among these were Gen. J. W. A. Sanford and wife, his son and his family. This was deeply regretted by all.

The old time darky proves he still loves to wait on "de white folks."

Hoping we may have many more such days as Saturday, I am very sincerely,

"GUESS."

NOTICE!

To the Stockholders of FARMERS' WAREHOUSE AND FERTILIZER CO.: This is to notify you to meet in NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDING, THORSBY, ALA., SATURDAY, AUG. 19TH, 1905. There is some very important business to attend to. Done by order of directors.

J. BICE,
President.

tf

DIED.

Arvel Lee Campbell, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Campbell, died July 30, 1905, aged 7 months and 23 days.

"A flower of love planted in that home, and blossomed but to die; but now transplanted above to live with God on high."

Z. S. AVERY.

NOTICE!

There are two shares of stock of the Farmers Warehouse & Fertilizer Company of Thorsby, Ala., for sale. The board of directors have authorized the undersigned to sell these shares to all who desire to invest.

J. Bice, President
T. M. Driver
J. W. Hays.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FARMERS' INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

The Chilton county branch of the Farmers' Ins. Ass'n of Alabama met in the court house at Clanton on Saturday, the 5th inst. Many of the members were not present, which shows that the association is running smoothly. Secretary-Treasurer W. C. Edler made his report of matters of the past year and it was unanimously accepted. He showed that there had been 22 new members added to the association the past year. The annual election of officers was then held and the following elected for the ensuing year: President, W. M. Wilson, of Clanton; Sec.-Treas., W. C. Edler, of Clanton. Board of directors are: Beat 1, H. C. Young; Beat 2, G. P. Wilson; Beat 3, T. J. Hubbard; Beat 4, W. M. Aldridge; Beat 5, J. T. Bland; Beat 6, W. Y. Keel; Beat 7, C. J. Cobern; Beat 8, W. J. Ruddick; Beat 9, W. J. Bean; Beat 10, H. B. Glenn. It seems that there are some members who are delinquent in some of the assessments and the following motion was put and carried by the meeting without a dissenting voice: "That the president of this association is hereby directed to at once place the delinquents of former assessments of this association in the hands of a lawyer for collection." So those that have been derelict in their payment may make up their mind to explaining "why it was" to a lawyer. After another motion or so was passed, and some general discussion for the good of the order, the meeting adjourned.

Notice No. 26043.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz: Dalee Millar, Homestead Entry No. 35550, for the W. 1-2 of N. E. 1-4, E. 1-2 of N. W. 1-4, Section 10, Tp. 23 N. of R. 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Rebecca J. Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; C. Buck Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; James Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala., Thomas Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

TIMBER FOR SALE!

Over a hundred acres of Virgin Swamp timber for sale. Apply to T J. Billingsley, Clanton, Ala. Route 3. tf.

Negro Kills Another.

Florence, Ala.—In a difficulty Friday at a negro barbecue at Leaven Grove church, this county, Henry Palmer was shot and instantly killed by Sam Harris, another negro. Harris was shooting at a negro named Windburn, when Palmer interfered in the interest of peace. The second shot missed Windburn and struck Palmer with the above result.

WANTED!

A live agent in every beat in Chilton county to write life insurance for the Mutual Benefit Association of Georgia. Cheapest insurance on earth. Good pay to hustlers. Write

W. R. Jackson,
Division Agent,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

FOR SALE!

A thoroughbred Jersey Bull, 2 years and 4 months old, weighs about 650 pounds. Apply to M. A. Killgon, Clanton Ala., Route 5. tf.

We Club With

The New York World

THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken

For the autumn season now at hand the most valuable paper to you will be the New York Thrice-a-week world, because it offers you more at the price than any other paper published anywhere in the world.

This is a time of great events. We are having great wars and other changes of a stirring kind are occurring both at home and abroad. The Thrice-a-Week World comes to you every other day, except Sunday, with all the news, fully, accurately and promptly told.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

The Thrice-a-Week World always has a serial story running, and it is always a first-class story by a first-class author. The Thrice-a-Week World publishes better fiction than any other newspaper in the United States. Special attention is also given to markets, and there are many other valuable features.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf.

Academic Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.
MONTEVALLO, ALA.
REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President
Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.
Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer
We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the
St. Louis Globe-Democrat
WITH
The Union
FOR
$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.
If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.
NOW IS THE TIME.
Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address
The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,
Furniture and Rugs.
—SOLE AGENTS—
Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.
Catalogue for the asking.
2011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,
205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.
Practical Watchmaker and Optician
Eyes Correctly Fitted
Mail orders promptly filled

Statement of

The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama.

(Chilton County Branch.)

President: W. M. Wilson, Clanton. Sec.-Treas. Wallace C. Edler, Clanton.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 7, 1905.

In the five and a half years that this Association has been in existence, it has levied seventeen (17) assessments to pay twenty-six (26) losses, viz: Lightning, 1; wind, 4; fire, 21. The total of the seventeen assessments was $2.36¾ per hundred dollars, being an average yearly assessment of 43 cents on each hundred dollars of insurance per annum.

W. M. WILSON,
President Chilton County Branch.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 7th day of August 1905.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

tf.

ANGELICA WINE!

Pronounced equal to the best made in Europe, by good judges of wine. Price $2.00 per gallon, discount for larger quantity. Guaranteed to keep. Address

A. P. R. DAHL,
tf. Calera, Ala

Petition Is Refused.

Mobile, Ala.—The board of health at a meeting Saturday refused the petitions of pupils in New Orleans asking for permission to come to this city to enter school here.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The County Board of Education will meet at Clanton August 12th to dispose of all business pertaining to the schools or districts of Chilton county. tf

5000 TELEGRAPHERS NEEDED
Annually to fill the new positions created by Railroad and Telegraph Companies. We want YOUNG MEN and LADIES of good habits, to LEARN TELEGRAPHY AND R. R. ACCOUNTING
We furnish 75 per cent. of the Operators and Station Agents in America. Our six schools are the largest exclusive telegraph schools IN THE WORLD. Established 29 years and endorsed by all leading Railway Officials.
We execute a $250 Bond to every student to furnish him or her a position paying from $40 to $80 a month in States east of the Rocky Mountains, or from $75 to $100 a month in States west of the Rockies, IMMEDIATELY UPON GRADUATION.
Students can enter at any time. No vacations. For all particulars regarding any of our Schools write direct to our executive office at Cincinnati, O. Catalogue free.
The Morse School of Telegraphy
Cincinnati, Ohio. Buffalo, N. Y.
Atlanta, Ga. LaCrosse, Wis.
Texarkana, Tex. San Francisco, Cal.

CHILDRESS CEMETERY.

All interested in the old Childress grave yard are asked to meet there the Wednesday after the second Sunday in August (16th) and help clean up and repair the lots.

tf

THE BALLAD OF AGED INFANCY.

The Viscount of Dotage when aged ninety-one Began to regret that he hadn't a son
To inherit his title and keep it alive,
So he took him a wife: she was just twenty-five.

In less than a year a remarkable boy
Filled the dented old heart of the Viscount with joy.
His baby-blue eyes resembled his ma's,
While his tooth barren gums were exactly like pa's.

His hair was like mother's—a rich golden-brown,
Except for the bald spot that covered his crown;
He enjoyed reading essays on subjects abstruse,
But his mind was unable to grasp Mother Goose.

Soon after our hero had started to talk
He was seized with a laudable longing to walk
His chubby left leg gave a hop and skip
And was off like a flash at a terrible clip.

But, the funniest thing: it wouldn't go straight.
'Twould zig in spirals and circles gyrate.
The reason? His right leg was lame with the gout.
(He inherited this from his father, no doubt.)

The consequence was, when he started to walk
(Since his good leg would gallop and t'other would balk)
That he just spun around and around and around
Till, exhausted, he sank with a gasp to the ground.

The specialists, after a long consultation,
Declared the end due to a queer complication
Of rheumatic old age, the measles, and colic,
Brought about by inertia and overmuch frolic.

Robert Rudd Whiting, in Lippincott's.

...IN... The Nick of Time.

By Duke Cuyler.

Upon the east branch of the Saco, away up under the shadow of Doublehead, Elias Towle built his cabin and then commenced the work of clearing the forest about it.

His family consisted of a wife and two small children, a boy and a girl. The former was five and the latter three years of age.

Early and late the pioneer worked at his task, and one after another of the forest trees went thundering to the ground, letting the golden sunlight where shadows had reigned before.

Thus through the summer he labored on unceasingly, only quitting his work long enough to care for the little patch of corn which he had planted in the springtime, and to keep themselves well supplied with game, with which the forest abounded, or with delicious speckled trout, which filled the waters of the river.

One sultry afternoon he quitted his work of felling the trees, and taking his fishing tackle he started off up the stream in pursuit of a mess of trout.

The boy begged hard to accompany him, but as he was going some distance he decided that the tramp would be too much for him, and so bade him remain at home with his mother.

Promising to be home by sunset he went down to the stream, and was soon engaged in taking the trout therefrom.

He nearly always had good luck in fishing, but now it was better than usual.

He thought that never before had he known them to bite so well. So he went on enjoying the sport, and filling up his string rapidly.

About half a mile above his clearing his attention was attracted by some footprints in the sand. Another glance told him that they were the tracks of a huge panther that had here crossed the stream. They had been recently made, perhaps not more than an hour before.

He could not resist gazing furtively around as though he half expected to see the animal peering down upon him from amid the foliage on the bank. But he saw nothing, and as he went onward the incident was soon forgotten.

The trout still continued to be taken rapidly; and so much engaged was he that he took little note of how fast the time was flying.

But at last, when the sun could no longer be seen in the gorge through which the stream ran, he suddenly bethought himself that it was time for him to be turning homeward.

So he hurried out of the stream, and doing up his fishing tackle, he started off for his cabin.

It was almost sunset now, and he knew he would not reach his home much before dark. But he would not be obliged to follow the stream down. It made several bends, which by cutting across he could shorten the distance.

He hurried along as fast as he was able, but the dusky shadows of evening began to gather around before he reached the edge of his clearing.

Once or twice he had thought he heard some one calling, and now he recognized the voice of his wife. She was not at the cabin, but down by the edge of the clearing that lay nearest the river.

He gave a quick start when he heard the burden of her cry. She was calling for the children, and the tone of her voice told him that she was alarmed at their absence.

He hastened toward the cabin, calling to her as he went. With a glad cry she answered him, and in the deepening gloom he saw her hurrying in the same direction.

"What is it, Mary?" he cried, as she came nearer.

"The children are gone, and I cannot find them," she answered. "I have gone all about the clearing, but they are not here. I have called to them over and over again, but received no answer, except the echoes until I heard your voice."

"Where can they have gone?"

"I know not, but I fear some harm has come to them."

"When did you see them last?"

"It must have been more than an hour ago. I was so busy at work that I did not miss them until a short time ago."

"What can have become of them?"

"I don't know, but I am almost afraid that they have tried to follow you."

He gave a great start at these words of his wife, for he suddenly remembered the tracks he had seen in the sand. What if they had wandered up along the stream and the panther should discover them?

The thought sent a thrill of terror to his heart, and his limbs trembled from the agitation that shook his frame. But it lasted only for a moment, and then he recovered his self-possession.

Rushing into the cabin, he took down his rifle and was out again beside his wife in almost a moment's time. "Which way shall we go?" she said.

"Up the branch; they must have gone that way. Robert wanted to go with me when I started out."

"And he wanted to follow you some time after you had started. It must be that they have gone that way."

They hurried away toward the bank of the stream, where the darkness lay thick beneath the thick branches of the overhanging trees. There upon the sand they sought for the footprints of the missing ones, but the gloom was so great that they could distinguish nothing. In a little time, however, the moon would be shining brightly, for it was already rising above the tree tops.

They called aloud, but the echoes were the only answer that came back save the sound of the dashing water.

On they hurried along the rough, uneven way. At last they saw before them a patch of bright moonlight lying on the sand, where it came down throught a rift in the foliage.

Here, alongside of his own, the father saw the footsteps of his children in the sand.

They were on the right trail then. Would Heaven save them from danger till they could clasp them in their arms?

Only a moment did they stop to examine the footprints, and then they hurried onward. Even now the panther might be watching them catlike, or feasting off their flesh. The thought filled them with horror, and faster they went, clambering over huge bowlders, or hurrying along the sand, seeking eagerly for the lost ones.

More than once they cast a troubled look toward some dark pool, as though they half-expected they might be buried in its waters.

At last they were close upon the spot where he had seen the tracks of the panther.

Before them was a ledge of granite, which came down close to the water's edge. The moonlight lay along its face and rested at its foot, where was heaped a pile of dead forest trees.

Both the parents uttered a cry of joy, for here, nestled in each other's arms, they beheld their lost ones.

Calling them by name, the mother sprang forward, but suddenly arrested her steps with a cry of terror upon her lips. The fierce growl of a panther fell upon their ears.

Glancing toward the summit of the cliff they saw the huge brute prepared to spring upon the helpless children.

There was not an instant to lose. With the rapidity of thought Elias Towle brought his rifle to his shoulder and fired.

There was a wild shriek, and the panther sprang high in the air and fell at their feet. There was a fierce struggle for a moment, and then he lay outstretched—dead.

With a glad cry the mother sprang forward and clasped her children in her arms, with thanks grateful to Heaven that they were saved.

The panther was skinned and its hide stuffed, and ever kept after as an heirloom in the family.—New York Weekly.

A Selfish Man.

He regarded his children as nuisance.

He did all his courting before marriage.

He never talked over his affairs with his wife.

He doled out his money to his wife as if to a beggar.

He looked down on his wife as an inferior being.

He never dreamed that there were two sides to marriage.

He had one set of manners for home and another for society.

He never dreamed that his wife needed praise and compliments.

He thought his wife should spend all her time doing housework.

He never made concessions to his wife's judgment, even in unimportant matters.

He thought the marriage vow had made him his wife's master, instead of her partner.

He thought he had a right to smoke and chew tobacco and drink liquor and be as boorish and brutal to his family as he chose, regardless of the effect on them. Surely such a man needs regenerating to be fit to live with anybody.—Word and Work.

Office Hours in Manila.

The official servants in Manila have a comparatively easy time during the summer. A circular just issued orders the employes' working day to consist of five hours. All working days except Saturdays, from 9 to 12 a. m., and from 2.30 to 4.30 p. m., Saturdays from 8 a. m. to 1 p. m.—Shanghai Times.

DESERT BILL OF FARE.

SOURCES FROM WHICH THE INDIAN SUPPLIES HIS LARDER.

The Grisly Phantom Hunger, With His Companion, Thirst, Holds Dominion Over the Land, Yet the Natives Manage to Find Food of a Sort.

In the Indian country of the West a grim spectre stands with bony fingers ever stretching out toward the inhabitants of the region. This grisly phantom is the form of hunger, which with his companion, thirst, holds dominion over the land. The country is vast and roomy, but one wonders what can be found therein to sustain life.

About some of the Indian villages are to be seen small patches of maize or a few tiny melon patches, but these cultivated areas are of little account as compared with the number of persons to be fed. These, too, are exceptions, rather than the rule, a majority of the towns having no such cultivated fields.

In various parts of the arid region, which shelters so great a portion of our barbarian population, is found a tree remarkable for certain properties. The botanical name of this plant is Proposis juliflora. It is popularly known as the lagaroba, or honey mesquite. This tree thrives with little moisture, grows with thick, bushy top, to a height of twenty to forty feet, affords shelter from the wind and sun, and best of all in the sight of the hungry natives, it yields abundant crops of fruit known as mequite beans. The slim green pods hang in clusters from the tips of the boughs, often bending the branches nearly to breaking, so abundant do they grow. The pods, which are six or seven inches long, are pulpy, juicy, fairly palatable and nourishing.

These beans are gathered, dried and stored in the peculiar granaries of the Indians—huge baskets holding several bushels each—and are pulverized when wanted for food in wooden or stone mortars, and the meal thus formed is soaked in water and eaten without further preparation, or it is baked into a sort of unleavened bread. It is the principal and favorite food of several tribes.

The screw bean is another food product, less plentiful, but even more highly prized, because of its sugary qualities. This fruit is often eaten as plucked from the tree. It ripens the latter part of June or in July, a little later than the mesquite bean.

In some of the mountain sections the Prunus Andersonii or chamish, is found in abundance. The pits of this fruit are pounded in mortars, and the meal is then eaten. There are many varieties of the cactus fruit which is utilized for food, the fruit of the Opuntia tuna, or prickly pear, being a notable example.

The dead "loco weed," the pest of the cattlemen, is a favorite with the Indians, for the yellow pods of the plant, when pulverized, serve as spice to render some of the otherwise insipid dishes palatable.

The roots of the cancer root are roasted over live coals, and when young, succulent and nourishing, are prime favorites with the red epicureans.

Flowers of the yucca and agave are boiled, dried and preserved, to be eaten as occasion requires. The young shoots or crowns of these plants are also roasted and eaten. Seeds of the Artemisia tridentata, or wormwood, and the Atriplex lentiformis are pulverized and eaten.

The apple or berry of the Arctostaphylos glauca, or manzanita, is another food obtained by the mountain dwellers. This is eaten as plucked, and is also dried and preserved for future use. Pine nuts form a very important item of food with many of the tribes in the wooded section of the country, and acorns furnish other tribes with a large part of their living.

There are other herbs which are utilized by the Indians as food. Indeed, there are few plants which are not capable of being rendered edible in some manner. There are, however, other things besides plants which are made to satisfy the pangs of hunger. In the animal kingdom are a number of varieties of creatures, not classed in the game list of the white man, which minister to the appetites and needs of the red man.

There are in the Southwest, particularly in California, bodies of bitter, poisonous waters known as boracic lakes. Owen's Lake, twenty miles long, is of this class. It is a veritable Dead Sea, and, like the sea of that name and its counterpart, the Great Salt Lake of Utah, its heavy, brackish waters do not support fish or marine life.

At certain seasons of the year the waters of these boracic lakes abound in a white grub known to the Indians of that region as "koochabee." These grubs are the larvae of a two-winged fly, the Ephidra Californica. So plentiful are these grubs in their season they line the shores of the lake to a depth of several inches, where the waves cast them up from their watery incubator. The Indians, at this season of the year, camp upon the shores of the lake, gather this peculiar harvest and dry it in the sun. Later the grubs are ground in stone mortars into fine powder, and from this insect meal they bake a bread which is highly prized.

There are a number of other insects, lizards, reptiles and the like which are used as food by different tribes. The chuckawalla, a lizard somewhat resembling the gila monster, is a common article of food with Lower California Indians, and with some of the tribes north of the line. It may not be the most inviting of foods—some of the insect and reptilian foods are far from palatable—but the Indian is not inclined to quarrel with anything which stops the gnawing beneath his belt, and he evidently believes that "not that which goeth into the mouth defileth the man."—Los Angeles Times.

LITTLE MYSTERIES OF LIFE.

Some Unaccountable Happenings Which Nobody Has Been Able to Explain.

Life is full of little inexplicable mysteries, says Pearson's Weekly. They occur every day, and are passed by as being merely ordinary. Whenever the conversation turns on telepathy or the occult sciences there is always some one with a story of the mysterious to tell.

About ten years ago, on a large open tract of land in the north of London (now fortunately covered with red brick villas, a number of boys were playing cricket. Suddenly there came a loud humming noise, like the combined droning of thousands of bees, and a great stone larger than a man's fist whizzed across the center of the pitch and embedded itself in a bank. Almost immediately it was followed by another and then a third.

Although they waited in hiding for some time there was no repetition of the mysterious missiles. The question then arose. Where could they have come from? The nearest house was quite 400 yards away, and a machine to have sent these large stones whirling at such a frightful pace over this distance would be rather an extraordinary article of furniture for a suburban villa. So the cause of this remarkable occurrence yet requires explanation.

In the same district, a few years back, four young men were seated in a room playing whist. Suddenly, just after midnight, the door, which had been latched, opened slowly until it had reached its fullest limit.

In surprise the players looked up, but no one was standing in the doorway. Then ere one of them could move, the door slowly closed itself again. Immediately one of the young men jumped up, pulled the door open and stared up and down the hall, but there was absolute silence and no one about.

Some years ago a gentleman was seated at a table busily writing. At the moment he was alone in the house. Suddenly he heard the patter of feet outside the door and then the sound of a dog barking. Going outside the room, he saw, to his surprise that his dog had found its way from the garden into the house and for some reason was violently barking.

Crash! The room behind him was suddenly in darkness and a smell of escaping gas pervaded the air. Directly he understood what had happened and hurried to seal up the broken pipe of the chandelier. The latter was lying in a thousand pieces on the floor.

But for the mysterious instinct that caused the dog to enter the house and attract this gentleman's attention he would probably have been killed by the falling chandelier, for he had been sitting directly beneath it.

PASSING OF THE CHATEAUX.

Palaces of the World Coming More and More Into Public Ownership.

The great royal chateaux, not of Touraine only, but of the world, are all nearing the appointed end of public ownerships. Kings build; peoples inherit; the palace in its uses broadens slowly down to the multitude. The smaller houses sometimes fall by purchase to the middle class; but that is only the change in one of its stages. The larger ones soon reach their ultimate destiny of the museum and the pleasure-ground; and this even distinctively republican. Louis XIV. built Versailles; who holds it now? The caretaker for the man in the street. The Louvre is a museum; the Tuileries has gone—to make way for a garden. Kensington Palace is now among the sights of London. Windsor Castle is not much more. And lately, when there happened to be no music for the visitors to the castle on a public holiday, the royal band, "to prevent disappointment," was hastily recalled from a distant scene. The Tower of London, once a palace, now holds the regalia that serve as a toy for the crowd. Potsdam and Sans-Souci are, for all and several, in the same sense; so is the huge Escurial. The Kremlin of the Czars is no better; and even the Hermitage, which, strictly speaking, is one of the halls of the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg, is a picture gallery to which all could find their way, until the nihilists threatened its integrity. * * *

So passes the glory of the world. But that glory, in the chateaux of old, was often so closely allied with shame and misery and corruption that their last state, as playgrounds for the tourist, may still be better than the first.

Cadetships in the Japanese navy are open to every subject in the empire.

A number of the Oberlin College professors will spend the coming year abroad.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. ST. CLAIR HESTER.

Subject: The Witness of Good Works.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—At the annual Guild service in the Church of the Messiah the rector, the Rev. St. Clair Hester, preached on "The Witness of Good Works." For the text he chose I Peter ii:11: "That whereas they speak against you as evil doers they may by your good works which they shall behold glorify God." Mr. Hester said:

The value to Christianity of the evidence of good works cannot be gainsaid or withstood. It speaks for itself and with a power and effectiveness no words can have. In the presence of such a demonstration of its truth, argument, advertisement, exalted claims, eloquent commendation are beside the work, are not needed, are of small use and minor importance. A great ship steams in from the sea and we may view her as she lies still and quiet in her berth, but upon her decks and sides there are signs of the rough voyage upon her prow and funnels is the salt thrown there by the high breaking waves. Men may say of her she is too large, badly proportioned, improperly constructed, her machinery is not of the latest pattern; they may criticise and accuse and point out defects, but there is no denying that she has plowed the surface of thousands of miles of deep water and brought her precious cargo of freight and passengers safe and undisturbed to their destination.

This symbolizes in a way the position of the Church of God in the world today. And it describes after a fashion, too, the singularity, the unique prominence of the Christian among the all sorts and conditions of men constituting what is known variously as society, the public, the body politic. Never mind what the world may have or find to say against you, my Christian friend, if you do well, this well doing disarms suspicion, gains the mastery over falsehood, silences misrepresentation and supplants enmity with good will. If your works be good you do not need to have recourse to eulogy, notoriety-seeking or noise; the world has need of them; men have an instinctive respect and appreciation of everything conducive to the common benefit, they will win their way, they will secure their place, they, the works, not you, will exact deserved recognition. A tree may be despised and spoken evil of, but if the fruit be healthful and sweet, pleasing to the taste, a change in the estimate of it is sure to come. By their fruits ye shall know them is a true principle which calumny and envy cannot down, and from whose righteous judgment there is no appeal.

St. Peter in this text was writing to Christians and churches existing in Gentile or foreign countries and among peoples of heathen religions. Their lot was anything but pleasant, their safety anything but assured. The Christians of those early days were commonly accused of being disturbers, innovators, mischief-makers, of being lawbreakers and traitors to Caesar, of being atheists and blasphemers of the popular idolatry. Because the popular hatred of them they were compelled to meet secretly, to exclude outsiders from their places of worship, and this led to reports that they indulged in wild, obscene orgies. Because of the phrase "drinking of the precious blood" used in connection with the communion service, it was said that they killed infants and drank their blood in their private assemblies. They were under constant suspicion and surveillance. Their enemies were ever on the alert seeking to discover faults and inconsistencies, to uncover them in some wrongdoing. St. Peter hopes and believes that this close observation of the lives of the followers of Christ may lead to the undeceiving of their enemies as to their true character, and that from this better understanding there may come a disposition to investigate, to come closer, and, finally to embrace their holy religion. He is confident that prejudice aside and knowledge in its place can result in only this—its glad and willing acceptance.

What an opportunity then in view of these circumstances and what an inducement to live exemplary lives—that others, even their bitter enemies and severest critics, might be brought to know the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom He did send. The apostle's counsel is to this effect—be true to thy cause and to thy God, be good and do good, not merely because it gives you peace of mind and joy of soul, not merely because it is to your highest and best interest—this would be looking on the side of self only—he eliminates all selfish taint from his counsel by putting emphasis upon the educative effect of Christian conduct upon the sentiments and convictions of hostile and heathen neighbors. This is your chance, he intimates; this the means—your good works—impress them, win them, help them, in this way, by this means.

All these considerations, this motive, these means are of present moment, of up-to-date interest and may be of present application. Though living in a nominally Christian age and land, practically the Christian is still surrounded by an envious, evil-speaking, backbiting world. They who are not with us are as critical, as watchful, as eager to find wherewith to accuse, embarrass, expose as ever in the days of the apostle. Not only our own souls, not only our morals and principles are in our keeping, but the safeguarding and growth of the church, the purification and moral uplift of society, the putting down of iniquity and sin and yes, verily, the Christianization of the home, the family, the community, the city, the salvation of the world. Every Christian is as a city set on a hill—not to be hid—and men will be won to Christ in proportion as each and every Christian feels a responsibility for the unchurched masses, for those not in the Good Shepherd's fold, and just in proportion as each and every one comes up to the measure of his responsibility. Translated into modern application, the apostle's meaning to you and me is this: "You Christians, so regulate your desires and take account of your ways that your life will be becoming and worthy of your calling, and thus the heathen, the indifferent, the estranged and prejudiced people around you, prejudiced against Christ, will be prepared to receive the Gospel when it is urged upon them." We may try in a thousand ways to reach and interest them in religion, to civilize the masses, the institutional, the annual dinner or reception, church congress, the revival and out-of-door service, the [illegible] service, ornate ritual, eloquent courses, scholarly essays, [illegible] tures ad infinitum, but the [illegible] count more than any of these in impressing and gaining adherents, in making [illegible] is the example, the daily life and conversation of the individual. The Gospel preaching must be [illegible] and attested by Gospel living, going by Christlike service during work days. The ungodly often a higher standard for the Christian than the Christian for himself, the world's unconscious tribute to [illegible] ness. This standard [illegible] cation of righteousness, self-[illegible] kind consideration [illegible] nial, self-sacrifice [illegible] an eagle eye for any [illegible] or deviation from [illegible] the Christian goes [illegible] triple wrong done [illegible] cause he represents [illegible] look up to him for [illegible] leading toward a [illegible] godly life I do not [illegible] ative form of [illegible] nence from all [illegible] flesh—only this [illegible] We must endeavor [illegible] duct attractive and [illegible] when we take [illegible] dealings with those [illegible] to Christianity. [illegible] to do with Christ [illegible] crusty, severe, unkind and [illegible] able in word and manner. We [illegible] not be surprised to [illegible] and we cannot but [illegible] when made with [illegible] cases: "If this be Christianity [illegible] thee have me excused. I want [illegible] it."

In order to do our part there [illegible] not merely a refraining from [illegible] unbecoming and contrary to the [illegible] tian profession, but there must [illegible] positive showing and shining [illegible] kindness and love of the divine [illegible] feel within. Not only correct [illegible] beautiful deeds. In accounting [illegible] what had impressed and convinced [illegible] converted the world we must give [illegible] rank to beautiful deeds. The [illegible] of the Christian Church literally [illegible] with them. When the pagans [illegible] their near relations in a pagan [illegible] left the afflicted ones to die like [illegible] Christians came and ministered [illegible] sick and dying. When the pagan [illegible] their dead unburied after a battle [illegible] cast their wounded into the [illegible] the Christians hastened to relieve [illegible] suffering and give the corpses [illegible] interment.

We have had some very conspicuous and very sad examples recently of [illegible] high in position and the confidence [illegible] the community, placed there [illegible] because they were Christians in [illegible] and by connection, believing themselves [illegible] to be utterly deficient in such a [illegible] mental and necessary virtue as [illegible] mon everyday honesty. Bank [illegible] dents and cashiers and even bank [illegible] directors have not hesitated to [illegible] late with other people's money [illegible] ed to their keeping and they have [illegible] found out only because they have [illegible] ill they could beg, borrow and [illegible] Because of the frequency of these [illegible] falcations the Controller of the [illegible] States Currency felt impelled to [illegible] in the plainest terms to the National [illegible] Bank Cashiers' Association, at [illegible] ing the other day. He declared [illegible] outside speculation was the cause [illegible] the greatest number of bank failures [illegible] and he characterized speculation [illegible] greatest financial evil of the day. [illegible] asserted with great emphasis that [illegible] man should be allowed to hold [illegible] agerial place in a national bank [illegible] engaged in outside enterprises [illegible] profit to himself rather than the bank. [illegible] He intimates that the temptation [illegible] double dealing in such a case is [illegible] to resist. Why if the impression [illegible] comes general that a Christian [illegible] to be trusted, instead of breaking down [illegible] the prejudice that exists in every [illegible] against Christianity and the [illegible] will be added to and there will [illegible] only prejudice but detestation and [illegible] nunciation and what's more, it will be [illegible] deserved.

The stress and strain and [illegible] seems to be only for money [illegible] and position and worldly success; [illegible] these were the only things [illegible] if getting these means getting [illegible] is wanted. But, men and women [illegible] Christ, be not deceived or [illegible] from the things more necessary [illegible] more desired. The world's [illegible] longing of every man, woman and [illegible] on earth, the longing of your heart [illegible] mine, is for love, sympathy, [illegible] The Christian is the only one [illegible] ing and obligated by his vow [illegible] ter to the universal human [illegible] world, however [illegible] however distant and [illegible] expect us to help them. [illegible] servants of the Most High, [illegible] there is no help. In the name [illegible] Lord Jesus, before all [illegible] our best, to build up the good [illegible] beautiful and the true in the [illegible] lives of men, and thus transform [illegible] enmity, hatred and [illegible] into a higher and [illegible] and glory to God. It will mean [illegible] gladness to ourselves, life and [illegible] to others who know them [illegible] and honor, high and worthy [illegible] the Father in Heaven.

...AN'S ORDEAL
DOCTOR'S QUESTIONS

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. Receive Valuable Advice Confidential and Free

There be no more terrible ordeal for sensitive, refined woman obliged to answer certain in regard to her private ills. those questions are asked family physician, and many to suffer rather than submit minations which so many physicians propose in order to intelligently the disease; and this is the reason so many physicians fail to female disease.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen

is also the reason why thousands thousands of women are correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can confide every secret of their illness, and from great knowledge, obtained from years of experience in treating female troubles, Mrs. Pinkham can advise women more wisely than the local physician. And how Mrs. Pinkham helped Mrs. Willadsen, of Manning, Ia. She writes:

Mrs. Pinkham:—

I can truly say that you have saved my life and I cannot express my gratitude in words. Before I wrote to you telling you my trouble, I had doctored for over two years with a local physician and spent lots of money in medicines and tonics, but it all failed to do me any good. I suffered untold misery from female troubles and would daily have fainting spells, backache, bearing-down pains, and my monthly periods were very irregular and very painful. I ceased. I wrote to you for your advice and received a letter full of instructions what to do, and also commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has been restored to perfect health. I do not know how to thank you enough for what it has done for me, and I would have been in my grave to-day if it had not been for you I would have been in my grave to-day."

Mountains of proof establish the fact that there is no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for restoring women's health.

Write Quick FOR A Big Bargain

to better advertise the South's Leading Business College, four scholarships are offered to young persons of this county at less than HALF. WRITE TODAY.

MACON BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

OUR SPECIALTY 4—5

Any two dollar shirts for five dollars.

MADE TO YOUR MEASURE.

Write for samples and measurement blanks.

MODEL SHIRT CO.

Indianapolis, Ind.

A Rathskeller Car.

A unique piece of rolling stock has been added to the Pittsburg and Lake Erie railroad. It is a "rathskeller car" which will make daily runs between Pittsburg and Cleveland. The distance is so short many people do not think it necessary to take a Pullman, and the car has been introduced to meet the requirements of business men who make the trip often. The car, which is said to have cost $27,000, is a combination cafe and club affair, the general rathskeller effect being carried out both in convenience and comfort. The decorations are similar to those found in all rathskellers. The cuisine to which the rathskeller will be attached make the run between Pittsburg and Cleveland in three hours.

A Yung Wing, of Hartford, Conn., the first Oriental who ever graduated from an American college. He received his degree at Yale in the class of 1854. In 1876 he was the Chinese minister to the United States. Dr. Yung Wing is in his 76th year, but is still in good health, and his intellectuality is as bright as in his younger days.

A King's Favorite Author.

The favorite author of the King of Portugal is Shakespeare. In this respect his majesty's taste is similar to that of his father, who translated into Portuguese the "Merchant of Venice," "Othello" and "Hamlet."

Twenty-three and 8-10 cents is the value of a German mark.

BABY'S INSTINCT

When He Knew What Food to Stick To

Forwarding a photo of a splendidly handsome and healthy young boy, a grateful mother writes from an Ohio town:

"The enclosed picture shows my 4-year-old Grape-Nuts boy.

"Since he was 2 years old he has eaten nothing but Grape-Nuts. He demands and gets this food three times a day. This may seem rather unusual, but he does not care for anything else after he has eaten his Grape-Nuts. Cream which he uses with milk or cream, and when he is through with his meal. Even on Thanksgiving Day he refused turkey and all the good things that make that great dinner, and ate his dish of Grape-Nuts and cream with the best of relish and none of the evils that the other foolish members of the family experienced.

"He is never sick, has a beautiful complexion, and is considered a very unusual boy. May the Postum Company prosper and long continue to furnish their wholesome food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

What We All Need.

Woman's most pressing duty, endeavor to utilize [illegible] time, waste opportunities, waste kinds—for there is nothing [illegible] or tragic in this world that [illegible] that goes on all around us [illegible] mean waste of money—for [illegible] money is one of the smallest [illegible] waste—but waste of life, which [illegible] more important.

To use one's life to the best [illegible] to make the best of it—[illegible] phrase, to be a faithful steward [illegible] surely is the great need for [illegible] whether we are men or women.—British Reformer.

Arrears Fall Through.

Sufficient for each day is the [illegible] thereof, equally as the evil [illegible] do at once, and with our [illegible] merciful deed that our hand [illegible] do, else it will never be done, [illegible] hand will find other tasks, and [illegible] rears fall through. And even [illegible] summated good feeling, [illegible] filled purpose that His Spirit [illegible] prompted, shall one day [illegible] faithless and recreant before [illegible] H. Thom.

...in a thousand ways to reach ... interest them in religion, to ... ize the masses, the institutional ... the annual dinner or reception ... church congress, the revival ... and out-of-door service, the ... service, ornate ritual, eloquent ... courses, scholarly essays, ... tures ad infinitum, but the thing ... count more than any of these, ... these in impressing the ... gaining adherents, in making ... s the example, the daily life ... versation of the individual C... Gospel preaching must be ... and attested by Gospel living ... going by Christlike service dur... work days. The ungodly often ... a higher standard for the C... than the Christian for himself ... the world's unconscious tribute ... ness. This standard exacts ex... cation of righteousness, self-... kind consideration for others, ... nal, self-sacrifice. They watch ... an eagle eye for any infringement ... or deviation from this standard ... the Christian goes wrong the ... triple wrong done to himself, ... cause he represents and to the ... look up to him for an example ... leading toward a godly life. A ... godly life I do not refer to a m... active form of goodness—i. e. ... nence from all the sinful desires ... flesh only this and nothing ... We must endeavor to make ... d not attractive and winning, ... when we take into account ... dealings with those who are un... to Christianity. We oftentimes ... to do with Christians who are ... crastic, severe, unkind and d... able in word and manner. We ... not be surprised to hear the ... and we cannot but sympathize ... when made with reference ... cases: "If this be Christianity, ... thee have me excused. I want ... it."

In order to do our part there ... not merely a refraining from ... unbecoming and contrary to the ... tian profession, but there must ... positive showing and shining ... kindness and love of the divine ... feel within. Not only correct li... beautiful deeds. In accounting ... what had impressed and convinced ... converted the world we must gi... rank to beautiful deeds. The ... of the Christian Church literally ... with them. When the pagans ... their near relations in a plac... left the afflicted ones to die lik... Christians came and ministered ... sick and dying. When the pag... their dead unburied after a bat... cast their wounded into the ... the Christians hastened to reli... suffering and give the corpses ... interment.

We have had some very cons... and very sad examples recently ... high in position and the confid... the community, placed there ... because they were Christian ... and by connection, proving the ... to be utterly deficient in such ... mental and necessary virtue ... men everyday honesty. Bank ... dents and cashiers and even b... directors have not hesitated t... late with other people's money ... ed to their keeping and they h... found out only because they ... all they could beg, borrow a... Because of the frequency of t... falcations the Controller of the ... States Currency felt impelled ... in the plainest terms to the ... Bank Cashiers' Association, at ... ing the other day. He declar... outside speculation was the ... the greatest number of bank ... and he characterized speculatio... greatest financial evil of the ... asserted with great emphasis ... man should be allowed to hold ... agorial place in a national b... engaged in outside enterpri... profit to himself rather than t... He intimates that the templ... double dealing in such a case ... to resist. Why if the impre... comes general that a Christia... to be trusted, instead of breaki... the prejudice that exists in ... against Christianity and the c... will be added to and there w... only prejudice but detestation ... nunciation and what's more, ... deserved.

The stress and strain and ... seems to be only for money a... and position and worldly succ... these were the only things ... if getting these means getting ... s wanted. But, men and w... Christ, be not deceived or ... from the things more neces... more desired. The world's ... longing of every man, woman ... on earth, the longing of your h... mine, is for love, sympathy, ... The Christian is the only one ... ing and obligated by his vow ... er to the universal human ... world, however evil-speaking ... however distant and critical, ... expect us to help them. If ... servants of the Most High, t... there is no help. In the nam... Lord Jesus, beloved, let us d... our best, to build up the good ... beautiful and the true in the h... lives of men, and thus tran... enmity, hatred and scorn of ... into a higher and sweeter key ... and glory to God. It will mea... gladness to ourselves, life a... to others who know them ... and honor, high and worthy ... the Father in Heaven.

What We All Need.

Woman's most pressing duty ... devoir to utilize the waste ... time, waste opportunities, wa... kinds—for there is nothing ... or tragic in this world than ... that goes on all around us. ... mean waste of money—for ... money is one of the smallest ... waste—but waste of life, wh... more important.

To use one's life: to use it t... to make the best of it—in ... phrase, to be a faithful stew... surely is the great need f... whether we are men or wom... tish Reformer.

Arrears Fall Through.

Sufficient for each day is ... thereof, equally as the evil. ... do at once, and with our ... merciful deed that our hand ... do, else it will never be don... hand will find other tasks, a... rears fall through. And eve... summated good feeling, ev... filled purpose that His S... prompted, shall one day cl... faithless and recreant before ... H. Thom.

MAN'S ORDEAL
DOCTOR'S QUESTIONS

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. Receive Valuable Advice Confidential and Free

There be no more terrible ordeal ... sensitive, refined woman ... obliged to answer certain ... in regard to her private ills, ... those questions are asked ... family physician, and many ...

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen

...to suffer rather than submit ... questions which so many physi... expose in order to intelligently ... disease: and this is the rea... so many physicians fail to ... the disease.

...ains the reason why thousands ... thousands of women are corre... with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, ... To her they can confide every ... of their illness, and from ... knowledge, obtained from ... experience in treating female ... Pinkham can advise women ... rely than the local physician. ... know Mrs. Pinkham helped Mrs. ...lsen, of Manning, Ia. She ...

...Pinkham:—
...cannot express my gratitude in ... I cannot express my gratitude in ... before I wrote to you telling you ... had doctored for over two years ... and spent lots of money in medicines ... got at all failed to do me any good. I ... terribly weak and would daily have faint... ...backache, bearing-down pains, and ... periods were very irregular and ... I wrote to you for your ad... ...received a letter full of instructions ... to do, and also commenced to take ... Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, ... been restored to perfect health. ... not been for you I would have been in ... to-day."

...tains of proof establish the fact ... medicine in the world equals ... E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com... for restoring women's health.

...Quick FOR A Big Bargain

...advertise the South's Leading ... College, four scholarships are of... ...sold in this county at less than ... RATE TODAY.

...BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

...R SPECIALTY 4—5

...ten dollar shirts for five dollars.

MADE TO YOUR MEASURE.

...for samples and measurement blanks.

MODEL SHIRT CO.
Indianapolis, Ind.

A Rathskeller Car.

...unique piece of rolling stock has ...added to the Pittsburg and Lake ...railroad. It is a "rathskeller ...which will make daily runs be... ...Pittsburg and Cleveland. The ...ip is so short many people do ...think it necessary to take a Pull... ...and the car has been introduced ...the requirements of business ...who make the trip often. The ...which is said to have cost $27,000, ...combination cafe and club affair, ...general rathskeller effect being ...out both in convenience and ... The decorations are similar ...be found in all rathskellers. The ...to which the rathskeller will be ...will make the run between Pitts... ...and Cleveland in three hours.

...Yung Wing, of Hartford, Conn., ...the first Oriental who ever grad... ...from an American college. He ...the degree at Yale in the class of ...In 1876 he was the Chinese min... ...to the United States. Dr. Yung ...is in his 76th year, but is still ...of health, and his intellectuality ...bright as in his younger days.

A King's Favorite Author.

...favorite author of the King of ...is Shakespeare. In this re... ...his majesty's taste is similar to ...his father, who translated into ...these the "Merchant of Venice," ...an, "Hamlet."

...three and 8-10 cents is the ...of a German mark.

BABY'S INSTINCT
He Knew What Food to Stick To

...sterling a photo of a splendidly ...some and healthy young boy, a ...mother writes from an Ohio ...

...enclosed picture shows my 4-...old boy; Grape-Nuts boy. ...when he was 2 years old he has eat... ...nothing but Grape-Nuts. He de... ...and gets this food three times a ...It may seem rather unusual, ...does not care for anything else ...he has eaten his Grape-Nuts. ...he uses with milk or cream, and ...is through with his meal. Even ...Thanksgiving Day he refused tur... ...all the good things that make ...a great dinner, and ate his dish ...Grape-Nuts and cream with the best ...and none of the evils that the ...blood members of the family ...incur.

...is never sick, has a beautiful ...complexion, and is considered a very ...good boy. May the Postum Com... ...prosper and long continue to fur... ...their wholesome food." Name ...by Postum Co., Battle Creek, ...

...there's a reason. Read the little ...book, "The Road to Wellville," in ...pkgs.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 13.

Subject: Josiah and the Book of the Law, II. Chron. xxxiv., 14-28—Golden Text, Psa. cxix., 16—Memory Verse, 21—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. The book of the law discovered (vs. 14-18). 14. "Brought out the money." It would seem that the book of the law was found by the high priest in the treasury where the money was kept. "Found." This expression indicates that the allusion is to something already known, not to anything that had come to light for the first time. "Book of the law." The name given to the five books of Moses. The book of the law cannot mean anything else, either grammatically or historically, than the Mosaic law, "the Pentateuch," so designated in Chronicles, Ezra and Nehemiah. The temple copy, deposited, according to Deut. 31: 26, by the ark of the covenant, which had been lost under the idolatrous kings Manasseh and Amon. "Given by Moses." This statement has led many to believe that it was the ancient autograph copy which came from the hand of the great lawgiver. This, Kitto thinks, was one reason why its discovery made such an extraordinary impression. 15. "Delivered the book." Shaphan was the private secretary of the king and had charge of his books and records. The book found was a parchment roll. Books were few and precious.

16, 17. "Brought—word back." Before Shaphan delivered the new found book to the king he reported to him concerning the business on which he had been sent at first. He told the king that they had faithfully performed the work committed to them and that the money had been properly paid out. 18. "A book." Shaphan had already read the book, or portions of it (2 Kings 22: 8), and no doubt fully understood its character, but he did not tell the king that it was the book of the law; he spoke of it as a book and allowed the king to form his own opinion as to its importance. "Read therein" (R. V.) That is, Shaphan read portions of the book. Of course he read at the king's command. Josiah was anxious to know the truth and the nature of the law he had been trying to obey.

II. The effect on the king (vs. 19-21). 19. "King had heard." Those who hear God's word so often can scarcely conceive the effect the reading of the law would have on this young king as he listened to it for the first time. "Rent his clothes." Brought face to face with the awful curse of God, pronounced nearly a thousand years before on the nation, for the very sins which had characterized the reign of his father and grandfather, amazement took possession of him. He rose from his throne, rent his clothes, humbled himself before the Lord and wept (2 Kings 22: 19). He rent his clothes partly in grief and horror, like Reuben (Gen. 37: 29) and Job (1: 20; partly in repentance, like Ahab (1 Kings 21: 27). 20. "King commanded." The king appointed a delegation of five to inquire of the Lord. This was a truly honorable and imposing delegation, and was indicative of the king's profound earnestness and anxiety. 21. "Go, enquire." The king saw that this was a matter of great importance, and he desired to know from Jehovah Himself exactly what to do. He felt a deep anxiety for himself and also for his people—the ten tribes as well as the two. "Great wrath." He heard its distant rumblings like the coming of a fiery lava flood, in the hoards of the Sythians, enforced by the prophecies of Jeremiah and Zephaniah. "Our fathers," etc. Amon and Manasseh had led the people into gross sins. In the light of the law he had just heard read Josiah saw that the nation was doomed.

III. Huldah's faithful message (vs. 22-28). 22. "Huldah." All we know of this celebrated woman is recorded here and in the parallel history of Kings. But this short narrative has immortalized her name. Probably the two prophets, Jeremiah and Zephaniah, were absent from the city. But God is not straightened in His instruments. He can use a woman to speak for Him as well as a man, an humble person as well as an exalted one. Huldah had the full prophetic gift, and spoke as boldly, confidently and promptly as would Isaiah or Jeremiah. "Keeper of the wardrobe." There seems no doubt that the robes here alluded to are the robes of the priests, which are called by the same Hebrew word in Exod. 28: 2-4 and many subsequent passages. "In the college." "In the second quarter." R. V. This refers to a part of the city of Jerusalem which was known by that name. 23. "Tell ye the man." Her answer to the deputation was fearless, and seemingly abrupt. 24. "Bring evil." The judgments of God. "This place." Jerusalem. "All the curses." See Deut. 27: 14-26; 28: 15-68.

25. "Have forsaken Me." This was the gist of their offense, the thing that was unpardonable. Against this were all the chief warnings in the law (Deut. 29: 25-28, etc.) and the prophets (Judg. 10: 13; 1 Kings 9: 9; Isa. 1: 4; Jer. 1: 16, etc). It was not merely that they broke the commandments, but they turned from God altogether, and "cast Him behind their back." "Shall not be quenched." For such a state of things there is "no remedy" (2 Chron. 36: 16), and this was the state of things reached by the Jews. 26-28. The prophetess in these verses sends a personal word of comfort to the king. Because he had humbled himself and in a true spirit of repentance had wept before the Lord because of the wickedness of his people; therefore the Lord would show mercy upon him, and he should be gathered to his fathers in peace and not see the evil that was soon to come upon the nation.

British Squadron Coming Here.

The British squadron commanded by Prince Louis of Battenberg sailed from Gibraltar on a three months' cruise to American waters.

Linevitch Still Confident.

General Linevitch, in a dispatch to the Emperor from the front, says that the army is in no peril and is ready for any task.

Taft Party Sails For Manila.

Secretary Taft and his party sailed from Nagasaki, Japan, on the Manchuria for Manila, P. I.

British Postoffice Rules.

The rules of the British postoffice are presumably liberal regarding what may be sent by mail. But there is, of course, some red tape, as this wail from a person who wished to send a copy of a will by mail goes to show. He writes: "The postoffice allows you to do a good deal that you never want to do. You may, for instance, send a live bee by post; you may even, 'with the special permission of the postmaster general,' send what the Postoffice Guide describes as 'any living creature.' But if you try to send a copy of a will to America your troubles begin. It seems absurd that while, apparently, a baby can be sent by post a will can not. But, as the postal assistant pointed out when the would-be sender of the latter article returned for the third time to the office with the thing done up right at last, 'You see, it isn't printed matter, and it isn't exactly manuscript, and it isn't commercial. That's where the difficulty comes in."

Free to Kiss.

An Irish judge stated that if any woman were brought before him on a charge of slapping or scratching a man's face because he had attempted to kiss her he would at once dismiss the charge. He, however, only awarded the charge. He, however, awarded one shilling damages against a man who had kissed a widow without getting scratched.

Places Made for Them.

It is the amiable custom of the house of lords to preserve, duly "docketed," places in their cloak room for young peers awaiting their coming of age. To show how thoughtful they are in this respect there is a place reserved for the baby Marquis of Donegal against the arrival of his 21st birthday.

In Chicago "Bluebeard" Hoch has been respited four weeks.

TWENTY YEARS OF IT.

Emaciated by Diabetes; Tortured With Gravel and Kidney Pains.

Henry Soule, cobbler, of Hammondsport, N. Y., says: "Since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me eight years ago, I've reached seventy and hope to live many years longer. But twenty years ago I had kidney trouble so bad I could not work. Backache was persistent and it was agony to lift anything. Gravel, whirling headaches, dizziness and terrible urinary disorders ran me down from 168 to 100 pounds. Doctors told me I had diabetes and could not live. I was wretched and hopeless when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they cured me eight years ago and I've been well ever since."

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents per box.

Wright Lorimer.

Wright Lorimer, the star and producer of the big Biblical drama, "The Shepherd King," said to be the largest and most expensive theatrical production ever attempted in this country, is a native of Massachusetts. He received his preparatory education at the Worcester (Mass.) academy, and his collegiate education at Colgate University, afterwards taking a special course in English literature at Oxford University. Mr. Lorimer declined a chair of English literature at the Stanford University and determined to make the stage his field of action. His first appearance on any stage was made as a super with the Dearborn Stock Company in Chicago. "The Shepherd King" is said to be the only successful Biblical play of modern times, being in effect a dramatization of the book of Samuel.

Hetty Green's Son.

"Ed" Green, the Texas railroad man and son of Mrs. Hetty Green, has become a practical floriculturist. He has purchased a parcel of land near Dallas for $250 an acre and will start a flower farm there. The enterprise will be chartered with a capital stock of $250,000, practically all of which Mr. Green will own, and a fine system of irrigation is to be inaugurated. the water pressure to be of city power.

One Fare (Plus 25c)

For the round trip to Detroit via Queen & Crescent Route. Tickets on sale August 13th and 14th, good returning until August 21st. Ask ticket agents for particulars.

Queer Blunders in Titles.

Some queer blunders are made in addressing royalty and other titled personages. Lady Dufferin, in India, was once addressed as "Your Enormity." An Abyssinian missive came to Queen Victoria, addressed to the "Queen of Kings, Empress of the Great Red Sea." Her Highland tenants used to say: "Come awa' in and sit doon, Queen Victoree."

Bishop Charles C. Grafton, one of the acknowledged leaders in the "High" Church doctrines of the Episcopal religion, has established a monastery for members of the Benedictine order, of Fond du Lac, Wis.

FEAR FOR NIAGARA.

IMMENSE VOLUME OF WATER DIVERTED FROM FALLS.

Commercial Enterprises Are Making Heavy Drains on This Famous Show-Place—Its Tremendous Electrical Power the Inducement.

Niagara Falls, August 7.—The volume of water being diverted from the historic Niagara Falls is reaching such proportions that the people of the State are trying to pass laws which will prevent the possibility of a practical wiping out of this sublime natural spectacle.

Water sufficient to develop nearly five hundred thousand horse-power continuously, twenty-four hours per day, for industrial purposes, is now being taken from the river above the Falls, and further developments requiring more water are contemplated.

Probably the largest user of the electricity produced by the waters of the mighty river is the concern which by the five or six thousand degree heat of the electric furnace brings lime and coke into unwilling union, thereby producing what is known as Calcium Carbide.

Dry calcium carbide is lifeless as so much broken rock, but in contact with water it springs into activity and begets abundantly the gas Acetylene. The light resulting from the ignition of acetylene is the nearest approach to sunlight known.

These facts, though of comparatively recent discovery, were soon seized by men with an eye to the commercial possibilities and to-day calcium carbide is being shipped everywhere and used for dispelling darkness in buildings of all descriptions, from the ordinary barn of the farmer to the country villa of the wealthy, as well as for lighting the streets of a large number of towns.

Acetylene can be easily and cheaply installed, and the manufacture and sale of acetylene generators has become a business of recognized standing, has assumed large proportions and is steadily growing.

Alfonso Turned Flip-Flaps.

One evening when the young King of Italy was the guest of King Edward in Buckingham palace Alfonso thought things were moving rather slowly. With the view of livening up the spirits of himself and his fellow guests his juvenile majesty proceeded to turn flip-flaps down a corridor, to the immense delight of every one present. After the laughter has subsided Alfonso justified himself by quoting the opinion of Horace, "Dulce est desipere in loco," which he translated thus liberally: "It is delightful to play the fool at a fitting time."

To Be an Italian Knight.

Dr. Joseph Spencer Kennard is to have the distinction of being knighted by the King of Italy at the January levee. Dr. Kennard recently removed from Tarrytown, N. Y., and his novels in the Italian tongue have received larger royalties than any Italian novelist, save Gabrielle D'Annunzio.

FITS permanently cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer, $2 trial bottle and treatise free Dr. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Buhl work is said to be very popular now in England.

Piso's Cure is the best medicine we ever used for all affections of throat and lungs.—WM. O. ENDSLEY, Vanburen, Ind., Feb. 10, 1900.

Labor organization has until lately made slow headway in Spain.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c. a bottle

Books were not bound in cloth until 1823.

GRATEFUL TO CUTICURA

For Instant Relief and Speedy Cure of Raw and Scaly Humor, Itching Day and Night—Suffered For Months.

"I wish you would publish this letter so that others suffering as I have may be helped. For months awful sores covered my face and neck, scabs forming, itching terribly day and night, breaking open, and running blood and matter. I had tried many remedies, but was growing worse, when I started with Cuticura. The first application gave me instant relief, and when I had used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured. (Signed) Miss Nellie Vander Wiele, Lakeside, N. Y."

The original captain's commission issued to John Paul Jones in Philadelphia in 1778 is owned by Joseph A. Newton, of Haverhill, Mass., his father having found it in a second-hand book store in Baltimore.

Swedish Editor Honored.

The Swedish decoration entitled "Litteris et Artibus," has been awarded by King Oscar to Dr. John A. Enander, for more than thirty-five years editor of Hemlandet, a Swedish weekly newspaper of Chicago. Dr. Enander is the author of a "History of the United States" and a number of other books and is an able lecturer.

Edward's Gold Plate.

King Edward is the owner of a vast store of almost priceless gold plate, the accumulated treasure of successive sovereignties. It is stored in Windsor castle, but is brought to London, carefully guarded, on the occasion of a court entertainment. These treasures are equaled only by those of the winter palace in St. Petersburg.

LIVER AND BOWELS
MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR
PROMPTLY CURES CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, INDIGESTION, SOUR STOMACH AND ALL DERANGEMENTS OF THE STOMACH AND BOWELS. 50 CENTS A BOTTLE AT ALL DRUG STORES.

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.
NEW ORLEANS.

Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.

Am. 32, 1905.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE
HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.

There is absolutely no other school for Women and Girls in the South, if anywhere, offering so extensive a curriculum: thus, the greatest benefits for the smallest outlay. Most approved modern improvements—Electric Lights, Hot Water heating, Complete outfit of Bath-rooms, etc., etc. Grounds, of forty acres, by universal consensus, the most uniquely beautiful School Grounds in America. Offers to the ambitious thorough preparation for the great universities. Col. Th. Smith, A. M., Pres. [Alum. Univ. of Va.]

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

THERE IS MONEY IN THE CORN STALK. Write for free catalog. I. A. Madden, Atlanta, Ga.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

Biliousness

"I have used your valuable Cascarets and find them perfect. Couldn't do without them. I have used them for some time for indigestion and biliousness and am now completely cured. Recommend them to everyone. Once tried, you will never be without them in the family."
Edward A. Marx, Albany, N. Y.

Best for The Bowels
Cascarets
CANDY CATHARTIC
THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c. 25c. 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y.
ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC
FOR WOMEN

troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and local soreness, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh. Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in pure water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all
TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES
For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box.
Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.
THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free Catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO., 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

YOU CAN LIVE IN A SWAMP AND STILL BE WELL
Chills and Fevers will have no terrors for you if you use
OXIDINE
Made in Regular and Tasteless Forms. For sale by all Druggists.
M'f'd by PATTON-WORSHAM DRUG CO., DALLAS, TEXAS AND MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE.
PRICE 50 CENTS

WINCHESTER
RIFLE AND PISTOL CARTRIDGES

Winchester Rifle and Pistol Cartridges of all calibers are loaded by machinery which sizes the shells, supplies the exact quantity of powder, and seats the bullets properly. By using first-class materials and this up-to-date system of loading, the reputation of Winchester Cartridges for accuracy, reliability and excellence is maintained. Ask for them.
THEY SHOOT WHERE YOU HOLD

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. FOR OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)
(Save the Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)
SOLD BY GROCERS EVERYWHERE
WOOLSON SPICE CO., Toledo, Ohio.

SIR KNIGHT
THE LIMIT IN LEATHER FOR MEN

YOU are not Shoewise Unless you are wearing the SIR KNIGHT $4 SHOE.
It's Different—It's STYLE, COMFORT, SERVICE and ECONOMY ALL in one pair of SHOES.
Every Dealer Who Has His Customers' Interest at Heart, Sells These Shoes.
Wertheimer-Swarts Shoe Co.
LARGEST FINE SHOE EXCLUSIVISTS
ST. LOUIS. U. S. A.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

NATION TO FIGHT FEVER

Governor of Louisiana Wires Petition of People to President.

MISSISSIPPI FLEET IS CAPTURED

War Between Neighboring States Comes to Climax—General Housecleaning in New Orleans, Where the Disease is Most Prevalent—Telegraphs Roosevelt For Instructions.

New Orleans, La.—With a desire to stop the panic throughout the South, which has demoralized business and already has caused enormous financial losses, leaders in official and business life in Louisiana have asked the United States Government to take full control of the fight against the yellow fever.

The meeting to determine on means to meet the panic conditions was held at the Cotton Exchange. The president and three delegates from all commercial and some professional organizations, Mayor Bahrman, President Kohnke, of the City Board of Health; President Souchon, of the State Board of Health, and some physicians were present. This resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That this meeting indorses the proposition to ask the United States Government to take control of the yellow fever situation in New Orleans, and that the Governor of the State and the Mayor of New Orleans be requested to take immediate steps to carry this proposition into effect.

"Further, That the hearty co-operation of the State and city governments, State and city health boards, Parish Medical Society and merchants and people generally be pledged in such action as may be taken by the Government."

A telegram was sent to Governor Blanchard apprising him of the action of the meeting. He wired to the President at Oyster Bay expressing his approval.

A yellow fever and quarantine expert in the city, whose position with the Government forbids the use of his name, has estimated that the probable cost to the Government of the effort to stamp out the fever will be about $1,000,000, exclusive of the moneys that the localities will be called on to expend.

The Louisiana Naval Reserves captured or drove from the Louisiana lakes the entire force of the Mississippi quarantine patrol. The crews of the two boats captured—the Grace and the Tipsey—are in the parish prison of St. Bernard parish, below the city, under charges ranging from piracy to assault and battery.

The Oyster Commission boat Grace, flying the Mississippi quarantine flag, was caught at the Rigolets.

At a conference at the City Hall it was decided that Mayor Barhman should issue a proclamation requiring every business house in the city to close one day so that employes might take a hand in the general cleaning movement. Merchants are to be asked to furnish carts to carry away refuse.

Hundreds of persons are temporarily moving from New Orleans to St. Tammany Parish, the only near haven to which they can go. The parish has opened its doors to all refugees. Yellow fever has never developed in St. Tammany Parish during the most serious epidemics.

Extreme measures which some of the country districts are taking to guard themselves from yellow fever threaten to put a stop to train service.

SURRENDER AT SAGHALIEN.

Bulk of Russian Garrison Capitulates to the Japanese.

Tokio, Japan.—The bulk of the Russian garrison on Saghalien Island surrendered to the Japanese on July 31.

A report giving details of their final pursuit and surrender has been received, as follows:

"An independent cavalry column on the afternoon of July 28 attacked the enemy south of Paleo and routed him, driving him southward, capturing two field guns, besides a number of rifles and a quantity of ammunition.

"On July 29 the cavalry, being reinforced, vigorously pursued the enemy south of Taylan, which lies twenty-five miles south of Rykoff.

"The enemy halted at Onol, twenty-five miles south of Taylan, and at 5 o'clock on the morning of July 30 sent a letter under a flag of truce to the Japanese commanding officer from General Liapnoff, the Russian Governor, saying that the lack of bandage material and medicines, and the consequent inability to succor the wounded, compelled him, from a sense of humanity, to terminate hostilities.

"The commander of the Japanese force replied, demanding the delivery of all war supplies and property of the Russian Government, the uninjured, and the delivery of all maps, records and papers relating to the Russian civil and military administration, and requiring their delivery in reply at 10 o'clock on the morning of July 31, otherwise an attacking movement would immediately be started.

"Colonel Tolivitch, on behalf of Governor Liapnoff, met Colonel Koizumi, Japanese chief of staff, on the morning of July 31, and accepted the proposed terms.

"Governor Liapnoff, seventy officers and 3200 men of the Russian garrison then surrendered.

"The spoils, consisting of clothing, papers and military supplies, are now under investigation."

Six Months' Returns.

Complete returns now available for the leading departments indicate that the first half of 1905 made a better comparison with the corresponding six months of last year than even the most sanguine estimate.

Textile Prices Inflated.

Commercial tendencies are still in the direction of improvement, although progress is hampered by some inflation of prices for the raw materials of textile and footwear industries.

CITY'S MAYOR ABSCONDS

Chief Executive of Paterson, N. J., Disappears.

High Finance Swamps the Official Who Has Been Accused of Thefts.

Paterson, N. J.—The unlawful financiering of Mayor Belcher, of Paterson, has left many victims, who have lost an amount far in excess of any estimates heretofore given. Mayor Belcher, who was looked upon as a highly moral citizen and elected to office as a reform candidate, has, according to the latest estimates, fleeced friends and clients out of not less than $100,000.

Assemblyman Wright has been engaged by the Department of Banking and Insurance to make a search of all the mortgages and deeds affecting the Manchester Building and Loan Association, of which Belcher was President and counsel. Half a dozen fraudulent mortgages have been uncovered.

Nearly all of the Mayor's personal and political friends have lost money, most of which was loaned without security. When he left Paterson, Mayor Belcher borrowed from Lawyer J. Willard De Yoe $1500. Prior to that he had obtained from De Yoe $1200 on personal notes. Thomas F. Morgan, a grocer, lent to the Mayor $5000 without security.

"Yes, and I am ready to give him $5000 more if he needs it," was the only comment of Mr. Morgan. He is one of the few men in Paterson who still has faith in the Mayor. Mr. Belcher's loans from lawyers and others having offices in the Savings Institution Building aggregate more than $10,000.

At a meeting of the directors of the Mutual Building and Loan Association it was decided to call in all the passbooks. This decision was brought about by the knowledge that money had been regularly paid as dues to Belcher at his office; that the dues were credited on the shareholders' books, but not on the books of the association. In this way it is believed that Belcher has collected hundreds of dollars that did not find their way to the association's treasury.

The largest individual loss has been sustained by Mrs. Henry Latham, a widow. Belcher had charge of the Latham estate, valued at $15,000. Mrs. Latham frequently asked for a settlement, but Belcher managed to put her off. Mrs. Latham believes that her estate is lost to her. The estate of the late Congressman James F. Stewart is also involved. It is valued at $10,000.

Each hour brings fresh revelations of the swindling transactions of Mayor Belcher. The bank officials from whose institutions about $10,000 was obtained by Belcher, on fraudulent securities, have been compensated apparently. At least they declare that they have no intention of bringing criminal proceedings against him. But it has been learned that there are scores of other victims, some of whom entrusted all their savings to Belcher, and now find that they are the owners of worthless securities. These victims are ready to make complaint.

Alphonse Maneve, a hard-working man, and his wife managed to save $2000 by depositing $10 monthly in the Manchester Building and Loan Association. When the shares matured they suggested that Mayor Belcher, who was President of the association, invest the money for them. Belcher gave Maneve a "fake" mortgage on property on East Thirtieth street.

The search indicated that the title came from Catherine Van Winkle, who sold the property to George S. Berdan. Berdan turns out to be a mythical person. Attached to the mortgage was a search on which the name of former Tax Receiver Chester D. Ely was forged. The mortgage bears the forged signature of County Clerk John J. Slater.

The stamp on the bogus document Belcher had made for the purpose. This stamp was found at Belcher's office. It is a square rubber affair and red ink was used in making the impression. In this it would appear that Belcher had been guilty of two serious crimes, first, that of robbing Maneve out of $2000, and the other, of falsifying and forging public documents. Maneve has laid the matter before the Prosecutor and will make a criminal complaint.

Another mortgage transaction has been brought to light. Belcher gave a mortgage on the property of the Meserve Land Company, of which he was President, to the Manchester Building and Loan Association, of which he was also President. It was for $3400. No one knows who got the money, and it is presumed that it went into Belcher's pocket. A rubber stamp was used in this case, and the name of the late County Clerk Winfield was forged.

Lawyers who have made an investigation learn that the property of Mayor Belcher has been mortgaged for far more than it is worth. His home in Paterson is worth about $10,000, but the mortgages on it aggregate $18,000. Belcher carried a life insurance policy of $35,000.

Belcher maintained three country places, one at Midvale, another at Sloatsburg, N. Y., and a third at Wayne township, N. J. He spent considerable money on these places, but not enough to involve him in his present financial troubles.

Crops Increase Confidence.

Confidence expands as the crops are secured, each day putting a large quantity of grain beyond danger and making sensational rumors of loss less effective.

Boy of Fifteen Abuses Father.

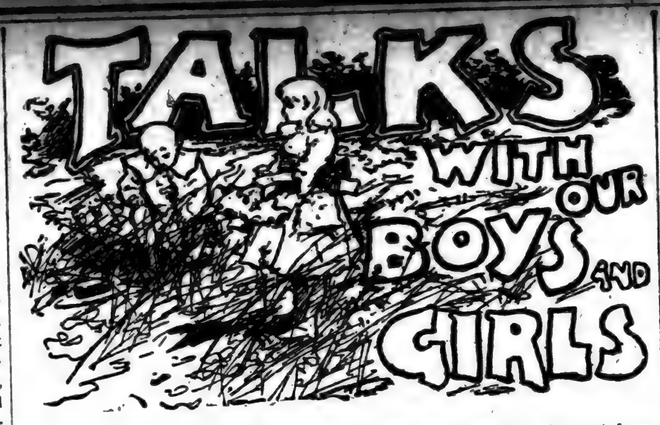
Alfred Price, Jr., of New York City, six foot, fifteen-year-old son, was sent to the juvenile asylum for abusing his father.

J. Pierpont Morgan Back.

J. Pierpont Morgan returned to New York City on the Oceanic after nearly three months in Europe.

Big German Fleet at Stockholm.

A German squadron of twenty-six vessels arrived at Stockholm, Sweden.



THE BAD DANDELIONS.

A million dandelions
Came out one summer day,
And rambled up and down the hill
To laugh and play.

They shook their golden tresses,
And flung their kisses free,
And flirted with the sun and wind Outrageously.

They were so much admired,
They were so rich in gold,
They flaunted up and down the hill
So proud and bold,

That the envious swamp-cabbage,
That poor old "touch-me-not,"
So sour and discontented with Her lowly lot,

Held up a flaming candle,
To peep and watch and spy,
And all who understood her speech
Could hear her cry:—

"There'll come a retribution,
'Twill shock the very town;
Your pride will blow your boasted gold
To common silver 'down'!"

But the saucy dandelions
Fled laughing up the hill,
And it is said in Flower-land
They're laughing still.

—Ella Higginson in the Christian Register.

THE HIDDEN ROBE.

Two maidens, very fair to look upon, started one morning on a journey—a journey across the Plain of Life. It stretched before them, fair, alluring. It was bounded by a forest whose trees climbed up and hid a mountain. Beyond that, so they had heard, was a river, on the far side of which was the Palace of the King of the Land of Eternal Day.

"We are beautiful," said Ayeda, the elder. "It cannot be but that he will look upon us with favor, so only our robes be white when we seek his presence."

"Can we keep them thus, the journey is so long?" replied Carita.

"With care we can, and we must care for naught else," said Ayeda. And they journed on.

The plain, which had been easy enough to tread at first, became rugged and uncertain and full of holes. Some of these were filled with water, some with mud. To keep clear of these needed much thought, and they trod with painful care. Other travelers, too, were at their side, travelers of all ages. One, an old man sore spent, caught hold of Ayeda's hand.

"Let me lean on thee!" he besought her, but she shook him off.

"Soil my robe for thee?" she cried.

Carita heard. Swiftly she drew his hand in hers.

"He will besmirch thy robe," warned her friend.

"I cannot help it," replied Carita.

Even as she spoke, the old man was no longer at her side. Only a stain was on the folds of linen that hung about her.

As they neared the forest, they saw a woman lying in one of the largest pools.

"Ah! lend thy hand a moment, that I may rise," she implored.

"'Tis of small use, thy rising," replied Ayeda. "The King would not look upon thee."

And she passed into the gloom of the forest.

Carita stretched forth her hand. The hapless woman caught it, and Carita strongly pulled her up. But the mud of the pool was splashed upon her garment, and it looked soiled, indeed. Strange to say, the woman she had saved was more grieved than she. Carita, indeed, gave it no thought, so intent was she upon guiding the steps of a child she had found with her into the forest shade.

"Have a care," called back Ayeda, whose snowy robe was spotless yet "Thou wilt need both thy hands in this forest to clear thy path from thorns."

"The child needs help," was all Carita could reply; but, as she looked at her friend, her heart for a moment sank, for Ayeda's eyes had known no tears and shone like stars. She carried no burden, and her form was erect. She had lent no aid, and her robe was unsoiled.

But poor Carita! Not only was she splashed with mud, but she had wept until her eyes were dim. She had helped this one and that, and her form was bent. She had borne the burdens of those beside her, and her strength was spent.

Ayeda's skin was soft and fair, for she had eaten plentifully of the fruit that grew by the way. Carita had plucked for the old men and for the children, and had taken but few herself, and those not of the best. Her hair, too, had turned gray since she had entered the forest. How could she hope to be admitted into the presence of the King, much less that he should smile on her? Yet any cry for help, and she turned to the spot from whence it came. She could not turn from it with Ayeda's wisdom, but ever lent her aid and soiled her robe. So with bleeding feet she climbed the mountain. So with sinking heart she faced the stream.

On the further side of that river the king's palace rose, tower upon tower of snow-white marble and of burning gold. Gardens that bloomed with fairest flowers surrounded it. At the great gate the weary travelers stood. The warders blew their horns.

"Enter! enter!" they cried. "Enter all whose robes have neither spot nor stain, whose forms are fair and whose eyes are bright. None other doth the king desire."

Proudly Ayeda stepped from the throng. Two sentinels in shining armor met and stayed her.

"Thy robe," said one, pointing.

"Thy face, thy form," said another. "See thou thyself."

Ayeda looked into a pool of water near. She shrieked aloud.

"The river works many a change," spoke the sentinel. "In thy passage through those dark and silent waters thy robe was washed from thee, and one that, unknowing, thou hadst been weaving on the way by thy deeds—the hidden robe of thy true soul—was thus uncovered. And in those waters all eyes that have not wept grow dim, all limbs that have not toiled grow bent. Regard thyself."

Ayeda shrieked again and wrung her hands. Her form had shrunk to almost pigmy proportions; her garments hung stained and soiled about her. Her hard, pinched face, mean with meanest thoughts, showing but ignoble desires and selfish hopes, had no beauty for the eyes of any man.

The sentinel took Carita's hand and drew her forward. And lo! her transformation was very wonderful to see. The tears she had shed for others had made her eyes more lustrous than the stars. Her brow, noble and pure, had been moulded by noblest thoughts and loftiest aspirations. The burdens not her own that she had borne had trained her limbs to grace and strength. On the new robe she wore were interweavings of bright gold wherever on the old had been a stain.

The great gates opened wide.

"Bride of the King," said the sentry, "pass on."—Frances Harmer, in Christian Register.

HELEN'S NEST.

Once upon a time there was a little girl named Helen. She lived in the country, and about her house there were many fine trees, where the birds came every year to spend the summer. Now Helen loved to watch the birds, butterflies and bees doing their work.

Well, one day Mr. and Mrs. Oriole came to look at the big elm tree. They soon decided to build a nest there, and each flew off in a different direction to find building material.

"Oh, papa," cried Helen, who had caught the gleam of brilliant orange and black, "let's help them so they'll stay here."

"All right, little girl," answered her father.

Helen had helped birds before by putting bits of string and worsted and straws on the ground and nearby bushes.

Suddenly she clapped her hands, exclaiming, "Oh, I'm going to label this nest, and then, after it's all built, it will be mine!"

So she carefully wrote her name on a tag of paper, putting a long piece of white string through the end of the tag. On some other tags she wrote the day and month, "May 28." Then they were left in plain sight and Helen scampered away.

The birds did not seem to notice the strings at first, but later every one was gone, and from that hanging nest waved six little tags bearing Helen's name and the date!

When the birds had raised their families and gone south, her father took down the nest and brought it into the house to Helen.—Florence A. Pardee in St. Nicholas.

PETS THE SAILORS JOY.

Animal pets have ever been a great joy to the average sailor. There is hardly a ship afloat that does not carry one or more such little favorites, to whom the crew are universally kind. More than this, there is frequently developed an attachment between men and animals that is seldom to be seen on shore; and the intelligence displayed by these animals often far exceeds the wonderful stories we sometimes see in print. On men-of-war there is probably more consideration shown the crew in this regard than on merchantmen; at all events, you will find there many more ship's pets. It is by no means uncommon to see upon the same deck a dozen or more well-trained animals of various kinds whose natural homes are separated by thousands of miles.—St. Nicholas.

Thorsby, Alabama
Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

Commercial Club OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOE

Thorsby Winery —Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise
Fine Line of Shoes.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wishart
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

INSURANCE INQUIRY ON

Legislative Committee to Hold Its Sessions in New York City.

Quick Reports Are Promised—Question of Attorneys and Stenographers to Be Chosen.

New York City.—Most of the members of the Legislative Insurance Investigating Committee arrived in town at night. Assemblyman James T. Rogers, Speaker Nixon and Archie E. Baxter, Clerk of the Assembly, went to the Hotel Cadillac.

The party was joined later by Senators William W. Armstrong, the Chairman, and William J. Tully, Assemblymen Ezra P. Prentice, William W. Wemple, Robert L. Cox, Frank Johnson, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Assembly, and C. R. Hotaling, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate. The party then went to a theatre. Assemblyman McKeowan and Senator Riordan came down from Albany by boat, arriving in this city the next day.

Albany, N. Y.—All the members of the insurance investigation committee were present at the organization of the committee at the Capitol.

The session lasted several hours. Just before adjournment it was agreed to reassemble in the New York City office of the Attorney-General at 27 William street. It was agreed that no hotel be made the headquarters of the members of the committee, but that each one should select the hotel of his choice.

Attorney-General Mayer sat with the eight committeemen during their deliberations, but said that nothing of any importance was transacted, the matter of organizing and getting to work being the only discussion. In view of the limited appropriation the selection of the principal counsel will be difficult. The committeemen believed that two or three good lawyers ought to be secured.

"The big insurance companies will be represented by prominent lawyers," said Senator Riordan, "and our committee should have all the assistance it can get. I am in favor of employing the very best lawyers it is possible to secure."

Several stenographers will be necessary. For the places applications were received from Burt Sackett, the Senate stenographer; George E. Shotwell, stenographer of the Senate Finance Committee; Henry Lammert, stenographer of the Assembly, and George W. Henderson, of the Law Reporting Company, Incorporated, of New York.

The official Senate and Assembly stenographers and Mr. Shotwell, Senator Malby's stenographer, had everything "fixed, as they believed, to be named the official stenographers of the committee.

Their fond dreams were shattered, however, when J. Calvin McKnight appeared before the committee in advocacy of the offer of the Law Reporting Company. Mr. McKnight, who spent the day with Chairman Odell at Saratoga, came to Albany on an early train and met Mr. Henderson. When the committee was ready to take up the consideration of selection of stenographers a letter from the Law Reporting Company was read which sent cold chills up and down the spines of the committeemen who had pledged their support to the legislative stenographers. This corporation asked to be made the official stenographer of the committee, offering to perform the work for two cents a folio for the original copy and two cents a folio for each additional copy.

Cheap and Quick Reports.

This figure for a stenographic report of proceedings is perhaps the smallest ever made in this or any other State. It is explained in the letter signed by George W. Henderson as president that the Law Report Company has the contract to supply fifty copies to the New York City News Association ten minutes after each word is uttered and sixteen extra copies to various organizations and individuals.

The company stipulates to supply eight expert court stenographers and twelve typewriter operators, and to deliver ten minutes after the adjournment of each session of the committee the original and as many extra copies of a verbatim transcript of the proceedings as the committee desired.

The first matter settled was the selection of Sergeant-at-Arms and his assistant. The men chosen were Frank W. Johnson, of Buffalo, and Charles R. Hotaling, of Selkirk, the Sergeants-at-Arms of the Assembly and Senate, respectively. Mr. Hotaling is to be the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms to the committee, and will receive equal pay with Mr. Johnson—$6 a day.

T

VOL. III.

PEACE ENVOYS BEGIN WORK

Japanese and Russian Plenipotentiaries Meet at Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard

PRESENTATION CEREMONI

Both Parties Wildly Cheered by the Crowds—Democratic Attitude of the Foreigners in Their Contact With Strangers Admired by the Throngs—Buffet Luncheon Served in the Building—Admiral Moale and Gov. McLane Welcome the Officials—Credentials of the Ambassadors Exchanged at First Regular Meeting—Japs and Russians Dine in Public Hall of the Hotel Wentworth.

Portsmouth, N. H.—With impressive ceremonial incident to the bestowal of full ambassadorial honors M. Witte, senior envoy of the Emperor of Russia, and Baron Komura, senior envoy of the Emperor of Japan, were welcomed to the Portsmouth Navy Yard

THE GENERAL STORES BUILDING

There the Russian and Japanese Peace meet conducted to the conference hall, ere they will discuss the momentous question of peace.

Baron Komura, with Minister Takahira, received an equally hearty greeting and responded as graciously at the Court House, where the crowd had assembled in anticipation of the arrival of the envoys. Governor John McLane and his staff, in gilt lace, had already reached the Court House, and were awaiting the arrival of the envoys.

When the envoys arrived they were taken to the main courtroom on the second floor, which was elaborately decorated for the occasion. The Governor then made his speech of welcome and, after handshaking all around, the formal festivities of the day were at an end. The envoys were subsequently taken in automobiles to the Hotel Wentworth where elaborate apartments had been reserved for them.

At Their Hotel.

Instead of keeping to their rooms, as it was expected the plenipotentiaries would do, Russian and Japanese minglied freely among the guests, strolling about the verandas, chatting volubly and acting generally in a care-free manner, as though the entire war "had been settled."

Right off the lobby, in the public card room, Baron Rosen and M. De Martens, of the Russian Legation, engaged in a friendly game, with M. Witte as a spectator. Two Japanese correspondents gave close attention to the game.

Baron Komura, worn out by the day's functions, kept to his apartments, and Takahira was seen about the hotel once, but the other members of their suites were much in evidence.

The first day of the actual Russo-Japanese peace conference, which the world is hoping will result in the "Peace of Portsmouth," broke warm and fair. At 9.30 o'clock the two senior ambassadors caused Third Assistant Secretary of State Peirce to be notified that they were ready to start from the navy yard, and at 10.30 the two peace missions were in the square of brick naval stores building, which, picturesque as it is from an architectural point of view, is in many respects the most interesting structure in existence.

Credentials Exchanged.

At 11 o'clock the conference had begun. Soon after the plenipotentiaries entered the Navy General Store it was announced that M. Witte and Baron Komura had exchanged compliments, the latter using Mr. Rondo as interpreter.

Alabam
Directory.

Commercial Cl
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIAB
information furnished to pa
who desire to locate in the So

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatess

J. J. STANLE
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERR
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Toba
and Cigars.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Imp
ments and "FLORENCE"
Wagons in stock at all
times.
J. K. ORR SHOE

Thorsby Winer
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Prop

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toi
Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIS

E. H. Adams
General Merchandi
Fine Line of Shoes.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wisha
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby In
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & So
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUGGIE

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 17 1905 NO. 21

EACE ENVOYS BEGIN WORK

nese and Russian Plenipentiaries Meet at Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard.

ESENTATION CEREMONI E

Parties Wildly Cheered by th Crowds—Democratic Attitude of the Foreigners in Their Contact With Strangers Admired by the Throngs—Buffet Luncheon Served in the Building—Admiral Meade and Gov. McLane Welcome the Officials—Credentials of the Ambassadors Exchanged at First Regular Meeting—Japs and Russians
Dine in Public Hall of the Hotel
Wentworth.

Portsmouth, N. H.—With impressive
monial incident to the bestowal full ambassadorial honors M. Witte ior envoy of the Emperor of Rus and Baron Komura, senior envoy the Emperor of Japan, were wel-ed to the Portsmouth Navy Yard

GENERAL STORES BUILDING, PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) NAVY YARD.
Where the Russian and Japanese Peace Commissioners are holding their meetings.

nducted to the conference hall, re they will discuss the momentquestion of peace.
ra Komura with Minister Takareceived an equally hearty greet-and responded as graciously at the t House, where the crowd had ed in anticipation of the arrival the envoys. Governor John Lane, and his staff, in gilt lace, already reached the Court House, were awaiting the arrival of the s.
hen the envoys arrived they were to the main courtroom on the d floor, which was elaborately ated for the occasion. The Gov-r then made his speech of wel-e and after handshaking all ound, the formal festivities of the day re at an end. The envoys were sequently taken in automobiles to Hotel Wentworth, where elabor-apartments had been reserved for

At Their Hotel.

ed of keeping to their rooms, as expected the plenipotentiaries Russian and Japanese min-among the guests, strolling the verandas, chatting volubly sociably in a care-free ugh the entire war "had n."
off the lobby, in the public room, Baron Rosen and M. De
, of the Russian Legation, end in a friendly game, with M. as a spectator. Two Japanese emen gave close attention to game.
Komura, worn out by the day's s, kept to his apartments, and Takahira was seen about the hotel ne, but the other members of missions were much in evidence.

first day of the actual Russo-ese peace conference, which the e hoping will result in the e of Portsmouth," broke warm
At 9.30 o'clock the two assadors caused Third Astary of State Peirce to be ed they were ready to start navy yard, and at 10.30 the missions were in the square e naval stores building, which, far as it is from an architectural of view, is in many respects the teresting structure in existence

Credentials Exchanged.

o'clock the conference had be-
. After the plenipotentiaries en-the Navy General Store it was d that M. Witte and Baron Koad exchanged compliments, the ng Mr. Honda as interpreter, as neither Baron Komura nor Mr. Takahira are very familiar with French, while M. Witte, although understanding English in reading, cannot speak it. Immediately after this formality the envoys proceeded to the exchange of their credentials.

The departure of both missions from the Hotel Wentworth was made gravely. It was as if the envoys were taking part in some solemn rite.

M. Witte's face was even graver than usual. He walked slowly and, apparently, with some difficulty from the Wentworth porte cochere to the automobile, and, as a ripple of applause reached his ears from the veranda, slowly and solemnly raised his hat and bowed.

Baron Rosen seated himself next to the senior plenipotentiary and a secret service man took his place with the chauffeur. The members of the Russian suite then filed out and entered the automobiles set apart for their use.

While the Russians were departing from the annex in which they were quartered, Baron Komura and his suite were leaving the main wing of the hotel. The departure of the Japanese was characterized principally by businesslike agility. Their dignity was irreproachable, but there was none of the Russian sadness in their bearing.

Baron Komura, small and wizened, and Minister Takahira, equally abbreviated in stature but broad of shoulder, took the places of honor. Mr. Sato and the others followed in the next conveyance.

Before leaving the hotel Mr. Sato courteously declined to discuss the peace conference in any way. He greeted the correspondents pleasantly, but gave abundant evidence that he could be silence as well as talk.

When the plenipotentiaries had started for the navy yard Mr. Honda, private secretary to Baron Komura, went to the apartments of the Russian mission, where he was met in the reception room by M. Shipoff, M. de Plancon, M. Pokotieff and M. Berg. Mr. Honda said the object of his visit was to discuss the best programme for the exchange of cards by the members of the two missions. The short conversation which followed was very cordial, and it was decided that the cards should either be left at the office or that a secretary from each side should convey them direct to the respective apartments and there be formally received.

It is noticeable that with each day the members of the two missions are fraternizing more easily, and it is no longer as subject for comment when a Russian and a Japanese are seen talking together.

Extraordinary Precautions.

Extraordinary precautions have been taken to exclude from the navy yard every person not connected with the Government service. While the conference is in progress the workmen must have passes in order to enter, and the 130 marines on duty at the reservation have been pressed into guard duty.

Assistant Secretary Peirce stated before the envoys left the Wentworth that there would be little ceremony in opening the first actual session.

"I shall conduct the envoys through the offices set apart for their respective use," said he, "and wish them all good fortune in their deliberations. I shall then retire to another portion of the building and the missions will begin their deliberations."

The ambassadors will remain in the building until each session is adjourned. A restaurant has been installed in the conference hall, and if any session is a long one the envoys' wants will be amply provided for.

It is highly improbable that more than two or three sessions will be held each week. Although the envoys have plenary powers, they will submit every proposition to their home Government before acting upon it. This will necessitate the delay of cabling and receiving a reply. But delays will probably not be unwelcome at times to the negotiators.

It has been arranged that the hours of the conference each day shall be from 9.30 o'clock to noon, and from 3 till 5.30 or 6 o'clock.

M. SERGIUS WITTE, SENIOR RUSSIAN PEACE ENVOY.

BARON KOMURA, SENIOR JAPANESE PEACE ENVOY.

The Russian plenipotentiaries, through M. Nabokoff, who assisted at this meeting as secretary, issued the following official statement:

"The first meeting took place this morning. M. Witte, Baron Rosen, Baron Komura, Mr. Takahira, and a secretary on each side participated. The program of the following meetings has been fixed so far as the form is concerned. The meetings will be twice a day, in the morning and in the afternoon, after 3.

"Information will be given to the press after being agreed upon by both sides. The records of the proceedings and all of the documents will be compiled both in English and in French. The French text (fera foi) will be accepted in evidence in case of dispute."

Baron Komura, in accordance with the agreement, has chosen Mr. Sato, Mr. Adachi and Mr. Otchiai to participate daily in the conference as the official secretaries of himself and Mr. Takahira.

The envoys traveled to and from the navy yard in motor cars, and will continue to do so while the conference is in session.

All kinds of rumors were afloat as to the cause of the quick return of the envoys to the hotel, conflicting statements were made concerning the mistake over the credentials, and a number of persons were afraid that the negotiations had been abruptly broken off. Later the Russian secretary, M. Korostovtz, explained the matter clearly and the misunderstanding was cleared up.

A good deal of attention was attracted by the fact that the Russians dined in a room up stairs by themselves in the evening instead of taking the meal in the large dining room as they did before. One explanation is that the Russians like to smoke at the table. It has been noticeable that outside the conference the Russian and Japanese officials have not mingled together. The Japanese stroll freely about the hotel and converse affably with any one who approaches them; the Russians keep to their rooms in the annex, and are rarely seen in the main building.

In the evening the amenities were observed by the general exchange of cards. M. Witte, Baron Rosen and their suite sending theirs through the hotel office, while the cards of the Japanese mission were left at the doors of the members of the Russian mission by a little Japanese messenger boy.

Commanders Winslow and Gibbons made their official calls upon the two missions late in the afternoon.

The Japanese and the Russian newspaper correspondents have broken the ice and have begun to fraternize.

Meanwhile life at the Hotel Wentworth is unusually gay. Not outside of a European capital does one often find so cosmopolitan a gathering as that which furnishes the setting to this momentous peace conference. Gathered under the roof of the big rambling summer hotel is a representative of almost every nationality.

The great dining hall at night presented a striking scene. At one end of the spacious hall a long table, with covers laid for seventeen persons, was occupied by M. Witte and his suite. At a similar table, with the same number of covers, placed nearer the entrance, sat Baron Komura and his associates.

The two parties were separated by a distance of about thirty feet, with many tables intervening.

The Japanese entered the dining hall first, walking in orderly disorder, Baron Komura and Minister Takahira in the van. When all had gathered about the board the chairs were drawn and the party seated itself almost as one man.

At the head of the table sat Baron Komura, his short stature making it necessary for him to stretch out his elbows.

Big Strike at Riga.

Twenty thousand men went on strike at Riga, Russia, and there was much disorder in the city.

PEACE TERMS PRESENTED

Baron Komura Gives M. Witte Draft of Japan's Proposal.

First Real Move in the Conference at Portsmouth, N. H.—The Reported Demands.

Portsmouth, N. H.—Japan's peace terms were placed in the hands of the Russian envoys, and the conference adjourned to await the formulation of the Russian reply. The written proposition of Japan was handed to M. Witte by Baron Komura with the express stipulation that its character should be kept absolutely secret. It was learned, however, that the terms were reasonable, if not moderate; that they afforded a basis for discussion, and that every effort would be made to complete the Russian reply for submission to Baron Komura and Minister Takahira as speedily as possible.

With the submission of Japan's terms the trend of opinion among the diplomats gathered here has undergone a decided change, and the former pessimism has given place to optimism.

These were understood to be the terms of peace demanded by the Japanese envoys:

An acknowledgment of Japan's undisputed suzerainty over Korea.

Russian evacuation of Manchuria and the establishment there of the Hay policy of the open door.

The cession of Port Arthur and Dalny.

The cession of Sakhalien Island.

The grant of fishing rights to Japan in the waters of the Siberian littoral northward from Vladivostok to the Bering Sea.

The relinquishment to Japan of the interned Russian warships.

A limitation upon the naval strength of Russia in Far Eastern waters.

The transfer to Japan of the Manchurian Railway as far north from Port Arthur as Harbin.

The commercialization of Vladivostok.

Japan to be reimbursed for the cost of the war.

CROP REPORT OUT.

Government Foretells of Greatest Corn Yield in Years.

Washington, D. C.—The Government crop report, issued at noon, under the new regulations of the Agricultural Department, designed to discourage graft and to make it difficult for Wall Street to get advance information, forecasts the greatest corn crop in the country's history, and bumper crops of wheat and other cereals in every section of the country.

The Government reports the following average condition of the crops: Condition of corn is 89 against 87.3 last month, and 87.3 last year, and 78.7 in 1903. Condition of spring wheat, 89.2 against 91 last month, 87.5 last year, and 77.1 in 1903. Condition of oats, 90.8 against 92.1 last month, 86.8 last year, and 79.6 in 1903.

CROWD OF DESERTED WIVES.

All Records Broken at the West Side Police Court.

New York City.—More than a hundred women, most of them with from one to six children apiece, and many demanding action against deserting or recalcitrant husbands, crowded the West Side Court.

The West Side Court is noted for its many abandonment cases, but this crowd of deserted women broke all records.

"This is the worst I ever saw," said Magistrate Pool, as he faced the crowd of women. "It seems as if every husband on the west side had deserted his wife."

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS TO MINERS.

President Addresses Enormous Throng at Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—President Theodore Roosevelt was here to address the annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union. Fully 60,000 persons heard him speak. Others to make brief speeches were Cardinal Gibbons, John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers of America, and Mayor John Weaver, of Philadelphia, Pa.

From Wilkesbarre the President went to Chautauqua, N. Y., where he addressed a conclave of 10,000 persons.

Bank Clearings Good.

Bank clearings in New York City for July break all records for that month, failures are strikingly few for a normally dull period, and railway earnings show progressive gains.

Inventor Herreshof in Accident.

Inventor Charles F. Herreshoff and his assistant were hurled from their motor-boat off Bridgeport, Conn., by the breaking of the steering gear.

Music For the Envoys.

There will be music for the Russian and Japanese peace envoys by a United States military band as long as they remain at Portsmouth, N. H.

Jews Discuss Appeal to Witte.

East Side Jews of New York City discussed the advisability of appealing to M. Witte in behalf of their kinsmen in Russia.

New Church of St. Thomas.

A new Church of St. Thomas, to cost $300,000, is to rise on the ruins of the edifice in New York City almost destroyed by fire.

ENVOYS AT PORTSMOUTH

Formal Assignment to Quarters at the Navy Yard.

Ceremonies in the Building Where Commissioners Will Meet — The Crowd Enthusiastic.

Portsmouth, N. H.—With impressive ceremonial incident to the bestowal of full ambassadorial honors M. Witte, senior envoy of the Emperor of Russia, and Baron Komura, senior envoy of the Emperor of Japan, were welcomed to the Portsmouth Navy Yard, and conducted to the conference hall, where they will discuss the momentous question of peace.

Standing in the spacious meeting room side by side, reinforced by their colleagues, Baron Rosen and Minister Takahira, and surrounded by a throng made brilliant by gayly dressed women and officers replendent in gold lace, the two principal peace envoys listened to the words of Admiral Meade, who, as commandant of the yard, bespoke the freedom of the reservation on behalf of the Government of the United States.

After the welcome had been given and received the doors were thrown open, a buffet loaded with viands was disclosed, a small army of servants began to serve the guests, and general conversation began.

The four envoys partook sparingly of the luncheon, and were then conducted through the rooms set apart for their special use during the conference. Each envoy expressed himself as eminently satisfied with the arrangements made, and complimented the men who had planned the hall and its furnishings.

The informal reception continued until after 2 o'clock, when the march to the court house began. As the envoys, seated in automobiles, passed through the streets they were greeted by cheers along the entire route. M. Witte, seated beside Baron Rosen and guarded by two secret service men, bowed right and left continually, occasionally smiling and waving his hat as a particularly vociferous demonstration was made.

Baron Komura, with Minister Takahira, received an equally hearty greeting, and responded as graciously at the Court House, where the crowd had massed in anticipation of the arrival of the envoys. Governor John McLane and his staff, in gilt lace, had already reached the Court House, and were awaiting the arrival of the envoys.

When the envoys arrived they were taken to the main courtroom on the second floor, which was elaborately decorated for the occasion. The Governor then made his speech of welcome and, after handshaking all round, the formal festivities of the day were at an end. The envoys were subsequently taken in automobiles to the Hotel Wentworth, where elaborate apartments had been reserved for them.

Long before the fleet arrived—indeed, almost as soon as the gray light of dawn broke over the placid waters—the harbor was dotted with craft of every description. Steam yachts, launches, sloops, catboats, and rowboats moved hither and thither, their crews vying one with another in noisy jollity.

In the navy yard all was bustle. Every foot of woodwork and every inch of metal in the yard was polished until it shone.

It was a little after 9 o'clock when the Mayflower and the Dolphin, with the cruiser Galveston, acting as escort, dropped anchor in the outer harbor.

In the meantime, M. Witte, in his apartments in the Wentworth, had been notified of the fleet's arrival, and, accompanied by several of his suite and guarded by three secret service men, immediately embarked on a launch and put off for the Mayflower.

M. Witte and his party were the first to land. As the senior Russian envoy stepped from the cutter, hat in hand, the guns boomed out their welcome, until the ground shook with the reverberations. A solid lane, formed by two lines of United States marines, had been formed, and through this the Czar's envoys walked slowly to the entrance of the conference hall. Baron Komura and his suite quickly followed.

Elaborate precautions were taken against the possibility of cranks entering the yard during the ceremonies. Even the workmen were obliged to show passes before they were admitted.

Captain Flynn of the New York Secret Service Bureau was on hand with half a dozen men to guard the envoys, and the entire force of marines, 130 men, was detailed to guard duty.

FAMOUS CHURCH BURNED.

St. St. Thomas' in New York City Entirely Demolished by Flames.

New York City—Fire practically destroyed St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, at Fifth avenue and Fifty-third street, one of the most richly furnished religious buildings in America. Flames made a furnace of the interior for an hour, and nothing remains of the once beautiful edifice but the walls and the tower, 200 feet high, which were saved, but are in a shaky condition. The church may have to be razed and rebuilt from the foundation.

Twenty Cottages Robbed.

Twenty cottages at Far Rockaway, N. Y., have been robbed of silverware.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House.
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

PURE GOODS
The following
SPECIAL BRANDS
always in stock

Big Rock	I. W. Harper
Rose Valley	Upper Crust
Upper Ten	Kentucky Taylor
Joe Gideon	American Malt
Murray Hill	Budweiser Rye
Pleasant Hill	Deep Springs
Green River	AAAA Lincoln County
Jack Daniel No. 7	Wilson
Old Spring	Good Wood
Shaw's Malt	Club House Rye, 10 years old.
Jefferson County Rye	Cascade, 14 years old.

Old Harvest Corn, 5 years old

I carry a Full Line of Barrel Goods which I sell in Jugs from half gallon up. Mail orders promptly filled.

A. STEIN,
Bank Saloon. Calera, Ala.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS.
PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!
If you have timber lands for sale, want to buy a good home for $25.00 cash and the balance on long payments to suit purchaser, or if you want a position as log cutter, teamster or in saw mill or planing mill, write
The Marbury Lumber Co.,
Marbury, Ala.

NOTICE.
Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

The Bluebird

Feathered flake of heaven's blue,
Blossomed song of dawning springs,
Bearing violets on your back
And the sky upon your wings:

Iridescent sprite, you stole
Sapphires from my darling's eye;
Needn't say "Pe-wippy chip.
Got 'em rubbing 'gainst the sky."

O, you azure bumblebee,
How's the Daughter of the South?
"Pe-wippy chip, she's bluebell eyes;
Roses revel on her mouth."

O, you tiny turquoise tramp,
Did she send one rose to me?
"Pe-wippy, a winged violet,
She sent, and that is me."

This cerulean visitor
Brings a heartache as he sings
Of the violets on his breast
And the sky upon his wings.
—Henry L. Kiner in National Magazine.

THE SLEEPING NAIAD

BY CHARLES S. REID

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The conception was perfect, but where throughout all Europe was to be found the model? In his thoughts, Margolius carefully went over the list of models that he knew. One or two came nearly to the standard he had set for this piece, but not quite. He traveled, visiting the principal cities of France, Italy and Germany; then returned to London. Still the model of his conception had not been found. Once more he sought throughout London, but without success. From those who might have been hired for money, Margolius turned to those in the higher walks of life. There was a subtle power he had always held in reserve for some situation in which every other expedient had failed. Should that power now be resorted to?

Margolius sat one night in a box at Her Majesty's Theater and surveyed the audience with his eyes, from pit to roof and back again. Several times his gaze had lingered on some especially beautiful woman to study minutely the nature of her charm, only to be withdrawn at last unsatisfied. The boxes had been left inviolated—for there sat the nobility. But when the vast audience from the pit to the roof had been passed in review and found to yield not the thing sought for, the vision of the artist began boldly to sweep the boxes. One after another these glided under his gaze, until an occupant of one of them arrested the attention of Margolius with an electric-like suddenness. The Countess Alfretti who, with her husband was residing in London for the season, sat in a box opposite that which was occupied by the artist; and hers were the face and form that had made such a sudden appeal to his sense of perfection. The model he had sought was before him—but she was the Countess Alfretti. However, a smile of triumph stole over the features of Margolius and he determined that the Countess should serve him.

The fame of Margolius gave him entree to the best society of London, and it was not long before he met the Countess Alfretti and made the trial of his subtle power. She yielded quickly—none had ever withstood it. He found that he swayed her as the breeze might sway some tender flower. In his presence she moved as in a dream, but there was an ecstacy in it that was like the stimulus of old wine to her.

One day, as the Countess was driving past the studio of Margolius, she chanced to glance upward at an open window. The artist was sitting there—and their eyes met. Instantly the lady yielded to the hypnotic influence that the man had gained over her.

Margolius spoke her name and she turned quickly toward him.

Margolius had invited her to visit his studio; but, though she had promised him to do so, when out of his presence she shuddered at the thought of fulfilling this promise. Out of his presence, she feared the artist; in his presence, a strange, unaccountable, dreamy kind of happiness possessed her.

On this occasion, when their eyes met, she descended immediately from her carriage and entered the building. Margolius met her below and conducted her through each department of his rooms with all the affability of manner of which he was capable, and finally escorted her out again, with a profusion of thanks and appreciation expressed in his parting words. He followed her a moment with his eyes, then turned back into the house, with an expression of deep satisfaction expressed in his face.

Margolius waited patiently a few days. But at last, one afternoon, late, he passed the house which was occupied by Alfretti and his wife. The Countess was standing over some pot flowers near the street. Margolius spoke her name, and she turned quickly toward him. The strange power of his eyes at once compelled her, and she became the automaton of his will. But he had hardly stayed his footsteps and continued his way almost immediately.

An intense whiteness settled upon the count's face.

Countess Alfretti was left dreaming; in an hour, when it became quite dark, some mysterious voice commanded her to steal from the house and go to the studio of Margolius. She crept away, and so stealthy had she been in all her movements, that none saw her.

When it was discovered that the Countess Alfretti had disappeared, a great cry was raised and all London was aroused. Alfretti, who had just gone to Florence on some business, was summoned home again, but he did not reach London until the afternoon following the Countess' disappearance. Every department of the police regulations was notified, and a careful search throughout the city was instituted. But all to no avail. Friends came to offer condolence to Alfretti; among them, Margolius.

But after this, for long days and nights, Margolius was not seen among his friends. Servants of the house in which he resided gave it out that the artist was engaged upon a great picture and was not to be disturbed under any circumstances.

The search for the missing Countess was continued assiduously, and was extended to other cities. Every plausible suggestion was acted upon, but all resulted fruitlessly—not a clew had been found by which to trace her the first step beyond the house.

In the meantime Margolius was painting the Sleeping Naiad. With nerves strung to the highest pitch, and almost without eating or sleeping, he worked like some demon that was striving against Time for the possession of the World.

At last it was finished; and a long, deep-drawn sigh escaped the throat of the artist, as his practiced eye followed the detail in search of some slight imperfection and found none. How long had it been? How many hours? How many days? He had kept no record of time. Nothing had come up to him from the streets of London since the first news of the disappearance of the Countess. In reality almost a week had passed. The Countess had been given up as dead, and Alfretti was plunged into the depths of grief, while his friends and the friends of the Countess were wrapped in gloom out of sympathy and sorrow.

But on the evening of the fifth day, just after nightfall, a figure crept into the house of Alfretti and threw itself into the Count's arms. The Countess had returned, and new life surged through Alfretti's veins. The beautiful woman had wrapped a large shawl round her head and shoulders, and she was still dazed for some moments after her return to her husband's arms.

"Oh, tell me what has happened?" she exclaimed. "I found myself in the street, alone, and in the darkness—the street lights were so dim. And you—you started for Florence this afternoon. But you did not go?"

Alfretti knew by these last words that her mind was a blank since the time of her disappearance. She had been the victim of some mental aberration and had been wandering—God knew where. Quickly he fabricated some story explaining everything, and set her mind at rest. Then he secretly instructed the servants and requested all her friends to refrain from mentioning the strange disappearance in her presence.

When the Sleeping Naiad of Margolius was hung, critical London paused in wonder-struck admiration.

One day, at an early hour, before the salon had received its daily crush of visitors, Margolius paused before his own picture. Hearing a footstep behind him he turned and saw Alfretti approaching.

"It is my first view," said the latter, turning his eyes toward the painting.

The next instant an intense whiteness settled upon the Count's face, his lips quivered and a labored breath surged up from his breast. His eyes sought those of Margolius, and the hypnotic fire that leaped to meet his gaze told the story of the Countess' trance.

HAD WAITED TOO LONG.

Dish Towels Were No Longer Needed by the Bachelor.

He had been keeping bachelor hall under the supervision of his favorite girl cousin, and once a week she came to dine with him and observe his progress. Incidentally she constituted herself a bureau of supply and saw that he was supplied with everything needful—except dish towels. Somehow, no matter how elaborate her shopping plans, she could not remember the towels and for a while he was reduced to using an old sheet.

Then came a day when he rose in revolt and decided that he would keep house no longer. So far as the cooking was concerned he kept his word, and the cousin was invited to dine at a restaurant instead.

The first evening the new order went into practice the cousin turned up, her face aglow. "I just know that you can't tell what I have in that bundle," she said, "and I sha'n't tell you till we get home."

The bachelor guessed in vain and at last the feminine inability to keep a secret triumphed over the desire to save up the surprise.

"I've just got to tell you that I have those towels at last," she explained, triumphantly, as she watched for the pleased smiles she felt to be her due. She guessed the truth from his face.

"And I got them just as you no longer have any dishes to dry," she wailed.—New York Sun

Daffy Dialogues.

"They were talking at the grocery, George, about Norway withdrawing from the union with Sweden. The grocer always seems to know everything that's going on. He said it was perfectly right for Norway to withdraw. But where can she go, George?"

"Where can who go?"

"Why, Norway."

"I don't think she really intends to go anywhere, my love. I fancy she'll settle down right next to Sweden. It may not be pleasant, but she's used to it, and if she finds she can't agree with her neighbors she can build a high board fence between them."

"A spite fence, like the McGringle's and the Bollingers', George?"

"Yes, something like that."

"It will seem awfully unpleasant for a time, I guess. But, of course, they needn't take milk of the same milkman, nor patronize the same iceman, nor buy their rolls from the same baker's wagon."

"Of course not, my dear."

"But mercy! It will be dreadfully inconvenient when either one wants to borrow something."

"I'm afraid it will, my dear. I guess they didn't think of that."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ode to a Pig.

Bards and sages, through the ages
(Winning fame instead of wages),
Have mussed up a million pages
With their cuticles, small and big.
Singing wrongs that should be righted,
Causes blighted, heroes slighted,
Yet no song have they indicted
To the pig.

Gentle Porcus, suoid mammal,
Does the thought that lard and ham'll
Be your future never trammel
Your fond fancies as you dig?
Does it harrow to the marrow
As you pace your quarters narrow,
Dreaming of the storied glory
Of the pig?

For time was, ere man got at you,
Using squalid means to fat you,
That you were to be congratulated on a figure trig,
And most daintily you ate your Food, less mingled in its nature,
Fine of face, full fair and graceful
Was the pig.

Oh, the S. P. C. A. be gracious;
If your sympathies be spacious Bar such treatment contumacious—
Teach that it is infra dig.
For although some genius flighty
Has described the pen as mighty
You'll admit a sword were fitter
For the pig.
—Harper's.

One Way to Avoid Wrinkles.

Four-year-old Alice had been to visit a very aged lady, whose face was badly wrinkled. On returning home she climbed into her aunt's lap, and, looking at her intently, queried:

"What makes Grandma Barker's face all wrinkled?"

"Because she is very old, dearie," was the reply.

"Will your nice, smoove face be like her's when you get to be old, auntie?" asked the child soberly.

"Yes, darling," said the aunt, sighing in anticipation of her lost charms.

"Oh, well, auntie, don't feel bad," exclaimed the child. "Maybe you'll die pitty quick!"

RECORDS OF THE PULSE RATE.

Instrument Shows Heart's Action During Muscular Work and After.

A recent publication of the University of Michigan describes an instrument for securing a continuous graphic record of the pulse rate in man which afford valuable indications of the heart's work. The records showed that the commencement of muscular work is followed almost simultaneously by a marked acceleration of the pulse. In fact, this modification of the pulse rate is observed in the next heart cycle after the work begins.

In typical cases there are three well-marked stages—a primary rise, a period of sustained acceleration and a secondary rise. Similar stages of decrease in rate occur after the work stops. The rapidity of the pulse during work depends not only upon the amount of work done, but much more upon the manner in which it is done. Speed and resistance are factors requiring separate consideration and of these two speed has the greater influence.

These records show that while muscular work may not appreciably require the expenditure of bodily force it immediately reacts upon the heart and that conversely cessation of muscular exertion is an immediate relief to the heart.

Scott and the Simple Life.

Sir Walter Scott was an out-of-doors man, as he had been a tramping boy, says McClure's. It is impossible to think of him without his horses and dogs. His duties as sheriff took him across country continually, and he always had more months out of Edinburgh that in it, notwithstanding his court clerkship. He was thus in constant contact with Scotch life and country, and he never lost or relaxed his first impulse to know and see with his eyes, so far as eyes could see it, all the local history. He was also in love with the genius of Scotland as it was stamped in the people of all sorts and conditions. Human nature, the rough, hard article free from its alloy of the town, was treasure trove to him. On those annual "raids into Liddesdale," and on many another journey, he made himself master of this book of truth out of which came so much of the character, anecdote and phrase that are most sterling, real and humorsome in his books.

View of Happiness.

I have been trying to figure out a general condition of happiness, and I reach the conclusion that it consists mainly in the ability to march with one's own generation, neither deploring the progress the generation makes nor grumbling because it doesn't make more, says Frank Putnam in the National Magazine. We can understand best the men and women of our own age, or near it. Dr. Osler spoke truth when he said that most men cease to be receptive to new ideas after 40; hence our elders in the 50s and 60s and 70s, say, who have ably guided the affairs of the world during the decades immediately ahead of us will often seem to us to mave less rapidly than we think they should, toward new industrial conditions. And the generation immediately behind us—the restless chaps in their 20s, are putting more pressure upon us from the rear than we are able to believe is wholly justified.

A Kipling Souvenir.

Of an interesting Kipling relic, Charles Warren Stoddard writes:

"The object that first caught my eye was an old desk, black with age, and no doubt rheumatic in every joint. Its lid was a solid panel, but curved in the fashion of a roll-top desk. Across the length of it, cut deep in large letters, such as schoolboys love to carve was this legend:

"'Oft was I weary when I toiled at Thee,'

"So sang the galley slave in a faultless verse; and so, in the hour of triumph, Rudyard Kipling graved upon the cover of the desk at which he won his fame."—National Magazine.

Heroic Remedy.

Some anonymous individual with no poetry in his soul has written to a New York paper complaining of a whip-poor-will that bothers him at night, and another anonymous individual who has in his soul no innate love of birds suggests:

"If Pater Familias really desires to drive the whip-poor-will from the tree, the following is a recipe guaranteed to cause it to quit the place:

"R: One dozen roman candles.
Dose: Three each evening on retiring (10-11 p. m.) exploded through the tree. This has been known to cure the most aggravating cases."

Wal-lu-lah.

E'er the paleface saw the westland
In its grandeur by the sea
Lived a dusky Indian princess
Fair as fairest flower to see.
By Columbia's thundering cascades,
O'er the beauteous upland plain,
Wandered lone the fair Wal-lu-lah
Chanting e'er some wild refrain.

Dusky suitors thronged about her,
Pleaded for Wal-lu-lah's hand,
But she wept her absent lover,
Pointed to yon westward strand
By Columbia's murmuring cascades,
Long and lone her tireless quest.
Now she sleeps, but still awaits him,
With her face toward the west.

Drifting sands above her mingle,
Happy homes bedeck her plain.
Still her spirit sings and murmurs
In Columbia's wild refrain.
—Bert Huffman in New York Herald.

Greatest Trout Hatchery.

The greatest trout hatchery in the world will be located by the government on the Grand Mesa, about twenty-five miles north of Delta. The annual output of fish will not fall below 25,000,000 within a year after the hatchery is completed. These fish will be distributed all over the west.

Few Timepieces in Lib

A young negro from Liberia, George H. Northam, is now visiting this country, from which his parents emigrated to the negro republic many years ago, spoke of an interesting phase of the trade in Liberia.

"It is a curious fact that we buy very few clocks. They are regarded, I know, as an essential part of the furnishings of the home in all civilized countries. The comparatively small number of our people who have fairly good incomes have clocks in their houses. But most of the Liberians are farmers and laborers, and they never think of purchasing a clock. The fact is, they have little use for clocks, and I think the reason will interest you.

"You know, our country is only a few degrees north of the equator. The result is that for a good part of the year the sun rises at exactly 6 o'clock, or within a few minutes of it, and sets at 6 o'clock. Here are two points of time quite accurately fixed for us.

"Then when the sun is directly overhead it is noon. Of course, the sun in its apparent movements between the tropics of Cancer and Capricorn varies a little in these positions but only a little anywhere in the trop[ics], and the most ignor[ant] ple soon become exper[t] ing the time for all positions of sun.

"I do not suppose there is a [man] or woman in Liberia who cannot the time in any part of the day in fifteen minutes of the true and usually with a closer approximation. When the farmer is in the he knows exactly when to go home dinner, and his wife has the waiting for him as he reaches house.

"If he has an appointment p m., and also has the habit of tuality, he meets his engagement most on the minute. Our farmers they have not the slightest use clocks. I presume Liberia is the country with any claim to civiliz that does not regard clocks as a sary in the business of life.

"I am told that down in the Free State the missionaries teach natives to read the information clock gives. This is very wel matter of information, but the understand the relation of the the time of day as well as we do I do not think a large number locks will ever be sold to New York Sun.

An Old Kentu[cky Earthquak]

This vivid description of an earthquake was written by Audobon, the naturalist. It occurred in the year 1812: "Traveling through the barrens of Kentucky in the month of November, I was jogging on one afternoon when I remarked a sudden a strange darkness rising from the western horizon. I had proceeded about a mile when I heard what I imagined to be the distant rumbling of a violent tornado, on which I spurred my steed, with a wish to gallop as fast as possible to a place of shelter; but it would not do; the animal knew better than I what was forthcoming, and instead of going faster, so nearly stopped that I remarked he placed one foot after another on the ground with as much precaution as if walking on a smooth sheet of ice. I thought he had suddenly foundered, and, speaking to him, was on the point of dismounting and leading him, when he all of a sudden fell a-groaning piteously, hung his head, spread out his four legs as if to save himself from falling, and stood stock still, continuing to groan.

"I thought my horse was about to die, and would have sprung from his back had a minute previous elapsed; but at that instant all the trees began to move from their roots, the ground rose and fell in successive furrows, like the undulations of a lake, and I became bewildered in my ideas, as I began to be convinced that all this awful change in nature was the result of an earthquake. The fearful convulsion, however, lasted only a few minutes, and the heavens again brightened as suddenly as they had become obscured. My horse brought his feet to the natural position, raised his head, shook off as if loose and [resumed] a rider.

"Shock succeeded shock almost every day or night for [weeks], diminishing, however, in violence, to dwindle away into mere tremblings of the earth. Strange to say, one became so accustomed to the shocks as rather to [enjoy] them, being annoyed by others. The latter produced more serious [effects] in other places."

Tells of Ja[panese Trai]

Traitors among the Japanese officers are not treated pleasantly when their misconduct is discovered. Bennet Burleigh in his new book on Japan tells of an instance. Two Japanese transports laden with men, stores and heavy siege artillery had been suddenly attacked by the Russian Vladivostok squadron; one was sunk, the other escaped with difficulty. Who had given the information of the sailing of these ships? "The Japanese made search to find out who had blabbed and ultimately traced it to a high official in Tokyo, one holding sea rank and engaged in the admiralty. A Russian check for a large sum was traced into his hands. He was confronted with it and his receipt signature thereon. Then he was led into a secluded room, where a number of his fellow officers had gathered. They stripped him naked, spat upon him and kicked him to death."

An odd practice of firing the same shells two or even three times is developed during the siege of Port Arthur. Mr. Burleigh says: "The Russians' supply of big-gun shells comp[leted] gave out, so continuous search made for unexploded Japanese siles. These, when found, we back from our guns and in some stances shells were found which been twice fired at us by the nese. The fact that such was case was shown by the copper check bands, as our rifling is in opposite direction to that of the nese guns, the bands showing marks of their twist and one of Concerning the curious Jap custom of carrying song birds out for a walk the same author ments: "Yes, it does ridiculous see an oriental bearing a cage either hand when he goes out ramble, with some birds or cions: no stick and no dog. B grandfathers laughed con when they saw the first u opened in London. It seems lo terday that I saw a lovely bloss tree in a Tokyo junk shop, kept solely for the owner's private tation."

A Cruelly [Deceived Wom]

If it wasn't for the children the woman would get a divorce. She has been deceived for ten years. That is the period of her married life. The courtship leading up to that nuptial contract covered two years. In that time the man and woman wrote many letters. The woman wrote 746 and the man 715. The day before the wedding the woman said:

"Henry, have you kept all my letters?"

"Every one," said Henry.

"How sweet of you," murmured the woman. "Now, I'll tell you what we will do. I have made two sofa pillows, one for you and one for me. Instead of stuffing them with cotton or feathers or sweet balsam we will fill them with our old love letters and keep them forever and ever. Won't that be lovely?"

Henry said he thought it would be. So the woman gave him his pillow cover. It was very pretty, also it was appropriate. It was made of green satin, embroidered in gold. It said,

"From one I love." His pillow was an ornate affair. As soon as woman and her husband were housekeeping she placed the two lows side by side on the sofa. they began to get dusty she them away in, scented tissue and put them in a dark closet. a week she took them out and them and said, "Dear Henry

One day last week the wo membered a certain poetic she had one time written to she wished to see just how worded it, so she opened the low and looked for the letter. not there. none of her letters there. Instead of stuffing with her loving epistles Henry wretch, had used old bills and ness letters and circulars, he shamelessly admitted when with his disloyalty he didn't take chances on being made like a fool by having "all that rot brought up against him" reached the age of gray hairs and cretion."

Just Between the Love

Of course, I will not kiss you, I—
Oh, you'll kiss me if you may try?
I guess you won't—you love me so?
I'm sure you've told a dozen—no,
I tell you I will not permit—
You—no, sir, not a "teeny bit."
They're all the same and—stop, now—well.
You promise that you'll never tell
If I—oh, don't—you ought to be Ashamed to be so rude to me.
You're sorry? Well, I'm glad to know
You feel ashamed for acting so.
And—no, sir, no; we shall not kiss
And be good friends again. You miss It there. I'm sure you shall Not say that I am prodigal
Of treasure which I had not thought
Was worth so much until you brought Its value to my notice. Why,
Were you so stupid? And when I,
Might possibly—no, no, say;
If you persist I'll run away;
And that would be too impolite
For anything. I am not quite
So rude, I hope. At least, I do
Not wish to seem so rude—to you
Because—now stop—why can't I
As distant and severe with me
As, you have told me—is it so—
You are with other girls you know?
Oh, I am more than—now, sir,
I'll go and take that other one
It's too far off? Well, if I
Will you agree—don't act that
It's horrid and—what? You
Away and leave me when you
How much I—no, I won't
I let you kiss me if you're
I'd have you know that I—no
I've said I wouldn't, and I
You do not love me? I don't Sh—some one's coming
Just one, remember—no
Another? Well—no, then

—Nat

OUR GIRLS A[T

ROMPING.

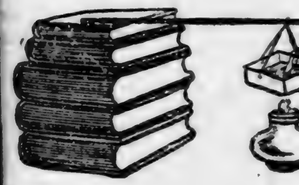
Me for a romp!
What shall I do?
Down on the floor,
Baby, with you?
Up and down stairs,
You on my back,
Grasping my hair,
Riding a pack?
Now for a tumble!
Hang on now tight!
That is dad's gaffe.
Now you're all right!
Now I'm a camel,
Watch how I kneel;
Now I'm a choo choo
Automobile!
Now I'm a tramp,
Now a bow-wow,
Here's where I chase myself—
Hang to me now!

Now let's build houses—
Build a whole town!
Houses and steeples,
Just to knock down!
Now take your dolly,
Sing it to sleep;
Dearie, your daddy
Loves you a heap!
Hushaby, baby,
Hushaby, do;
Dearie, here's daddy
Waiting for you;
Put down the dolly,
I'll go and hide!
You could not find me,
Dear, if you tried!
No, you can't find me
All you can do!
Now you are warmer—
Peek a-boo! Boo!
—Houston Post.

TWO EXPERIMENTS.

Here is an experiment that will be sure to surprise every one who witnesses it. Place two piles of books on a table, about three-quarters of a yard apart, and lay a moderately stout stick across from one pile to the other. On the table under the middle of the stick place a plate, and on it an alcohol lamp which has been previously filled and prepared for use.

Get or make a box out of stiff paper, the bottom of which shall be about five inches square, and the height two inches, and run a piece of string seven inches in length through the centre of each side, half an inch from the top, and fasten each in place by means of a knot on the inside of the box. Fasten the other ends of the string together, so as to form a handle, and slip this handle, or loop, over the stick, arranging it so that the paper box will be suspended immediately over the alcohol lamp.



WATER BOILING I[N

The height of the piles of books should be adjusted so that the bottom of the paper box shall be a few inches above the lamp.

Now pour water into the box until it reaches nearly to the knots in the strings, light your lamp, and look on in amazement while the flame plays around the bottom of the box, but does not burn it.

Thus you may enjoy the novelty of seeing water boil in a paper box.

Here is another little experiment that you may make with your alcohol lamp. Soften a piece of writing paper to an ordinary wooden penholder, so that one-half of the paper shall be next to the wood and the other half next to the metal band that holds the pen. Then hold paper and holder over the flame gradually, and the part of the paper that is against the wood will be scorched, while that against the metal remains white.

This is because metal is a good conductor of heat, and carries it off, while wood is a poor conductor, and the heat, not being carried off, becomes intense enough to char the paper.—New York Evening Mail.

PRINCESS PRETEND.

At the window sat Doris, watching the rain, and her face was all puckered up and unhappy. "I'm tired staying in the old house," she said.

"Dear me," said mother, folding up her work, "we'd better get on our things and go to see a new friend of mine. Run off and get ready."

Doris unpuckered her forehead a little and hurried on her rainy-day hat and her long coat, and took her little rubbers; then she and mother started.

"This isn't a nice street," she said, contentedly, as they turned down a new street, "and, O mother, are we going in this ugly house?"

"Yes," said the mother, and they went up some shabby steps and in through a shabby door, and then up three dark flights of stairs. A woman was scrubbing half-way up.

"Don't you mind where you're stepping," she asked, crossly, as Doris hit her foot in the darkness.

"I'm sorry," said Doris, but her voice didn't sound as if she cared very ces in Lib

ics, and the most ignora ple soon become expert ing the time for all positio out.

"I do not suppose there is a or woman in Liberia who can the time in any part of the day in fifteen minutes of the true and usually with a closer approx tion. When the farmer is in the he knows exactly when to go ho dinner, and his wife has the waiting for him as he reaches house.

"If he has an appointment
p. m., and also has the habit of reality, he meets his engagemen most on the minute. Our farmer they have not the slightest use clocks. I presume Liberia is the country with any claim to civiliz that does not regard clocks as many in the business of life.

"I am told that down in the C Free State the missionaries teach natives to read the information clock gives. This is very well matter of information, but the na understand the relation of the the time of day as well as we do
I do not think a large numb ocks will ever be sold to the ew York Sun.

ky Earthqua

"I thought my horse was abo die, and would have sprung fro back had a minute more elapsed at that instant all the shrubs trees began to move from their roots, the ground rose and fell in cessive furrows, like the ruffled ers of a lake, and I became h dered in my ideas, as I too plainl covered that all this awful comm in nature was the result of an quake. The fearful convulsion, ever, lasted only a few minutes the heavens again brightened as ly as they had become obscured horse brought his feet to their position, raised his head and ga off as if loose and frolicking wi a rider.

"Shock succeeded shock a every day or night for several w diminishing, however, so gradua to dwindle away into mere vibr of the earth. Strange to say, one became so accustomed to th ing as rather to enjoy the fears fested by others. The earthquak duced more serious consequenc other places."

panese Trai

supply of big-gun shells comp gave out, so continuous searc made for unexploded Japanes sites. These, when found, w back from our guns and in so stances shells were found whic been twice fired at us by the rese. The fact that such w ase was shown by the copp check bands, as our rifling is opposite direction to that of the ese guns, the bands showin marks of their twist and one of Concerning the curious Ja custom of carrying song birds out for a walk the same author ments: "Yes, it seems ridicul see an oriental bearing a ca other hand when he goes out ramble, with song birds for c ions; no stick and no dog. B grandfathers laughed consi when they saw the first u opened in London. It seems b terday that I saw a lovely bloss tree in a Tokyo junk shop, kep solely for the owner's private tation."

Deceived Wom

"From one I love." His pillo was an ornate affair. As soon woman and her husband w housekeeping she placed the lows side by side on the sofa.
they began to get dusty she them away in scented tissue and put them in a dark closet.
a week she took them out and them and said, "Dear Henry,"
One day last week the wo membered a certain poetic she had one time written to She wished to see just how worded it, so she opened the low and looked for the letter.
not there. none of her lette there. Instead of stuffing hi with her loving epistles He wretch, had used old bills a ness letters and circulars, be he shamelessly admitted whe with his disloyalty, he didn't take chances on being made like a fool by having "all that rot brought up against him reached the age of gray hairs

ween the Lov

And that would be too impolite
For anything. I am not quite
So rude, I hope. At least, do Not wish to seem so rude—to s
Excuse—now stop—why can't
As distant and severe with me?
As you have told me—is it no
You are with other girls you
Oh, I am more than—now, sir,
I'll go and take that other s
It's too far off? Well, if I c
Will you agree—don't act that It's horrid and—what? You w
Away and leave me when you
How much I—no, I won't. W
I let you kiss me if you're g
I'd have you know that I—now
I've said I wouldn't, and I w
You do not love me? I can't
She—some one's coming. Sto
Just one, remember—no
Another? Well—no, that —Nel

OUR GIRLS AND BOYS

ROMPING.

Me for a romp!
What shall I do?
Down on the floor,
Baby, with you?
Up and down stairs,
You on my back,
Grasping my hair,
Riding "pick-a"
Now for a tumble!
Hang on now tight!
That's dad's girlie,
Now you're all right!
Now I'm a camel,
Watch now I kneel;
Now I'm a choo-choo
Automobile!
Now I'm a tramp,
Now a bow-wow,
Here's where I chase myself—
Hang to me now!

Now let's build houses—
Build a whole town!
Houses and steeples,
Just to knock down!
Now take your dolly,
Sing her to sleep;
Dearie, your daddy
Loves you a heap!
Hushaby, baby,
Hushaby, do;
Dearie, here's daddy
Waiting for you;
Put down the dolly,
I'll go and hide!
You could not find me,
Dear, if you tried!
No, you can't find me
All you can do!
Now you are warmer—
Peek-a-boo! Boo!

—Houston Post.

TWO EXPERIMENTS.

Here is an experiment that will be to surprise every one who witess it. Place two piles of books on ble about three-quarters of a yard t, and lay a moderately stout stick from one pile to the other. On ddle under the middle of the stick e plate, and on it an alcohol lamp has been previously filled and ed for use.

ow make a box out of stiff paper, ottom of which shall be about five es square, and the height two es and run a piece of string seven es in length through the centre of side, half an inch from the top, fasten each in place by means of t on the inside of the box. Fasten other ends of the string together, as to form a handle, and slip this ple or loop, over the stick, arrangit so that the paper box will be nded immediately over the alco-lamp.

WATER BOILING IN THE PAPER BOX.

e height of the piles of books ld be adjusted so that the bottom the paper box shall be a few inches ve the lamp.

pour water into the box until it es nearly to the knots in the . Light your lamp, and look on in ment while the flame plays nst the bottom of the box, but not burn it.

ou may enjoy the novelty of ng water boil in a paper box.

is another little experiment that may make with your alcohol lamp.
a piece of writing paper to an ar wooden penholder, so that of the paper shall be next to end and the other half next to metal band that holds the pen.
old paper and holder over the ame, gradually, and the part of the er that is against the wood will be ed, while that against the metal ll remain white.

is because metal is a good conctor of heat and carries it off, while ood is a poor conductor, and the heat, not carried off, becomes intense ough to char the paper.—New York il.

PRINCESS PRETEND.

the window sat Doris, watching ain, and her face was all puckered unhappy. "I'm tired staying in the house," she said.

"Come," said mother, folding up work, "we'd better get on our hats and go to see a new friend of mine. Run and get ready."

She smoothered her forehead a lit-and hurried on her rainy-day hat her long coat, and took her little ella, then she and mother started.

"It isn't a nice street," she said, hesitatingly, as they turned down a dirty street, "and, O mother, are we going to an ugly house?"

"Wait," said the mother, and they up some shabby steps and in a shabby door, and then up long flights of stairs. A woman was sobbing half-way up.

"Do you mind where you're stepping?" she asked, crossly, as Doris hit her in the darkness.

"Sorry," said Doris, but her voice sounded as if she cared very much.

When they had reached the top of the house mother said, "Here we are," and knocked on a door at the head of the stairs.

"Come in!" called a little girl's voice, and mother opened the door into a room not nearly as big as Doris's playroom, or nearly as light, either, for it had only one window. In the middle of the room was quite a big bed, and in it, propped up among pillows, lay a little girl with a pale face and shining eyes.

"How do you do, princess?" said mother, making a courtesy, and the little girl's eyes shone brighter.

"I'm very well, all but a part of me that's under the bedclothes and so doesn't matter," said the little girl in the bed, gaily. She held out a thin little hand and shook hands with mother and Doris.

"How kind you were to come to the palace to see me!" she said. "Was the witch on the stairs?"

"Yes, indeed," said mother, while Doris opened her eyes wide, "she was there with her fairy pail, making things clean in the darkness."

"I knew she would be," said the little girl. "She's a kind witch, you know," she said, turning to Doris, "but her words are sometimes disguised so you might think she was cross."

"I did," said Doris, opening her wide eyes.

"Oh, no, indeed!" said the little girl. "Why, she looks after me while my mother, the queen, is away at the Castle of the Books every day. It was she who shut the casement so the gray knights cannot get into harm me, no matter how hard they try. Hear them dash against the window and then see them fall down! Nothing really hurts them, so I love to watch."

"You mean the rain?" asked Doris.

The little girl in the big bed nodded, with mischief in her eyes.

"Things have different names here in the palace," she whispered, "just for fun, you know, because I have to stay here all the time. Wouldn't you like to see the greenhouses? Take the first turn to your left."

The first turn to the left was between two old chairs; the greenhouses were below the window on a small table—one flower-pot with grass growing in it, and one with a little geranium, not such a very pretty geranium, with a red blossom. Doris stood for a long time, looking at them and winking hard every little while.

"The court physician says it may be only one year more before the queen mother can take me out into the world again," she heard the little girl say to mother. "Oh, it's nearly three years since that day I slipped on the stairs. But that's all gone."

"Doris, if you've really seen the greenhouses we must go home now," said mother, at last.

"Sometimes when the palace seems very quiet and just a speck lonesome, I shall shut my eyes and play you are here visiting me," said the little girl in the bed, as she held out her hand again. "I shall see you just as plain!"

"O mother," said Doris, "couldn't I bring Angelina here, so she needn't pretend all the time? Couldn't I? I could make believe sunshine here in the palace. Couldn't we come, mother? Angelina and I?"

"Why, yes, I think you could," said mother.—Elizabeth Lincoln Gould, in Youth's Companion.

ESKIMO CANDY.

Did you ever taste a bit of tallow, children? If you have, I am sure you do not consider it a great delicacy, yet reindeer tallow is the Eskimo children's candy, and I suppose they are quite satisfied. This "candy" is put up in bright red packages made out of the feet of a water-fowl. The women cut off the red feet of this bird, which is called the dovekie, draw out the bones, blow up the skins, so as to make pouches, which they fill with the reindeer tallow for their little folk.

None of the food that the Eskimos eat seems very inviting to us; but they are extremely fond of it, and are very apt to over-eat. It is said by explorers who have gone into Greenland that it is no uncommon sight to see an Eskimo man who has eaten an enormous meal of raw, frozen flesh eating blubber until he can scarcely move.

The average value of the foreign automobiles imported into this country during the first four months of 1905 was $3700.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. J. D. BURRELL.

Subject: The Friend of God.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday morning the Rev. Joseph Dunn Burrell, pastor of the Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church, preached an interesting sermon on the subject, "The Friend of God." The text was from James ii:23: "He was called the Friend of God." Mr. Burrell said:

The figure of Abraham is one of the most majestic spared to us by the past. He stands before us in singular dignity, serenity and power, and his supreme quality was that he was the friend of God.

The phrase is peculiar. It is not said that God was his friend, but that he was God's friend. There is a difference. We accept the friendship of God as a matter of course, like the air we breathe. But the thought that man may be a friend to God scarcely comes to us at all.

There is something deeply touching about that thought. For we usually look upon God as sufficient unto Himself. Yet in this other respect we see Him longing for friends. That desire is common among men, for there are many lonesome, misunderstood, hungry for a friendly word of appreciation. Now think of God also as misunderstood, grieved by neglect, yearning to be loved. Then think of Abraham as giving God his heart. You see how much it meant to God that Abraham was his friend.

One is led to be the friend of another by liking him. The reason why we like him may be inexplicable to ourselves, for there is no accounting for tastes. All fruits are the gifts of God to men, yet some we enjoy and others we reject. All people are children of God, and we can love every one of them in a disinterested and fraternal way. But this does not interfere with our liking some better than others. Even our Saviour felt this human tendency and was drawn by it to a special intimacy with the apostle John.

I suppose there never was a person about whom people differed more than Charles Lamb. Some could not endure his perpetual raillery, his bad puns, his stammer. Others knew him to be one of the rarest spirits, subtle in intellect, exquisite in taste and grandly unselfish.

Now that liking which makes friendship between man and man makes it between man and God. We can picture Abraham at the close of the day, when the tents had been pitched and the evening meal eaten, going apart from the camp for a little space that he might open his soul to God. We can imagine David at night time while the city slept, mounting to the roof of the palace and beneath the canopy of stars communing with the Most High. We can see Christ escaping from the crowds that thronged His steps and eagerly hiding for a brief time in the seclusion of some mountain top that He might be alone with His Father. It was because all three of these liked God.

It is a question worth asking whether we like God. I do not say reverence and honor, I do not say submit to and obey. Do we like God? It is a peculiar question. Perhaps asking it makes us wonder whether our appreciation of God does not lack something of the warm throb of life.

Friendship also involves similarity of tastes. In fact, most of our friendships come about through our being brought together in the pursuit of some common interest, by an ocean voyage, a golf club, a board of directors, a Sunday-school class, for example. People whose chief interests differ are not likely to become friends: Emerson and Boss Tweed, for example.

There is no better field for studying the laws of friendship than a college. Young men or women who have known each other pleasantly enter in the same class, go together for a time, then gradually, without any ill feeling whatever draw apart in order to form other combinations. This shifting is generally due to the dominating power of some common interest—French, boating, editing a paper together, membership in the same fraternity and the like.

The same principle holds true in the friendship between man and God. It is brought about by similarity of tastes and interests. Supreme in God is the sense of order, whose moral side is righteousness. How can He have any friendship with a man who lacks this sense of order? Who does not mind being a glutton or a drunkard or impure, or telling a lie or taking what is not his? As Paul says, "what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness?" And another characteristic of God is His spirit of charity. But suppose a man is indifferent, hard and selfish, prone to cherish grudges and to do unkindnesses, how is friendship possible between him and God? "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

It is important, then, for us to ask if we like what God likes, if we value highly, as He does, the soul, the spiritual life, a character of purity and goodness. These are the foundations of friendship between heaven and earth.

Again, part of friendship is loyalty. But loyalty how far? Through bad report as well as through good report? Assuredly. The friendship that will not endure strain is of little worth.

Twenty years ago a young man was swept away by the excitement of gambling in Wall Street, and misused the funds of the bank of which he was president. The deficit of millions was made good. But, of course, the disgrace was there. Yet to-day he has standing in a certain small social circle. His friends, you see, realized that the man was not really vicious at heart and stood by him to help him make a new life. How many a man, who in fact has done no wrong, but who has had some idle gossip raised about him, has found himself deserted in a minute by those he counted upon as his friends. There is no social tragedy more pitiful than this, and also none more discreditable to human nature.

To be a friend to God means to be loyal to Him through storm as well as through sunshine, in the day not only of prosperity, but also in that of adversity, when the skeptic says, "If God is good and is your friend, how can He permit this trouble to fall upon you?" Then when suspicion is raised about God, many who have called themselves His friends fall away from Him. The true friend is he who stands by God when strange and cruel things happen that cannot be explained, who maintains confidence in the divine goodness when others deny it, who defends God's name when others impugn it, who says with Job, "though He slay me, yet will I trust Him." God will never forget stanchness like that.

Generosity is one of the lovely traits of true friendship. It comes out in feeling, in conduct and in special tokens in the form of gifts.

The ancients illustrated this in the story of Damon and Pythias. Pythias was condemned to death, but begged leave to go home and arrange his affairs. His friend Damon took his place in prison. In the end in the nick of time, Pythias returned and surrendered himself. Because of the spectacle of such a friendship he was pardoned. But the interest of the story centres in Damon lying in prison while the days of Pythias' absence lengthen and the time of execution draws near. For not only was Damon content to endure imprisonment for his friend, but far beyond that he was prepared to die in his place.

The story is no doubt a fairy tale, but is gives us a true lesson, and has had influence upon the civilized conception of friendship. And as applied to our relationship to God it is suggestive. If our friendship to Him is genuine it will bear the mark of generosity. There have been not a few friends of God ready to die, if need be, for Him.

And yet there are many who render to God what they like rather than what He likes. Sometimes presents are given among us on the same irrational basis. You have seen a poor young couple receive from some rich acquaintance an absurd wedding present of a costly piece of bric-a-brac which would be utterly out of place in their modest parlor, and would divert an amount of money which would have been a great help in practical form. The donor consulted his desire rather than theirs.

So is it often with men's gifts to God; they give Him what they like rather than what He likes. In Jeremiah's age they offered sacrifices of bullocks and goats. In Christ's day they performed elaborate religious ceremonies and wore phylacteries and fringes. In medieval times they did penance and paid money. To-day they erect costly churches and endow colleges. But if we would please God we must consult His wishes in our gifts and not our own. And what does God like best? A pure heart, a humble and contrite spirit, days free from evil, practical thoughts of kindness for others, homes of real devotion, sacrifices of money from genuine love of His work, words of honest testimony for Him in public and private. These are the things God likes, and thou who love Him even offer them to Him.

In the fourteenth century, when the moral and spiritual state of Christendom was dark, a group of noble souls banded themselves together to strive after holiness. Their headquarters were at Strassburg and Cologne. Their greatest member was John Tauler, the celebrated preacher, whose printed sermons made a deep impression on Luther. The influence of those men was performed and abides to this day. But the thing to notice especially about them was their name: they called themselves "The Friends of God."

Is there not a place for such people in the life of to-day? Men are apt to become so absorbed in the concerns of this life as to neglect God altogether, and when they do think of Him it is often with the desire chiefly to get something from Him. How sordid and unworthy this all is. We ought to have our relationship on a higher level. Is it not possible for us to appreciate His grandeur and goodness for their own excellence? Can we not like Him for what He is? As He looks down upon a considerably indifferent world, can we not give Him the happiness of letting Him see that we are His friends? And when trouble bewilders us let us still believe in Him; when His good name is assailed, let us defend Him; when He wants some one to do His work, let us say, "Here am I, send me."

We are familiar enough with the idea that God is our friend. But the question is who are willing to be friends of God?

Ponder This Fact.

"Take your Bible, and carefully count, not only the chapters or the verses, but the letters from the beginning of Genesis to the 'Amen' of the Revelation; and when you have accomplished the task, go over it again and again—ten times, twenty, forty times—nay, you must read the very letters of your Bible eighty times over before you have reached the requisite sum. It would take something like the letters of eighty Bibles to represent the men, women and children of that old and wondrous empire. Fourteen hundred of them have sunk into Christian graves during this last hour; thirty-three thousand will pass to-day forever beyond your reach.

"Despatch your missionary to-morrow, and one million and a quarter of immortal souls, for whom Christ died, will have passed away to their final account before he can reach their shores. Whether such facts touch us or not, I think they ought to move our hearts. It is enough to make an angel weep."—Rev. Silvester Whitehead.

The Name of Jesus.

The Lord is the hearer of prayer. There should be waiting on Him, not only in the assembly of His people, not only with the attitude of reverent regard, in the forms of religion, but as the Psalmist puts it: "Truly my soul waiteth upon God." For salvation, for protection, He is to be sought; and whatever the trouble of our lives, we thus get stability.

What can we ask? The fulfilment of the exceeding great and precious promises. But what plea can we present, weak and sinful as we are? The name that is above every name—the name of Jesus.—John Hall.

The Way We Do Things.

Rev. F. B. Meyer says: "Knitting needles are cheap and common enough, but on them may be wrought the fairest designs in the richest wools. So the incidents of daily life may be commonplace in the extreme, but on them as the material foundation we may build the unseen but everlasting fabric of a noble and beautiful character. It does not so much matter what we do, but the way in which we do it matters greatly."

PICHEST BOY IN THE WORLD.

WILLIAM ZIEGLER.

Fourteen years old and worth $30,000,000.

BOY WORTH $30,000,000.

A fourteen-year-old boy struggling to maintain his hold to the claim of the "richest boy in the world," and three women fighting equally hard for a portion of the wealth that gave him the title, is the situation disclosed in dispatches from Los Angeles, Cal., where Mrs. Henry K. Shields, a sister; Mrs. Arthur Little and Mrs. Russel Price, nieces of the late William Ziegler, began a suit to contest the will of the multi-millionaire, who bequeathed the bulk of his immense fortune to his adopted son and namesake.

They declare that they, closest of kin with the exception of Mrs. Ziegler, the widow, were completely cut off by the baking powder magnate and patron of Arctic expeditions, and ask that the law give them a share of the $30,000,000, which represents the value of the Ziegler estate that young Willie Ziegler inherited.

Coming so soon after the death of Mr. Ziegler this suit renews the wide interest in the lad who, though only fourteen years of age, is considered the wealthiest boy in the world, and one with a great future before him.

For it was an unwritten legacy left to him by his foster father that he must find the North Pole should the Fiala expedition sent out months before Mr. Ziegler's death fail in its attempt.

Mr. Ziegler died late last May after a long illness. Before his death it was known that he would make little William, his adopted son, his principal heir.

The story of young Ziegler's life, what it has been and what it holds for the future, is an extremely interesting one. The son of his foster father's brother, he was taken into the millionaire's household at a very early age.

Childless themselves, Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler determined to give him all the love and attention of parents and to this end they decided to legally adopt him.

AUTOMATIC MATCH-BOX.

In a recently patented match-box delivering one piece at a time, the match, instead of being forced out of the box head-first, is simply ejected a short distance and is then in position to be withdrawn by the hand. In the illustration here shown a portion of the box has been cut away to show the telescoping action of the two sections, and a match is seen projecting from the discharge opening ready to be withdrawn. To place the match in the position here seen it is only necessary to contract the telescoping sections in the hand, when the ejector engages the head of the match lying in the bottom of the V-shaped compartment inside the box and exposes the end of the stick a short distance without, however, igniting the head. The ignition is accomplished by the passage of the match head between two roughened surfaces located just inside the opening.

SHOWING THE END OF THE MATCH READY FOR WITHDRAWAL.

The Carthage (Mo.) Press says that a Joplin boy asked his Sunday-school teacher last Sunday if the James boys wrote the Book of James.

The Horrors of War.

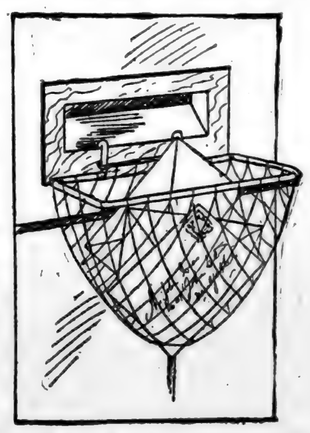
The old gentleman in the smoking car was declaring vehemently that, in his opinion, war was a disgrace to civilization. "War," he exclaimed, "is an abomination, a blot on the universe!" Upon which he rose and left the car.

"The old man seems to feel pretty strongly on the subject," said one of the passengers. "Has he lost some near relative through war?"

"Yes," answered a friend, "his wife's first husband."—Harper's Weekly.

TO CATCH THE MAIL.

A hammock mail receptacle is a veritable novelty, which also deserves attention because of its many merits. In the first place, it is readily attached to or detached from the usual letter-drop opening, the advantages of which are obvious. In the second place, it shows at a glance whether there is any mail to be removed, and its character. In the third place, its ample proportions allow it to accommodate a large number of magazines or similar bulky articles of mail, and yet it does not ordinarily take up an appreciable amount of space. The common rigid box has to be made large enough for maximum requirements, while, as a matter of fact, these are only called into use semi-occasionally. The distension is accomplished by means of a wire framework from which the netting depends. The modern particular housewife, if appealed to, would probably lay some stress on the fact that a receptacle of this kind does not form a lurking place for an accumulation of dust.—Brooklyn Eagle.



Mooning.

A man by the name of Moon got married, and that was a change in the moon; in due time his wife presented him with a daughter, and that was a new moon; then he went to town and got busy for joy, and that was a full moon; when he started home he had twenty-five cents in his pocket, and that was the last quarter; his mother-in-law met him at the door, and that was a total eclipse—he saw stars.—Concord Times.

IMPROVED DUST-PAN.

The following is an improvement on the dust-pan which has been in general use for a great many years. This heel

DUST-PAN WITH A HEEL.

answers a dual purpose, that, in the first place, of elevating the rear part of the utensil so as to facilitate the operation of sweeping the accumulations of the floor into it and also forming a convenient receptacle for the said sweepings, preventing them from being spilled or otherwise scattered after they have been once gathered. On one side of the heel there is a door through which the sweepings may be readily emptied.

An American heiress has married Prince Henry Goland de Bearn at Chalais de Paris.

Korea's Future.

The constant growth of the trade of Korea is somewhat remarkable in view of the unfavorable condition of the country, and it is explained only by a consideration of the comparatively large and but partially developed resources of the country. It is safe to assume that at the conclusion of the present hostilities greater development awaits her, and further expansion of her foreign trade.—Journal of the Society of Arts.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

Clanton, Ala., Thursday, Aug. 17, 1905.

UNION CLUBBING LIST....

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Home & Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Dixie Home	1.00
THE UNION Saturday News	1.25
THE UNION And Weekly Age Herald	1.25
THE UNION And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.50
THE UNION And Twice-a-Week Globe-Democrat	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION And Tri-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

PROMPT PAY.

The following letter is a tribute to the promptness with which the British America Insurance Company pays its losses when they occur; no beating round the bush for a couple of months and then taking 60 days more unless the loser will submit to a discount.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 14, 1905.

Mr. W. C. Edler,
Agent British America Ins. Co.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:

I wish to acknowledge the receipt of $1,800 from the company which you represent and in which I insured through your solicitation. My loss occurred on July 4th and I recognize that a little delay was caused by the scarcity of adjusters, there having been some serious fires in Birmingham and other places about that time. The very day the adjuster appointed to investigate the loss, reported all clear to the company, it forwarded me the amount of my claim in full, and I am pleased with the prompt manner in which it does business.

Very truly yours,
W. M. WILSON.

tf

JUST A VOTER.

From reliable information, we are justified in saying that this gentleman has obtained his own consent to write a letter for next week's paper on some points he has not hitherto touched. We assured him that the people would like to hear from him every week, and he sends his thanks to all good Union readers.

THE FARMERS AND THE TRUSTS.

Of all producers the farmer is hit hardest by the Trusts. They catch him coming and going. And the Trust lives and grows because of railroad rebates, the "protective" tariff, and national bank control of our money system. Evidently the remedy is to cut off these special favors which build up and perpetuate the Trust.

Tom Watson's Magazine,

"the Magazine with a purpose back of it," was established to teach the best way of abolishing these special privileges, and, hence, of rendering the Trusts powerless to rob the public. It is a big monthly magazine of 128 pages, with illustrations, cartoons, Mr. Watson's brilliant editorials, special articles, a serial story, novelettes, short stories and poems, by the world's best writers. Regular price, $1.00 per year; 10 cents the copy, at all news stands. Every farmer is interested in knowing the best way to cure the Trust evil and how to bring it about. Now in its second volume, Tom Watson's Magazine is firmly established, and its circulation is growing rapidly; but we want to add a hundred thousand subscribers to our list in the next month or two.

Send Us Three Names,

of reading farmers in your neighborhood, together with this advertisement and 25 one-cent stamps—or a silver quarter securely wrapped—and we'll enroll you for a four months' trial trip subscription. Or five of you may club together, sending a dollar bill and 25 good names and addresses, and get five trial trip subscriptions. Learn how to clip the Trust's wings. Address

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
No. 121 W. 42d St., New York, N. Y.
Room B 7. tf

THORSBY LETTER.

Miss Dora Thorson is home on a month's vacation. Miss Frieda Turnquist, who is employed as a trimmer in the millinery department of Loveman, Joseph & Loeb's store of Birmingham, is spending a month's vacation with her parents. Mr. Arthur Williams, who has been a pleasant visitor in Thorsby for the past two weeks, has returned to Portland, Ind. Messrs. Frank and George Hallman and John Anderson have returned to the 80th. Mr. S. E. Norton and Mr. G. Berlin are both in Chicago. Mr. Carlson, who has been in poor health for some time, has returned to the north. In spite of the inclemency of the weather the ladies' society at Mrs. T. T. Thorson's was very well attended last Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Dennis, who have been spending a vacation with the Winslow family, have returned to their home in Marion, Ala. Mr. and Mrs. J. Thomas, of Montgomery, are guests at the Thorsby Inn. The many friends of Dr. Junkerman will be glad to hear that he is rapidly recovering from his attack of fever. The boll weevil is doing considerable damage to the cotton in this vicinity. Some fields will be entirely destroyed while others do not seem to be affected at all. The Thorsby ball players were rather disappointed in not being able to play the Clantonites last Saturday. They were prepared to beat Clanton just as Columbiana beat them not long ago.

CHATTERBOX.

CENTERVILLE.

Editor Union:

Just a few words in the People's Paper. The first time I ever wrote anything to a paper in my life, especially about politics. But I've such hard cases here to contend with that I can't help but say something. I met up with a man the other day (I'll not tell his name, for it might cause hard feelings) and his political belief is (like the answer to the B. F. Dorsey letter in the Yellow Jacket) for the lack of sense. We got to talking politics, and I'd had to scrap with him if I hadn't let up a little on him. You know when you strike a fool, you do wrong. He is a hot-headed democrat BECAUSE his father was, and this place is filled with just such fellows, and you know what that means. My father heard the discussion, and at dinner time he told me to keep still or I'd get into trouble, and I told him if no one would talk to these folks, how would they ever know what was going on in the world; and that I believed in Protection and majority rule. These democrats always talk about Republicans and social equality with the negro, though they (the democrats) show more familiarity with the negro as a person than Republicans do.

A TRUE REPUBLICAN.

FROM HIGHLAND UNION.

"Chilton Co., Ala., July 19, '05.

Editor I. A. Worley.

Dear Sir:—I will drop you a few lines in regard to our lodge. We had a grand jollification on last Saturday. The union was opened by President A. W. Powell and two members were added. After this the doors were opened and about three hundred farmers were admitted. Judge Reynolds, of Clanton, was introduced by Bro. N. A. Dobbs, who made the best talk of his life on the importance of farmers organizing. His speech made a lasting impression on the people and got them to thinking.

"The good work has just started in old Chilton. We are to meet Saturday, July 22d, to make arrangements to put up a union gin. We are small in numbers, but we have the stickability of the Japs. We have some critics to fight here, but they find us always loaded with such good union men as J. C. Grimes, W. F. Culpepper, W. J. Watson, A. W. Powell and others that the enemy is on the retreat. I say hurrah for Bro. Pinegar and the Union Educator. Listen! We are started, we are going to shoot a 16-inch union gun in the near future.

J. C. GRIMES."

—The Union Educator, Guin, Ala.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

Our Sunday school is doing well. There was deep mourning in our community Saturday week when G. W. Edwards, son of Isaac Edwards, was carried to the cemetery and laid to rest. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. H. Thomas. The deceased leaves a widow and five children to mourn the loss of the husband and father. Andrew Leach, of Pletcher, who is visiting friends and relatives here, is now at his father-in-law's (Eli Scott) very ill, and the doctor says unless an operation is performed his recovery is doubtful, but we all hope for the best. E. G. Cofer is expecting a large trade and is filling his store with new goods. Our Farmers' Alliance is moving along nicely. New officers have been lately elected. I notice some of THE UNION correspondents have dropped out. What's the matter, boys? You're not that busy, are you? "One of the Boys" from Randolph has fell short, besides several others. Of course, fodder pulling is on hand, but that's not a lasting job; now come on and let's keep the good old UNION at the top all of the time. Just a little help from each one of us will do the job up fine. I'm always looking out for "Just a Voter."

DAD'S PLOW BOY.

ALL-DAY SINGING.

At Oak Grove church, 2 miles north of Jemison, on the 4th Sunday in August, we will sing principally in "Christian Harmony," but bring all of your books, and also a full basket with you. The singing will be conducted by R. J. Langston.

A LITTLE SINGER.

tf

BEAT 9 ITEMS.

Plenty of rain. Farmers are worried over some kind of blight which is destroying their cotton. Frank Eiland has gone to Calera to work. J. P. Barrett and son, Charlie, visited his brother, near Stanton, on Friday. Rev. S. Smitherman filled his regular appointment at New Salem Saturday and Sunday. Rev. Lowery preached Sunday night.

Miss Beulah Alred, of Birmingham, is here on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Feast.

NIM ROD.

Bethel, Aug. 15, 1905.

Editor Union:

We had one of the largest rains I ever saw Saturday from 1:10 to 2:15 p. m., washing roads and unterraced fields badly. There has not been as much fodder saved to date as usual on account of frequent rains.

A. M. Rollins has cotton ready for picking. He also has a fine patch of katfir corn, a new forage plant in this section.

C. N. Dennis has some Japanese cane which is doing nicely.

Well, I agreed to say something more of the Farmers' Summer school at Auburn. Prof. Spillman, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, gave one very interesting and practical lecture on diversification.

Loring Brown, manager of the Belmont farm of Smyrna, Ga., conducted the scoring of chickens. Also told how chickens were handled at Belmont farm, giving instructions on many things connected with raising chickens.

Prof. B. B. Ross, State Chemist, gave us lectures on fertilizers, fertilizing materials and how to make our fertilizer or guano at home at a saving of from $3 to $10 per ton.

He also gave instructions for making cane syrup.

Prof. Anderson showed us many things about soil that was new to us. Also gave instruction for the management of different soils.

Prof. McIntosh, State Horticulturist, on San Jose scale and treatment for same. Spraying, how to make Bordeaux and lime sulphur salt wash, etc. Also gave an illustrated lecture on propagation of plants.

Prof. E. M. Wilcox, Plant Physiologist and Pathologist, on diseases of cotton, corn breeding, judging, etc.

Dr. C. A. Cary, Veterinarian and Director of Farmers' Institutes, directed the work of the school in a very satisfactory manner.

Everybody was glad to know when Dr. Cary would lecture.

J. N. DENNIS.

UNION.

At Union, District No. 51, on Friday, August 25, there will be a day devoted to the cause of education. Everybody is cordially invited and especially all teachers and educators. There will be conveyances provided at Jemison to bring out all teachers and those who take part. Please notify the trustees if you intend to come. Come one, come all, and let's have a grand rally.

J. W. SORRELL,
J. N. GLASSCOCK,
W. H. CONWAY,
Trustees.

N. B.—We have invited State Supt. Hill, Supt. of Jefferson County McAdory, Judge L. H. Reynolds, the county trustees and others and expect to have them all come. tf

NOTICE!

To the Stockholders of FARMERS' WAREHOUSE AND FERTILIZER CO.: This is to notify you to meet in NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDING, THORSBY, ALA., SATURDAY, AUG. 26TH, 1905. There is some very important business to attend to. Done by order of directors.

J. BICE,
President.

tf

NOTICE TO OVERSEERS.

Please do your duty on the roads in Beat 9. Give them 5 days' work between now and next circuit court.

R. D. CHILDRESS,
J. R. COLLINS,
Apportioners.

tf

OAK GROVE.

All those that are interested in the old Mount Hope cemetery are invited to meet there on August 25th, the Friday before the 4th Sunday, and help to clean and fix up the grounds. Come one, come all.

JOHN COBB.

tf

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The County Board of Education will meet at Clanton August 12th to dispose of all business pertaining to the schools or districts of Chilton county. tf

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

King Oscar should at least reflect that half a throne is better than no throne, thinks the Atlanta Journal.

The great American pie is now made by machinery, and the next step will be to have it eaten by machinery, prophesies the New York American.

A man who is in good condition in all respects is almost germ proof by nature. But many a man who thinks himself in good condition is far from being so.

Philadelphia is trying to rid itself of the overhead trolley, says the New York Tribune. Meantime, a searching investigation is going on as the underground ways that lead to its City Hall.

The mighty have surely fallen when such a power as Russia has been can be defied for days by a handful of men aboard a single battleship, declares the Manchester (N. H.) Union.

The male singer who creates a rumpus about his family affairs in the divorce courts finds little sympathy. Operatic advertisement of this kind is distinctly a feminine prerogative, concludes the Washington Star.

The man with a gun who shoots on sight at anything living, in hopes of killing a deer, is again abroad and, unfortunately, this is the season when the foolkiller is taking his vacation.

The London World declares that "it is a masculine delusion that women are ready or ever will be ready to surrender their liberty and indulge in the vulgar chase for husbands as did their forbears."

A very trite saying, remarks the San Francisco Argonaut, is that the honor of public men should be as sensitive as that of a woman, and there is a great deal in it, since they involve not only themselves but the country for which they appear before the world as representatives.

I do not think I have ever been so impressed by the magnitude of Paris, by its vast encompassment and infinite variety, as upon my return here after a round of the other great European cities, says Henry Watterson in the Courier-Journal. Any one of them might be lifted bodily and set down in one of the faubourgs of Paris without changing the order of things, or seriously disturbing the people and the life about the centers.

Rose culture may be said to be located near the apex of commercial horticulture because of the refinement of the product, the high prices which excellence commands in the open market and the exceeding skill and intelligence required for the best results says the Massachusetts Ploughman. Some of the best horticultural talent in the country is being devoted to production of new varieties of roses, and the rewards of success in that line are very considerable.

It was a lucky day for Canada when, mainly through the efforts of the late William McDougall, the vast area of territory belonging to the Hudson Bay Company was added to the Dominion at an expense of only $1,500,000. Today that territory has a population of 800,000. Its agricultural and other products this year are officially valued at more than $100,000,000, or over sixty-five times its original cost. The Dominion Government is now urged to grant a pension to Mr. McDougall's family.

Meet your problems with an effort of the mind. Meet your difficulties, your sorrows, your disappointments with an effort of the will which is a struggle of the brain, advises the Massachusetts Ploughman. Devote your energies to maintaining mental alertness. Remember that that brain inside your skull contains all your hope for the future, all your possibilities of usefulness as well as pleasure, since there alone sensation and real activity exist. Wise reading is important, for reading feeds the brain. But earnest, concentrated thinking is infinitely more important, since thinking exercises the brain.

Miss Tarbell, in the latest of her Rockefeller studies, draws some graphic studies of the most discouragingly successful money-grabber in the world, says Collier's. It is not a pretty picture, composed as it is of greed, cruelty, and disgusting piety. "According as you put something in," he observed to a Cleveland Sunday School, "the greater will be your dividends of salvation." But he is not the type of business man who represents the future. His like are on the wane. The responsibilities and opportunities of money are becoming more widely understood, and its mere rapacious accumulation tends every day to become a source of shame.

A Rapidly Growing City.

In 1901 Winnipeg, according to the federal census, had a population of 42,340, giving her rank as sixth in the list of Canadian cities. From the civic census just completed it is learned that the capital of Manitoba now has a population of 78,367, an increase of 36,027 in four years. This now places her ahead of Hamilton, Ottowa and Quebec, and ranks the Prairie City as third in the Dominion, with Toronto and Montreal between her and first place.

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St, THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St,

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alabama

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.,

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers.
County and Office Supplies a Specialty.

Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave. BIRMINGHAM, ALA

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and contents and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightning. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of insurance known to man Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per cent.

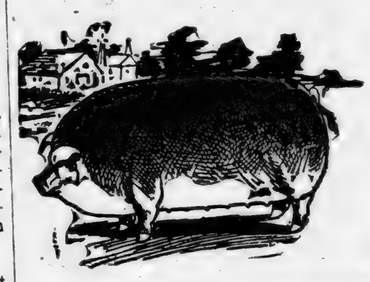
Full particulars furnished upon application to
WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

Gelder's Restaurant,

Good Meals at Reasonable Prices.

110 North 20th Street,
BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE AND FERTILIZERS

FOR SALE.

Troy Special & Mule Brand "Are the Best on Earth."

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby,

CHILTON COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.
Judge—Third Monday in May, Fourth Monday in Nov.
Solicitor—J. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
Clerk—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Sheriff—W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Clerk—Term—Second Monday in
Register—Term—Second Monday in Sept.
Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
Solicitor—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.
Meets Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Second Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, second Monday November.

County Officers.
Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Coroner—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would like published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

New Hope-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley, R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 1st Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 2nd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 2nd Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 3rd Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 4th Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 2nd Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas 1st Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas 2nd Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 3rd Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; Saturday before the second Sunday; J. A. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. J. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song service every 2nd and 4th Sunday at 11 o'clock. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 114—3rd Saturday, Clanton.

Amanda Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —First Saturday, Billingsley.

Bozeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Stanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Tuesday on or before full moon, Stanton.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Saturdays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304—Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Cheaeermo Tribe, No. 90—First and third Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. R.; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Branch No. —, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

STORE, Cor. of Ave. and 7th St.

The Procession.

ling, Hats, Shoes,

ITURE,

RIAL NECESSITIES.

JULLINS,

Alabama

RINTING CO.,

s and Lithographers.

Supplies a Specialty.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

nsurance Association

LABAMA.

ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

nd for the People.

unty Branch

ebruary 3, 1900.

WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.

gs, outbuildings and contents ss by fire, wind and lightning most sensible method of insur

43-100 of 1 per cent.

on application to

E C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

WOODLAWN FARM,

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.

PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,

Maplesville, Alabama

Restaurant,

Reasonable Prices

th 20th Street,

AM, ALABAMA.

ERCHANDISE AND

TILIZERS

R SALE.

l & Mule Brand

Best on Earth."

JONES,

Alabama

Prevents Fevers.

FURNISH PURE WATER

ater or no charge made.

Address

SARBER CO.

...D COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.

...—Third Monday in May.
...—Fourth Monday in Nov.

...L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

...Term—Second Monday in ...

...Term—Second Monday in Sep...

...—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.

...Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

...Monday February, first Mon... first Monday June, second ... July, second Monday August, ...day November.

County Officers.

...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...—W. T. Callen.
...—J. M. Morgan.
...—J. O Middleton.
...Assessor—A. C. Mims.
...Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

...District—W. H. Conway.
...d District—Alex Glasscock.
...d District—R. P. Kendrick.
...th District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

...J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

...R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

...W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

...ters and clerks are cordially asked ...ood the editor any news regarding ...ir churches which they would ...published. Also if there are any ...s in these notices please send cor...

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

...Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd ...y. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley, ...F. D. No. 1.

...ton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st ...rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

...ant Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, ...day. H. A. Harris, clerk.

...ty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, ...day. W. M. Wood, clerk.

...edonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, ...day. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

...w Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, ...day. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

...ar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, ...day. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

...n Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, ... J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

...ias Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...day. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

...ek Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...day. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

...sant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...day. T. J. Headley, clerk.

...n Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st ... G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

...del—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; ...y before the second Sunday; J. ...Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

...ky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. ...Carroll, pastor. 2nd Sunday. Song ...e every 2nd and 4th Sunday at ...ma. Prayer meeting every Wed... night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

...nton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—... Saturday, Clanton.

...ande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...-Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

...nton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...-First Saturday, Clanton.

...ury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...-First Saturday, Billingsley.

...man Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...4—Saturday on or before full ... Marbury.

...son Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Saturday on or before full moon, ...ton.

...ter Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Tuesday on or before full moon, ...ton.

I. O. O. F.

...son Lodge—First and third Sat...

...ton Lodge, No. 304—Second and ... Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

...Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ... Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

...ee Tribe, No. 90—First and ... Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs ...ly invited. E. B. Langston, C. ... J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

...dge, of Thorsby—Second ...rth Saturdays.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 16, '05, 8,091.
Price same date, 10c.
Total receipts last season, 6,648.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

J. H. Carter was in Clanton Thursday.

The person who handed J. B. Downs $1.00 for THE UNION several weeks ago, please communicate with this office.

T. J. Hubbard was in Clanton Friday and incidentally mentioned having some very fine cotton raised by him this season. Some of his hearers rather skeptical, the editor of this paper looked over the field on Saturday, and found it remarkably fine, many of the plants being six feet high and well fruited. The 11 acre field looks like it would yield about 12 bales of cotton. Mr. Hubbard has also some very good corn, lots of the stalks carrying 2 ears. All this does great credit to Thomas' farming ability.

W. J. Bean was in town Friday.

Lee Hayes was in Clanton Friday.

T. W. Miller, Mrs. J. C. Vickers and Mrs. J. S. Stagner, prominent citizens of Jackson's Gap, Tallapoosa county, who have been visiting friends and relatives at Clanton and vicinity, returned to their homes Monday.

W. B. Cooper and wife were in Clanton Saturday.

Mr. an dMrs. Walter Collins were in town Monday.

R. D. Childress, J. R. Collins and J. W. Hayes were in Clanton Monday.

J. S. Wright was a pleasant visitor Monday.

S. S. Scott was in town Monday.

W. A. Messer was a welcome caller Monday.

M. A. Killgore was in Clanton Monday, and says his wife and he have a new girl at their house, who arrived Saturday morning and weighs 7 1-2 pounds. Mother and child both doing well.

J. A. Caldwell was a pleasant visitor Monday.

J. W. Sorrell was in Clanton Monday.

A. C. Mims was a welcome caller Monday.

Mrs. Alex Glasscock, of Hubbard, was in Clanton Monday visiting Dr. Hyman's family.

I. N. Langston and 'Squire LaFayette were in Clanton Monday.

M. F. Lett was in town Monday.

G. C. Shaw visited Clanton Monday.

G. W. Phalin, the lumber man of Thorsby, was in town Monday.

'Squire J. N. Dennis was in Clanton Monday.

W. M. Price, of Riderville, was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

T. M. Donovan was a welcome caller Tuesday.

J. M. Maddox and C. C. Swint brought in some cotton plants Saturday and Monday that are badly diseased from some cause, all the squares and bolls being rotten. We are informed that Prof. Wilcox, of Auburn, is expected at Thorsby to investigate some plant and fruit diseases there, and he has promised to stop at Clanton also, so bring in your bugs and diseased plants of any kind and store them in THE UNION office for his inspection.

The County Commissioners met Monday in their regular August session, all commissioners being present. County business of all kinds, including bridges, roads, mud holes and sand beds, were acted upon Monday and Tuesday. Wednesday they will give audience to a number of agents who will figure on the contemplated alterations in the jail and court house; also some bridge building concerns.

The new gin house for the Warehouse Co. is framed and will be pushed to completion.

The squeal of the pig is heard all over town, likewise the squeals of the owners.

T. M. Driver was in Clanton Wednesday. He's bought a gin in beat 3. Lock at his ad.

M. A. Killgore went to Sylacauga Wednesday on a business trip.

Mrs. Mary Knight, widow of E. A. Knight, died Tuesday afternoon and was buried in New Salem cemetery. The Rev. T. J. Deason conducted the funeral services. It is only a few days since the husband's body was laid to rest and now the wife follows. "Together in life, in death they were not divided."

READ THIS.

Every man owes it to himself and family to master a trade or profession. Read the display advertisement of the six morse Schools of Telegraphy, in this issue and learn how easily a young man or lady may learn telegraphy and be assured a position.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

COLORED.

Rufus Carson and Minnie Massey.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 12, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz.: Isaac B. Martin, Homestead Entry No. 32916, for the S. E. 1-4 of S. E. 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23 N. of R. 13 East.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Zack S. Avery, Clayton Glasscock, Hubbard Glasscock, Norman Bradford, all of Jemison, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
Register.

7-13-05-6t

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 20.

Subject: Jehoiakim Burns the Word of God, Jer. xxxvi., 21-32—Golden Text, Jer. xxvi., 13—Memory Verses, 22 24—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Jehoiakim's great sin (vs. 21-26). 21. "King sent." So that he might hear the roll read and not be obliged to learn its contents through second-hand reports. "Took it out," etc. The princes had filed the roll among the public records (v. 20) for safe keeping. "Jehudi." An under officer, descendant of a noble house, the one the princes had had sent to Baruch to get him to read the roll to them. "Princes—stood." The king sat on a rug and the princes stood respectfully about.

22. "Winterhouse." Great men had distinct houses or apartments, fitted for the different seasons of the year (Amos 3: 15). "Ninth month." Our December. The cold, rainy season. "Fire on the hearth." Fire in a brazier, a pot made of earthenware, in the form of a pitcher, placed in a hollow in the middle of the room.

23. "Four leaves." "Columns." R. V., margin. The roll was of parchment attached to a roller of wood at one or both ends. Our word volume, "that which is rolled up," points by its derivation to this older form of book. "Cut it." He could not tear parchment so he cut it. "Penknife," Scribe's knife. Used to shape the reed employed for writing and to make erasures in the parchment. "He" refers to king (v. 22). As often as Jehudi read three or four columns he cut them out and burned them. "All these words" (v. 24) imply that the whole volume was read through. "Till all the roll was consumed" implies a gradual process.

24. "Not afraid." Contrast the humble fear of Josiah at the reading of the law (2 Kings 22: 11). Josiah rent his garments in grief that the book had been lost, his son cuts God's book and burns it. Throwing the fragments of the roll on the fire, he puts there, in symbol, his royal house, his doomed city, the temple and the people of the land. "His servants." His immediate personal attendants who did not share the reverences of the princes (v. 16).

25. "Nevertheless." This aggravates the king's sin. "Elnathan." A man of first rank and father-in-law of the king (2 Kings 24: 8). "Delaiah." Of this prince nothing more is known. "Gemariah." A scribe of the temple, a man of noble blood. From a window in his official chamber Baruch read aloud the prophecies of Jeremiah, and Gemariah's son Michaiah, reported this to him (vs. 10-12). "Made intercession." These princes would have aided the king in following his father's steps. We learn the same from the basket of figs (Jer. 24: 1). It is the more remarkable to find Elnathan thus interceding after the office he had performed in Jer. 26: 22.

26. "King commanded." He was not satisfied with burning the prophecy, but now desired to kill Jeremiah and his faithful scribe. He hoped to put an end to such prophecies. "Lord hid them." They had at the counsel of the princes hidden themselves (v. 19). Now, though a diligent search was made, the Lord did not permit them to be found.

II. Jeremiah restores the word of God (vs. 27-32). 27. "Word—came." That word was not burned, neither was Jeremiah hidden from the eyes of the Lord. 28. "Another roll." The entire book was rewritten, and this second manuscript, so far as can be known now, is the one we have to-day. Disaster is not necessarily defeat. The destruction of this book was a great disaster. No copy existed, and no human memory could produce it. But God re-inspired the prophet, and the second edition was fuller than the first. 29. "Concerning Jehoiakim—say" (R. V). It is doubtful whether Jeremiah and the king again met. Note the contrast between this morally hardened, impious king, boiling with wrath against God and His prophet, and the heroic man of God who does not shrink, but firmly speaks the words of Jehovah even in the face of death. "Saying, Why," etc. This was no doubt an actual message which the king had sent to Jeremiah to frighten him. "King of Babylon." Nebuchadnezzar, who had been once and collected tribute and gone. He should return and destroy the land. Nothing but the repentance of Jehoiakim and his people could prevent it. 30. "None—throne." His son, Jehoiachin, attempted it for three months, but the land was occupied by Nebuchadnezzar's army, and Jerusalem was in a state of siege, and he was taken captive (2 Kings 24: 8-17). No child of Jehoiachin succeeded to the throne. "Body—cast out." A repetition of the prophecy of Jer. 22: 19. Of its fulfilment nothing is known. The phrase, "he slept with his fathers," means that he died (2 Kings 24: 6). He was fettered by Nebuchadnezzar (2 Chron. 36: 6). "Day—night." In the East the thermometer often falls suddenly after sundown (Gen. 31: 40). Plumptre thinks it probable that the king, who was being taken to Babylon in chains with the other captives, died on the journey, and that his body was left behind unburied as the army marched.

31. "I will punish him." He was slain, his kingdom destroyed and his son carried in chains to Babylon. The inhabitants of Jerusalem were not punished for the king's crimes, but for their own sins. "They hearkened not." They might have been saved from the threatened evil if they had repented, threatened evil if they had repented.

32. "Added—many like words." Many more threatenings of wrath and vengeance were added in the second roll which were not in the first, for, since they will yet walk contrary to God, He will heat the furnace seven times hotter.

First Bale in Girard.

Girard, Ala.—The first bales of cotton grown in this vicinity this year have just been marketed in Columbus. J. G. O'Neal sent in two bales grown on his place two miles south of Girard. The bolls had opened prematurely, the result of the hot weather.

Some of the people who subscribe to unpublished editions de luxe refuse to endorse the idea that publicity is the remedy for all social imperfections.

NOTICE!

To all Whom it May Concern:

I have brught the W. E. Thomas gin and grist mill, and will grind every Friday and will do my best to give perfect satisfaction. I will have two gins with 110 saws and two presses. I will soon move and will take my jack over there, so as to give my patrons a chance to raise good mules. Thanking all for past favors, I will do my best to merit your business in the future.

Respectfully,
T. M. DRIVER.
Jemison Route 2.
tf.

FOR SALE!

A thoroughbred Jersey Bull, 2 years and 4 months old, weighs about 650 pounds. Apply to M. A. Killgore, Clanton, Ala., Route 5. tf.

NOTICE!

There are 200 shares of stock of the Farmers Warehouse & Fertilizer Company of Thorsby, Ala., for sale. The board of directors have authorized the undersigned to sell these shares to all who desire to invest.

J. Bice, President
T. M. Driver
J. W. Hays.

TIMBER FOR SALE!

Over a hundred acres of Virgin Swamp timber for sale. Apply to T J. Billingsley, Clanton, Ala. Route 3. tf.

ANGELICA WINE!

Pronounced equal to the best made in Europe, by good judges of wine. Price $2.00 per gallon, discount for larger quantity. Guaranteed to keep. Address

A. P. R. DAHL,
tf. Calera, Ala

WANTED!

A live agent in every beat in Chilton county to write life insurance for the Mutual Benefit Association of Georgia. Cheapest insurance on earth. Good pay to hustlers. Write

W. R. Jackson,
Division Agent,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

We Club With

The New York World

THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken

For the autumn season now at hand the most valuable paper to you will be the New York Thrice-a-week world, because it offers you more at the price than any other paper published anywhere in the world.

This is a time of great events. We are having great wars and other changes of a stirring kind are occurring both at home and abroad. The Thrice-a-Week World comes to you every other day, except Sunday, with all the news, fully, accurately and promptly told.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

The Thrice-a-Week World always has a serial story running, and it is always a first-class story by a first-class author. The Thrice-a-Week World publishes better fiction than any other newspaper in the United States. Special attention is also given to markets, and there are many other valuable features.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf.

5000 TELEGRAPHERS NEEDED

Annually to fill the new positions created by Railroad and Telegraph Companies. We want YOUNG MEN and LADIES of good habits, to

LEARN TELEGRAPHY AND R. R. ACCOUNTING

We furnish 75 per cent. of the Operators and Station Agents in America. Our six schools are the largest exclusive telegraph schools IN THE WORLD. Established 20 years and endorsed by all leading Railway Officials.

We execute a $250 Bond to every student to furnish him or her a position paying from $40 to $90 a month in States east of the Rocky Mountains, or from $75 to $100 a month in States west of the Rockies, IMMEDIATELY UPON GRADUATION.

Students can enter at any time. No vacations. For all particulars regarding any of our Schools write direct to our executive office at Cincinnati, O. Catalogue free.

The Morse School of Telegraphy

Cincinnati, Ohio. Buffalo, N. Y.
Atlanta, Ga. LaCrosse, Wis.
Texarkana, Tex. San Francisco, Cal.

Academic
Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President

Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer

We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WITH

The Union

FOR

$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.

If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address

The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

1011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

Statement of

The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama.

(Chilton County Branch.)

President: W. M. Wilson, Clanton.

Sec.-Treas. Wallace C. Edler, Clanton.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 7, 1905.

In the five and a half years that this Association has been in existence, it has levied seventeen (17) assessments to pay twenty-six (26) losses, viz: Lightning, 1; wind, 4; fire, 21. The total of the seventeen assessments was $2.36¼ per hundred dollars, being an average yearly assessment of 43 cents on each hundred dollars of insurance per annum.

W. M. WILSON,
President Chilton County Branch.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 7th day of August 1905.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.
tf.

What is Culture?

By Mrs. M. C. Conover.

CULTURE is threefold—of the body, of the mind and of the soul. True culture is the bringing up of each of these different parts of our being to the highest attainment of which it is capable, and uniting them in one person. Bodily culture consists of purity and cleanliness; if we had all the graces of a Chesterfield and the learning of a Macauley, and yet did not keep our teeth brushed or our fingernails tidy we would be lacking in culture.

Mental cultivation helps to make the equipment; the object of all mind training is to so perfect the memory that we may be able to apply knowledge to the needs of the hour. Mere reading is of importance because it enlarges our ideas and refines our tastes; but it does not give us power; study does that. We must work diligently for power. It has been truly said that genius may lack culture. Even though we know all historical, literary and scientific facts, yet if we forget to speak the kind word when it is needed or to do a helpful deed to aid a weary one, then is our well trained memory in vain. And because our Father looks at our motives and because we may do the right thing from a wrong motive, so is a true heart one of the most important factors of culture. Moral self-culutro consists in training the will to decide according to the decree of an enlightneed conscience.

The guage of our culture should be the home life. It may be easy to be courteous to strangers or to the great; it should be just as easy to treat those of the home circle with the same consideration. There cannot be any ingrained gentility which does not exhibit itself at home. It is there that you show how much genuine culture there is in the heart.

LIFE.

I was not asked if I should like to come,
I have not seen my host here since I came,
Or had a word of welcome in his name,
Some say that we shall never see him, some
That we shall see him elsewhere, and then know
Why we were bid. How long I am to stay
I have not the least notion. None, they say,
Was ever told when he should come or go.
But every now and then there bursts upon
The song and mirth a lamentable noise,
A sound of shrieks and sobs that strikes our joys
Dumb in our breasts, and then some one is gone.
They say we meet him. None knows where or when;
We know we shall not meet him here again.

—William Dean Howells.

A STORY OF THE DEAD ROOM.

By CAPT. BARCLAY.

I PRESUME, doctor, there are many sorrowful scenes which present themselves in your profession," I remarked to the surgeon of our regiment, as I spent an evening in his tent, while we lay encamped near the river in a Southern seaport town.

"Yes, indeed," he replied, with an air of nonchalance. "But then, captain, you are a soldier, and you know how a fellow will get used to almost anything. You do not shudder now at seeing dead men lying around, as you used to, do you?"

"Well, no," I replied, "that is too true."

"I remember one incident in my life, when a student of medicine in the office of old Dr. F——," continued the doctor, "that never has been erased from my memory. It is fully a quarter of a century since it occurred, and yet I remember it well. I would to heaven it could pass from mind.

"War is full of horrors," continued the doctor, "and I have been in hospitals where the shrieks of the wounded and the groans of the dying mingled, and went about my business almost as the weaver listens to the sound of his looms. But this is a story of the dead-room, where no sound is heard but the sharpening of the scalpel and the almost noiseless tread of the surgeon.

"Among the professors in the medical college at that time was an English surgeon. He was a man of brilliant attainments, both as a scholar and as a surgeon.

"He was probably sixty years of age, and had no family, at least he never spoke of one. Why he left his native land, and why he hardly ever smiled, no one seemed to know, and probably no one cared to ask. We, as students, paid our money for a knowledge of medicine and surgery, and did not trouble ourselves about the history of those who taught us.

"The winter season of lectures had commenced, and students from nearly every section of the United States were in the city to attend them. Subjects for dissection were required, and sometimes, like other articles in the market, the supply exceeded the demand, and at other times the dead-room was short. Body-snatchers were employed at the current rates, and were paid for the bodies furnished according to the law of supply and demand. Subjects were scarce and in demand the winter I have named, and prices rose accordingly.

"I happened in the English professor's room one morning to examine a medical work on a subject that required my attention. A gentle rap came on the door, and the doctor said, 'Walk in.'

"I knew the visitor and his calling at a glance. His soulless eyes glanced cautiously around the room, and then he asked, in a whisper:

"'All right, doctor?'"

"'Yes; one of my students,' replied the surgeon.

"'Have a fresh stiff, doctor. Found it floating in the harbor at daylight this morning. Female, about fifty, and good form. From an English vessel, no doubt.'

"'What is the price?' asked the surgeon.

"'Cannot deliver it at the college for less than a hundred,' was the reply.

"'Too much,' answered the surgeon. 'You are above the market price.'

"'Sorry we cannot agree,' said the man, with a scowl; 'but the fact is, doctor, no class of individuals take such risks and work as hard for our money as us, and mostly for the benefit of science.'

"He was about to depart when the surgeon called him back.

"'Make it seventy-five, and you can bring the subject.'

"'Sorry, doctor, but I can't. You see, Jim and I are in partnership in this stiff, as he happened to be in the boat with me, and come to divide the price, it is only fifty each. We honestly earn'd every cent we ask.'

"'Well,' replied the surgeon, 'bring the subject to the dead-room to-night, and your price shall be paid.'

"The following day the professor announced in his morning lecture that a fine female subject had been obtained, and that in the afternoon he should dissect it in their presence and for their benefit in the science of obstetrics. A full class and a careful hearing were demanded.

"The subject had been placed on the dissecting table of the dead-room, and a white sheet carefully secured it from view. A full class was in attendance at the afternoon exercises.

"The professor dwelt with warmth upon this delicate branch of medical science, and said the theme was profound, and in part revealed the wonder of our creation.

"Stepping from the platform with scalpel in hand, he then advanced to the table, removed the sheet from the corpse, and while gazing upon the face of the dead woman, the color left his cheeks, the scalpel shook in his hand, he gasped for breath, and said:

"'Jane, Jane! Great Heaven, it is Jane!' and fell in my arms.

"Restoratives were applied to his bloodless lips, and, when he had recovered sufficiently to speak, he said:

"'Gentlemen, I am ill. There will be no dissection this afternoon. Leave the room. To-morrow meet me at the usual hour.'

"What became of the dead body we never learned. It was removed that night, by whom and to what place were never known to us. The surgeon also disappeared that night, and never entered the college again. What became of him always remained a mystery. He may have departed for Europe in the morning upon some vessel leaving port, or he may have committed suicide. A body resembling the doctor was found floating in the East River, New York, some weeks after, but it was too much decomposed for identification.

"The mystery connected with the dead-room was never fully explained. Rumor had it, but it was never fully confirmed, that the doctor's wife had deserted him in England many years previous to this event, and ran away with a British sea captain, and that the doctor came to America under an assumed name. Being a skillful surgeon, he readily obtained the honored position he held.

"How the woman met her untimely death no one ever knew. Her paramour may have become tired of her, as is the general result in such cases, and she may have welcomed death in a watery grave, or she may have accidentally fallen from the ship's deck. That she was the doctor's wife there can be no doubt.

"Now, captain," continued the doctor, "I have told you the story of the dead-room. The mystery connected with the affair can only be left to conjecture."—New York Weekly.

Can Birds Smell?

Most sportsmen are agreed that when a carcass is hidden, by never so slight a screen, it is safe from the attacks of vultures and other carrion eaters. It is customary, in the tropics, when a single hunter has killed an animal too large for him to carry home alone, to disembowl it and hide the body in some near-by bush or hole. On returning with natives to remove the carcass a circle of vultures will always be found surrounding the spot where they have devoured the offal, quite unaware that the best part of the killing lies hidden within a few feet of them. Although all birds seem to have small olfactory bulbs, there is considerable evidence indicating that they have no sense of smell whatever. Mr. Alex Hill, of Downing College, reports a number of interesting experiments to test this question. All he could find in support of the view that birds can smell is the belief which prevails among bird fanciers and game keepers that birds like the odor of anise and valerian. This Mr. Hill considers doubtful. He placed various substances of powerful odor in and beneath the feeding dishes of a pair of turkeys, and in no case did he see any indication of a sense of smell. Camphor, carbon bisulphide, acetylene, chloroform, prussic acid were placed so that the odor in full strength surrounded the heads of the turkeys, and, except in the case of the vapors of chloroform and prussic acid, which partially poisoned the birds, there was absolutely no effect produced.

Views and Nations.

President Hadley of Yale and a young man whose appearance was that of a student once met, says the Searchlight, in Yellowstone Park, in the midst of the wonders of nature.

President Hadley turned to the young man for sympathetic comment.

"This is a wonderful scene, isn't it?" he said.

The young man smiled and nodded, and turned without speaking to gaze at the prospect spread before them.

"Do you think," asked President Hadley, confirmed in his idea that he was talking to an ardent student, "that this chasm was caused by some great upheaval of nature, or it is the result of erosion or glacial action? What are your views—"

"My views," said the stranger, quickly, opening a bag containing photographs, "are only two dollars a dozen, and dirt-cheap. Let me show you some."

Don't Boil Your Germs.

Dr. A. Charrin, a distinguished French savant, fed two groups of guinea pigs on carrots. One group took the vegetable after it had been sterilized by boiling and all germs thus destroyed; the other after it had been sprinkled over with dust, or with the soil in which the carrots had been grown. Of seventeen subjects in the first group twelve died before those in the second, and the investigation showed that the total absence of germs in the sterilized food impaired the digestion and lowered the assimilative power of the animals. Only five altogether were lost of the group fed on the germ containing food.—Springfield Republican.

The Best of It.

To date, the champion fish story of the season has been told by the Boston Globe. It says that two Maine men went out fishing lately and saw a big fish under their boat. The fish would not be booked, so one of the men dived overboard and caught the fish by the tail with his teeth. The second man pulled the two into the boat.

FAILLE SILKS POPULAR.

Faille, which is one of the new silk weaves, is becoming very popular. It is very much like chiffon, but of a trifle heavier quality, says the Rochester Post-Express.

Some of the prettiest novelties of the season in collars are shown in the printed Dresden materials, which give an effective touch of color to the hitherto almost unrelieved whiteness of the season's lines. Touches of plain colors in pinks, blues and lavenders, are also used in a similar manner, and result in some very attractive sets.

In chemisettes are shown the most extravagant articles, the cuffs which usually match being really what have in other seasons been known as undersleeves. They come in real lace, in all-over embroidery, both hand and machine made of fine tucking and lace insertion, of lace, embroidery and dainty lace stitches combined, of finest mull, of chiffon or point de esprit—their variety is endless and their charm seemingly exhaustless. They are among the notable successes of the season.

In its plainest expression the line costume in which is made with a plaited or circular skirt and a half fitting, half length coat, tailor made and double breasted with coat collar, revers and cuffs of the full coat sleeve made of pale tinted linen, blue, mauve or rose color. Spats are worn of the colored linen like the trimming.

Silk coats are a rapidly developing feature of the season, and the variety in both styles and materials is wonderful.

While on the coat subject lace coats should be mentioned as a strong feature of the season's styles, and they are found in almost all of the shapes that are made in materials, their use extending from the separate wrap, which is usually lined, to an adjunct of a decollete evening gown, or in bolero form, of a dressy waist.

THE NEW SLEEVE.

Much is said and written about the skirts waists and accessories of the frocks, but in truth the sleeve, which, although it is very small, is quite as important, if not more so, than any of these others. There are, indeed, many kinds of sleeves, which are considered quite fashionable, says the Newark Advertiser. Of course all are puffed. That is essential. But there are many ways of puffing. Some have tucks galore, which, when let out, furnish the fullness. Others employ gathers for this purpose, and all seem to have been originated by some one endowed with a great deal of taste. In the lightweight dresses the sleeves are generally short. Some have frills of lace, others stop off short without any trimming whatever, but each one has a beauty of its own. A very pretty conception is seen in a gown of pale blue chiffon. There is just the faintest suspicion of a drooping effect at the shoulders, and the sleeves, where they join, are sewed in with a band of lace with which the gown is trimmed. It stops at the elbow, and a shaped cuff of the lace lined with blue chiffon finishes it. Chiffon is, of course, too sheer and thin to allow of no lining, and the sheerest kind of blue silk is employed to give it the necessary stiffness. Another pretty sleeve of chiffon is shirred lengthwise. These are extremely handsome, but require a great deal of material and a great deal of work to make them. The old fashioned leg-o-mutton sleeve is again in highest favor. It has never taken upon itself so charming an individuality as now, nor has it ever become worn as it has this year. Perhaps the decided change in the sleeves accounts for much of the pleasure one derives in having them so different. It is not without a doubt that when fashions take such severe turns one is more apt to appreciate them.

HORSEBACK RIDING FOR WOMEN.

Horseback riding is very fashionable in this country, and is becoming more and more popular as a means of exercise, says the Binghamton Press. But, although many physicians advise it, few women have accustomed themselves to the idea of riding astride, although in Europe it is in more or less vogue. However, now that the custom has been taken up by the English royal family, and to some extent by fashionable people in the European capitals, American women are pretty sure to follow their lead before long.

Paris has not taken the fad at all seriously, but Frenchwomen are not the horseback riders that the English, Irish, German, Austrian and Russian women are. Dublin has fought a bit shy of the custom, but women in St. Petersburg, and to a lesser extent in Moscow, and largely in Warsaw and Budapest, have taken kindly to the innovation. And it is women of fashion, and not actresses seeking newspaper notoriety, who have found the side saddle worth abandoning for the cross seat.

Probably though the fact that will influence Americans is that the Princess Victoria of Wales, granddaughter of King Edward, rides astride entirely, and with the approval of her royal grandmother. The rather pretty little girl wears a costume of a kilted skirt hanging neatly on both sides of the horse when she is mounted. Other little ones have followed her example, of course, and other girls and even matrons have been seen in numbers on Rotten Row and in the hunting fields. It is pretty certain that the divided skirt will be "the thing" in the hunting fields at Quorn and other fashionable centers this coming fall, and naturally American women who have been abroad this season and seen the growth of the fashion will not be long in following suit here.

A COSY CORNER.

You can make an interesting corner in your home by devoting a little space there to your favorite author, artist, poet or novelist. Select the one that you prefer and against a background of olive and crimson drapery hang his latest photograph well framed. Other pictures of him taken in earlier years form an interesting addition to the first and lead many visitors to comment, and interesting talk.

One of two shelves thrown across the corner may hold the author's books, the collection being made as complete as possible and gaining in value if the volumes are autographed by the author. To obtain the last touch of distinct worth you must ask the author to write his name for you, and this he usually will do if the books are sent to him, and all needless trouble and expense are saved him by your careful arrangement about mails or express, if he lives at a distance.

Should you be so fortunate as to possess a personal letter from your favorite you may either fasten it to one of his books or frame it by itself.

Perhaps you prefer to devote a corner to the country you most desire to visit. This is also a charming idea and will prove very ornamental. If it is Japan, for instance, you may have hangings of pretty Japanese stuffs, lanterns, fans, burning joss sticks, little Japanese gods, vases, pottery, the beautiful Japanese prints or colored photographs, framed in dull, unstained wood, a dainty little Japanese tea service on a lacquered tray and many cushions covered with straw mattings, crepes and silks. There is no end of the pretty little things you may pick up to add to your collection.

Instead of Japan, you may select Holland to which to pay your devotion. If so, dull blue and white, the deft shades, may be effectively employed and prove very charming. Dutch pictures, pottery and needlework can be easily procured and arranged to make a dainty little group.

Such a corner, whether devoted to your favorite author or to some distant country that appeals to your fancy, will add greatly to the attractiveness and interest of your room. —Manchester Union.

REST AND RECREATION.

Along the line of justifiable extravagance let me make a plea for more recreation for the busy housewife. In caring for her home and loved ones she is too apt to forget the duty she owes herself and almost before she is aware of the fact she is growing nervous, feels discouraged and irritable. At such a time let her pause and consider not how much she will save by continuing in the same old rut, but how much she will gain by laying aside her work for a time, that she may rest and recuperate. Do not wait until tired Nature calls a halt, but make a practice of taking one or two vacations every year—going where you can really rest, and have time to think, not of the work you have left behind (that will take care of itself), but of the benefit yourself and loved ones will gain. These short separations "make the heart grow fonder," and the dear ones will also learn from your absence how necessary you are to them. Time and money spent more freely this way will "really pay in the end." It will mean better health for wife and mother, a larger bank account and happier homes.—January Woman's Home Companion.

READING FOR GIRLS.

Never knowingly read a bad book, or one that bears an evil or doubtful reputation, says The Farmer's Call. Just as it is wise in choosing friends to have one's intimates among those who are pure and honest and brave, it is wise in selecting books to take into one's hands and thoughts none that will leave an indelible soil and stain there. People sometimes read a bad book because it is talked about. No girl should do this. Let the bad book alone. Never refuse to read a good book because it happens not to be a new one. Books that are good often improve with age—that is, they stand the test of time and do not gather dust on top shelves or drop into the dust like leaves from the trees in the autumn gales. A book is the better and not the worse for having been the comforter and counselor of several generations.

THE HARM OF INSECTS.

DAMAGE OUR CROPS TO THE AMOUNT OF HALF A MILLION A YEAR.

The Big Granaries and Storage Plants of the Country Suffer Constantly From Every Species of Parasitic Pest—Grand Total of Loss $785,100,000.

The prevention of damage to the estimated extent of $585,000,000 wrought by insects each year upon crops in this country would enable the United States to create a new gold reserve greater than that of Russia. The Chicago Daily News has obtained statistics from experts of the Department of Agriculture at Washington showing that the aggregate operations of insect pests upon staple and miscellaneous crops, and upon the forests and products in granaries and storehouses, occasion annual losses amounting to about $785,100,000, distributed in this wise:

Product.	Value.	Amount of Loss.
Cereals	$2,000,000,000	$200,000,000
Hay and forage	530,000,000	53,000,000
Cotton	500,000,000	50,000,000
Tobacco	53,000,000	5,300,000
Truck crops	265,000,000	53,000,000
Sugars	50,000,000	5,000,000
Fruits	135,000,000	27,000,000
Farm forests	110,000,000	11,000,000
Miscellaneos crops	58,000,000	5,800,000
Animal products	1,750,000,000	175,000,000
Total	$5,451,000,000	$585,100,000
Natural forests and forest products		100,000,000
Products in storage		100,000,000
Grand total		$785,100,000

These large percentages of loss are calculated according to the destruction of crops at initial and advancing stages of growth by their successive enemies. For example, the wheat and corn crops would have a combined value of about $1,090,000,000 if they passed through the season unscathed. The root worm inflicts an initial damage of 2 per cent upon the corn crop, of $20,000,000; the boll worm affects the ears to an equal degree, and chinchbugs brings the figure up to $6,000,000, while the wire, army and cutworms, locusts, grasshoppers, lice and other pests help to establish the total loss of $80,000,000 for corn. The Hessian fly scourges and hurts the wheat crop fully 10 per cent annually, the damage in 1904 being in $40,000,000. Wheat in a single State suffered to the extent of $20,000,000 during one year. The average damage from grain plant lice is from 2 to 3 per cent of the value of the crop. The detriment to wheat from all sources is 20 per cent, or $100,000,000 annually.

The boll weevil, cotton-leaf worm, and other insects inflicted $40,000,000 worth of damage to the cotton crop last year. The value of apples shrunk by from 25 to 40 per cent through insect inroads, notably of the coddling moth and the apple maggot. There are the contingent damages, too, to be reckoned in, such as the $8,250,000 expended in 1904 for insect protection in the apple orchards. The apple crop lost in all $20,000,000 in value. Borers and other timber pests occasion an annual loss to farm forests of $100,000,000.

The big graneries and storage plants of the country suffer constantly from every species of parasitic insect, such as weevils, grain beetles, and worms, to the extent of $100,000,000 a year, and the annual shrinkage of food values in private dwelling from these sources, which, of course, cannot be estimated, would swell this total considerably.

Yet it is certain that scientific means of protection have appreciably reduced the great annual devastation by insect scourges. The cotton-leaf worm alone used to cause a yearly loss to the growers of $30,000,000, while the depredations of the Hessian fly have been reduced by between $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 and the coddling moth has been successfully encountered with a net saving to fruit growers of nearly $20,000,000 a year. The simple expedient of rotation in crops prevents the ravages of the root worm on corn to the extent of $100,000,000 annually.—New York Times.

A VACATION FOR MAN AND WIFE.

Von Blumer's Idea for a Sensible Holiday, and What Came of it.

Mr. and Mrs. Von Blumer were sitting together. One was smoking and the other was reading.

For some time Von Blumer's face had been heavy with thought. Evidently there was something on his mind.

"Do you suppose," he said at last, with an apparent assumption of indifference, "that there is anything in the idea that two people who are living together all their lives ought to separate occasionally?"

"You mean married people?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Von Blumer smiled.

"Why, yes," she replied. "I suppose there is a certain amount of truth in it. I think it is a good idea. Why not? You wear on me at times. I presume that I wear on you."

Von Blumer had been married long enough not to fall into any verbal trap.

"Certainly not, my dear," he replied. "Of course, you never wear upon me—that is, in the sense I mean. Only—well, I suppose we might as admit that there's something It's natural after all that two should get—well, too other. Once a year perhaps "Come, come, dear," she said ing at him sharply, "out What's up your sleeve? You well tell the exact truth. What your plans?"

Von Blumer wasted no more He had conveyed by his manner he was trying to conceal something counting upon Mrs. Von Blumer practiced eye to find it out, and simply that he could get her attention to what his purpose was.

"Simply this," he replied and I both need a rest and a change. You like one sort of place, I another. Let's part for a couple weeks. You go your way, I go mine. It will do us both good. We'll tickled to death to see each other. What do you say?"

For a moment Mrs. Von Blumer did not reply. Then she smiled enthusiastically.

"I really believe," she said, "that you for once have a good idea. do it. We'll start off next week."

"Done!" said Von Blumer.

The following Monday they kissed each other good-by.

The next afternoon, as Von Blumer ascended his own steps once more and opened the door, who should he see but Mrs. Von Blumer.

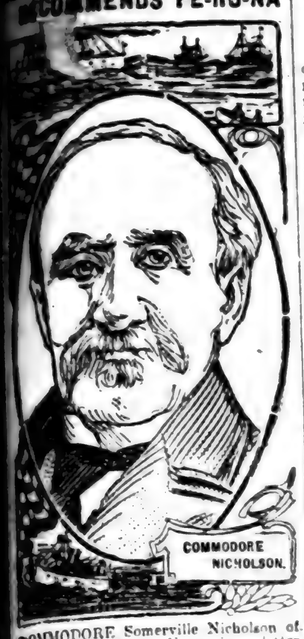
"What in the world are you doing here?" he exclaimed.

Mrs. Blumer sighed.

"Why, I thought you were going away," she said, "so I made up my mind that I would come back home and, all by myself, take a much-needed rest."

"Umph!" said Von Blumer. "So did I."—Puck.

COMMODORE NICHOLSON RECOMMENDS PE-RU-NA



COMMODORE Somerville Nicholson of the United States Navy, in a letter from 1837 R street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., says:

"Your Peruna has been and is now used by so many of my friends and acquaintances as a sure cure for catarrh that I am convinced of its curative qualities and I unhesitatingly recommend it to all persons suffering from that complaint."

Our army and our navy are the natural protection of our country.

Peruna is the natural protection of the army and navy in the vicissitudes of climate and exposure.

We have on file thousands of testimonials from prominent people in the army and navy.

We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements Dr. Hartman is constantly receiving for his widely known and efficient remedy, Peruna.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

HAS A TAME SEA GULL

It Flew Into a New Jersey Man's House and Remains There.

Probably the most peculiar pet owned by any man in the United States is in the possession of Mr Joseph H. Smith, of Parsonage avenue, Morristown, N. J. It is a tame sea gull.

It is several months since Mr. Smith came into possession of the bird, but so little has he said about it that even his neighbors are not aware of the curiosity. The bird came to Mr. Smith during one of the hard storms in the latter part of January. Mr. Smith was just about to enter his house one night when something swooped down over his head and fell on the walk at his feet. Without stopping to see what it was Mr. Smith opened the door of his house, and before he could shut it the gull had entered. From that day to this the gull has not been outside the door, and shows no disposition to leave the place. He seems perfectly happy and contented, eats his food—raw meat and fish—with a relish, and does not mind when his master picks him up. He takes his daily swim in a tub, and does not seem to mind the loss of the ocean.

Mr. Smith was in the navy for eight years and has seen thousands of gulls, but he avers this is the first time he ever saw one nearer than the cathead. "Dickey" has learned a lot of tricks and does them at the bidding of Mr. Smith. When the bird feels the need of exercise he spreads his wings and sails about the house—upstairs, downstairs, in the cellar and in the attic, and never breaks anything. It seems strange to Mr. Smith that the bird can fly with so little wing motion, for "Dickey" never flaps his wings but moves them gently once in a while and sails about the rooms as if he was without weight. His spread of wing is about five feet from tip to tip, but he is only about fourteen inches long and does not weigh more than a couple of pounds.—Newark Journal.

Cure of Consumption.

In our town Post-Graduate Hospital we have established a fact which will finally obtain general acceptance, namely, that it is not necessary to seek a particular climate for the treatment of tuberculosis; that a patient in the top story of a New York house in the middle of winter, in bed, with the windows wide open, with proper feeding may recover of tuberculosis; and in our ambulance service, and in our annex in Ninety-ninth street, New York city, we are accumulating the proof of this every day.

At the annual meeting of the American Congress for the [illegible] of tuberculosis it was with great difficulty that the now antiquated belief that a particular climate was necessary for the cure of tuberculosis, as presented in a report from a Southern physician, received the [illegible] of the congress. This was [illegible] by a small majority, a large minority apparently having the opinion that we have just stated. We predict that at the next annual meeting of the tuberculosis congress the minority will be on the other side, and it will be firmly established that the opinion of the medical profession is that climate has very little to do with the cure of tuberculosis.—Post-Graduate.

Pat Crowe Bobs up Again.

Pat Crowe, the kidnapper of Eddie Cudahy, has again startled Omaha, Neb. With one companion he held up and robbed two street cars within three blocks of the Omaha city jail and police station. They got the receipts of both cars and escaped. There were no passengers aboard.

"We are firmly convinced that it was one of Crowe's jobs," said Chief Richmond of Council Bluffs. "We know he was in town Sunday.

Rich Bureau Chief.

Gifford Pinchot, chief of the government forestry bureau, is a wealthy man, but keeps his position through love of the work connected therewith. He is practically the first American to make forestry a profession. His salary of $3,500 is not much of an object to him, and doubtless he would be just as enthusiastic if the government did not pay him anything. He has thrown himself heart and soul into the work, giving to it all his time and strength, and working much harder and many hours longer than the ordinary governmeat clerk, who is solely dependent upon the government for his support.

Muscular Christianity.

Rev. R. B. Scott, pastor of the Baptist church in Fairmount, Va., is evidently a believer in muscular Christianity. In the midst of the service Sunday night a man named World entered the church and informed the minister that his (World's) house, nearby, was being robbed. The pastor made the announcement from the pulpit, cut short the closing exercises, and the congregation resolved itself at once into a sort of posse comitatus to hunt burglars. Upon reaching World's house it was found the burglar had fled.

May Succeed Kitchener.

It isprobable that should Lord Kitchener resign his position as commander-in-chief of the British forces in India he will be succeeded by Lieutenant-General Sir William Nicholson. The latter has seen a good deal of actual service, including campaigns in Afganistan, Egypt, Burmah and South Africa. He was British attache with the Japanese army during the early portion of the Russo-Japanese war.

Only vaccinated persons can vote in Norway, where horse sense rules.

HEART RIGHT
When He Quit Coffee.

Life Insurance Companies will not insure a man suffering from heart trouble. The reason is obvious.

This is a serious matter to the husband or father who is solicitous for the future of his dear ones. Often the heart trouble is caused by an unsuspected thing, and can be corrected if taken in time and properly treated.

A man in Colorado writes:

"I was a great coffee drinker for many years, and was not aware of the injurious effects of the habit till I became a practical invalid, suffering from heart trouble, indigestion and nervousness to an extent that made me wretchedly miserable myself and a nuisance to those who witnessed my sufferings.

"I continued to drink Coffee, however, not suspecting that it was the cause of my ill-health, till, on applying for life insurance I was rejected on account of the trouble with my heart. Then I became alarmed. I found that leaving off coffee helped me quickly, so I quit it altogether, and having been attracted by the advertisements of Postum Food Coffee I began its use.

"The change in my condition was remarkable, and it was not long till I was completely cured. All my ailments vanished. My digestion was completely restored, my nervousness disappeared, and, most important of all, my heart steadied down and became normal, and on a second examination was accepted by the life insurance company.

Quitting Coffee and using Postum worked the cure." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason, and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville" in each pkg.

—well, I suppose we might as admit that there's something It's natural after all that two p should get—well, too fond other. Once a year perhaps they "Come, come, dear," she said, ing at him sharply, "out What's up your sleeve? You well tell the exact truth. What your plans?"

Von Blumer wasted no more
He had conveyed by his manner he was trying to conceal somet counting upon Mrs. Von Blu practiced eye to find it out, and simply that he could get her a tion to what his purpose was.

"Simply this," he replied.
and I both need a rest and a cha
You like one sort of a place, I another. Let's part for a couple weeks. You go your way, I go m
It will do us both good. We'll tickled to death to see each ot
What do you say?"

For a moment Mrs. Von Blumer not reply. Then she smiled enth tastically.

"I really believe," she said, "
you for once have a good idea.
do it. We'll start off next week."

"Done!" said Von Blumer.

The following Monday they kis each other good-by.

The next afternoon, as Von Blu ascended his own steps once m and opened the door, who should see but Mrs. Von Blumer.

"What in the world are you do here?" he exclaimed.

Mrs. Blumer sighed.

"Why, I thought you were go away," she said, "so I made up mind that I would come back ho and, ill by myself, take a much-ne ed rest."

"Umph!" said Von Blumer. " did I."—Puck.

HAS A TAME SEA GULL.

It Flew Into a New Jersey Man's House and Remains There.

Probably the most peculiar owned by any man in the Unit States is in the possession of Mr.
seph H. Smith, of Phoenix avenu Morristown, N. J. It is a tame gull.

It is several months since M
Smith came into possession of th bird, but so little has he said abo it that even his neighbors are n aware of the curiosity. The bi came to Mr. Smith during one of th hard storms in the latter part January. Mr. Smith was just abo to enter his house one night whe something swooped down over h head and fell on the walk at his fee
Without stopping to see what it w
Mr. Smith opened the door of h house, and before he could shut it th gull had entered. From that day this the gull has not been outside th door, and shows no disposition leave the place. He seems perfec ly happy and contented, eats his foo —raw meat and fish—with a relis and does not mind when his mast picks him up. He takes his dail swim in a tub, and does not seem t mind the loss of the ocean.

Mr. Smith was in the navy fo eight years and has seen thousand of gulls, but he avers this is the firs time he ever saw one nearer tha the cathead. "Dickey" has learne a lot of tricks and does them at th bidding of Mr. Smith. When th bird feels the need of exercise h spreads his wings and sails abo the house—upstairs, downstairs, the cellar and in the attic, and neve bumps anything. It seems strange t
Mr. Smith that the bird can fly wit so little wing motion, for "Dickey" never flaps his wings, he just move them gently once in a while and sail about the rooms as if he was with out weight. His spread of wing i about five feet from tip to tip, bu he is only about fourteen inches lon and does not weigh more than a cou ple of pounds.—Newark Journal.

Cure of Consumption.

In our town Post-Graduate Hosp tal we have established a fact whic will finally obtain general acceptanc namely, that it is not necessary t seek a particular climate for th treatment of tuberculosis: that a p tient in the top story of a New Yor house in the middle of winter, in bed with the windows wide open, wit proper feeding may recover of tuber culosis, and in our ambulance serv ice, and in our annex in Nineteent street, New York city, we are accumu lating the proof of this every day.

At the annual meeting of the Amer ican Congress for the study of tuber culosis it was with great difficult that the new antiquated belief tha a particular climate was necessar for the cure of tuberculosis, as pr sented in a report from a Southern physician, received the sanction o
the congress. This was done only b
A small majority, a large minority ap parently having the opinion that w have just stated. We predict that a the next annual meeting of the tuber culosis congress the minority will b on the other side, and it will be firm ly established that the opinion of the medical profession is that climate ha very little to do with the cure o tuberculosis.—Post-Graduate.

Pat Crowe Bobs up Again.

Pat Crowe, the kidnapper of Eddi
Cudahy, has again startled Omaha Neb. With one companion he held u and robbed two street cars within three blocks of the Omaha city jai and police station. They got the re ceipts of both cars and escaped
There were no passengers aboard.

"We are firmly convinced that was one of Crowe's jobs," said Cha Richmond of Council Bl know he was in town Sund

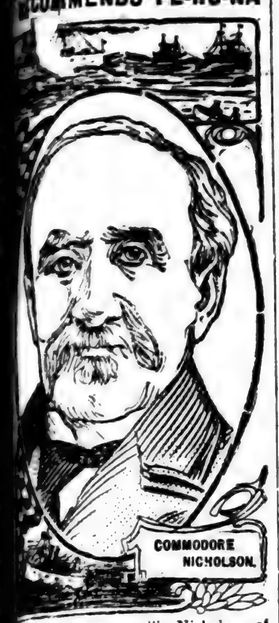
COMMODORE NICHOLSON RECOMMENDS PE-RU-NA



COMMODORE Somerville Nicholson of the United States Navy, in a letter from 1837 R street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., says:

"Your Peruna has been and is now used by so many of my friends and acquaintances as a sure cure for catarrh that I am convinced of its curative qualities and I unhesitatingly recommend it to all persons suffering from that complaint."

The army and our navy are the natural protection of our country.

Peruna is the natural protection of the army and navy in the vicissitudes of climate and exposure.

We have on file thousands of testimonials from prominent people in the army and navy.

We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements Dr. Hartman is constantly receiving for his widely known and effective remedy, Peruna.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Rich Bureau Chief.

Gifford Pinchot, chief of the government forestry bureau, is a wealthy man, but keeps his position through love of the work connected therewith. He is perhaps the first American to make forestry a profession. His salary of $6,000 is not much of an object to him, and doubtless he would be quite enthusiastic if the government did not pay him anything. He has given himself heart and soul into the work, giving to it all his time and strength, and working much harder and many hours longer than the ordinary government clerk, who is solely dependent upon the government for his support.

Muscular Christianity.

Rev. R. B. Scott, pastor of the Baptist church in Fairmount, Va., is evidently a believer in muscular Christianity. In the midst of the service Sunday night a man named World entered the church and informed the minister that his (World's) house, near by, was being robbed. The pastor made the announcement from the pulpit, cut short the closing exercises, and the congregation resolved itself at once into a sort of posse comitatus to hunt burglars. Upon reaching World's house it was found the burglar had fled.

May Succeed Kitchener.

It is probable that should Lord Kitchener resign his position as commander-in-chief of the British forces in India he will be succeeded by Lieutenant General Sir William Nicholson. The latter has seen a good deal of actual service, including campaigns in Afghanistan, Egypt, Burmah and South Africa. He was British attache with the Japanese army during the early portion of the Russo-Japanese war.

Only vaccinated persons can vote in Norway, where horse sense rules.

HEART RIGHT

When He Quit Coffee.

Life Insurance Companies will not insure a man suffering from heart trouble. The reason is obvious.

It is a serious matter to the husband or father who is solicitous for the welfare of his dear ones. Often the heart trouble is caused by an unexplained thing, and can be corrected if taken in time and properly treated. A man in Colorado writes:

"I was a great coffee drinker for many years, and was not aware of the pernicious effects of the habit till I became a practical invalid, suffering from heart trouble, indigestion and nervousness to an extent that made me wretchedly miserable myself and a nuisance to those who witnessed my distress.

"I continued to drink Coffee, however, not suspecting that it was the cause of my ill-health, till, on applying for life insurance I was rejected on account of the trouble with my heart. Then I became alarmed. I found that leaving off coffee helped me quickly, so I quit it altogether, and having been attracted by the advertisements of Postum Food Coffee I began its use.

"The change in my condition was remarkable and it was not long till I was completely cured. All my ailments vanished. My digestion was completely restored, my nervousness disappeared and most important of all, my heart steadied down and became normal and on a second examination I was accepted by the life insurance Co. I am using Coffee and using Postum Food Coffee, the cure." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason, and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each pkg.

MINOR EVENTS OF THE WEEK

WASHINGTON.

Dr. Salmon, chief of a Department of Agriculture bureau, admitted partnership with a man who got a contract to furnish labels to the Government.

Secretary Wilson gave up his vacation and will stay in Washington all through the investigation of the Department of Agriculture.

Government reports showed that an increase of more than $1,000,000 in the internal revenues of this year over those of last.

OUR ADOPTED ISLANDS.

Major General Corbin gave a dinner in honor of Secretary Taft at Manila. Ten thousand men took part in a parade which was held in the morning.

Secretary Taft and his party arrived in Manila on the steamer Manchuria in the morning. Their arrival was made the occasion of a gorgeous water pageant.

Exportation from the Philippine Islands of the dried kernel of the cocoanut, known as copra, is shown by the recent Philippine census to be steadily increasing.

DOMESTIC.

It was announced unofficially, but from an authoritative source, that Governor La Follette will relinquish the office of Governor early in September and go to Washington as United States Senator in October.

In a disastrous boiler explosion near Del Rio, Cooke County, Tenn., four men were killed and seven wounded. Their names were not reported.

Italian railroad laborers on Pennsylvania improvements below Alexandria, Va., on leaving a work train for camp near Seminary Station got in front of a gravel train. Four were killed outright, two fatally and several seriously injured.

F. W. Vanderbilt gave a new million dollar dormitory to the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale, at New Haven, Conn.

Mock Duck and several other Chinese were held pending an investigation into the shooting of three Chinese in a Chinese theatre in New York City.

The Board of Aldermen of Paterson, N. J., voted to grant no franchises or incur any unusual liabilities until a new Mayor takes office on January 1.

Important law firms accepted service on behalf of Equitable directors in Attorney-General Mayer's suit.

A new Herreshoff motor boat attained a speed of forty miles an hour in a trial on Long Island Sound.

Mrs. John G. Carlisle died at her summer home in West Islip, L. I.

Mrs. J. Pheips Stokes and three other women, wives of summer residents of Greenwich, Conn., formed a bucket brigade and helped their husbands fight a fire at midnight.

Israel Ludlow's air ship had a successful ascension in New York City, but the navigator became frightened and slid to the ground.

Engineer John Mooney saved all on the Atlantic City Special but himself when his train ran into an open switch or obstruction on the trestle across Newark Bay, N. J. He and his engine plunged to the bottom of the bay.

New York's cordial reception of Witte surprised the Russians, who had been led to believe that Americans were prejudiced in favor of the Japanese.

FOREIGN.

A valuable treasure believed to be Roman or Ptolemaic, has been discovered near Takus, forty miles southwest of Port Said, Egypt. It includes a gold diadem, a crown, numerous bracelets and over one hundred gold coins.

The Venezuelan Government has placed an order in Genoa, Italy, for six torpedo boats and one torpedo boat destroyer.

The International Anatomical Congress at its first session in Geneva, Switzerland, accepted an invitation to meet in Boston, Mass., in 1907.

The steamer Kite, returning from Rowsell's Harbor, Northern Labrador, reported sighting a ship near Makovick Bay, steaming north, believed to be the Peary steamer Roosevelt.

All the railway warehouses, sheds, workshops and smaller government buildings at Novorossisk were set on fire.

A fire which started in the freight sheds of the Central Railway Station (Stazion di Termini) Rome, Italy, destroyed the main building and caused a loss estimated at $1,000,000 or more.

A new Cabinet has been formed at The Hague, with Prof. Van Hamel as Prime Minister. Jonkherr Van Swinderen, at present Minister at Washington, D. C., is Minister of Foreign Affairs.

News received from Port Arthur says that the former Russian cruiser Bayan would soon start from that place under tow for Japan.

The Venezuelan Federal Court of Cassation gave final judgment in the matter of proceedings against the French Cable Company, confirming the dissolution of the Government's contract with the corporation.

A coalition ministry has been formed with Herr Lundeburg, Vice-President of the first chamber of the Riksdag and chairman of the special committee on negotiations with Norway, as Premier.

The first instalments of a fund raised among the officiers and soldiers in the field to rebuild the navy, subscriptions having been opened after the battle of the Sea of Japan, have been received in St. Petersburg, Russia.

Professor Hollander, special agent of President Roosevelt, said the claims against Santo Domingo are excessive. He estimated the foreign debt at $10,000,000.

King Oscar of Sweden, seeking rest and health, issued a proclamation at Stockholm, to the Swedish nation thanking it for its support.

Three shots were fired without effect at M. Stolypin, Governor of Saratoff Province, in Russia. Cossacks killed thirty strikers in the Caucasus, and the disorders in Ekaterinoslav are spreading.

AMERICA'S BRIGHTEST WOMAN.

Mary E. Lease Feels It Her Duty to Recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mary E. Lease, formerly political leader and orator of Kansas, now author and lecturer—the only woman ever voted on for United States Senator, writes:

"Dear Sirs—As many of my friends have used Doan's Kidney Pills and have been cured of bladder and kidney troubles, I feel it my duty to recommend the medicine to those who suffer from such diseases. From personal experience I thoroughly endorse your remedy, and am glad of an opportunity for saying so. Yours truly, (Signed)

MARY ELIZABETH LEASE.

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers. Price, 50 cents per box.

What London Eats.

The supply of meat in the Smithfield market during 1904 amounted to the little matter of 410,519 tons, of which the sum of 1,556 tons were condemned. In fact, Dr. Collingridge, the medical officer, made himself unusually busy during the past year. Out of a single consignment of rabbits from Australia he threw out 10,334 as a little spoiled. In another case a box invoiced as rabbits was found to contain immature kids. They were consigned from the Netherlands, and might better have been at school.

As for fish, 243,806 tons of them were delivered at Billingsgate. Of this amount 1,098 tons were condemned. In the matter of milk Dr. Collingridge reports that one in every thirteen samples was either impoverished or adulterated, or both. He blames the foreign free trader for this state of affairs. From 10,000 to 15,000 oysters are sold daily in London during the season. Last year no illness attributed to them was reported.

The Danger Spot in India.

It seems rather strange that at the very time Russia appears utterly exhausted by a disastrous war the British empire should be carefully and systematically strengthening its defenses in India. That it has been always Russia's ambition to reach the open sea through the conquest of India is a fact too well known to be even called into question. That her defeat at the hands of Japan has in any way altered that determination is not at all probable; on the contrary, the failure to secure the coveted ports in far east Asia has probably increased the desire to secure them elsewhere, either on the peninsula of India or in the Persian gulf. An attempt in either direction England would be compelled, in self-defense, to oppose.

Bad Ears Cause Drowning.

In drowning accidents where expert swimmers suddenly lose all control of their powers, the usual explanation of cramps is beginning to be looked upon as insufficient. It has been noticed that persons having disease of the middle ear, who have already shown symptoms of vertigo, are especially liable to such accidents, and as the semi-circular canals are the organs of direction, it is suggested that even a slight hemorrhage in that delicate structure from a blow by the waves would result in utter helplessness. Persons with ears not perfectly sound are therefore warned against swimming in rough water.

A Modern Solomon's Temple.

Prince Luca Esterhazy, who has enormous possessions in Transylvania, is about to erect a church on his estates which will be a model of King Solomon's temple. Count Esterhazy is a mystic, almost a recluse, and has for years been engaged in the study of ancient oriental architecture. He made a special study of the Biblical account of the building of Solomon's temple, and while he does not intend so lavish expenditure on cedar, gold and ivory as marked the venture of the Hebrew king, his church will be an exact copy of the original.

Mr. Anthony Hope has written a book, which is to be published in September. In "A Servant of the Public," as it is entitled, he studies the relations between the "Philistine" and the "artist," showing in the life of a famous actress and her friends how the occupation of the stage and temperament have their necessary effect on the life and action. It is said that the "author endeavors to exhibit all sides and takes none."

Big Sawdust Pile.

At Cheboygan, Mich., is the largest sawdust pile in the world. It is a hill, 1,080 feet long, 875 feet wide, 3,625 feet in circumference, ranges from 20 to 50 feet in height and covers twelve acres. It is the accumulation of one lumber company since 1877.

It is said that more than 4,000 lives, 200 ships and $100,000,000 have been expended at various times in efforts to reach the North pole. On this computation, should the goal ever be achieved, every acre of ground in the Arctic region will have been bought and paid for at better than market rates.

"Tama Jim" Wilson.

"Tama Jim" is the name by which James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, is known in the middle west. It was "Sunset" Cox, famous in congress a generation ago, who gave this sobriquet to the Iowa statesman. Wilson was a new member of congress then, and to distinguish him from another and better known James Wilson in the same body, who hailed from the Buckeye State, Cox called the new man "Tama Jim" Wilson, Tama being the name of the county in which Wilson lived. Wilson is the only cabinet member except Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock who thus far has served continuously through the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations up to the present. Born in Scotland seventy years ago, he has been by turns school master, farmer, legislator, congressman, professor in an agricultural college and fourth secretary of agriculture. In his pedagogic days he was so poor that he had to go barefoot in summer, but he managed to save enough to start the purchase of a farm, which he worked with such intelligence that it brought him a comfortable fortune.

Wonderful Litts Family.

The last of the Litts family, one of the most remarkable in New York, has gone with the passing away of Thomas, who died in Monticello. He died suddenly from the effects of the extreme heat while at work in a field near his home. He was 80 years of age, and for the last half century had been one of the most commanding and prominent figures in Sullivan county because of his size and wonderful strength. He was sergeant in the One Hundred and Forty-third regiment of New York Volunteers, and was the strongest man in the regiment. Every member of the family of ten—five males and five females—was as strong as a giant, and the wonderful feats of strength performed by them won for them almost national fame. Thomas Litts, while attending the old-time logging and haying bees, on different occasions has been known to pick up a barrel of cider and drink from the bunghole. A brother carried a barrel of pork on his back a mile without resting on a wager, the pork being the wager.

Honoring Vermont Heroes.

In view of the honors now being paid to John Paul Jones it may be interesting to note that two other revolutionary worthies are be honored the present week. Vermont is to honor one of her favorite sons, Ethan Allen, the leader of the Grenn Mountain boys and the hero of Ticonderoga, and a daughter, Ann Story. Mrs. Story took the place of her husband, a pioneer who penetrated the then wilderness of Vermont to make a home for his family, and was killed in an accident. Mrs. Story took his place, defied Indians and assisted as a patriot in running down and capturing a horde of Tory spies in revolutionary times. She made her home for a time in a cave, deftly dug out on the bank of Otter creek. The Colonial Dames are to erect a monument to her at Rutland. Allen's memory is to be honored by a memorial tower, at whose dedication are to be present among other notables Vice-President Fairbanks and Ethan Allen Hitchcock, secretary of the interior.

FITS permanently cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free Dr R H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

The guinea was first coined in Charles II.'s reign.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, soften the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c. a bottle.

Greenland now has nearly 12,900 inhabitants.

Piso's Cure cannot be too highly spoken of as a cough cure.—J. W. O'BRIEN, 322 Third Avenue, N., Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6, 1900.

Glass containing manganese is slowly turned violet by sunlight.

H. H. GREEN'S SONS, of Atlanta, Ga., are the only successful Dropsy Specialists in the world. See their liberal offer in advertisement in another column of this paper.

The name "calomel" means "beautiful black."

NO SLEEP FOR MOTHER

Baby Covered With Sores and Scaled—Could Not Tell What She Looked Like—Marvelous Cure by Cuticura.

"At four months old my baby's face and body were so covered with sores and large scales you could not tell what she looked like. No child ever had a worse case. Her face was being eaten away, and even her finger nails fell off. It itched so she could not sleep, and for many weary nights we could get no rest. At last we got Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The sores began to heal at once, and she could sleep at night, and in one month she had not one sore on her face or body.—Mrs. Mary Sanders, 709 Spring St., Camden, N. J."

Edgar Wallace, of London, set a trap in his room for a mouse. After he had gone to sleep the trap snapped and he awoke to find the room rapidly filling with gas from a burner that he had left half turned on. He turned off the gas and then opened the trap and released the mouse—a life for a life.

Miss Maggie J. Waltz, of Calumet, Mich., is editing the only Finnish publication for women in this country. She is greatly interested in benefiting the condition of the women in the United States.

Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for uterine trouble some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength.

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject, and give it honest endorsement."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhœa, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that bearing-down feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. No living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well.

Some of the people who subscribe to unpublished editions de luxe refuse to endorse the idea that publicity is the remedy for all social imperfections.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir.

THE BEST FAMILY MEDICINE

For Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Colic, Dizziness, Headache and anything caused by a disordered Liver. Removes

"That Drowsy Feeling"

by putting your digestive organs to work, increasing your appetite, and, in fact, makes you feel like a "NEW MAN."

50c. and $1.00 per Bottle at all Drug Stores.

One Dose Convinces.

WANTED—Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not living with any tribe, (2) of men who were drafted in Kentucky, (3) of mothers of soldiers who have been denied pension on account of their remarriage, (4) of men who served in the Federal army, or (5) the nearest kin of such soldiers or sailors, now deceased. NATHAN BICKFORD, Attorney, Washington, D. C.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Am. 33, 1905.

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO., 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

CONCENTRATED

Crab Orchard Water...

TRADE MARK.

A SPECIFIC FOR

3 DYSPEPSIA, SICK HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION. 3

The three "Ills" that make life a burden. Nature's great remedy. In use for almost a century. Sold by all druggists.

CRAB ORCHARD WATER CO., Louisville, Ky.

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.

NEW ORLEANS.

Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. The facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.

Avery & Company

SUCCESSORS TO AVERY & McMILLAN, 51-53 South Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga.

—ALL KINDS OF—

MACHINERY.

Reliable Frick Engines, Boilers, all Sizes. Wheat Separators.

BEST IMPROVED SAW MILL ON EARTH. Large Engines and Boilers supplied promptly. Shingle Mills, Corn Mills, Circular Saws, Saw Teeth, Patent Dogs, Steam Governors, Full line Engines & Mill Supplies. Send for free Catalogue.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and local soreness, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh.

Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES.

For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box. Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.

THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.

There is absolutely no other school for Women and Girls in the South, if anywhere, offering extensive a curriculum thus the greatest benefits at the smallest outlay. Most approved modern improvements—Electric Lights, Hot Water heating, Complete outfit of Bath-rooms, etc., etc. Grounds, of forty acres, by universal consensus, the most uniquely beautiful School Grounds in America. Offers to the ambitious thorough preparation for the great universities. Col. Th. Smith, A. M., Pres. [Atlan. Const.

Dropsy CURED Gives Quick Relief. Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

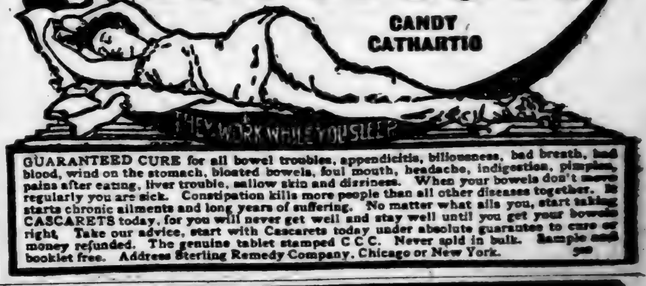
THERE IS MONEY IN THE CORN STALK. Write for free catalog. I. A. Madden, Atlanta, Ga.

ARE YOU SICK? IS IT CHILLS? Then you need something that YOU KNOW WILL CURE. TAKE OXIDINE. Every Bottle is Guaranteed. Made in Regular and Tasteless Forms. Manufactured by PATTON-WORSHAM DRUG CO., Price 50c. For sale by all Druggists. Dallas, Tex. and Memphis, Tenn.

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC



GUARANTEED CURE for all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, bloated bowels, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow skin and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. It starts chronic ailments and long years of suffering. No matter what ails you, start taking CASCARETS today, for you will never get well and stay well until you get your bowels right. Take our advice, start with Cascarets today under absolute guarantee to cure or money refunded. The genuine tablet stamped C C C. Never sold in bulk. Sample and booklet free. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

YELLOW FEVER NEWS.

The Latest Reports From the Infected District.

New Orleans, La.—Official report to 6 p. m. on Tuesday:

New cases, 62. Total to date, 1,070. Deaths, 6. Total, 172. New foci, 19. Total to date, 229. Number of cases under treatment, 384.

Tuesday's record shows that there is beginning to be an improvement in the situation. With only sixty-two new cases found by the almost perfect system which is now in force, there is every reason to believe that the progress of the disease has been checked, and its eradication is only a question of a few weeks. Of the six deaths only one was an Italian. Among the others were J. O. Daspit, a prominent young lawyer, and Pierre Aldai, a well-known musician, at one time leader of the French opera house orchestra. Aldai, however, was in destitute circumstances, and was buried by the city. He was found in a dying condition.

One-third Are Italians.

Only a third of the new cases Tuesday are Italians. As a result of the watch being kept on the situation in Algiers, which was reported as clear of fever, two days ago, one case was found there, but it is traced to this side of the river, and is not secondary infection from either of the two cases previously reported there.

List of Outside Cases.

The state board of health has compiled a list of cases and deaths in the state outside of New Orleans, and these show to date 129 cases and 24 deaths.

Dr. Juan Guiteras, of the Cuban board of health, arrived here Tuesday and spent most of the time taking a general view of the situation. He says the disease has obtained a strong foothold here and heroic efforts will have to be exerted. He commends what has been done. He proposes to spend much of his time at the Emergency hospital making observations.

The state has contributed $1,000 toward the Patterson emergency fund.

Thirty-five tons of sulphur donated to the marine hospital service Tuesday will be distributed among the poorer classes of the population for a general fumigation of premises.

Dr. Guiteras Goes Over City.

The arrival of Dr. Guiteras, the Cuban yellow fever expert, and his tour of the seat of the worst infection, was the most interesting feature of the yellow fever situation Tuesday.

He went immediately to the office of the marine hospital service for an interview with Surgeon White. Dr. White went at length into the conditions prevailing and described the progress of the campaign, saying that there was popular acceptance of the mosquito theory and that all interests were co-operating in the efforts to control and if possible to eradicate the disease.

Dr. Guiteras saw also the modern rubber tired and screened emergency ambulance which had been fitted up for the service. Dr. Guiteras was very favorably impressed with the equipment of the hospital and praised the excellence of its management.

The situation Tuesday again showed an improvement, both as to new cases and deaths, considering the totals of last week, and while the marine hospital officials are unwilling to be quoted now they are known to entertain hopeful views.

A draft for $25,000 was received Tuesday at the office of the collector of the port to be put at the disposal of the marine hospital service, which is bearing some proportion of the heavy expense which is involved in the effort to eliminate the fever. Meantime the citizens' committee is prosecuting its canvass for funds and there is a steady appreciation of the fund. All the money needed is available to carry on the work even at its present high pressure for several weeks to come, but there is a resolute determination to increase the fund to such an extent that the work may never have to halt for want of money to carry it on.

Next Sunday has been designated as a day for general disinfection. Dr. Warren issued a statement in which he said that the screening and oiling that had been done will destroy the chance of new broods of mosquitoes hatching.

Surgeon White's forces went to work Monday on the reorganized plan, all the fumigating and screening being done from the district headquarters instead of the central headquarters as heretofore.

Assistant Surgeons Mullans and Green reported for duty Monday. Surgeon Sporling, of the navy, arrived here Monday to look after the interests of the navy men who are at the naval stations.

Situation Is Encouraging.

Surgeon Guiteras returned Monday night from Patterson, where he has been in charge of the fumigation and screening and organizing the community to fight the infection. He reports the situation there as encouraging, and the people thoroughly alive to the necessity of the work mapped out by him.

Assistant Surgeon Berry is on the road to recovery.

Bulk From Below Canal Street.

Partly as a result of left over cases from Sunday and partly from the fact that the inspectors were able to put in a full day's work there was again a large number of new cases of yellow fever reported Monday, the bulk, as before, coming from below Canal street. That section is now very generally infected, though there are some areas of it which have thus far entirely escaped.

Slow progress is made by the disease in what is known as the American portion of the city and with few exceptions the cases there are isolated.

The marine hospital service will take general supervision of the work of removing filth and trash from streets and houses, the intention being to put the city generally in a sanitary condition. While it is contended that yellow fever is not, as was formerly supposed, a filth disease, experience here is that people who live in filth and in insanitary surroundings are much more likely to have a fatal termination of the disease when they contract it than are those who live in the midst of a better environment.

The campaign of prosecution of those who have not paid obedience to the anti-mosquito ordinance is to be participated in by the federal authorities, the city board of health, the police and the various ward committees. Sweeping orders have been issued by Inspector Whitaker to the police to prosecute all landlords and agents who fail to screen their cisterns.

Surgeon White on Sunday made a change in his organization, by which he hopes to accomplish results much quicker. The fumigation and screening work was all done by a central department under Dr. Gessner, which sent squads out on notification of cases by physicians. Sunday afternoon Dr. White assembled all of his subordinates in conference and decided to place the screening and fumigation work under the several district headquarters. Dr. Gessner will be given charge of one of the districts.

Corput Investigates.

Assistant Surgeon Corput has just concluded a thorough investigation of conditions in Algiers, that part of New Orleans on the west bank of the Mississippi river. There had been two cases in Algiers since the outbreak of fever and Dr. White determined to ascertain by a house to house canvass if there had been any spread from them. Dr. Corput reported Sunday that he had found not a single suspicious case, which indicates that the prompt steps taken to screen and fumigate the original cases have been effective in preventing a spread.

Dr. White says that if he could learn of every case in the city and apply the proper methods immediately he is confident that he could stamp out the disease here in a short time. The great cause for the spread has been the concealment of cases and the change of residence of people who have been infected. Dozens of cases are on record which show conclusively that the people had moved away from a house where infection had existed. This Dr. White proposes to stop, and while no drastic measures are being taken, he is enforcing his authority. The effectiveness of the district headquarters, which are making close investigations of the seventeen districts, is responsible for a large number of the new cases which have been reported during the last few days, and as the efficiency of that force increases, an increase in the number of cases daily can be expected. Physicians who have failed to report cases that are discovered are given an opportunity to correct their omission, but a second offense will result in prosecution under the law. This has also brought out a large number of cases that were under cover.

First Death at Patterson.

Patterson, which is the largest center of infection outside of the city, reported three new cases Sunday and the first death. The victim is a young lady. She died Sunday morning and this has naturally depressed the spirits of the people. They have had thirty-nine cases there so far. They have opened an emergency hospital which now has seven patients.

At Bon Ami, in Calcasieu parish, there is now only one case of yellow fever, with no new cases and no suspicious cases.

At the detention camp near Tallulah, in Madison parish, there are two cases, one of which is in a serious condition.

State Health Officer Sanders, of Alabama, and Quarantine Officer Moore, of Mobile, are making an inspection of the Mississippi coast towns for the purpose of determining whether it would be wise to lift the Alabama embargo against the Mississippi coast. They reached Gulfport Sunday night without having struck any suspicious illness at any point visited up to that time.

Assistant Surgeon H. G. Egbert reported to Dr. White Sunday and Assistant Surgeons Mullans and Green are expected.

Assistant Surgeon Berry has passed the crisis in his attack of fever and is now on the mend.

While the Italians are gradually becoming pacified and amenable to reason, they are still inclined to run away, and to conceal illness which develops in their families. They are not admitted to most of the localities in Louisiana, no matter how many health certificates they have. Some of the parish boards of health have formally excluded them. The following notice received at the state board of health office is a sample:

Convent Bars Italians.

Convent, La., St. James Parish—By resolution of our board we have concluded to exclude all Italians and Syrians from entering into St. James parish, with or without health certificates or detention camp certificates, and baggage properly fumigated and stamped."

In the city as soon as an Italian family appears in a neighborhood the people notify the police, who in turn notify the marine hospital service and an inspector is immediately sent to make inquiries and arrange to have them watched.

While the mortality rate in the early stages of the visitation indicated that the type of yellow fever was particularly malignant, it is now apparent that it is not much worse than the fever in 1897. The death rate according to the official record, which shows 963 cases and 154 deaths, is just 16 per cent.

During the last two weeks in July the death rate appeared to be 25 or 30 per cent. The falling off is due to two things. One is that naerly all the cases are being reported now and the other is that many of the Italians are being given proper care and treatment. Yellow fever requires careful nursing and very little medicine and absolute abstention from solid food for a week or more. A large proportion of the deaths are due to patients who have practically recovered indulging in solid food before the stomach is prepared for it. One case occurred Sunday. An Italian had been discharged from the emergency hospital as cured and warned to abstain from solid food for several days. He went off, but yielded to his hunger and was found dead a few hours after in a garret.

Will Continue Salaries.

Though the wholesale grocery and other houses here have suffered severely by the quarantines, which have closed many towns to them, it is announced that they have decided to reduce no salaries nor to cut down their forces. Drummers in the country who are unable to move from place to place have been notified that they will continue on the salary lists.

Baton Rouge has decided to honor the certificates of the marine hospital service. Doctors and physicians of Nachidoches have addressed the parish and municipal health boards and asked them to obey the proclamation of the state board of health. Towns in St. Andry parish are also falling into line, and the Southern Pacific is beginning to resume service to that parish.

Dr. Tichenor and the yellow fever nurses sent from here are at Bon Ami, and confidence is being restored there. Conditions are not as bad as they were expected to be found. There have been no new cases, and the two cases under treatment have been segregated and screened.

Guilty of Obstructing Highway.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—In the county court at Ringgold, Ga., Friday Miss Alice MacGowan and Mrs. Grace MacGowan Cooke, well-known literary workers, were found guilty of obstructing a public highway.

The court ordered the jury to bring in a verdict of guilty, but at the same time ordered that no sentence be passed until after the supreme court had passed on the case, as the two laws under which the ladies were indicted seemed both obsolete and invalid. An appeal was immediately taken.

Miss MacGowan and her sister, Mrs. Cooke, erected a fence across what is known as a third-class country road which passed through their fine summer place in North Georgia. Country people living nearby immediately objected, and indictments followed.

Wilhite Makes Assignment.

Cullman, Ala.—W. O. Wilhite, dealer in general merchandise, has made an assignment to J. B. Brown and F. E. St. John for the benefit of his creditors. The amount of the indebtedness and the names of his creditors could not be learned.

Church Dedication.

Martin, Tenn.—The new M. E. church here will be dedicated Sunday, Aug. 27, by Bishop W. A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga. The church was erected in 1896 at a cost of $10,000 and is one of the prettest buildings in this section of the state.

Candidate for Governor.

Memphis, Tenn.—Congressman M. R. Patterson has announced his candidacy for Governor of Tennessee.

Negro Killed Wife.

Montgomery, Ala.—Deputy Sheriffs and policemen of Montgomery are looking for George West, a negro, who cut his wife to death on the plantation of R. R. Reynolds at Tharin Sunday night.

Sheriff W. R. Waller was advised Monday of the tragedy in a letter from Mr. Reynolds, who said that immediately after killing the woman West made his escape.

Blountsville, Ala.—Notwithstanding the threatening weather, the town was filled with people. It was the "Farmers' Annual Jubilee," and the tillers of the soil of this and adjacent counties were here in vast numbers.

Hon. O. W. Underwood delivered a strong address, covering a number of vital points on Southern Agriculture, laying great stress on Blount county's future prospects as a fruit growing section. The address was full of wisdom and practical detail.

SCORES BURIED IN DEBRIS

Department Store of John G. Myers Co, of Albany, N Y., Collapses.

OVER 200 IN THE BUILDING

Actual Number of Dead and Injured Unknown — Work of Rescue Progressed Rapidly Immediately After the Accident—Twenty-five Doctors Kept Busy Relieving the Sufferings of the Hurt.

Albany, N. Y.—The roof and four floors of the big department store of the John G. Myers Company fell with a crash at 8.45 o'clock in the morning, three-quarters of an hour after the store opened for business, and buried scores of employes in the ruins.

The store had been undergoing alterations. Following a short, fierce rain, the whole centre and back of the roof and all floors above the ground floor fell with a crash, carrying everything in their descent and leaving the sky for a roof.

Those employes who were in the first seventy-feet of the store on the front on Pearl street escaped, as the roof and floors in that section of the big building did not collapse. The destruction was swift and fearful and occurred in a section of the building where there were scores of employes.

The number of bodies in the ruins could not be arrived at, even by guess, with any degreee of certainty. The rescuers worked like beavers and carts were brought into service to drag from the streets the debris carried from the pile, 100 feet square, in the centre of the store floor. The pieces of wreckage were passed along a human chain from the scene of the disaster to the outside.

Some of the male employes received severe injuries because they rushed down the fire escapes and deserted the girls pinned in the wreckage without making any attempt at rescue. This was not true of all the male clerks, by any means, and several of them worked gallantly to help their unfortunate sisters. Nevertheless, one of the floorwalkers said: "Well, I have a fine opinion of some of the men employed in this place."

Robert M. Chalmers, one of the members of the firm, was caught on one of the upper floors and carried down with the debris. His position was discovered early and when rescued it was found he had escaped with a broken leg and a bruised body.

The police had serious difficulty in handling the crowds, and the work of rescue was materially interfered with in consequence. The whole city seemed to have flocked to the scene of the disaster, and business generally was suspended. Twenty-five doctors and the four ambulances which the city boasts of were taxed to their utmost, and trucks and cots from nearby furniture stores were freely offered in the work of rescue.

Rumors of all sorts regarding the number of dead were current.

The employes who escaped were so scattered that nowhere near a definite idea could be secured as to the number buried under the fallen walls. It was variously estimated.

Those who were pinned beneath the debris and who could be seen by the rescuers evinced brave spirits.

One of the girls said after the rescuers had sawed a large beam which rested on her stomach: "I'm all right; never mind me; there are others in there; get them out. I can talk. They can't." Many got out of the place by the James street fire escapes.

All of the stores on the block were turned into emergency hospitals, where the injured awaited transportation to the hospitals.

Fortunately fire did not break out, and there were no barriers to the work of speedy rescue. At 11.30 o'clock upward of fifty employes had been taken out, the most seriously injured being a woman with a broken back. Half of them were taken to the hospitals and the others to their homes. The dead had not been reached yet. Every assistance was offered in the work of clearing away the ruins.

As usual in department stores, two-thirds of the 250 employes are women.

The news of the disaster spread through the city rapidly, and the scene of the catastrophe was quickly swarming with anxious fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters having relatives working in the store. The police lines, however, were rigidly enforced, and all efforts were devoted to carrying the debris off the back main floor to the streets, in order that those caught in the wreck might be saved alive.

A score of clergymen hastened to the scene and every one had willing hands to aid in the work of rescue.

The whole centre and James street side of the big building from the roof to the main floor is a wreck.

The Pearl street or former main building seemed to have escaped the collapse. The Pearl street building had been widened and deepened as the business of the concern grew, and it would appear as though the back additions had collapsed.

There were few customers in the store, owing to the early hour.

The weak underpinning of the floors which were put in while the alterations were going on was responsible for the collapse.

The work of rescue was slow. Every one seemed stunned. The city authorities, however, were early on the spot. The groans of buried employes could be heard distinctly, and a number were in sight, but were pinned down in the wreckage.

CASSINI WITH THE CZAR.

Former Ambassador to the U. S. Acting as Advisor to Crown.

St. Petersburg, Russia.—Count Cassini, former Ambassador to the United States, arrived here. He will remain in St. Petersburg during the peace negotiations, as his knowledge of the Eastern situation and his familiarity with America particularly fit him to act in an advisory capacity to the Government while the negotiations are progressing.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

Killed on Trestle.

Jasper, Ala.—S. K. Hobgood, of Springfield, Mo., met a horrible death while engaged at work on the Frisco railroad trestle one mile west of Cordova Monday afternoon. The accident occurred while a freight train was passing over the trestle, which is undergoing repairs.

The rope by which a heavy piece of iron was suspended gave way and the iron struck Mr. Hobgood on the head, producing instant death. The deceased was 45 years of age and leaves a widow and two children.

Birmingham's Quarantine Lifted.

Montgomery, Ala.—The action of Birmingham in raising the quarantine against Montgomery is being commended on every side here. This means that Montgomerians can go anywhere they want to now, without being questioned by quarantine officers, as to whether or not they have been in Montgomery in the past ten days. The people here were not at all pleased with the action of Birmingham in keeping on the quarantine so long. They realized, however, the importance of a quarantine, but did not think Montgomery should have been quarantined when there was only one imported case here.

Would Build New Road.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—A special committee consisting of J. A. Montgomery, J. M. Dewberry, A. C. Howze and George E. Harrison appeared before the board of county commissioners Monday afternoon to submit a proposition looking to the construction of an interurban railroad between Tuscaloosa and Birmingham. The committee, representing a company formed for this project, proposed to macadamize the old Huntsville road if the commissioners would grant a right of way for the railroad along this line. The board refused to accept this offer, but it is probable that some agreement will be reached. The company offering to build the road is said to be composed of northern capitalists.

A Female Expert Log Roller.

Prattville, Ala.—This (Autauga) county boasts of the only woman who owns her own team and drives a log dray, regularly hauling logs for a sawmill near this place. Miss Wood is about seventeen years of age and is a full "hand" in eeping Elliott's sawmill logs to saw. She does not seem to mind the work and handles the team with great ease. It is also a fact she loads her own dray with the logs alone. It is said she can load a dray with logs as quick as any man. She does not have to haul logs. She does it from choice.

Notice No. 26043.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz: Dalee Millar, Homestead Entry No. 35550, for the W. 1-2 of N. E. 1-4, E. 1-2 of N. W. 1-4, Section 10, Tp. 23 N. of R. 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Rebecca J. Ariedge, of Jemison, Ala.; C. Buck Ariedge, of Jemison, Ala.; James Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala., Thomas Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

Automobilist (recovering from injury)—Isn't that a pretty stiff bill, doctor? Surgeon—You don't suppose I'm going to let the repair men do all the getting rich out of this business, do you?—Chicago Tribune.

"What can a fellow do when he gets to the end of his rope?" murmured the disappointed citizen. "Throw the cigar away and light a fresh one," suggested the idiotic citizen cheerfully.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CHILDRESS CEMETERY.

All interested in the old Childress grave yard are asked to meet there the Wednesday after the second Sunday in August (16th) and help clean up and repair the lots.

tf

Commercial Club OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOE

Thorsby Wine Co.
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props.

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise
Fine Line of Shoes.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wisham
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

T

VOL III.

YELLOW FEVER NEWS.

The Latest Reports From the Infected District.

New Orleans, La.—The fever situation at 6 p. m. Tuesday was as follows: New cases, 57; total cases to date, 1,503; deaths today, 9; total deaths to date, 214; new foci, 21; total foci to date, 342; cases under treatment, 319.

With the fever checked in the city and plans under way to prevent further reinfection from the country, the general situation is still encouraging. Of the new foci eight are above Canal street. One is in Rosa Park, a fashionable residence park opening into Charles avenue, a well-known citizen and a member of Governor Blanchard's staff being the victim. Another case is at a boys' college far down town, one of the employes being stricken. Rev. Father Aveilhe, pastor of St. Maurice church, is another patient reported today. Of the deaths today only one occurred up town, and he was a clerk who had been living here some months.

Serious Situation Outside City.

The news from outside the city shows the continuous seriousness of the situation from that point of view. Definite information was received today from Dr. J. A. Deveron, the state board physician, sent to Leeville at the mouth of Bayou LaFourche, a few days ago. His report shows that the first news received from there was not exaggerated. During two days of work there he found the following:

Sixty-nine positive cases of fever; forty-three suspicious cases, and 145 cases of dengue. He adds:

"There are about 300 houses and families here, and I do not think there is a single house here which has not one or more cases of sickness. The people are completely distracted, and seem to have lost ambition to work. They are completely demoralized."

He asks for two more doctors and three more nurses, as the situation is beyond the scope of one man. He reports two more deaths since his arrival.

Patterson reports fifteen new cases and no deaths. St. Tammany parish reports a positive case on the road between Lewisburg and Mandeville, which came from New Orleans.

Hanson City reports six new cases.

Kenner reports one new case.

There was one death on Elizabeth plantation in Iberville.

Sarpy plantation reports two new cases.

St. Bose, in St. Charles parish, has two cases and one is dead.

Still Greatly Encouraged.

The fact that there was little change Tuesday from the record for several days past was accepted by the federal authorities as confirming the impressions of the encouraging nature of the yellow fever situation. Every visitation that New Orleans has had August and September have been the months of most frightful mortality, August producing a death list of 5,1[illegible] in 1853 and September a death list of 3,000 in 1878.

The fever fighters, therefore, consider that if the disease is held in check at the very period when it ought to be on an ascending scale of virulence, and when both the cases and deaths should be leaping to alarming figures, there is no reason why they should reserve opinions that the worst is over.

An analysis of the figures shows that there is no check to the hopeful feelings which have been produced by the small reports for the past few days. There has been a steady and slow diminution of the cases under treatment. The number of foci is not reading, for it equals the number of cases under treatment. A great many of these foci have been absolutely wiped out, but they still figure in the records and represent every spot in the city where a case of fever has developed.

Of the new points of infection Monday, five are up town, ten down town and one in Algiers, across the river. Of the names on the list there are very few of any prominence. One case was taken off the steamer Excelsior, which arrived from Havana Thursday and left Saturday, arriving at Havana this morning. The victim was a sailor, and was taken to the marine hospital where his case was diagnosed as yellow fever. According to the accepted period of incubation, the man could not have contracted the disease in New Orleans, if he was on the boat when she made her last trip. Of the deaths, two took place in the Marine hospital and three in the Emergency hospital. All but one of the cases were down town. One of the deaths was the gardener of the French consul on St. Ann street, where there had been half a dozen cases and a death previously.

, Alaba
ss Directory.
VE,
Commercial Cl
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIA
information furnished to p
who desire to locate in the
A. M. Johnso
tore
Groceries and Delicate
J. J. STANL
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE.
MRS. MARY R. RASBER
General Merchandise
G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, To
and Cigars.
W. N HORNSB
General Merchandise.
J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Im
ments and "FLORENC
Wagons in stock at all
times.
J. K. ORR SHO
Thorsby Wine
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Pro
A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and To Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACI
E. H. Adams
General Merchandi
Fine Line of Shoes.
J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.
Mrs. M. E. Wish
Millinery and Notions
The Thorsby In
G. C. Michelson, Pro
Good Beds and Meals.
A Langville & S
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUGGI
C. L. Forsma
Brick Yard.
J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL III. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 24 1905 NO. 22

Judge of Probate

YELLOW FEVER NEWS.

Latest Reports From the Infected District.

Orleans, La.—The fever situa- at 6 p. m. Tuesday was as fol- New cases, 57; total cases to 1,205; deaths today, 9; total to date, 214; new foci, 21; to- foci to date, 342; cases under ment, 319.

the fever checked in the city plans under way to prevent fur- reinfection from the country, the situation is still encouraging new foci eight are above Canal One is in Rosa Park, a fash- residence park opening into Charles avenue, a well-known citi- and a member of Governor Heard's staff being the victim. other case is at a boys' college far town, one of the employes being Rev. Father Aveilhe, pastor St. Maurice church, is another pa- reported today. Of the deaths one occurred up town, and he a clerk who had been living here months.

Serious Situation Outside City.

The news from outside the city as to the continuous seriousness of situation from that point of view- late information was received from Dr. J. A. Deveron, the board physician, sent to Leeville the mouth of Bayou LaFourche, a days ago. His report shows that dire news received from there not exaggerated. During two of work there he found the fol- lowing:

Forty-nine positive cases of fever; fifty-three suspicious cases, and 145 cases of dengue. He adds:

"There are about 300 houses and cabins here, and I do not think there is a single house here which has not one or more cases of sickness. The people are completely distracted. They seem to have lost ambition to live. They are completely demoral- ized."

He asks for two more doctors and three more nurses, as the situation is beyond the scope of one man. He reports two more deaths since his ar- rival.

Patterson reports fifteen new cases and no deaths. St. Tammany parish has a positive case on the road between Lewisburg and Mandeville, which came from New Orleans.

Gibson City reports six new cases. Bunkie reports one new case. There was one death on Elizabeth plantation in Iberville.

Kemp plantation reports two new cases.

At Bose, in St. Charles parish, has seven cases and one is dead.

Still Greatly Encouraged.

The fact that there was little change Tuesday from the record for several days past was accepted by the local authorities as confirming their impressions of the encouraging nature of the yellow fever situation. In every visitation that New Orleans has had August and September have been the months of most frightful mortality, the first producing a death list of 5,133 in 1853 and September a death list of 4,150 in 1878.

The fever fighters, therefore, consider that if the disease is held in check at the very period when it seems to be on an ascending scale of virulence, and when both the cases and deaths should be leaping to alarming figures, there is no reason why they should reserve opinions that the worst is over.

An analysis of the figures shows that there is no check to the hopeful things which have been produced by the small reports for the past few days. There has been a steady but gradual diminution of the cases under treatment. The number of foci is misleading, for it equals the number of cases under treatment. A great many of these foci have been absolutely wiped out, but they still figure in the reports and represent every spot in the city where a case of fever has developed.

Of the new points of infection today, five are up town, ten down town and one in Algiers, across the river. Of the names on the list there are very few of any prominence. One case was taken off the steamship Seneca, which arrived from Havana Thursday and left Saturday, arriving at Havana this morning. The man was a sailor, and was taken to the Marine hospital, where his case was diagnosed as yellow fever Monday. According to the accepted period of incubation, the man could not possibly have contracted the disease in New Orleans, if he was on the ship when she made her last trip. Of the cases, two took place in the Marine hospital and three in the Emergency hospital. All but one of the others were down town. One of the deaths was the gardener of the French asylum on St. Ann street, where there have been half a dozen cases, and one death previously.

Surgeon White Hopeful of Winning.

Surgeon White Monday night was willing to give expression to the feeling of hope he has of winning out in the fight. He said:

"I feel very much encouraged over the situation, for I believe that practically all of the cases are being reported now, and we are able to handle them. The low death rate is manifest, and also is a good sign."

Dr. Max Landry, who has been working as inspector in the infected district, was laid up Monday with a suspicious case of fever, but it has not been diagnosed as yellow.

The situation outside of the city is not so encouraging, judging from the reports which came in tonight. Surgeon Guiteras made an inspection of the Riverside plantation in St. Mary parish, and his report reads:

"One hundred and fifty inhabitants in infected barracks. Estimated 100 have had fever. Of these under treatment fifty-five. Situation admits of few sanitary expedients until material is exhausted. Proper measures taken to avoid infection of the localities around."

Hanson City, in Jefferson parish, is looming up as a large focus, eight new cases being reported Monday. Monday also reports four cases.

House to House Inspection.

The marine hospital today ordered a house to house inspection in each of the wards to determine the condition of the temporary screen work and to see that all sanitary ordinances are being complied with. The work is daily extending and the force of workers is being constantly enlarged. Reports received today were to the effect that there was wide observance of the order for Sunday disinfection.

Regarded as Very Bright.

Though the number of deaths today from yellow fever exceeded those of the past two days, the total was so small in comparison with years when real epidemics prevailed that the situation continues to be regarded as infinitely more bright and hopeful than a month ago when it first became known that yellow fever had taken a firm grip in one of the most thickly populated sections of the city.

At that time also New Orleans was in a distressingly insanitary condition, and all the conditions seemed favorable for an exceptionally high death rate in August, which always heretofore has been one of the most fatal months of the epidemic season.

Steady Improvement in Conditions.

Dr. White went over some portions of the infected districts today. He saw few features of the work that have not already been described. Reports to his headquarters from the emergency hospital indicate a steady improvement there in conditions due to the fact that the work is so perfectly organized now that with many of the patients who are brought in there is chance to save their lives. At the beginning a considerable proportion of those taken to the hospital arrived there in a moribund condition.

Refugees Must Clear Alabama.

Montgomery, Ala.—State Health Officer Sanders on Friday said in answer to many requests that persons from infected yellow fever districts that are in other states and want to come through Alabama going to other states will not be allowed in the state until their seven days are up, no matter if they do not want to stop within the borders of Alabama.

Rural Station at Milo.

Troy, Ala.—Postmaster Starke has received instructions from the postoffice department at Washington authorizing the establishment on October 16 of the rural mail station at Milo, which was approved by the department at Washington a short time ago, also the establishment of a rural route to be run from said station, which will be known as rural route No. 10.

Orator Chosen Teacher.

Clarksville, Tenn.—John M. P. Thatcher, the winner of the Southern interstate oratorical contest at Monteagle Friday night, has been selected as a member of the faculty of the Howell public schools, of this city. Mr. Thatcher is a graduate of Center College. He will have charge of mathematics and science.

Militiamen Fined.

Centreville, Tenn.—Robert Coats, Eck Thompson, Rupert Deason and Elisha Thompson, members of Company I, Second regiment, were tried before 'Squire Brown on a charge of refusing to attend the encampment at Murfreesboro. They were each fined $10 and costs, amounting to $12.40, but were later relieved of payment.

When Henry Fielding Dickens, the well-known K. C., was 12 years old he wrote and published, single-handed, a magazine entitled Gad's Hill Gazette, which chronicled the movements of his famous father's household.

ITEMS FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

Warm Fight Predicted.

Since it is almost a positive fact that B. B. Comer is going to be in the race for governor, the politicians are looking forward to one of the warmest fights for governor the state has ever witnessed. The race will no doubt be between Lieut.-Go. R. M. Cunningham and B. B. Comer, president of the railroad commission. Others may announce, but the race in the end will narrow down to these two.

The announcement by Mr. Comer that he would run if no one else would run upon the platform which he was elected as railroad commissioner can be taken as an assurance that he is now in the race.

Cunningham has expressed his views upon the question of the regulation of freight rates, and he favors the state taking action to see that the people are not imposed upon. He practically stands for the same thing Mr. Comer does. But Comer has won one fight on this platform, and he is looked upon as the champion of the cause. It seems to be the platform that is the whole thing in the coming campaign. Since both Cunningham and Comer are somewhat on the anti-railroad platform it is rumored that a conservative candidate may come into the field and contest for honors. This man is supposed to be H. S. D. Mallory, of Dallas. Colonel Mallory is as well known as either of the two other candidates, and he would make a good race, but at this time it is not expected he will make the race.

For Lieutenant-Governor.

Several prominent Alabamians are mentioned in connection with this office. Henry B. Gray, of Birmingham, is an avowed candidate, and W. H. Samford, of Troy, and W. W. Quarles, Selma, are mentioned as most likely candidates.

The race for secretary of state seems to be between Frank Julian, of Tuscumbia, and A. C. Sexton, now of this city, but who lives in Cullman.

Brooks Smith, of Hale, and Editor J. R. Rosson, of Cullman, are candidates for state auditor. The name of W. W. Brandon is also connected with the office of state auditor.

Robert Poole, present commissioner of agriculture, is being spoken of in connection with the office of state treasurer.

Major H. C. Gunnels, of Anniston; Joel DuBose and I. W. McAdory, of Jefferson, will no doubt fight it out before the people for I. W. Hill's place as state superintendent of education.

Capt. W. M. Sedden, of Marengo; J. C. Adams, of Dale, and J. M. Thornton, of Talladega, may be candidates for commissioner of agriculture.

Next to the fight for governor the prettiest fight will be over the places of Associate Commissioners Tunstall and Sanders, of the railroad commission, which become vacant soon. Comer intends to have men put on the commission of his way or thinking if there is any possible chance. In a short time announcements for the places will be forthcoming.

Railroad Company Increases Stock.

President H. Austill, of the Mobile and West Alabama Railroad Company, whose headquarters are in Mobile, has filed with the secretary of state an account of the proceedings of that company's stockholders at their September, 1904, meeting, when the capital stock was increased from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000, and the board of directors was authorized to issue as much as $20,000,000 of first mortgage bonds.

These proceedings were had in order to "raise money to complete construction of the railroad" of the company.

Other notices of corporations were filed as follows with the secretary of state:

East Pratt Coal Company, of Birmingham, incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000; incorporators, John T. Morgan, K. B. McConnell and D. S. Acuff.

Rokeby Realty Company, of New Jersey, appointing as its Alabama agent G. J. Perry, and office at Birmingham.

Death of Mr. Rambo.

News was received in Montgomery Friday of the death of Mr. George Rambo, formerly a well-known resident of this city. His friends will be grieved to learn that Mr. Rambo died Monday night in a hospital in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he had been carried for treatment for heart trouble. Until two years ago the years of Mr. Rambo's life had been spent in Montgomery. He was for a number of years a popular railroad conductor and at other times a trusted employe of the Southern Express Company. He was a man of strong character and attractive nature, and he had drawn about him during his life in Montgomery a circle of strong friends.

Tinner Falls Ninety Feet.

C. L. Downer, of Princeton, Ind., a tinner working on the new Exchange Hotel here, fell a distance of ninety feet Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock from a scaffold projecting from the seventh story. The man, remarkable to say, will live unless unforeseen complications arise.

System Under Fire.

Montgomery's system of registration quarantine, which has been more or less under fire since its installation, will again be up for trial. In official circles it is regarded as extremely improbable that it will be changed, notwithstanding the attacks made upon it. Acting Mayor McIntyre stands for the system which has been both so praised and so condemned. The acting mayor and the other aldermen who favor it are not contending that it is a perfect system, nor are they willing to admit that the train style of quaarntine is a perfect system. The registration system is held to be as effective as a train quarantine by its friends, as well as more compact and easier worked. The matter of saving to the city in money is considerable, although all the city officials are ready to declare that the cost of the quarantine in such a time is not to be considered.

Miltary Officers.

Ajutant-General W. W. Brandon has issued commissions to officers in the Second regiment as follows, the same having been examined and recommended as qualified: Captain H. B. McKenzie, First Lieutenant A. M. McDowell, Second Lieutenant P. A. Sapp, Company G, Eufaula: First Lieutenant James F. Walker, Second Lieutenant E. H. Hagler, Company F, Tuscaloosa; Captain H. B. Peacock, Second Lieutenant J. H. Powell, Company H, Opelika; W. H. Stoddard, second lieutenant, Company I, Luverne; Julian C. Smith, second lieutenant, Company K, Tuskegee; Captain J. A. Holmes, Jr., Company E, Wetumpka.

The canvass for the colonelcy of the Second regiment is proceeding quietly, with no developments beyond the fact that Colonel Graves has no open opposition.

State Pension Board.

The state board of pension examiners on Friday completed its labors relating to the different county pension rolls and devoteed the rest of the day to summarizing th work already accomplished. The board also took up on Friday the work of culling from the rolls the names of old soldiers who have married, departed from the state in the last year and otherwise disqualipfied for drawing pensions from the state. As soon as this feature of the work is completed the board will prepare its report and submit it to the state auditor. This is expected to be done soon.

Mr. Harris Dies in Texas.

A telegram from Dallas, Tex., announced the death of Mr. Thomas W. Harris, a prominent business man of Alexander City, which occurred there on Friday. His many friends and relatives in this city and state will regret to learn of his death. One of his sisters, Mrs. H. V. Owens, lives in Montgomery.

The Governor Explains.

Blount Springs, Ala.—Gov. W. D. Jelks said Friday at the Blount Springs Hotel that if a special session of the legislature was called, which he anticipated doing, to be effective not before the yellow fever scare had subsided, he would advise the legislature to appropriate every dollar of such surplus as could be safely spared from the treasury to the public schools of this state, the money to be distributed over two years, covering the two fiscal years beginning October, 1905.

The impression might have gone abroad that this money was to be appropriated for one season's school. The governor said that that would disturb, if all was allowed to be expended in one year, the school arrangements in the state. He designed that it should be divided, and will expect either the accumulation from the increased assessment through the 3 mill tax to provide for as much additional for the fiscal year beginning October, 1907, or perhaps the legislature in its regular session in January, 1907, would appropriate an additional amount, making the whole appropriation for the following years at least equal to the money to be disbursed in the two coming fiscal years.

Pure Food Show.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Retails Grocers' Association will conduct a pure food show in Birmingham commencing November 6 and continuing ten days. Demonstrations will be made during each day of the show, and the stipulations are that each participant or exhibitor must present a certificate showing the food handled to be pure. The Grocers' Association has elected J. R. Eliard, of Avondale, president; J. W. Fain, vice-president, and A. A. Jones, secretary-treasurer. The pure food show will be the first ever held in North Alabama.

DETECTIVES ARE BUSY.

Trying to Locate Sender of Infernal Machines in New York.

New York.—Almost all of the detectives at police headquarters, every detective in the Wall street police agency and a number of federal detectives have been put to work in a determined effort to find a clue to the person who sent infernal machines to Jacob H. Schiff, the banker, and to the offices of M. Guggenheimer Sons.

A close watch for the appearance of cranks in the financial district is being made. It is the belief of the police that one man sent both machines, tinies reserved by Divine Providence and that he is a dangerous crank, who fancies he has a grievance against all rich men.

Dash for Liberty.

Ozark, Ala.—About 3 o'clock Friday afternoon Mr. Hartman was guarding a squad of hands in the woods at Henderson & Boyd's mill, near Brockton. Early Hunter, one of the convicts, complained of his saw, and Hartman olaced his gun between his legs and took hold to show Hunter how to use it. The negro stepped behind, and, jerking the gun out, leveled it at Hartman and was going to fire. The other negroes interfered, and the guard's life was saved. Three of them—Early Hunter, carrying the gun; Will Jackson and Andy Brown—then escaped. Near McDonald's mill, ten miles away, they were overtaken by a party headed by Charley Zeigler. Both parties emptied thenr guns, the contents of which ridddles Zeigler's hat and the negroes' clothes. Hunter was taken, and as Brown ran out he was halted by one of the party with an empty gun. Jackson made good his escape.

German in Trouble.

Anniston, Ala.—A German by the name of Joseph Sonntagg, who speaks English but poorly, is resting in the city jail under a charge of disorderly conduct. He was arrested by Officers Hill and Crabtree in the yards of the Southern Railway Company. Sonntagg hails from Luxemburg, Where he says that by the death of some relative he has an estate of about $1,000 awaiting proof of claim. He has been in this country about five years, being employed principally during that time in railroad yards and in the mines.

Candidates in the Field.

Cullman, Ala.—Owing to the rumor that Governor Jelks will call an extra session of the legislature to convene in December, it is understood that an election will be called to fill the vacancy in this (the Third) senatorial district occasioned by the death of Senator Robert L. Hipp. It is currently reported that Cullman county will have at least two candidates in the person of County Solicitor S. J. Griffin and A. A. Griffith, a rising and popular attorney of this city. All indications point to a rather heated contest, as both of the gentlemen named are very able and forcible orators.

Big Raid on Distillers.

Opelika, Ala.—Deputy United States Marshal H. Gibson and Deputy United States Collector Knox Booth came in Saturday from the wilds of Randolph county, where they made an important capture of a "moonshine" outfit. The still was an old United States government still of fifty gallons capacity, and was operated by Will Montgomery (white), an old offender, wanteed in Carroll county on several charges, where a reward is offered for his capture. With him was Will Lashley, who pleaded guilty to assisting in operating a still running illegally.

Mary Connally Arrested.

Huntsville, Ala.—Mary Connally, a negro woman who was jointly indicted with Horace Maples on a charge of robbery a short time before he murdered Mr. Waldrop and was lynched, has been arrested and lodged in jail.

Enlargement of Plants.

Bessemer, Ala.—The fact that most all the manufacturing plants operating at this place are improving their property, making extensions and adding new machinery, is very gratifying to the people of Bessemer. These developments, together with the increasing activity in building circles, forecasts greater prosperity for the city and renewed confidence is felt in the business and industrial future of the diarict.

Found Guilty.

Huntsville, Ala.—D. Willies Wales, the negro wife murderer, was found guilty in the circuit court Friday in the second degree and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitntiary.

Arrest of Illicit Distiller.

Troy, Ala.—Deputy Marshal C. M. Cox brought to Troy Friday morning Servy Kirkland, of Henry county, having arrested him on a warrant charging him with illicit distilling near Headland, in Henry county. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner C. S. Tutwiler and bound over under a $200

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House,
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby. Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS. | PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

FREE to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
To
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

NOTICE!

To all Whom it May Concern:

I have brught the W. E. Thomas gin and grist mill, and will grind every Friday and will do my best to give perfect satisfaction. I will have two gins with 110 saws and two presses. I will soon move and will take my jack over there, so as to give my patrons a chance to raise good mules. Thanking all for past favors, I will do my best to merit your business in the future.

Respectfully,
tf. T. A. DRIVER.
Jemison Route 2.

WANTED!

A live agent in every beat in Chilton county to write life insurance for the Mutual Benefit Association of Georgia. Cheapest insurance on earth. Good pay to hustlers. Write

W. R. Jackson,
Division Agent,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

YOUTH.

Lyrical are the trees
Blossoming all together,
Vocal the days with bees,
Birds, and the breezy weather.
Happiness keen as pain
Lilts in the ringing rain.
Drips in the showery trees,
Leaping together.

Lyrical, too, art thou,
Blossom of living beauty,
Rapture upon thy brow.
Joyousness all thy duty.
Sorrow may woo in vain—
Seek thee in sun or rain—
Stab thee with laughter now,
Slay her with beauty!

—Louise Morgan Sill, in Harper's Weekly.

REUBEN WHITE'S ESCAPE

BY DUKE CUYLER.

THE mountain tourists, as they follow along the banks of the winding Saco toward the place of its birth in the Great Notch, have their attention attracted by a huge rock by the roadside that bears the name of the Bartlett Bowlder.

It is not so much the size of the rock as its strange position that attracts the notice of the passer-by. It seems almost as though it was placed there through the agency of human hands, standing, as it does, on the summit of a small knoll, with a number of smaller stones placed under it in such a careful manner as to cleverly balance it.

Could man have had the power to do it, it could not have been done more effectively.

Conected with this stone is a legend of the early settlers, which I will endeavor to relate, it having been handed down from generation to generation among the residents of the mountain region.

Among the first setlers of Conway was a man by the name of Reuben White. His cabin stood on the high bank overlooking the fertile region that lies along the Saco, where he had made quite a clearing and got the most of it into a good state of cultivation. He had been subjected to the usual drawbacks incident to the settlers of that region, but thus far had triumphed over them all.

The wild beasts had given him much trouble, and the savages, when they came sometimes from the wilderness beyond the Notch, threatened him and his with destruction.

One day, early in October, the settler took his wife and started out for a tramp in the forest in search of game.

He turned his face up the valley, and striking the river something like a mile above, he followed it until he nearly reached a point where the bluffs came down on either side almost to the water's edge.

Thus far he had ill luck, for no game of larger size than a rabbit had crossed his path.

It was now past noon, and he began to feel as though a hearty meal would do him good. So he shot the next rabbit that crossed his path, and pulling off its skin, soon had it ready for cooking.

Close up to the base of the cliff he built a fire, and in a little time the rabbit was roasting above it.

So intent was he with his work that he saw nothing of a couple of savages, who for several minutes past had been watching his operations.

If he had done so, he would have been on his guard and not allowed his rifle to remain where he had left it, leaning against the cliff a good dozen feet away.

Mindful only of the meal he was preparing, he saw not how the savages, keeping well under cover, were each moment drawing nearer and nearer to him.

Stooping over the fire, and just in the act of removing the nicely brown roast therefrom, he was startled by a hand being laid upon his shoulder, while a voice exclaimed in his ear:

"The paleface is a prisoner. If he tries to escape the red man will strike him to the earth."

Startled by the unexpected presence of the savage and the words he uttered, Reuben rose only to see that he was completely at their mercy.

A savage stood beside him with uplifted tomahawk, while another had got possession of his rifle, and stood with it pointed at his breast.

For a moment he was speechless at this sudden danger that threatened him, but at last he found his voice.

"What do you want of me?" he said.

"White man go with Injin," was the answer of the savage, while at the same moment he produced some stout thongs, and, signaling to his companion, he proceeded to bind Reuben's hands behind him in such a manner that he would be powerless to use them.

There was nothing he could do but submit. To resist would be only to lose his life at once.

Seeing their prisoner secure, the savages fell to and devoured the nicely roasted rabbit, without so much as giving him a taste. This done they signified to him that he was to go with them.

He thought of those at home, and of the danger to which they would be exposed, but there was no help for it. He must go with them or die.

He was powerless now to help himself. There was but one way, and that was to bide his time, and if the opportunity occurred, to make his escape.

All that afternoon they kept on up the valley, and, with every step the settler put between himself and his cabin, his heart seemed to sink still lower in his breast.

Night came on at last, and a thick gloom filled the valley. But still the savages kept on.

The way was familiar to them, for it was along the trail their race had used for centuries on their way through the Notch.

The night deepened, and with it came a cry that thrilled them all each time it was repeated.

The hordes of fierce wolves were gathering upon their trail from out the dark ravines on either side.

The Indians and their captive hastened onward, but the cries of the wolves came nearer and nearer, while each moment added to the volume of the cry.

They must seek a place of safety soon or the bloodthirsty brutes would be upon them.

The savages were aware of this, and also that a place of refuge was close at hand.

The rock of which we have spoken towered before them.

Reuben knew it at a glance, for he had seen it several times when on his hunting trips in the forest.

Once upon it he knew that they would be out of the way of the wolves.

But how were they to get there? This question was soon solved.

With the aid of their tomahawks a notched stick was hastily prepared, and, leaning this against the rock one of the savages hastily clambered thereon.

Then Reuben was told to do the same. He made the attempt, but it was soon evident that he could not get up without the aid of his hands.

Convinced of this the savages hastily unbound them, and he scrambled up.

The other savage followed close behind him, and not a moment too soon. The foremost wolf sprang at his legs as he drew them up.

Casting the stick down among them they felt themselves safe.

The wolves snarled about the rock, springing up against its sides only to fall back again in impotent rage.

Reuben threw himself down upon the summit, apparently without hope or thought of escape.

Of course there was no chance then, and the savages seemed to know it. At least they did not again bind his hands, as he had feared they would do.

The minutes went on and below them the wolves snarled and gnashed their teeth in impotent fury.

Suddenly an idea presented itself to Reuben—a thought that seemed to give him a promise of escape.

It might not succeed, but if it failed his situation could hardly be worse.

He watched his opportunity, and summoned all the strength he had for the attempt he was to make. It was his only chance, and a desperate one at that.

Selecting the moment when the gaze of both the savages was turned from him he suddenly sprang upon the nearest and gave him a blow and push. Taken by surprise it was impossible for the savage to resist the impetus given him, and, with a wild cry, he went down over the rock into the midst of the bloodthirsty creatures below.

Quick as thought Reuben turned upon the remaining savage, who stood as though confounded by the fate of his comrade, and gave him a vigorous blow. With a cry that almost drowned the snarling of the wolves he also went down among them to add to their horrid feast.

Thankful for his escape Reuben remained upon the rock till daylight sent the wolves back to their dens, when he descended and reached home in safety.—New York Weekly.

Bontou Deserves Well of France.

"Bontou has deserved well of his country," says a Paris journal. Who is Bontou? He is a canteen cook, and when M. Berteaux, Minister of War, visited a certain barracks and expressed his astonishment at the excellence and economy of the cookery, he made the acquaintance of Bontou, and invited him to Paris. At the Ministry of War Bontou explained his system of regimental cooking, and suggested that all the hotel keepers in France should be asked to devote a few hours a week to the kitchens of the barracks in their neighborhood. M. Berteaux was enchanted with this idea, all the more because Bontou is President of the Hotel Keepers' Union, and is sure of a cordial response to his proposal. As for the French soldier, he will simply canonize this benefactor, and call him St. Bontou.—London Chronicle.

Elevator Manners.

Step all the way back.

Sing out before you get to your floor, so the boy won't have to reverse his machine for you.

Take off your hat in honor of an ancient lady, for a pretty girl is sure to step in next, and then how chivalrous you will feel.

If you want to be regarded as a man of mind, keep your hat on when all the other men in the lift have theirs off.

Don't block the doorway. Other people want to get out.

Don't gouge, don't push, don't scowl and say mean things. If you object to being shoved up against you ought to take the stairway.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Near the "Grim Original."

A pupil in one's of Chicago's schools was called upon to read the sentence: "Only those who have been near the grim original can know how quickly death is pictured in the mind."

Her teacher, who lives in a section of the city where the street piano flourishes, thought it was not devoid of sense when the child read: "Only those who have been near the grind organ can know how quickly death is pictured in the mind."—Chicago Record-Herald.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

WHEN MOTHER TAKES THE STOCKING-BAG.

When mother takes the stocking-bag we children gather round,
For she's the jolliest mother anybody ever found.
She sits and rocks and darns the socks and tells us tales that day.
I think you'd like to be there on stocking-darning day!

"Now, once upon a time"—that's how she starts the story going—
And Bob threads darning-needles and Jen takes up some sewing,
And Ted plays with the scissors, but I don't do a thing
But look and look at mother and sit a-listening.

Most times they're 'bout the time when she was just a little girl,
With pinafores and sunbonnet and many a little curl,
A regular tomboy, mother says, a-tearing round the farm,
And climbing trees and jumping off the big beam in the barn.

And sometimes they're 'bout Indians away off there out West,
And Bob and Ted and me—I guess we like that kind the best,
And sometimes they're 'bout kings and queens who lived so long ago,
Jen says it's history dressed up, and I believe that's so.

We children wear our stockings out at a tremendous pace,
So mother says, that smile of hers all shining in her face;
But we are glad when the stocking-bag is full as it can be,
For good times go with darning, don't you see?

—Harriet Crocker Leroy, in Youth's Companion.

TEDDY'S FIRST POCKETS.

"I want pockets in my new pants," said Teddy.

"You are too little," said mamma.

"Please, mamma!" Teddy pleaded. "Pockets go with pants. All the big boys have them."

"Well," mamma replied, "I suppose you must have them. Yes, I will put some in."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Aunt Emily. "Clara, you don't mean to let that baby have pockets? He will have them full of rubbish and in a dreadful condition all the time. He's too little for trousers, to say nothing of pockets."

But mamma put the pockets in, and Ted was happy. He went round with his hands in those little snuggeries, feleing very proud and grown-up, and trying to whistle; and by and by he began to put things into them.

"If I had the darning cotton, I would mend the stockings," said grandma, "but it isn't in the basket."

"Here it is," said Teddy, taking a little black ball out of his right pocket. "I found it behind the door, grandma. I didn't know it was darn cotton; I thought it was just string."

"You didn't happen to find my pencil, did you?" asked sister Sue. "I lost it yesterday and I can't find it anywhere."

"Yes," said Teddy, "it was in the waste basket. I picked it out and put it in my pocket. I didn't know it was yours, Susie," he said as he passed it to her.

Pretty soon mamma could not find her thimble. "I had it this morning," she said, "and all at once I missed it. I am sorry, for it was the one you gave me, Emily."

"Here it is," said Teddy. "I found it down in the pansy bed. I meant to give it to you, but I forgot."

"It must have fallen off the window-sill," said mamma. "I remember now, I was sitting by the garden window."

That afternoon sister Mary asked me if anybody had seen a button, for she had lost one off her blue dress; Tom inquired if anybody had run across his jack-knife, which he was using at noon and mislaid; Johnny needed a piece of string in a hurry; and grandpa could not find a little nail. All these things Teddy produced as they were wanted.

"I take it all back, Ted," said Aunt Emily, laughing. "Your pockets certainly are the most useful ones in the family. You don't happen to have a box of chocolates, do you?"

"No," Teddy replied, soberly, "but I have some candy that isn't chocolate. Mr. Smith gave it to me. It's taffy."

Aunt Emily laughed again. "There, Clara," she said, "I told you so!"—Elizabeth Hill, in Youth's Companion.

LITTLE TRIALS.

There was once a floor cleaner in the palace of a sultan, who quarreled with and grumbled to a workman who had come to mend a step. It took a good while properly to finish the work, and this annoyed the sultan who every day had to pass through the room where the step was being mended. The sultan complained of the annoyance and the floor cleaner said he didn't see how such a great sultan could be put out by such a little thing. The sultan heard of the remark and sent for the floor cleaner, who greatly feared that the remark would cost him his head. He was greatly surprised when the sultan told him that he would give him a palace, money, servants, horses, every luxury that a man could desire, all upon one condition. This condition was, that every day of his life he would come to the sultan's palace and receive a slight tap on his cheek, this tap to be administered by the sultan himself or one of his servants. The first time the floor cleaner complained he was to be thrust back into his original poverty. As the years went on this man grew rich and powerful, and finally it became a great trial for him to present himself every day at the palace and receive a tap on his cheek. This was especially trying as his flatterers and servants sympathized with him and told him it was a shame that so great a man should be subject to such an insult. This became the trial of his otherwise happy life. He felt that he could no longer endure it. One day the sultan was ill, and his cook was sent for to administer the tap to the floor cleaner. The floor cleaner flew into a violent rage and hammered the cook in the face until the sultan appeared. When he saw what had happened, he condemned the floor cleaner to his former poverty saying, "You now see how even a little trial may become a great cross if one has always to bear it."—Indianapolis News.

AN INTELLIGENT HORSE.

In the city of Oakland, Cal., lived a few years ago a horse as beautiful, intelligent and affectionate as ever a horse could be. "Prince" was his name, and well it fitted him.

The readiness with which he understood what was said to him was remarkable, says Our Dumb Animals. "Prince," his mistress would say, "I would like to visit Mrs. Y——," and, as Mrs. Y— was a particular friend of his, Prince would trot most readily and rapidly to her house. Again, Miss C— would tell him to go to the bank for money, and there he would go; or to the stable where oats, bran and hay were to be ordered, and he would trot there at a lively rate.

He was always spoken to exactly as a person would have been. Once a lady who was riding with Miss C— was surprised to have him take her home and stop before the house.

"Oh, Prince," she said, "won't you give me a little longer ride?"

He shook a knowing head and raced around the block twice, stopping then as before, as if to inform her that the trip had been of a reasonable length.

No end of little incidents of a like nature might be related of him.

Mrs. Thurston's successful novel, "The Masquerader," is being translated into Swedish, Norwegian and Danish.

PICTURE PUZZLE.

WHERE IS WILLIAM TELL'S SON?

—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. A. H. C. MORSE.

Subject: Powerful Promises.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday morning, in Strong Place Baptist Church, the pastor, the Rev. A. H. C. Morse, had as his subject, "Powerful Promises." The text was from II Peter i:4: "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption which is in the world through lust." Mr. Morse said:

At any rate the Bible is frank. It says the plainest things about man's sin. But it also holds before him a wonderful hope. To-day he is mired in corruption. To-morrow he may have escaped from this and become like God. The whole gospel is found in these few words.

We have here a statement of the fact of sin and its origin. The fact is "corruption" and the origin "through lust." I know that there are worldly-wise men who sneer at the third chapter of Genesis. But this I have noticed, that they are uniformly unable to give us a simpler solution of the mystery of evil. Somewhere and at some time the race must have sinned. The stream of life has been poisoned, and this must have taken place at its fountain head, for we cannot find any divisions which do not have the entire characteristics of the whole. The Bible says the event took place in the first man, before a single son was born, and he lusted after something which was forbidden to him, and that by his disobedience he fell from a primal innocency, and lurched the race, and entailed a condition of corruption. And that we have aggravated this calamity by repeating sin and deepening the ruin.

But I am not so much concerned today about the origin of the condition. We can leave that with a single word. But there are certain facts that cannot be brushed aside. A man may question the story as it is written in Scripture, but he cannot deny it, for it does not come within the region of denial. Neither can he deny the story as it is reproduced in life to-day. Have you never plucked forbidden fruit? Have you never lusted for pleasure which has been distinctly forbidden? And as a consequence of transgression, have you never experienced a repulsive sickness and an intolerable loathing, so that you have known what is the meaning of this phrase, "the corruption which is in the world through lust?" Do you not know anything at all of the lashings of remorse?

Let me ask you another question. How does it happen that the heart is so constantly "running down?" Why must it be repeatedly wound up and fastened with ratchets? Why do we have to make and renew resolves, and lash the will to the "sticking place?" Why is it that a man never backslides into holiness? Why cannot we take off the brakes and find ourselves gliding into the highest moral living? Everything, we are told, tends to move in the line of least resistance. Do we find that we are drifting toward charity and holiness and benevolence and virtue? Nay, but to all of us these graces are the fruit of serious toil. They are magnificent possessions, more precious than gold and sparkling gems, but they are gotten only by struggle and privation and self-denial. And that word "self-denial" contains a fossil history of primal sin. It tells us of an evil self that must be constantly denied, because its desires are wrong. But whence this evil self, and whence these wrong desires?

But let us come a little closer to this subject. Let me hint at the things that we cannot spread before the public, our secret thoughts and faults which are hidden. The thoughts that creep into the heart and nestle there. Can you tell me whence they come? Tell me, for instance, whence come the envy and jealousy and malice and evil desire, and the lust for gold that makes the thief, and the thirst for blood which crimsons the hand of murder? Do you not think these things arise in human life as malaria and pestilence from a death-dealing bog? Do they not bespeak what this Scripture calls a "corruption which is in the world through lust?" I suppose that the angels before the throne of God would shirk from having their thoughts proclaimed with the trumpet of Gabriel. I know that Jesus has torn open His heart and flung out a challenge which no man can accept. "Which of you convinceth Me of sin?" said He. But we cannot do that. We hide our thoughts and cover our faults with a crimson blush, and walk among our nearest friends with a coward's step. But what has befallen man? If God made him innocent—and nobody questions this—something must have happened to corrupt his thoughts and make them so black that he stands in dread of the day for which all other days were made, when this hidden history shall be revealed.

There is something pathetic in man's attempts to assert his worth. We speak, for instance, of the "Majesty of conscience" and the "Dignity of human nature," and of the "Fatherhood of God," and the "Brotherhood of man" as if these terms were true and meaningful. Take the first of these and see what comfort there is in it. "The majesty of conscience!" But do you not know that conscience almost always speaks in judgment? It seems to have lost its authority to command if it ever possessed that authority. It cannot insist upon obedience, but can only raise its voice in remonstrance. It can be easily overruled, and voted down, and then it can only record a minority vote, and lapse into silence.

But there is more in this scripture than a statement of the fact of sin. Here are also these great and precious promises whereby we may become partakers of the divine nature." That is, men may become as God. And the warrant for this promise is found in the fact of correspondence between the divine and the human. The natural man cannot discern spiritual things, and it is no use to talk to him about them, for there is no correspondence, no basis of affinity, no ground of fellowship. But man was made in the image of God, and it was possible for God to take upon Himself man's nature; and it is within the power of every man, by the grace of God, to take on also the divine nature, to be made like God.

That is what is said in the word before us. And this is done by a single act. Man fell, we are told, by [illegible] ing after the divine [illegible] shall be as God" was [illegible] of the tempter, and by [illegible] we were cast to the level of [illegible] But now God returns [illegible] promise that after all we shall be Himself, sharers in His nature conformed to His image. It [illegible] strange to you that for a single act serious consequences should [illegible] failed. This could only be [illegible] stream was poisoned at its source the race sinned in its first man, here is something wh[illegible] great. The Lord God [illegible] Himself a new creation. He [illegible] gun it in one new Man, [illegible] life without spot [illegible] His life and federal [illegible] by a single act of [illegible] quences of faith [illegible] the consequences of [illegible] that believeth on H[illegible] Life." And that [illegible] his life is prolong[illegible] but that it is endowed [illegible] tal nature. It is [illegible] he believes, as by a new [illegible] passed from death [illegible] been already delivered [illegible] age and corruption [illegible] darkness and has been [illegible] kingdom of His Son [illegible] God, a son of the Most H[illegible] of heaven. A s[illegible] the race. We are held [illegible] spite of tears and [illegible] we have not been [illegible] hand. One single act [illegible] held on eternal [illegible] sins and fails and [illegible] can never be wiped [illegible] And this is all by [illegible]

Men have said [illegible] of salvation as a [illegible] they say to sin[illegible] But, my friend, do [illegible] this entire universe [illegible] is nothing more certain [illegible] of mathematics, [illegible] gravitation. It [illegible] every son of Adam [illegible] multiplication table [illegible] that if a man wants to [illegible] begs in China he must [illegible] system that we have. [illegible] two make five there is [illegible] No, there is but one [illegible] heat or electricity or [illegible] itation in all the earth. And [illegible] but one way of salvation [illegible] earth. Here it is: "[illegible] promises," which [illegible] man believes in Christ [illegible] nothing except the [illegible] person who makes [illegible] make their promises [illegible] them heed. But [illegible] character you [illegible] them as you count [illegible] the sun.

We hear a great [illegible] about education [illegible] God, about the [illegible] righteousness. But [illegible] only unfolding, and that [illegible] been doing in and [illegible] each age suppress [illegible] enemity of sin. [illegible] cat, but how can you [illegible] from a heart that [illegible] all things and deceitful [illegible] Education can never [illegible] is like putting a new [illegible] pump and leaving the [illegible]

You may wonder at the [illegible] bringing in a new and [illegible] life by belief in [illegible] But all questions are [illegible] experiences of history. Great men [illegible] been regenerated by single words [illegible] Scripture. This was true of Augustine and Luther and Spurgeon and [illegible] of others whom time fails me to mention. They were not only new [illegible] but mighty sons of God. What was this? As great as the world [illegible] all forms of life. Look into the [illegible] and tear its halves apart and [illegible] if you can see therein the stalwart [illegible] Analyze the seed of wheat and [illegible] if you can see [illegible] of grain. "We [illegible] words which I speak unto you, they [illegible] spirit and they [illegible] see the spirit, you [illegible] but can you say [illegible] hold up to you these great and [illegible] promises and [illegible] sionaries and [illegible] charities and mighty [illegible] There are heaven and [illegible] weight of glory waiting [illegible] And our growth in grace [illegible] ness of God is not a process of [illegible] ing and improvement. But a [illegible] creation by which we become [illegible]

And now I have finished. I [illegible] have borne down hard on sin. I [illegible] I did not have to do so. I [illegible] with you that the word were [illegible] language because it was [illegible] heart. If one of these [illegible] of the astronomers should come to [illegible] earth and say to me: I understand [illegible] is a beautiful place, but [illegible] I understand it is filled with [illegible] rebellion against the [illegible] wish I could say to [illegible] My [illegible] you have been to [illegible] no sin." But I [illegible] not say that to [illegible] say to him: "Alas [illegible] and pity 'tis, 'tis true." But I [illegible] also say to him that [illegible] in its cruel grasp. I would [illegible] yonder, and say, "Do you see [illegible] den splendor? That is the [illegible] Jesus. It is filled with [illegible] by that we are [illegible] come partakers of the [illegible] And isn't that more than the [illegible] sin?

God's Way.

God's promises are [illegible] ending scale. One [illegible] or fuller and more [illegible] In Mesopotamia God said [illegible] thee the land." In [illegible] give thee all the land [illegible] numerable as the [illegible]

It is thus that God allures us [illegible] saintliness. Not [illegible] till we have dared [illegible] test us. Not giving [illegible] that He may [illegible] ways keeping in hand an [illegible] serve of blessing. [illegible] remainders of Go[illegible] His last star?—Rev. [illegible]

What Christianity Is.

Christianity is that historic [illegible] founded by Jesus of Nazareth, having its head of whom in the [illegible] demption mediated by Him, in [illegible] the true relation between God and [illegible] has for the first time found [illegible] and adequate expression, and which throughout all the changes of [illegible] ual and social environment, which centuries have brought, still continues to maintain itself as the religion worthy of the allegiance of thoughtful and worthy men.—Schleiermacher.

When I G[illegible]

[illegible] comes to pass [illegible]
When the [illegible]
When the [illegible]
I [illegible]
I [illegible]
And [illegible]
That [illegible]
Or [illegible]
For [illegible]

I [illegible]
And [illegible]
I [illegible]
And [illegible]
But [illegible]
Or [illegible]
When I [illegible]

When I [illegible]
That [illegible]
And if [illegible]
Have [illegible]
Then [illegible]
When I [illegible]

JOE PIXLEY

BY [illegible]

(Copyrighted [illegible])

Ben Burket was a widower and Joe Pixley was a bachelor. The one was a Possum Ridge farmer and the other taught the Possum Ridge school. They were both well past middle age.

Burket's chief purpose in life, it seemed, was to oppose Pixley. No matter what the latter attempted to do former was ready to do all in his power to defeat him. There was no reason for this, so far as anybody could see, for Joe was a quiet, inoffensive man, who attended strictly to his own business; and he had certainly never harmed Burket. But it had been so for years, and it looked as though it would continue as long as they both lived. However, no one knows in what day or what hour the storm may turn.

There lived on Possum Ridge a lonely old widow, who was chiefly noted for her temper. Her name was Morgan. She had had three husbands, but fortunately for them, they were all dead. They had died happily, for while they died not knowing what was awaiting them in the next life, they knew from what they were escaping in this. They felt that even at the worst the change would be a great improvement.

One day Pixley conceived a brilliant idea in connection with this widow. He had long felt that he had suffered enough from Burket's interference in his affairs, and that he ought to do something to put a stop to it, but he had not been able to devise any plan. Now, however, a plan was a' hatched and he saw his way clearly. He chuckled softly as he anticipated the final results.

The next day Pixley called on Mrs Morgan. A day or two later he called again. From that time on he became a frequent visitor at her house and the oftener he went the longer he remained.

On Possum Ridge news travels fast, and whatever one person discovers is soon known to all the rest. So it was not long till everybody knew of Pixley's visits to the widow. Everybody knew, too, or at least they thought they knew, what his object was. It could not be anything short of matrimony.

Some laughed at the thought of old Trouble Joe was liable to get him into. Some shook their heads gravely, and in their hearts they pitied him. One or two of his more intimate friends went to him and tried to convince him that he was making a serious mistake.

"If you marry that old woman," they said, "you will never see another minute of peace on earth. She will harass you to your grave. You are too old to be such a fool."

"That's all right," he replied. "Don't worry about me. I know what I am doing."

Calmly and smilingly he went on his way, keeping his own counsel and attracting his attentions to Mrs M[illegible]

A couple of weeks passed, then [illegible] Ben Burket rode up to Squ[illegible] door and called the Squire out. "I'm going to get married," he said, "and I want you to go along and [illegible] the ceremony."

"All right, Ben," the Squire replied. "I'm always ready to accommodate a neighbor, especially if there is a fee. Who are you figuring on marrying?"

"The Widow Morgan," Burket [illegible] fore us. And this is done by a act. Man fell, we are told, by ing after the divine attributes shall be as God" was of the tempter, and by listening we were cast to the level of

But now God returns to us w promise that after all we shall Himself, sharers in His nature conformed to His image. It strange to you that for a single serious consequences should tailed. This could only be becau stream was poisoned at its sourc the race sinned in its first man.
here is something which is qu great. The Lord God is maki Himself a new creation. He h gun it in one new Man, who ke life without spot or blemish.
His life and federal headship we by a single act of faith. The quences of faith are quite as gr
the consequences of disobedience.
that believeth on Him hath everl life." And that does not mean his life is prolonged in endless but that it is endowed with an i tal nature. It is received the in he believes, as by a new birth, an passed from death unto life. He been already delivered from the nge and corruption of the kingdo darkness and has been colonized kingdom of His Son. He is bo God, a son of the Most High, a c of heaven. A single sin has st the race. We laid hold on death state of tears and cries and stru we have not been able to loos hand. One single act of faith is on eternal life, and in spi sins and falls and failure that can never be wrested from our
And this is all by faith.

Men have said to me that the sc salvation is arbitrary. It is they say, to shut the world up to But, my friend, do you not know this entire universe is arbitrary? T is nothing more arbitrary than the of mathematics, or of health o gravitation. It is not strange every son of Adam is shut up to multiplication table? Is it not str that if a man wants to compute bers in China he must use the iden system that we use? That three two make five there as they do h
No, there is but one law for ligh heat or electricity or numbers, or itation in all the earth. And the but one way of salvation for all earth. Here it is said "through t promises," which only means th man believes in Christ. A promi nothing except for the value of person who makes it. Some men make their promises, and no man g them heed. But if one promises w character you know, then you com them as you count upon the shinin
the sun.

We hear a good deal in these d about education into the kingdo
God, about the natural developme righteousness. But developmen only unfolding, and that the race been doing in all the centuries, each age surpasses the last in enormity of sin. Education is dra out, but how can you draw holi from a heart that is "deceitful ab all things and desperately wicke
Education can never do the work is like putting a new handle on pump and leaving the dog in the w
You may wonder at the fancy bringing in a new and supernat life by belief in precious promi
But all questions are answered by experiences of history. Great men h been regenerated by single word Scripture. This was true of Augus and Luther and Spurgeon and s of others whom time fails me to n tion. They were not only new but mighty sons of God. Wonde was this? As great as the wonde all forms of life. Look into the a and tear its halves apart, and tell if you can see therein the stalwart Analyze the seed of wheat and tell if you can see therein the waving of grain. "Well," said Jesus, words which I speak unto you they spirit and they are life." You ca see the spirit, you cannot see the but can you say they are not there hold up to you these great and prec promises, and there are saints and sionaries and noble lives and charities and mighty revolutions th
There are heaven and an ete weight of glory wrapped up in t
And our growth in grace and the ness of God is not a process of m ing and improvement. But it is a creation by which we become like
And now I have finished. I kno have borne down hard on sin. I w
I did not have to do so. I w with you that the word were not in language because it was not in heart. If one of those phantom frie of the astronomers should come to earth and say to me "I understand is a beautiful place, but for one th
I understand it is filled with sin rebellion against the rule of God.
wish I could say to him, "My fri you have been misinformed. The no sin." But I tell you frankly, I c not say that to him. I would hav say to him: "Alas 'tis true, 'tis t and pity 'tis 'tis true." But I c also say to him that sin cannot hol in its cruel grasp. I would point yonder, and say, "Do you see that den splendor? That is the gospe Jesus. It is filled with sweetness, is that we are restored and have partakers of the divine natu
And isn't that more than the fact sin?

God's Way.

God's promises are ever on the ending scale. One leads up to an er taller and more blessed than it In Mesopotamia God said: "I will s thee the land." In Canaan: "I give thee all the land, and children innerable as the grains of sand."
It is thus that God allures us saintliness. Not giving us anyth if we have dared to act, that He test us. Not giving everything at that He may overwhelm us, and ways keeping in hand an infinite serve of blessing. Oh, the unexpe reminders of God. Who ever
His last star?—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

What Christianity Is.

Christianity is that historic reli founded by Jesus of Nazareth, having its bond of union in the demption mediated by Him, in w the true relation between God and lies for the first time found com and adequate expression, and w throughout all the changes of intel ual and social environment which centuries have brought, still conti to maintain itself as the religion worthy of the allegiance of thoug and worthy men.—Schleiermacher.

When I Go Home

It comes to me often in silence
When the fleecy sunbeams low—
When the black uncertain shadows
Seem wraiths of the long ago,
Always with those of heritage
That thrills every human vein,
Comes the old, earnest longing
For the peace of home again.

I am sick of the sin of cities,
And of faces old and strange;
I know where there's warmth of welcome,
And my yearning for it is change
Back to the dear old homestead
With an aching sense of pain;
But there'll be joy in the coming
When I go home again.

When I go home again! There's music
That may never die away
And it seems the band of angels
On a mystic harp to play
Have touched with a yearning sadness
On a beautiful broken strain
To which is my tired heart wording—
When I go home again.

Outside of my darkening window
Is the great world's crash and din,
And slowly the autumn shadows
Come drifting, drifting in Soothing the night winds murmur
To the clash of the autumn rain;
But I dream of the glorious greeting
When I go home again.
—Eugene Field, Selected.

Joe Pixley's Revenge

BY THOMAS P. MONTFORT

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Burket was a widower and Joe was a bachelor. The one was a Ridge farmer and the other Possum Ridge school. They well past middle age.
chief purpose in life, it was to oppose Pixley. No what the latter attempted the was ready to do all in his to defeat him. There was no for this, so far as anybody for Joe was a quiet, inoffenwho attended strictly to his business, and he had certainly married Burket. But it had for years, and it looked as it would continue as long as lived. However, no one what day or what hour the may turn.

lived on Possum Ridge a widow, who was chiefly for her temper. Her name was
She had had three husbands, unnaturally for them, they were
They had died happily, for, they died not knowing what was them in the next life, they from what they were escaping
They felt that even at the the change would be a great ement.

day Pixley conceived a brilliant connection with this widow.
alone felt that he had suffered from Burket's interference in affairs, and that he ought to do ing to put a stop to it; but he been able to devise any plan.
however, a plan was at hand saw his way clearly. He smiled softly as he anticipated the results.

The next day Pixley called on Mrs.
. A day or two later he called . From that time on he became frequent visitor at her house, and oftener he went the longer he stayed.

Possum Ridge news traveled and whatever one person did soon known to all the rest. So it not long till everybody knew of Joe's visits to the widow. Every-knew, too, or at least they said they knew, what his object could not be anything short matrimony.

laughed at the thought of the Joe was liable to get himself
Some shook their heads gravely.
their hearts they pitied him.
two went to him and tried to con-him that he was making a ser-mistake.

"You marry that old woman," said, "you will never see anothday of peace on earth. She will you to your grave. You are such a fool."

"That's all right, Ben," the Squire replied. "Don't worry about me. I know what I'm about."

And accordingly he went on his way, keeping his own counsel, and gave his attentions to Mrs Morgan.

Weeks passed, then one day Burket rode up to Squire and called the Squire out.

"I'm going to get married," he said, "and want you to go along and perform the ceremony."

"All right, Ben," the Squire replied. "I'm always ready to accommodate a friend, especially if there is a fee in it. Who are you figuring on marrying?"

"The Widow Morgan," Burket answered.

The Squire looked surprised, then he grinned broadly.

"We've all been thinking," he said, "that Joe Pixley was going to marry her. But I see how it is. You are at your old tricks again. You are going to beat Joe out of her."

"Any man has a right to marry a woman if he wants to, I reckon," Burket replied. "He don't have to wait to see if somebody else wants her, does he?"

"Of course not," the Squire admitted. "It's a free fight, and if you can win the widow she ought to be yours. But do you know her?"

"Not very well. I've only met her a few times; but she's a likely looking woman. They say she has some temper, but I think I know enough about women to manage that."

The Squire smiled knowingly, but said nothing. He had his own ideas of some things, but he did not feel called upon to express them. Ben Burket was old enough to take care of himself, certainly. He ought to know what he was doing, and if he didn't it was not the Squire's lookout. Then, if Ben married the widow, Pixley could not have her, and that was a matter of considerable moment in the Squire's estimation, since he was a friend to Joe.

Beeson saddled his horse and rode with Burket over to Mrs. Morgan's house. She was waiting for them, and was all ready to be married. Without delay the Squire performed the ceremony that made her and Ben husband and wife. Pocketing his fee, he said:

"I've done you all the damage I can, and from this on you will have to fight it out between yourselves."

Ben took his wife to his own home, and, in order to make his victory over Pixley the more complete, rode around by the school house, so that the latter might see them. Joe had just dismissed school, and was standing out in front when they rode up. With a smile of triumph Ben said:

"Pixley, I want to introduce you to my wife."

Naturally he thought he was dealing Joe a hard blow, and he expected to see him sink under it. But Joe did nothing of the kind. He did not seem in the least cast down. Instead, he laughed loud and long and acted as though it was all a good joke. Ben was puzzled at such conduct, and he was more puzzled yet when Joe said:

"I knew you would fall into the trap, but I didn't think you would do it so soon. I guess we are about even now."

"What do you mean?" Burket asked.

"Nothing," Pixley replied, "only that a man who is always butting in may butt in once too often. I wish you much joy, Ben. Good evening."

As Ben continued on his way he fell to pondering Joe's words. What did they mean, he wondered? What trap had he fallen into, and what did Joe mean about them being even, and about a man butting in once too often? It was all incomprehensible to him and he could not fathom it.

Then Joe had not seemed in the least disappointed at losing the widow. Rather he had laughed at it as if it was a most enjoyable joke. He appeared to be so highly pleased as though it was the one chief thing in his life upon the consummation of which he had set his heart and soul.

Ben wondered at these things, but could not understand them—not just then.

It was about a week later when Pixley again met Burket. The latter was in a sadly dilapidated condition. His clothing was torn, and he had one eye bandaged and one arm in a sling. His bride had been giving him a little taste of her temper. He was humble and pitifully meek.

"Joe," he said, "I owe you an apology. I beat you out of the Widow Morgan when I had no right to do so. I'm sorry for it."

"I guess you are sorry," Joe replied. "I knew you would be. But don't you bother about me, Ben. You did not beat me out of her. I never had a thought of marrying that woman."

"You never?"

"Certainly not."

"But you were going to see her?"

"Yes, but I had a purpose in it. I wanted to get revenge on you for the way you always interfere in my affairs. I knew that if I showed her attentions you would jump in and marry her. That was what I wanted."

Joe walked on, and Ben stood looking ruefully after him. Presently the latter muttered:

"And I've got that old vixen on my hands for life! Darn an old fool who hasn't a lick of sense! I have certainly butted in once too often."

SOMERSBY IS TO BE SOLD.

Estate Where Tennyson Was Born Soon to Change Owners.

Lovers of Tennyson will be interested to hear that the Somersby estate is in the market. The center of attraction there is, of course, says the Academy, the rectory, a picturesque, rambling structure with a dining room which externally resembles a chapel. The room in which the poet first saw the light overlooked the lawn and the church, perhaps "the God's house" of "The Two Voices," where his father officiated, stands on a low hill opposite the house. The garden is full of associations of "In Memoriam," but it should be remembered that the trees are not as they were in Tennyson's time—"the towering sycamores" and "the poplars four" have gone and the whole place is a wilderness. A "gray old grange," the reputed residence of "The Northern Farmer," stands close to the rectory.

A little way from Somersby is "the brook that swerves to left and right thro' meadowy curves," passing in its course three mills, one of which may have suggested certain points in the landscape of "The Miller's Daughter." It is also the subject of the poem known as "The Brook." On the same estate is a wooded dell, deep, wild and shady, which is called "Holywell Glen." Here Tennyson wrote "Byron Is Dead." It is not improbably "the dreadful hollow" which "grides and clangs its leafless ribs and iron horns" and should appeal to readers of "Maud." Not too far away is Mablethorpe, perhaps "the lover's bay" mentioned in "The Golden Supper" and the seaside resort where Tennyson for the first time saw "the hollow ocean ridges roaring into cataracts."

Soap Bubbles for Weaklings.

Blowing soap bubbles for the development of the lungs of nervous and anaemic children is a treatment advised by a Montreal physician, and it has met with remarkable and gratifying results. The Canadian doctor, who has devoted himself to obstetrics, has found in the latter years of his practice that mothers in the fashionable world object to crying babies, and do not hesitate to sanction the use of opiates by nurses—and the nurses give full and unqualified approval—and he recites what is well known to every physician, that the baby which is lulled to sleep and not permitted to howl and yell becomes deficient in lung power, and after babyhood is passed is a weakling. He has undertaken the treatment of just this class of children by the simple but original method of expanding and contracting the lungs by a pastime which the sickliest child will take hold of with little or no persuasion. He has devised a saponaceous mixture which will make "tough" soap bubbles, so that in the desire to increase the size of the thin-walled globe the little patient will exercise his or her lungs to the fullest extent—and the simple little trick is working wonders.

Real Bad Man Gathered In.

"I'm a woolly wolf. I've got a tail sixteen feet long and it's covered with barbwire. The devil's broke loose; take in yer canoes, you scaly-hided, flat-heeled sons of slush tubs. My tread causes yearthquakes, my breath addles milk. I can spit a blister on a wash pot and bust up a stillhouse by blowing in at the wum. The lion's loose—close yer windows. I'm a mossil of the best man that ever took a drink of Denison prohibition booze. Clean out thar." These and a few other remarks of like character were indulged in by a young man last night on Main street. The young fellow is in pawn now and is looking for some farmer who needs a good cotton chopper to come and take him out of hock. —Durant, I. T. News.

The Bright Side.

Go pluck from every flaming bush
The dewy rose of morn,
And keep the ruby-colored cup,
But cast away the thorn;
Retain the flower's golden heart,
But not the bitter smart.
Go look on life in every scene,
The gloomy and the gay,
Remembering the splendid ones,
And cast the rest away;
Recall the ones with love aglow,
But turn away from woe.

Go sip from all the cups of life
In all her ways among,
But banish all the thoughts of dregs
And keep upon your tongue
The honey, sweetest draught of all,
But throw away the gall.

STOLEN GEMS HARD TO SELL.

Man Who Stole Tiffany Diamonds Gathered In a White Elephant.

In the opinion of Detective "Charlie" Heidelberg, the man who stole the great Tiffany diamonds has a white elephant of prodigious size on his hands. While the stones represent a fortune in themselves, there is absolutely no way in which the thief can dispose of them without subjecting himself to immediate capture. The only satisfaction left him is to gaze at the gems in the solitude of his home and weave dreams about great possibilities contained in those three sparkling bits of carbon.

"All the diamond cutters in the world may be numbered on the fingers of both hands," said Heidelberg. "They have all received accurate descriptions of the stones and if they are presented to any of these experts to be cut, the person in whose custody they are will immediately be arrested.

"Some days ago it was reported that there was a diamond cutting expert in Pittsburg who had not been included in the official list. An investigation was made at once and the report proved to be false. There is one cutter in Chicago, but none nearer. The description of the missing gems has been scattered broadcast, and so much publicity given to the matter that even the most daring 'fence' would not take the diamonds at a tithe of their value.

"In my opinion, the theft was not the work of an outsider," added the detective. "The stones were taken by some one in the store who was familiar with the methods of the establishment.

An Appreciation.

I am very fond of poetry—
Couldn't possibly be more—
Every thing I lay my hands on,
Modern works or ancient lore.
But of all things I've perused
(And indeed I've read a sight)
Nothing seems to me so clever
As the poetry I write.

Shakespeare? Well, he's pretty good.
Milton? H'm, I guess he'll do.
Pope and Browning? Just so-so.
Keats? I've never read him through.
Byron? Well, his style's too free.
Tennyson? Too serious, quite.
None of them can hold a candle
To the poetry I write.

I can sit and read it over,
Backward, forward, by the hour.
Such magnificence of diction!
Phrasing of unequaled power!
Often over it I've pored
Far into the stilly night.
Nothing fills me with such bliss
As the poetry I write.

Every word's a polished jewel.
Strings of gems are every line.
Strange that editors' opinions
Rarely coincide with mine!
Some day they will beg my verse
But they'll never get a mite.
For they won't deserve such luck
As the poetry I write!
—Blanche Goodman.

Bath in Goldfield.

"All trouble and inconvenience growing out of the scarcity of water in the new mining camps of Nevada is rapidly disappearing," remarked Oscar J. Smith, lawyer and capitalist of Reno. "They have quite as much water in Goldfield now as will satisfy the requirements of the camp. I was down at Goldfield recently, and noticing a sign on a building which proclaimed the fact that baths were to be had there I went in and announced that I would like to get a bath. The fellow in charge handed me a ticket and took my money.

"'Well, see here,' said I, 'I don't want a bath ticket. I want a bath.'

"'Oh, you'll get a bath all right,' and the bathhouse manager. 'Let me see your ticket, No. 813. There are about 812 people ahead of you. Come around in about three or four weeks.'" —San Francisco Chronicle.

A Proper Distinction.

Here is a story that the Rev. Moxom of Springfield tells of John Fiske, which illustrates his frankness:

It seems that one day his wife had to report to him that their son had been guilty of calling Mrs. Jones, a neighbor, a fool and Mr. Jones a much worse fool.

Prof. Fiske sent for the youngster, and when he appeared in the library said to him sternly: "My son, is it true that you said Mrs. Jones was a fool?"

Hanging his head the boy replied: "Yes, father, I did."

"And did you call Mr. Jones a worse fool?"

"Yes, father."

After a moment's reflection the famous historian said slowly: "Well, my son, that is just about the distinction I should make."—Boston Record.

Where the Gang Rules.

Col. Sheldon Potter, who represents reformed Philadelphia in the headship of the city's police department, was talking at a dinner party about gang rule and municipal corruption.

"Gang rule," he said, "encourages bad habits, drunkenness, a hundred evils. This was well shown in a school board meeting in a New England town. Corruption in that town was rampant, and in consequence dissipation was rampant, too.

"Well, at the school board meeting I speak of it was said that the clerk long before the night's business ended was signing checks with the whisky and drinking the ink."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tearful Milk.

A lady was complaining to her dairyman some time ago about the quality of his milk. "Short o' grass feed, mum—short o' grass feed this time o' year," said the jocular milkman. "Bless you, them cows o' mine are just as sorry about it as I am. I often stands and watches 'em cryin'—regular cryin', mum—because they feel as how their milk don't do 'em credit. You don't believe it?"

"Oh, yes, I believe it," said the lady; "but I wish in future you'd see that they don't drop their tears into our can."—The Tatler.

Method of Killing Seals

John Scudder McLain in his "Alaska" thus describes the business of securing sealskins: "The killing is always done early in the morning when the temperature is lowest. It was 5 o'clock in the morning when we left the ship. The killing season was practically over, but the agents had arranged a drive for our benefit. The seals lie alone the rocky shores, the bulls, or 'beachmasters,' as they are called, and the cows and their pups occupying the rocks nearest the water, while the bachelors, the young unmated males, are forced to go farther up the beach. As only the bachelors are killed for their skins, this natural division facilitates the work of the drivers in making their selections. Two or three drivers slip in and 'cut out,' as the cowboys would say, a bunch for the day's killing. They proceed to make a great noise by shouting, slapping pieces of boards together and beating on tin cans. The seals are frightened and the squirming, huddling mass is gradually forced away from the rookery.

"Now here they come, bleating like a flock of sheep, ambling in their awkward fashion through the tall grass. The young males and the few females which the drivers will not try to separate from the herd until the killing ground is reached offer no resistance. But the two or three old bulls show fight and rush at the drivers with surprising speed and agility when pressed too hard. As they are driven to the killing grounds their gait is a sort of canter, as they raise themselves on their flippers and then pull their heavy bodies up. They repeat this movement rapidly for a hundred yards and then fall, panting and exhausted. The method of killing adopted inflicts less suffering on the victims than any other that could be devised. But one who has witnessed the operation will not wish to see it again.

Those who do the killing are natives who are expert at the business, each armed with a stout club about five feet long and three inches thick at the heavy end. They cut out twenty or thirty of the struggling creatures and, striking each one on the head, crush the soft, thin skull. Death is instantaneous. As the club falls with a thud upon each graceful head those that have escaped the first crushing blows seem to become conscious of their impending fate and their appealing eyes, soft as those of a deer, their plaintive cries and their ineffectual efforts to escape would certainly stay the arm of any not schooled by years and generations to do this work. The stranger to the scene is forced to turn away, though he must admit that not a throb of conscious pain follows the descent of the heavy club."

Is Paradise for Pirates

Piracy flourishes in the Canton delta and along the China coast in that vicinity. The last report of the British consul-general at Canton has an interesting story of this modern piracy. During the past year there were half a dozen serious organized attacks on British steam launches. Chinese passenger launches and boats are frequently held up and plundered. Complaints are made to the local authorities, but nothing is really done to protect trade. Even within the precincts of the harbor pirates and robbers plunder and loot with impunity. The people are left to protect themselves as best they may and such is their fear and dread of having anything to do with Chinese authorities that no man, whatever his grievance or wrong, will readily venture to apply to the magistrate for assistance or redress.

This insecurity of life and property tells seriously against all development of trade. From the silk districts come repeated complaints of blackmailing by local bandits. Foreign goods sent into the interior under transit passes are pirated and only in one single instance, after eighteen months of arguing and battling with the officials, has a foreign consul succeeded in obtaining the recovery of a few articles and the arrest of a few men, who the magistrate gravely says are the culprits.

In one case a Hongkong junk was pirated and the cargo landed in broad daylight under the eyes of the local officials by the villagers, yet nothing was done and no redress could be obtained. The Kwangsi rebellion, which has taxed all the resources of the provincial government to suppress, was the direct outcome or corruption and peculation. Left without food and pay, the soldiers of Marshal Su took to the hills and started an insurrection.

The Joys of Reminiscence

When I turn to my youth for the pleasures it gave,
Not a thing from the lap of good Fortune I crave,
Not a care have I then for the days still to come,
For my daily companion, Old Fretful, sits dumb,
And I hear twenty wags, if I hear even one,
All inviting me back to partake of the fun.

With this to allure me I throw down my cane
And leave the road's highway for young lovers' lane;
I forget crippled joints and lumbago of back,
I forget sixty years drag along on my track,
As I in the gay crowd, the gayest by half,
Swing 'round on one heel and bend double to laugh.

I forget that my head shines as bright as new tin,
That my remnant of cheek has grown faded and thin,
That my hand is unsteady, as firmly I grasp
The hand of some fellow our friendship to clasp.
I forget politics and the weather and all
For the shindig is on in the old village hall.

It makes me forget I'm alone on the sea,
With a half-broken plank 'twixt the bottom and me,
For youth is the mainmast and love is its sail,
While "courtship" and "smack" bear me on through the gale;
And I'm gay as the rest in the mirth of the dance,
While the night glides away like an hour of a trance.

And the lass at my side is the belle of the ball,
Who keeps even step in her whirl 'round the hall,
While with rattle of heel and with tripple-touch toe
We allemande left to the swing of the bow,
Till onward and on like the flow of a stream
We finish the "breakdown," the end of my dream.

Then I wake and review all the struggles and strife
In my long promenade toward the "breakdown" of life;
And I laugh at the thought of my being placed back
Full twoscore of years on life's varying track,
For tho' with its love scenes and pleasures and all,
Would it pay to plod back to the old village hall?
—Floyd D. Raze.

Queer Dishes of Chinamen

The flower best suited to the Chinese palate and the one which is served with almost every elaborate Chinese dinner is the chrysanthemum. The flower has a peculiar flavor and requires a taste educated by many trials before it can be fully appreciated; but Chinese epicures and a few New Yorkers who enjoy Chinese foods frequently pay fancy prices for chrysanthemums, which they take to the Chinese chefs to have prepared for them. The old-fashioned nasturtium, the rose and the violet seem to please the American taste, however.

For a luncheon an element of interest is always added by introducing the chafing dish at table. The flower desserts are particularly adapted for luncheons because of the blossoms' beauty and fragrance as well as the novelty of preparing them for food. To make the dessert, or the "blossom delight," as some enthusiasts call it, first stir a thin batter of eggs and flour. This should be brought in from the kitchen already prepared. The flowers, thoroughly washed, should be arranged in a glass vase on the sideboard. Have the chafing dish ready, half filled with oil, smoking hot. Pluck the petals from the flowers, stir briskly into the batter, then dip out in small portion and drop into the oil.

The fritters puff up immediately, and if taken out quickly they retain the color of the flower from which they are made. When removed from the oil they should be placed for a moment on absorbent paper before being dusted with powdered sugar and passed to the waiting guests, who are more than anxious to sample the new idea. The tiny wafers, which are crisp and dainty, are good substitutes for the inevitable champagne wafers in serving ices of any kind.—Leslie's Monthly.

Fire Worship in Scotland

Reminiscences of the pre-Christian days of Baal worship and fire worship are still to be found occasionally in Scotland. A few years ago a traveler wrote: "On the last day of the year, old style, which falls on Jan. 12, the festival of 'the clavie' takes place in Burghead, a fishing town near Forres. On a headland in that village still stands an old Roman altar, locally called the 'douro.' On the evening of Jan. 12 a large tar barrel is set on fire and carried by one of the fishermen round the town, while the assembled folk shout and halloo. If the man who carries the barrel falls it is an evil omen. The man with the lighted barrel having gone with it around the town, carries it up to the top of the hill and places it on the 'douro.'

"More fuel is immediately added. The sparks as they fly upward are supposed to be witches and evil spirits leaving the town. The people, therefore shout at and curse them as they disappear in vacancy. When the burning barrel falls in pieces the fishermen rush in and endeavor to get a lighted bit of wood from its remains. With this light the fire on the cottage hearth is at once kindled and it is considered lucky to keep this flame all the rest of the year. The charcoal of the 'clavie' is collected and put in bits up the chimney, to prevent the witches and evil spirits from entering the house.

"The 'douro' (the Roman altar) is covered with a thick layer of tar from the fires that are lighted upon it annually. Close to the 'douro' is a very ancient Roman well and close to the well several rude but curious Roman sculptures can be seen let into a garden wall."

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

Clanton, Ala., Thursday, Aug. 24, 1905

UNION CLUBBING LIST....

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Home & Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Dixie Home	$1.00
THE UNION Saturday News	1.25
THE UNION And Weekly Age Herald	1.25
THE UNION And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.50
THE UNION And Twice-a-Week Globe-Democrat	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION And Tri-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

THE FIRST BALE.

John Mims No. 1 brought in the first bale of cotton this year on Wednesday morning, August 23d. It was ginned by J. Q. Wade. The first bale last year was brought in by Mr. Culver on August 26, three days later than this year. Two years ago Madison Bean, of Collins chapel, brought in the first bale on September 2, so you see we keep getting ahead every year.

THAT COTTON DISEASE.

At the instance of 'Squire J. N. Dennis, who was aided and abetted by the editor of The Union, Prof. E. Mead Wilcox, the Plant Patholigist of the State Experiment Station at Auburn, spent Tuesday here making an investigation of certain cotton diseases that have been worrying many of our farmers in Chilton county this season. When the Professor arrived at 7:35 a. m. he went straight to the Union office, where a collection of the diseased plants and bolls were awaiting his attention. Among others who had brought in specimens for examination were J. M. Maddox, C. C. Swint, W. M. Wood, M. F. Lett, J. N. Dennis and T. M. Donovan. B. F. Martin contributed a bug which he had found on his cotton, but on inspection the professor pronounced it NOT the boll weevil, but belonging to the same "genus." 'Squire Dennis then took Dr. Wilcox in a buggy out to J. M. Maddox's place, which is badly afflicted. Dr. Wilcox says this damage is "caused by the well known disease called 'Anthracnose.' This disease is caused by a minute parasitic plant, of the group called 'fungi.' On the bolls the disease appears as a purplish discolored spot which during moist warm weather enlarges very rapidly."

"The fact that such weather conditions have largely prevailed during much of this season is the explanation of the serious damage caused."

"There are frequently found various insects about the flowers and bolls of cotton, but this disease is not the result of any insect injury." "The true boll weevil has never been found in this state, though reports to that effect have frequently been made; there are many insects that so closely resemble the boll weevil that they are frequently mistaken for it." "Farmers are requested to send to Dr. Wilcox at the Auburn station, specimens and information of any cotton diseases they may find. These will be carefully examined and all possible assistance and information furnished."

J. C. FONVILLE'S LETTER.

The following letter is clipped from the Montgomery Journal of August 17. Many of our readers know Mr. Fonville, and will enjoy his letter:

Wanamaker-Washington Incident.

To the Editor of the Journal:

Before we lose our heads about the Wanamaker-Washington incident I want to call your attention to several things—"lest we forget." No sooner does something of this kind happen than every "Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart" of the Democratic press open on the fresh scent and fly backwards to the Roosevelt-Washington dinner and there stop.

Why do you stop there? Why don't you follow the trail: If social equality of the races is wrong (and it is), why endorse it in a Democrat and condemn it in a Republican? If my memory serves me aright, a negro sufficiently abandoned to marry a white woman had social recognition, along with his elegant white wife, at the marriage reception of the first and only Democratic President we've had in a long time. I think the negro had a very important office in the government. Possibly our senior Senator voted for the appointment in executive session of the Senate. After the said President had given such high endorsement to this breach of Southern tradition, I think the Southern Democrats supported him enthusiastically for another term. I don't think I ever heard an Alabama Democrat urge it against Senator Morgan that he voted to confirm the appointment of Fred Douglass, who was so earnest for social equality that he married into the despised race. I use the term "despised" advisedly—from the Democratic standpoint. You may recollect that in Alabama in 1892 the Democrats had a greater fondness for the niggers than for the white people. You may have been a Democrat in those days. If so, without a change of heart from Democracy, it comes with poor grace from you to be condemning Wanamaker and Washington for a little less offense than you approved and encouraged in Cleveland and Douglass. If all your political life has been spent in the Democratic effort to put the nigger above the white man at the polls, I don't see how you can consistently and conscientiously condemn the nigger for catching your spirit.

I am a little surprised that our genial Lieutenant-Governor goes back on his Democratic record and rushes into print over an incident that pales into insignificance with the one alluded to and which he approved.

If I understand it, it is reasonable to conclude that the Democrats want to claim a monopoly of social, racial equality since it was instituted under such happy Democratic conditions.

Do you recollect how your county and Jeffefferson voted in your last Democratic State convention on Powell's motion to take black heels off white necks?

It is a pity if you and the Lieutenant-Governor are in accord with Powell rather than your counties.

I am writing to caution you against "tearing your shirt" about a matter that all conscientious Democrats should approve.

You approved social, racial equality in your vote for Cleveland.

You held the nigger superior to the white people of Alabama in the nineties.

You still want the nigger to dominate your party State council.

My notion is you are estopped (I believe that is the word) as a Democrat from crying out against any advance the nigger may make.

Under Cleveland you approved intermarriage of the races. Perhaps about that time you approved of counting the nigger here in Alabama to overcome the white people.

It is too late as a Democrat to disapprove of the little matter of your Alabama Democratic product taking an elegant lady in to dinner.

I thought all along the Democrats were too affectionate towards the nigger, and I was afraid their efforts might make the nigger "uppity."

I have heard that Booker is very helpful in getting Democrats into office.

However, I (from the white man's standpoint) think the Saratoga incident a serious matter, and should cause a new getting together of the white people against the Democrats and the niggers.

J. C. FONVILLE.

IS DEMOCRACY DYING?

"Speaker Nixon has been renominated for his sixteenth successive term as member of the Assembly.

"The nominating speech was made by his Democratic opponent in 1898, who is now a Republican. The seconding speech was made by his Democratic opponent in 1900, who is now a Republican.

"In other rural counties there are more and more former Democrats who are now Republicans.

"Except in the cities is the Democratic party in the State of New York dying out?"—New York World.

The New York World is a Democratic paper. The vote given for Roosevelt in 1904 ought to be sufficient answer to its question; and not only New York, but other States also. Men naturally fall in with a party of progress. They are not content (save a few officeholders) to stay with a party whose principal slogan is, "We're agin the government."

HERE TOO.

"It seems that every time there is a farmers' movement put on foot the next thing is to start an organ to disseminate its teachings, etc. And if you will take time to solve the matter you will find at the bottom of it some political move, promoted by some political schemer. Now, as there are hundreds of newspapers in Alabama, every one of which is more than anxious to endorse and advocate any and everything that will further the interests of the farmer, by securing for him better prices for his products and watching his interests in every way, then, in the name of common sense, what is the use of a 'special' organ to promote the interests of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association? Will some one tell us why?"—Geneva Reaper.

THAT DOT COUNT.

The correct number of dots were 3,996. One of our subscribers had 2,997. The fourth prize, $125 diamond, was won by W. R. Trimble, of Tallassee, and a number of the lesser prizes went to Alabamians.

Stockholm has slot machines which for a copper yield a glass of warm milk.

CLANTON.

Mr. Editor: I've taken a job on my hands—that is, to write about our duty to our friends, especially our political duty. It is a deep question, and to get to the bottom of it, will require study and thought. However, I m going to try it a barrel or two, anyway, and if any of you fellows have betrayed your political friends, you had better hide out, for you know I always call a spade by its name. Now, if Judge Adams was here, I'd like to mention some of his public acts, but as he is far away in Florida, I'll not refer to him. But did you see where he wrote to the banner that he was invited to make a speech, and that he was going to tackle it or bust? Well, if he does not bust, that will be the first thing he ever tackled that he did not bust on sooner or later. I hope Judge Adams will get a heap of speaking to do down there, for you know he likes to do that, and he can speak as well on one side as the other, for we tried him here. Now, I take the position that political parties ought to be as true to individuals as the individuals to the party. Now, see how this works. Take Col. Smith's case with the democratic party. He has been a true and tried democrat and always stood for their nominees, though I'm sure he's had some bitter doses to swallow. Nevertheless, he was true and just see how his party treated him. He entered the race for Probate Judge in the democratic primary with two other candidates, Adams and Deason (both of them holding an office that they had been elected to by the Populists and Republicans) and Judge Adams won out, not because the democrats wanted him (Adams), but the machine wanted him, and the word was sent out to vote for Adams, and so they did. That is just a few votes over one-third of the total vote polled. Well, the machine soon found out that Adams could not be elected, and it pulled him down. Now, Col. Smith being the next highest candidate, of course was entitled to the nomination, but the machine was in control, and at the convention (where some of the beats were not represented because they had received word that they must send delegates subservient to the machine, so they wouldn't send any) Smith was passed over without a word and Deason nominated. Now was that party true to its friends, or did it obey the orders of the boss? I ask you, what could Mr. Smith do but what he has done, being an honest man? The democratic party must suffer for the way it has treated its honest voters, and do you know I'm looking for something sensational when Col. Smith gets on the stump, and we'll get it if he only tells what he knows. Say, demmies, you said you'd get Reynolds when he was elected Probate Judge, but it looks like you will lose some you have got instead of gaining any one. You'd better put your fences up to keep your members in, for it sure makes a crowd look hacked when one of their fellows jumps out. We know for we've tried it. You democrats say Col. Smith wants office. Well, if he does he has shown good judgment in coming to us, for we are the folks that give them out, and if any of the rest of you want office, you had better come over. You're on a cold trail in the democratic party. Speaking of our duty to our friends, I was at the depot the other day and Judge Reynolds and family got on the train, and I asked some one where they were going, and he said to see Hon. J. O. Thompson, of Birmingham. I scratched my head and thought to myself there's something behind this. Reynolds has something up his sleeve, for we all know he is in politics and don't say much, but "keeps sawing wood." But in a moment it was clear to my mind what his mission was. You see, President Roosevelt has a large family of children, and J. O. Thompson has eight, and the Judge has a crowd. Do you catch on? Thompson catches the ear of the President with his children, and our Judge catches Thompson with his, and there you are. I tell you, if I was a Postmaster and had no children, I'd be trembling in my boots, and I do know that I'd be afraid to be always dickering with the democrats, and letting them use my office for Headquarters, and putting all my notices in a democratic paper. Just as sure as you're born there is a cloud rising, I hear the thunder and see the flash of the lightning, and some Postmasters had best get under shelter. There's been a shower at Maplesville already. Do you catch on? It's hard to explain why a republican will advertise altogether in a democratic paper, when there is a Republican paper. Will the democrats do this way? No, sirree. Why, just the other day a piece of property was to be sold, and the party selling it wanted to advertise it in THE UNION, and his lawyer (a democrat) said leave his name off, as he was under obligations not to give anything to THE UNION. Don't you see how they stick together and work all the time to build their paper up, and only advertise in their own paper? I'm not in favor of boycotting, but I believe shoes and other things would wear better if they were bought from a merchant that advertised in OUR PAPER, and a lawyer would fight our case better when he is with us in our fight against Ring Rule. I am opposed to patterning after the democrats, but I believe in fighting the devil with fire, and if we would do as the democrats do in this case we would have one of the strongest papers in the state. You all investigate this matter and see how many democrats are helping our paper. Do you want to give an enemy a stick so he can beat you with it? If we ever expect to succeed as a party and as individuals we must let it be plainly known that we'll be true to those who are true to us. If we expect to ever amount to anything in this world, we must stand by our friends. Look over our state and see where are those that went back on the party that had put them in office and fattened them up. Say, I see that the commissioners have decided to enlarge the court house, and raise up the jail, and people do say that they've saved enough money this year to pay the expense; that kinder made me wonder where this money has been going all these years. I reckon the court house is too small, and I see the police catching hogs, so I guess they'll raise the jail to give the lower story to the hogs. I'm really afraid the police will get overheated at this stock work. Say, we anti-stock law people had better pay our poll tax this fall, for I smell stock law in the air. Clanton has got it, and next will be Beat 4 and so on. Democrats, you'd better look out. I see another man's eyes shining, and he begins to look honest. You know when a fellow really gets religion he wants to join the church. If these old fogies don't interfere too much, we may have another negro and sheep race some Sunday. How easy it would be to belong to church if it wasn't for a few old fogies. We up-to-date people could dance, play cards, gamble and do most anything, and then go to church and sit on the front seat. But then there is always some persons with old time religion in their hearts that can't see how we can do all these things and be members of the church. But we have improved on everything else and why shouldn't we have this latter-day religion. You see, it's so easy and cheap (just now). Well, these old-fashioned folks that want to keep the Sabbath holy will die some day and then we can have our new fangled way.

JUST A VOTER.

RANDOLPH.

Again we appear before the readers of the Union, the champion of the people's cause. Let the people in gratitude remember the Union as their friend. The calm, dull days of the waning summer are on us. "Sweet summer" will soon be gone away. Such is life. We hasten from one season to another; but, happy thought, we can trust a kind Providence over the untried way. Oh, how it rains. That means poor fodder. Considerable complaint about cotton being sorry, but the price is good. So that is better than a large crop and a low price. Prof. John T. Martin has been making some improvements on his residence. Mr. Connell, of Stanton, filled his appointment here Sunday at the Baptist church. The Baptists will hold a series of meetings here, beginning the first Sunday in September. John T. Weeks went to Ocampo Monday. John S. Waldrop, one of the true reformers of beat 3, was in town Saturday. Henry Buzbee has charge of the section here. The Mars Hill correspondent seems to have the right idea in regard to our paper. We are pleased to note that the great common people of Chilton still possess the spirit of reform. We look over the past, and we look with admiration on such noble self-sacrificing men as O. M. Mastin, J. A. Logan, W. H. Conway, R. M. Honeycutt, E. G. Rollins, W. Y. Nix and many others. Yes, our people were led against the enemy by Honeycutt and Logan, and victory was secured. Now, we have the true and resourceful Judge Reynolds, Nix, Conway, Williams, Vickers, Honeycutt, Smith, Waldrup, Pounds, Thomas, Riggins, Caddell, Mims, Langston and many others to lead the people's hosts on to victory in the future. Let the people rule.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

OAKLEY'S SWITCH.

We are away up here on R. F. D. No. 1 leading to Randolph. A. J. Lumpkin, assisted by others, has built a neat brush arbor on one of the highest peaks in this locality. It is beautifully situated, and is built for a place of worship. On the second Sunday in August was the first service. It was a delightful service of song, prayer, testimony and preaching. The first song was so appropriate, "Sitting at the Feet of Jesus." Then the sermon by Mr. L. Brown. Subject, "Launching Out Into the Deep," or a life entirely consecrated to God, free from the bondage of sin. It is indeed inspiring to hear little girls testify in regard to a full salvation. Services there again the second Sunday in September. There will be a series of meetings later on. James Aldrich, of the Bible school at Cincinnati, will probably be present. Let the Lord's people all come and take part.

B. B. O.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

CHILDRESS CEMETERY.

All interested in the old Childress grave yard are asked to meet there the Wednesday after the second Sunday in August (16th) and help clean up and repair the lots.

tf

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alabama

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.,

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers. County and Office Supplies a Specialty.

Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave. BIRMINGHAM, ALA

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and contents and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightning. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of insurance known to man Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per cent.

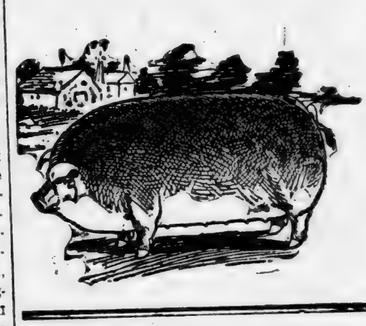
Full particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX, Maplesville, Alabama.

Gelder's Restaurant,

Good Meals at Reasonable Prices.

110 North 20th Street, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

KEEP Your Eye on THIS SPACE.

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO. Alabama

Thorsby,

CHILTON COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

Term—Third Monday in May. Term—Fourth Monday in Nov.

Judge—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
Solicitor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Clerk—John W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

Term—Second Monday in Sept.

Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
Register—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.

Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, first Monday November.

County Officers.

Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Solicitor—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would like published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley, R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 1st Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 2nd Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 4th Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 3rd Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 1st Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 2nd Sunday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 4th Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 4th Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 5th Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; Saturday before the second Sunday; J. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. J. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—3rd Saturday, Clanton.

Alamande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —First Saturday, Billingsley.

Boreman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Saturday on or before full moon, Jemison.

Stanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. —Tuesday on or before full moon, Stanton.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Fridays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304—Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

I. C. R. M.

Commercial Tribe, No. 90—First and third Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. E. B. Langston, C. R.; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.

Clanton Lodge, of Thorsby—Second and fourth Saturdays.

G STORE, Cor. Ave 19th St.
d of The Procession.—
thing, Hats, Shoes
NITURE,
URIAL NECESSITIES.
MULLINS,
Alabama
PRINTING CO.
ers and Lithographers.
e Supplies a Specialty.
BIRMINGHAM, AL

Insurance Association
ALABAMA.
AL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
le and for the People.
County Branch
February 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
llings, outbuildings and conten loss by fire, wind and lightnin d most sensible method of insu st 43-100 of 1 per cent rs upon application to CE C. EDLER, Clanton, Al

WOODLAWN
FARM.
Barred Plymouth Rocks
PURE BRED
Setting of 15 fresh eggs f
50c. Packing for shippi
10c extra.
PURE BRED
Duroc Jersey Hogs.
Write us for prices befo
you buy. Address,
W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabam

Restaurant,
t Reasonable Price
orth 20th Street,
HAM, ALABAMA.

our Eye on SPACE
er Prevents Fevers.
S FURNISH PURE WATE
water or no charge made.
n. Address
E. SARBER CO.
Alaba

ND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.
Third Monday in May, Fourth Monday in Nov.
L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Term—Second Monday in
Term—Second Monday in Sep
ellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides, ter—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan

County Court.
Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Monday February, first Mon
il, first Monday June, second July, second Monday August, day November.

County Officers.
e of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
urer—W. T. Callen.
—J. M. Morgan.
ctor—J. O. Middleton.
Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
District—W. H. Conway.
d District—Alex Glasscock.
District—R. P. Kendrick.
th District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

ors and clerks are cordially ask-d the editor any news regard-eir churches which they would ublished. Also if there are any in these notices please send cor-

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.
Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd
. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billings-
F. D. No. 1.

ton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st d Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

nut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, day. H. A. Harris, clerk.

ty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, day. W. M. Wood, clerk.

edonia—Rev., G. W. Freeman,
day. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

w Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, day. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

ar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, day. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

on Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, Mc.
. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

ns Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas day. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

on Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas day. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

sant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, day. T. J. Headley, clerk.

y Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st
. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.
el—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor;
h before the second Sunday; J.
rnathy, clerk, Verbena.

y Mount M. E. Church—Rev.
Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song every 2nd and 4th Sunday af-n. Prayer meeting every Wed-night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.
Masonic.
nton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—
Saturday, Clanton.

nte Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

nton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Clanton.

ury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Billingsley.

man Lodge, A. F. and A. M., —Saturday on or before full Marbury.

son Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Saturday on or before full moon,
on.

nton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Tuesday on or before full moon,
on.

I. O. O. F.
son Lodge—First and third Sat-
.

nton Lodge, No. 304—Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.
k Jack Camp, No. 190—First and Mondays.

I. O. R. M.
Tribe, No. 90—First and Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs
y invited. E. B. Langston, C.
I. H. Patton, Sachem.

L. M. P. A.
Lodge, of Thorsby—Second rth Saturdays.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 23, '05, 8,063.
Price same date, 10 3-8c.
Total receipts last season, 6,648.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

K. R. Burnett was in Clanton Thursday.

W. R. Dunlap was a visitor Thursday. He says his brother-in-law, Mr. James M. Moore (the painter) is doing fine in Selma. We sure are glad to hear of Bro. Moore's success, for he deserves it.

W. C. Jones was in town Thursday. He looks rather thin, having just recovered from a severe illness.

Judge Reynolds and his entire family went to Birmingham Thursday; also W. A. Reynolds and family, of Jemison, to take in the town and East Lake. The Judge returned Friday and his folks Monday. The Judge, his brother, W. A., and Hon. J. O. Thompson visited East Lake together. The three families only had 19 children in all.

J. N. Littlejohn was a pleasant visitor Friday.

B. F. Massey was in Clanton Friday, using a crutch, having stepped on a nail, giving him a very sore foot.

Rev. A. L. Foshee was in Clanton Friday.

S. M. Edwards was a welcome caller Friday.

C. M. Northcutt was in town Monday.

T. L. Matthews was a pleasant visitor Monday.

J. A. Rodgers was a welcome caller Monday.

G. W. Wilson was in Clanton Monday.

H. O. Bean was a pleasant visitor Monday.

B. Easterling was a welcome caller Monday.

Mrs. E. D. Mann, of Energy, died at her son-in-law's in Autaugua county Thursday and was buried at Bethany Friday.

A. F. Wallace was in Clanton Tuesday.

W. M. Gore, W. M. Cleckler and W. J. Minor were in town Tuesday.

W. F. Culpepper left on Tuesday evening's train for Cordova, he being one of the delegates from Chilton Co. to the State Convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America. The meeting is to hold three days, 23, 24, 25. This order is growing fast. Our farmers are taking right hold of it.

John Buck Baker went to Thorsby Wednesday.

READ THIS.

Every man owes it to himself and family to master a trade or profession. Read the display advertisement of the six morse Schools of Telegraphy, in this issue and learn how easily a young man or lady may learn telegraphy and be assured a position.

Prof. E. Mead Wilcox, of Auburn experiment station, spent Tuesday in Clanton and vicinity examining diseased cotton plants. He went to Thorsby Tuesday evening, where he will inspect and report on sweet potatoes and fruit disease there. The professor will visit John L. Winslow's sweet potato plantation and nursery near Thorsby.

Judge Reynolds and ye Editor of THE UNION visited Stanton Saturday. While they were not in time to hear the speaking, they did hear some good music rendered by Dr. and Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Gandy. The rain coming at the time it did undoubtedly spoiled what otherwise would have been a very enjoyable day.

Protracted meeting at the Baptist church by the Revs. Swindall and Upshaw is attracting large audiences. Many conversions are looked for.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

G. W. Hicks and Miss Bertie Hide
D. L. Wright and Miss Joyce Wyatt.
H. N. Martin and Miss Viola Murrah
John T. Young and Miss Ella B. Cunningham. George W. Mims and Miss Birdie Johnson. G. A. Zimmerman and Miss Hattie Sears. George W. Bruce and Miss Rutha May Eiland.

COLORED.

Allen Taggard and Donie Oden.

A GENERAL SURPRISE.

On Sunday morning, August 20, Mr. George Zimmerman and Miss Hattie Sears were happily united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Rev. Mr. Lowery officiating. We all heartily congratulate the happy pair and wish them much success and happiness in their future life.

FARMERS' EDUCATIONAL UNION.

Delegates from the various lodges of the union in Chilton county met in the court house at Clanton on August 21 for the purpose of organizing a county union. Organizer N. W. Abbott, of Shelby county, was present, and the elected temporary officers are as follows: President, N. W. Abbott; secretary, J. D. Collins; conductor, W. F. Culpepper; chaplain, G. W. Thomas; Committee on Credentials, W. H. Conway, Moses Robinson and N. A. Dobbs. The following is a list of the delegates from the various unions and the number of members reported by each: Highland, 45, N. A. Dobbs, W. F. Culpepper, B. F. Dobbs, J. J. Gallman and W. J. Watson; Mineral Springs, 6, W. P. Cleckler and G. D. Retherford; Enterprise, 10, M. C. Williams and C. C. Burkhalter; Pleasant Hill, 23, S. H. Driver, J. R. Blow, A. L. Blow and W. G. Blow; Union, 23, W. H. Conway, W. A. Barnett and J. W. Sorrels; Mars Hill, 7, W. R. Cofer and G. W. Scott; Collins' Chapel, 13, T. J. Martin and J. A. Bean; Pleasant Grove, 8, J. H. Thomas and J. T. Blow; Macedonia, 6, J. C. Veazey and H. H. Armstrong; Rocky Mount, T. L. Matthews and C. M. Northcutt; Poplar Springs, 8, W. W. Devaughan, J. W. Paterson and C. D. Higgins; Providence, 16, Moses Robinson, G. W. Thomas and W. W. Robinson; School District No. 32, 13, W. J. Easterling and Thomas Taylor. The following officers were elected for the present year and installed in their respective stations by Bro. N. W. Abbott: President, Moses Robinson; vice-president, N. A. Dobbs; secretary-treasurer, G. W. Sorrells; chaplain, G. W. Thomas; doorkeeper, W. J. Bean; conductor, W. L. Honeycutt; lecturer, J. H. Thomas; business agent, W. H Conway; Executive Committee, W. A. Barnett, J. E. Robinson and J. D. Collins; delegates to the State convention to be held at Cordova, August 24, 25 and 26, J. W. Sorrell, J. E. Robinson and J. C. Veazey; alternates, G. W Thomas, W. F. Culpepper and J. D. Collins. The next county meeting will be held at Pleasant Grove Church October 18-19, 1905. From all indications this order has a bright future before it. In Texas it is very strong, and is fast occupying other States. Farmers are at last getting convinced that they need organization, and when they do organize fully they can wield more power than any other vocation. Now, all fall into line and touch elbows, and no wavering.

PROGRAM OF CHILTON COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

To Be Held at Isabella September 15-16, 1905.

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exercises, Prof. J. Toi. Williams.

10:30. Welcome address, G. L. Speer; response by County Superintendent J. W. Moore.

11. "Ends to Be Accomplished by Teachers' Institutes," R. E. R. Hicks.

11:30. "Teacher's Preparation for Class Work," H. A. Harris, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2 p. m. "Value of School Entertainments," V. J. Gragg, Miss Janie Roebuck.

3. "School Discipline," institute.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises.

9:30. "How May Patrons Help Their Teachers?" W. B. Speer, Miss Etta Roper.

10. "Requisite to Successful Teaching," R. E. Sessions, Mrs. W. B. Speer.

11. Educational address, Hon. S. J. Bowie.

There will be conveyances for those coming by rail to Maplesville and Thorsby. This being the last institute of the year, all teachers are earnestly requested to attend.

J. W. MOORE,
G. L. SPEER,
R. A. RASCO,
H. L. DAVIS,
Educational Board.

tf

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

Crops are looking fine, though cotton is shedding squares since the continued rains; also there is some kind of blight which is affecting cotton. Some of the grown bolls look as if they had been half burnt. Prof. A. E. Glasscock's singing school has been vacated on account of his sickness. We all hope for his speedy recovery, and he sure did start a fine school. J. D. Scott was a visitor at O. P. Scott's Thursday. J. D. is a good singer and organist, and in fact a lover of good music; also a good marble player. Baseball is about dead, and marble playing has taken its place. Mrs. Mattie Johnson is overhauling and adding to her house now occupied by O. P. Scott. A. J. Scott sold a nice mare a few days ago to Mr. Trott, of Bibb county, for $75 cash, and has another to sell or trade for a mule. Our mail carrier comes down the road occasionally at night. Watch out, Judge; I can almost hear "dem wedding bells." N. W. Abbott, of Calera, gave us a very able address Saturday on "Organization," also comparing the financial standing of farmers with other vocations. He organized a lodge at this place. We were all glad to see Mr. A. C. S.'s piece in the Union, and want him to come again. I guess Whippoorwill is like the old preacher, "run out of words."

DAD'S PLOW BOY.

Oklahoma City, Aug. 17, 1905.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your paper for a few words. So many of my friends have asked me to write to them, and it being almost impossible to write to all, that I'll write to the Union, and so won't miss any of them. I am now in Oklahoma City; reached here on the 14th from Birmingham, which I left on the 12th. I've been to Elodrado, O. T., and Quanah, Tex. I've seen some fine country since I left Alabama. One man can tend as much land here as three can there; he don't have to get hold of the plow handles; he gets on his plow with a shade over him and rides all the time, with from three to five horses to pull the plow. I've seen as much as a thousand acres in corn in one body, and it looked fine. Cotton is late in this country, but it is as fine as I ever saw. I've seen more millet in one field out here than I ever saw in all my life before. I like some portions of this country all right, and some I don't like. We'll go to the Creek nation in the morning and see the Red men. I can't tell you much yet, but will write you again. My friends in Chilton, I hope to see you again some time. It may be soon or it may be late; but if I never see you again in this life, I hope to meet you in the other world, where I believe some of you are going. If we can only meet over there and shake hands how nice it will be. From one who is far away

F. J. FITTS.

THORSBY LETTER.

Mr. R. T. Moore, of North Birmingham, spent several days in our town last week. Mr. J. M. Thornton, of Talladega, representing the Immigration and Industrial Association of Alabama, was a recent visitor here. Miss Lucy Hawthorne, a trained nurse in the hospital at Tuscaloosa, is spending a month's vacation with her parents. The Ladies' Aid Society of the Union Protestant church of Thorsby, met in the college hall last Wednesday. Mr. C. M. Johnson has returned north on business. He expects to return this fall. Mrs. Goodwin, of Chicago, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. S. E. Norton, for some time, has returned to her home. The Messrs. Payne, who have been spending the summer with the Norton family, have also returned to their former home. Miss Tarina Paulson entertained a number of her lady friends at the home of her parents on Tuesday last. The many friends of Miss Dora Thorson will be sorry to learn that she is confined to her bed with a severe spell of the slow fever. We all wish her a speedy recovery. Professor Ruffin and his family recently arrived here from Tennessee. They are stopping with the Stanley family. The members of the Luther League surprised Miss Clara Soberg on last Friday night. All present enjoyed the evening very much. Several of our prominent citizens were in Clanton last week. Mr. Villadsen sold his planing mill to the stockholders of the cotton warehouse and fertilizer factory. Miss Sarah Collier entertained a number of her friends at the home of her parents on Saturday afternoon. Mr. McNeill, of Montgomery, was a visitor here last week. His wife, who was a guest at the Hawthorne home for some time, returned to the city with him. Mr. G. Berlin returned from Chicago on Sunday. If rumors are true the Thorsby boys will have occasion to do considerable serenading in the near future. Cupid seems to be wide awake just now. M. J. Barrett is visiting in Waterloo, Iowa.

CHATTERBOX.

UNION.

At Union, District No. 51, on Friday, August 25, there will be a day devoted to the cause of education. Everybody is cordially invited and especially all teachers and educators. There will be conveyances provided at Jemison to bring out all teachers and those who take part. Please notify the trustees if you intend to come. Come one, come all, and let's have a grand rally.

J. W. SORRELL,
J. N. GLASSCOCK,
W. H. CONWAY,
Trustees.

N. B.—We have invited State Supt. Hill, Supt. of Jefferson County McAdory, Judge L. H. Reynolds, the county trustees and others and expect to have them all come. tf

NOTICE!

To the Stockholders of FARMERS' WAREHOUSE AND FERTILIZER CO.: This is to notify you to meet in NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDING, THORSBY, ALA., SATURDAY, AUG. 26TH, 1905. There is some very important business to attend to. Done by order of directors.

J. BICE,
tf President.

NOTICE TO OVERSEERS.

Please do your duty on the roads in Beat 9. Give them 5 days' work between now and next circuit court.

R. D. CHILDRESS,
J. R. COLLINS,
tf Apportioners.

OAK GROVE.

All those that are interested in the old Mount Hope cemetery are invited to meet there on August 25th, the Friday before the 4th Sunday, and help to clean and fix up the grounds. Come one, come all.

tf JOHN COBB.

PROMPT PAY.

The following letter is a tribute to the promptness with which the British America Insurance Company pays its losses when they occur; no beating round the bush for a couple of months and then taking 60 days more unless the loser will submit to a discount.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 14, 1905.

Mr. W. C. Edler,
Agent British America Ins. Co.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:

I wish to acknowledge the receipt of $1,800 from the company which you represent and in which I insured through your solicitation. My loss occurred on July 4th, and I recognize that a little delay was caused by the scarcity of adjusters, there having been some serious fires in Birmingham and other places about that time. The very day the adjuster appointed to investigate the loss, reported all clear to the company, it forwarded me the amount of my claim in full, and I am pleased with the prompt manner in which it does business.

Very truly yours,
tf W. M. WILSON.

Academic Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.
MONTEVALLO, ALA.
REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President
Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.
Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

A Great Combination Offer
We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the
St. Louis Globe-Democrat
WITH
The Union
FOR
$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50
The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.
If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.
NOW IS THE TIME.
Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address
The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,
Furniture and Rugs.
—SOLE AGENTS—
Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.
Catalogue for the asking.
1011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PAUL CALAME,
205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.
Practical Watchmaker and Optician
Eyes Correctly Fitted
Mail orders promptly filled

Statement of

The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama.

(Chilton County Branch.)

President: W. M. Wilson, Clanton.
Sec.-Treas. Wallace C. Edler, Clanton.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 7, 1905.

In the five and a half years that this Association has been in existence, it has levied seventeen (17) assessments to pay twenty-six (26) losses, viz: Lightning, 1; wind, 4; fire, 21. The total of the seventeen assessments was $2.36¼ per hundred dollars, being an average yearly assessment of 43 cents on each hundred dollars of insurance per annum.

W. M. WILSON,
President Chilton County Branch.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 7th day of August 1905.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
tf. Judge of Probate.

Rough Mining Camps Disappearing

By Henry F. Cope.

FEW things in the development of our country could be more striking than the strides taken by mining within the last few years. Contrast the Cripple Creek district of 1890, with its 40 square miles of ranch lands, or again, of 1891 or 1892 with its thousands of prospect-holes and diminutive dumps on one side, with the picture of today, with its many mines almost entirely consolidated in 14 great companies with its 50,000 settled population, its dignified city and it production, in spite of the terrific labor struggle, of nearly $12,000,000 worth of gold in 1903, while the production for 1904 is estimated at $23,000,000. Contrast the conditions when the miner trudged up Bull hill from his cabin carrying his tools, groped his way down his rude ladders and picked away at his own little mine, with the conditions today, when he goes to his work on an electric car, descends the mine in an electric hoist, works by electric light, drills with electric air-compressors and fires his shot by electricity from an electric switchboard remote from the scene of his tamping. Set the old drill and hand sledge beside the air-drill, and the miner's candlestick beside the arc-light. Contrast the miner in that district who, 10 years ago, could not handle with any profit an ore that ran under $100 per ton with the mills of today, which by chlorination and cyanide plants make a margin on $10 ores. Contrast the individual workings scattered over Anaconda Hill, now Butte, with the present impressive sight of the immense steel gallows frames, smokestacks and concentrators of the seven great companies employing 8000 men—one company having nearly 4000 men—and producing annually nearly fifty millions of wealth.—The World Today.

FARM AND GARDEN

MILK AND VITALITY.

In his recent address to the Holstein-Friesian Association at Syracuse, N. Y., President Cortelyou of the association touched upon the vitality of cows and their milk. He said:

"The most important work of a public nature which, in my opinion will operate to advance the interest of owners of Holstein cattle, is the promulgation of a better knowledge among consumers of milk, of the dietetic value of the grade of milk produced by our cows. It is a well known fact that the offspring of those breeds of cattle whose milk is rich in butter fat are reared with the greatest difficulty. Such offspring appear to be deficient in vitality and especially subject to stomach and bowel troubles which are fatal in many cases; and it is now being more generally recognized by physicians and consumers that milk rich in butter fat is an improper food for young children and is deleterious in its effects and produces generally the same effects in human beings as in animals.

These results are now said by scientists to be due to several causes and primarily to the excess of fat in the milk, and in the case of children, particularly, are probably also due to the extraordinary character of the fat globules, which in these small breeds of cattle are extraordinary large, and entirely unlike those of Holstein milk which nearly corresponds with human milk in its solid contents.

It is also becoming widely recognized that the milk from the large and vigorous races of cattle specially Holstein's, possesses another quality, characterized by Professor Carlyle, as vitality, and that this quality is communicated to the consumer, whether man or beast. Thus we have large, strong, vigorous calves when reared upon Holstein milk, and puny, weak ones from those reared upon milk rich in fat; and human beings, fed upon milk possessing the characteristics of Holstein milk, are likewise healthy, strong and vigorous.

The investigations of the Storrs Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, as published in bulletin No. 31 wholly confirm these assertions and I commend this bulletin to you as worthy of most careful study.

Professor Carlyle was right in affirming that "there is such a thing as vitality in milk and that it is of equal if not greater importance than its chemical composition, especially for the milk supply of cities, and there can be no question but that the vitality of the animal producing it.—Indiana Farmer.

HOW TO INOCULATE FOR ALFALFA.

Prof. Hopkins, of Illinois, one of the most distinguished soil experts of the country, advises in inoculating for alfalfa to use at least 100 pounds of inoculated soil to the acre. The soil should be scattered over the field, he says, with some degree of uniformity, but it is not like seeding grain, and it is not absolutely essential that every square yard in the field should receive its due portion of infected soil. Some care should be taken in spreading it over the higher places in the field, but if places should be missed on sloping land or on lower lands the bacteria will soon be carried over them by the surface drainage waters. Indeed, if all the watersheds in the field—that is all ridges and high places—are well inoculated the entire field will ultimately become infected, the bacteria being carried by soil washing, but the infection is more rapid of course, if the infected soil is spread over the entire field with some degree of uniformity when it is first applied.

If possible, the soil should be applied at about the time the alfalfa seed is sowed and then harrowed in with the seed, but it may be applied a month or two before sowing the alfalfa or at any time afterwards and it is not absolutely necessary that it be harrowed in, although that is advisable.

If applied to a field where the alfalfa is already a year or two old the infected soil may be mixed with the soil of the field by harrowing or disking (the disks being set straight, so as to cut off the alfalfa roots).

The infected soil may be applied in any way to get it over the field—as by hand (throwing it from the wagon), with an equal gate seeder, if the soil is dry enough and sufficiently well pulverized or an any other way which may be found convenient.

The results obtained during the past year fully confirm the results previously reported by the Illinois station concerning the importance and value of inoculation for alfalfa. The information which we now have strongly indicates that if it is provided with the proper bacteria alfalfa can be successfully grown on any soil where both corn and red clover are successfully crops.

HILLSIDE BROODER HOUSE WITH FLOOR.

The Connecticut station brooder house is described by F. H. Stoneburn, which has proved very successful. The house is built on a side hill, and its essential feature is an elevated chick floor, which is 3.5 feet above the level of the alley along the side of the building. This arrangement is secured by taking advantage of the hillside for the level of the chick floor and digging out the space for the alley as much as necessary. If built on the level the author notes that special attention must be paid to securing good drainage in the alley, which would then have to be dug below the surface. The elevated chick floor effects a saving in the amount of heat required to maintain a given temperature, since it diminishes the enclosed air space, which must be heated, and brings the chicks near the ceiling, the warmest part of the room.

Tests have shown that in cold weather the temperature at the level of the alley floor was fourteen degrees lower than at the chick floor. By building on a hillside an amount of side wall exposed to the weather is considerably diminished which is an advantage from the standpoint of heating. The plan followed has a disadvantage in that the chick pens are low, and so it was rather inconvenient for the attendant to enter them when it was necessary. — Massachuetts Ploughman.

CARE OF TOOLS.

Farmers make a great mistake if they fail to provide a place where the tools can be stored carefully and kept from the weather. So many farmers allow their hired help to be careless with the tools when they are through with them, to throw them down in the field where they must take the sun and the rain; or if carried to the tool house at all, are left with dirt on them, so that they will rust and ruin. This ought not to be so. Every tool, as it has served its purpose, should be cleaned and put in the tool house in its place. It can then be readily found when needed, and will be fit for use. Carelessness with the tools means loss of time and money. A plow costs eight dollars; the hired man leaves it in the field; it rusts and the consequence is it requires a half day to clean it, for it refuses to turn dirt when rusty. The plow is injured, whereas, five minutes would have sufficed to clean it and put it away, thus keeping the plow uninjured and saving the wages of the hired man while there should have been a lot of work done with the plow. All the tools should be kept in order. Nothing should be laid away out of repair. It will save your temper as well as your cash, if a rule is adopted to care for the tools properly and keep them always ready for use. As soon as you are done with a mower, binder or harrow, put it under shelter. The small tools should be kept in a tool chest; they are then all together and ready for use. These are seemingly insignificant matters; but they count for much in the aggregate. Loss of time means loss of money and tools cost too much to be neglected in this way.—Mrs. Lou J. Duncan, in the Epitomist.

GOSLINGS PAY WELL.

Young goslings should be put on a lot where the grass is vigorous and tender, and should be given besides all the meal and shorts they will eat and some meat scraps. They are allowed to run in a half-acre lot until the flight feathers reach the root of the tail, then they are kept in a small enclosure with some shade and fed for about three weeks all the corn meal with one quart of meat scraps that they will eat in the morning and whole corn at night. They have all the water they will drink and a box of clear sharp sand.

When ready for market, they should be dressed carefully with the head on and leaving the flight feathers and about half the neck unpicked. They should bring from eighteen to twenty-five cents per pound and average nine pounds each. A goose that will lay fifty eggs a season is almost as profitable as the average cow. An extra profit is the feathers which amount to about seventy cents per ten goslings.—Massachuestts Ploughman.

A HANDY CONTRIVANCE.

To hold cow's tail while being milked, string a wire above and a little back of the cow and then take three or four short wires about 20 to 24 inches long and make a hook on each end, one small one to go on the wire and the other to hook on the tail.—Etna Burgress, in The Epitomist.

The Word "Jinrikisha."

The word jinrikisha comes from three Japanese roots, jin-riki-sha, meaning respectively man, power, carriage, but it is not of Japanese origin. So recently as 1870 the inconvenience of the slow, lumbering two-wheeled carts turned the thoughts of English residents to the ease with which the hardy natives could propel a lightly constructed vehicle, and one was invented, some say by a missionary, others by a newspaper proprietor's son. Ever since then the heavy carts have been entirely dispensed with.

The population of Chicago is now 2,272,700 people.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE.

MAYOR WEAVER, OF PHILADELPHIA.

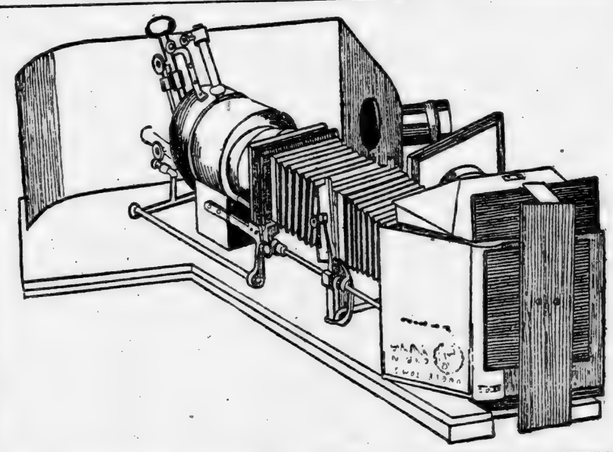
A "snapshot" taken during an automobile ride. Mayor Weaver's sensational attack on the gas lease "gang" has attracted the attention of the entire country.

SLIDES DISPENSED WITH.

New Projecting Apparatus For Illustrating Lectures.

A new form of lantern has recently made its appearance, which differs markedly both in its optical principles and in the results attained from the ordinary projecting apparatus which the lecturer is accustomed to use. Limited as it is to the utilization of slides only, the ordinary lantern renders it impossible to use directly illustrations from books, sketches, specimens and models. Photographs of these various objects must first be made, and from the negative a lantern slide prepared. Even though the resulting slide may be sharp and clear in every detail, it still presents the defect of presenting its subject in dead black and white tones. Attempts at coloring, although sometimes successful, are often the cause of many grievous errors on the part of the artist. The apparatus which we are about to describe, and which has been recently introduced by Philadelphia instrument makers, projects on a screen not only the image of a lantern slide, but reflects as well pictures in books, specimens of insects, or other natural objects, mechanical models and the like, and this all in the natural colors of the objects. The lecturer is thus enabled to make use of the countless illustrations in magazines and books, of an innumerable series of color prints, sketches, photographs, and of working models that can be shown in motion on the screen, as well as apparatus for experimenting in chemistry and physics, specimens of plants, flowers and moths, all in the delicate tints of the originals.

By the use of lenses, diaphragms and mirrors the object is illuminated and reflected on to the screen. By use of an illuminating lens, a cone of light from the condenser is projected upon the object, every part being uniformly illuminated. The lens is used either for spreading the light over the entire object or condensing it upon a small portion when a very brilliant light and special details are desired. When the lens is shifted toward the source of light, the rays are distributed over the entire object; when the lens is drawn toward the object, the beams condense and concentrate on the point desired.—Philadelphia Record.



NEW PROJECTION APPARATUS, DOES AWAY WITH LANTERN SLIDES.

The present Governors of Kansas, Minnesota and Oklahoma are country editors.

At Grahamstown, South Africa, a pair of ostriches were sold recently for $5000.

A SIMPLE TENT.

A tent can be made by children very easily and quickly without outside help. Get three old sheets or shawls, a rope and some safety pins, and follow this picture and description:

Tie the rope between two trees so that you may walk under it without touching your head. Throw a sheet or shawl over it. Tie four strings as long as yourself to each corner of the sheet (one on each corner). On the other end of each string tie a pointed stick. Drive these sticks into the ground as far from the rope as you can. The sheet will now make a good roof. Two more sheets are now used for the sides of the tent. Each sheet makes an end and one side.

THE TENT IN POSITION.

Use safety pins to pin up these sides. The hole at each end of the tent under the roof is necessary to keep it cool and comfortable. Most tents are very stuffy and hot, but this tent is as satisfactory an arrangement as can be made.—Indianapolis News.

A Financier.

Fritz Himmelsdorf, a butcher in a small Western town, kept his money on deposit at the one bank the town boasted. While not very well versed in the intricacies of banking, he was very proud of the fact that he possessed a bank account and never failed to write a check when he was compelled to pay out any amount, however small. One day, through some mistake, he drew a check for an amount somewhat in excess of his balance at the bank. Next morning William Jones, the collector for the bank, came into the shop where the butcher was chopping hamburger steak to the tune of "Ach, du Lieber Augustin," which he was very earnestly whistling.

"Mr. Himmelsdorf," said Jones, "you have an overdraft at the bank amounting to $4.63."

"Ach, iss dot so?" said Fritz, slowly. "Valt till I get my check book, Billy, and I gif you a check for it."—Vernon Wilder, in Harper's

An Essay on the Cat.

A little English girl wrote the following essay on a cat: "The cat is a square quadruped, has its legs at the four corners. If you want to please this animal you must stroke it on the back. If it is very much pleased it sets up its tail quite stiff, like a ruler, so that your hand cannot get any further. The cat is said to have nine lives, but in this country it seldom needs them all because of Christianity."

Her Qualms.

"Are you entirely satisfied with your alimony?" asked her friend.

"No. Sometimes I am afraid some of it may be tainted. I don't see how he can possibly earn as much legitimately as I am getting."

"If there is any question about it, why don't you accept less, and so enable him to——"

"Mercy sakes! What a silly thing you must think I am!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Fashion Notes

New York City.—Jaunty little Eton jackets make notable favorites of the season and are never more attractive than when worn by young girls. This one is so simple that it involves the least possible labor and skill in the making and at the same time is attractive and smart in the extreme. Illustrated it is made of taffeta with bands of the silk, cut bias and edged with tiny braid as finish and serves the purpose of a general wrap, but also is in essentially a style that may be altered to suit various requirements, even if it cannot be made exactly as it is.

Lingerie Blouse With Yoke.

The lingerie blouse is one of the fashions that alone is it the style for the summer. It extended through very dainty and one is quite beyond yoke that is shaped and which allows ments. In this lawn is combined with lace, but all material embroidered or tucked is appropriate for the yoke, can be of lace or embroidery or material worked with the stitches that always touch. The elbow sleeves are exceedingly fashionable and are very pretty, if becoming, but there is a choice allowed between these and long ones, so that all needs can be supplied.

Both waist and yoke are made with front and back portions. The waist is tucked in groups and joined to yoke, and the closing is made invisibly at the back. The elbow sleeves are tucked at their lower edges and finished with stylish ruffles of would be suited to the costume, to linen, to mohair and to all seasonable materials. For the general wrap taffeta and mohair are perhaps the most fashionable of all materials at this season, but when used for the costume it can be made from anything that may be liked.

A LATE DESIGN BY MAY MANTON

The jacket consists of the front, back and sleeves, and is fitted by means of shoulder and under-arm seams. The sleeves are loose and in elbow length so that the little garment can be slipped on with perfect ease over any waist that may be worn beneath.

For a girl of fourteen years will be required two and one-fourth yards of material twenty-one, two yards twenty-seven, or seven-eighth yard forty-four inches wide, with six yards of banding to trim as illustrated.

The Staple Bargain.

The sensible woman uses her reason on these occasions. She knows that it is folly to buy a gown which is already a little out of style. Unless a bargain can be worn at least a part of next season, it is no bargain at all. One must do a little looking forward. Is the reign of the pleated skirt beginning to fail? Will the popular broderie Anglaise be worn next year? Is the half-sleeve a fleeting fashion? If so, it is no economy to buy them at this late day. On the other hand, linen is a staple material, and [illegible] is in essentially a style that may be altered to suit various requirements, even if it cannot be made exactly as it is.

long ones are made with deep cuffs and puffed upper portions.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is four and one-half yards twenty-one, three and one-half yards twenty-seven, or three and one-fourth yards forty-four inches wide, with five-eighth yard of silver material and three yards of silk.

Gulmpes Are Fashionable.

The dress without a guimpe or a chemisette is an exception this season. The fashion is greatly to be encouraged not only for its daintiness and almost universal becomingness, but also for its coolness.

An Outing Hat.

There is no prettier outing hat than the roll-brim of soft duck or pique, trimmed with a silk handkerchief and a white bird or wings.

Veils Must Match.

One has to be very careful about one's veil in these particular days. Primarily, it must match the hat, but that is not all. The eccentric shapes of many of the new hats have to be taken into consideration in selecting a veil.

The Empire Dress.

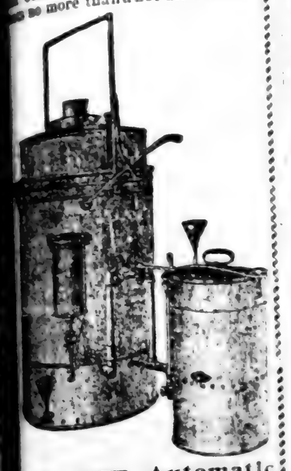
The quaint lines of the "Empire Dress" are singularly becoming to the slender and youthful figure. They are best made with a detachable yoke.

Gas Light for Country Homes.

Small country homes, as well as large ones, may be lighted by the best light known—ACETYLENE—it is easier on the eyes than any other illuminant, cheaper than kerosene, as convenient as city gas, cleaner than electricity and safer than either.

No ill-smelling lamps to clean, and no chimneys or mantels to break. For light cooking it is convenient and cheap.

ACETYLENE is made in the basement and piped to all rooms and out-buildings. Complete plant costs no more than a hot air furnace.



PILOT Automatic Generators make the gas. They are perfect in construction, reliable, safe and simple.

Our booklet, "After Sunset," tells more about ACETYLENE—sent free on request.

Dealers or others interested in the sale of ACETYLENE apparatus write us for selling plan on PILOT Generators and supplies. It is a paying proposition for reliable workers.

ACETYLENE APPARATUS MFG. CO., 32 Michigan Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Write Quick FOR A Big Bargain

to better advertise the South's Leading Business College, four scholarships are offered young persons of this county at less than WRITE TODAY.

ALA. BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

President Jacob Gould Schurmann, of Cornell University, has received a decoration appointing him a member for life in the American Academy in Rome. This academy was founded in 1894 for the purpose of furthering the advancement of the fine arts and is perhaps the most prominent of its kind in the world.

It is said that the wife of M. Witte, the Russian peace plenipotentiary, is a Jewess—a fact that has closed many doors to him in Russian court and official circles and been a certain obstacle to him in his public career. The count was originally married to one of his own race, whom she divorced to marry Witte.

Sir John Madden, chief justice of Victoria, has discovered a new plan of punishing old offenders. He adds up all their previous terms and makes them all their sentence. The other day he announced an offender to nine years and one month—his aggregate record.

It is announced unofficially, but on an authoritative source, that Governor La Follette, of Wisconsin, will relinquish the office of governor early in September and go to Washington as United States senator in Congress.

Perkins, the New Hampshire millionaire, who died the other day, never ate anything swifter than a pair of oxen.

WRONG SORT

Perhaps Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and Bread May Be Against You For a Time

A change to the right kind of food will lift one from a sick bed. A lady in Malden, Ill., says:

"Last spring I became bedfast with severe stomach trouble accompanied with headache. I got worse and worse until I became so low I could scarcely retain any food at all, although I tried every kind. I had become completely discouraged, had given up all hope and thought I was doomed to starve to death, till one day my husband try[illegible] and something I could retain brought some Grape-Nuts.

To my surprise the food agreed with me, digested perfectly and without distress. I began to gain strength and flesh, my flesh (which had been flabby) grew firmer, my health improved in every way and every day, and in a very few weeks I gained 20 pounds in weight. I liked Grape-Nuts so well that for 4 months I ate no other food and always felt as well satisfied after a meal as if I had just sat down to a feast.

"I had no return of the miserable stomach nor of the headaches I used to have when I ate other food, but am now a well woman, doing all my own work again, and feel that life is worth living.

"Grape-Nuts food has been a godsend to my family; it surely saved my life and my two little boys have thrived wonderfully." Name given by Postum Cereal Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Look for the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each pkg.

FARM AND GARDEN

MILK AND VITALITY.

In his recent address to the Holstein-Friesian Association at Syracuse, N. Y., President Cortelyou of the association touched upon the vitality of cows and their milk. He said:

"The most important work of a public nature which, in my opinion will operate to advance the interest of owners of Holstein cattle, is the promulgation of a better knowledge among consumers of milk, of the dietetic value of the grade of milk produced by our cows. It is a well known fact that the offspring of those breeds of cattle whose milk is rich in butter fat are reared with the greatest difficulty. Such offspring appear to be deficient in vitality and especially subject to stomach and bowel troubles which are fatal in many cases; and it is now being more generally recognized by physicians and consumers that milk rich in butter fat is an improper food for young children and is deleterious in its effects and produces generally the same effects in human beings as in animals.

These results are now said by scientists to be due to several causes and primarily to the excess of fat in the milk, and in the case of children, particularly, are probably also due to the extraordinary character of the fat globules, which in these small breeds of cattle are extraordinary large, and entirely unlike those of Holstein milk which nearly corresponds with human milk in its solid contents.

It is also becoming widely recognized that the milk from the large and vigorous races of cattle specially Holstein's, possesses another quality, characterized by Professor Carlyle as vitality, and that this quality is communicated to the consumer, whether man or beast. Thus we have large, strong, vigorous calves when reared upon Holstein milk, and puny, weak ones from those reared upon milk rich in fat; and human beings, fed upon milk possessing the characteristics of Holstein milk, are likewise healthy, strong and vigorous.

The investigations of the Storrs Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, as published in bulletin No. 31 wholly confirm these assertions and I commend this bulletin to you as worthy of most careful study.

Professor Carlyle was right in affirming that "there is such a thing as vitality in milk and that it is of equal if not greater importance than its chemical composition, especially for the milk supply of cities, and there can be no question but that the vitality of the animal producing it.—Indiana Farmer.

HOW TO INOCULATE FOR ALFALFA.

Prof. Hopkins, of Illinois, one of the most distinguished soil experts of the country, advises in inoculating for alfalfa to use at least 100 pounds of inoculated soil to the acre. The soil should be scattered over the field, he says, with some degree of uniformity, but it is not like seeding grain, and it is not absolutely essential that every square yard in the field should receive its due portion of infected soil. Some care should be taken in spreading it over the higher places in the field, but if places should be missed on sloping land or on lower lands the bacteria will soon be carried over them by the surface drainage waters. Indeed, if all the watersheds in the field—that is all ridges and high places—are well inoculated the entire field will ultimately become infected, the bacteria being carried by soil washing, but the infection is more rapid of course, if the infected soil is spread over the entire field with some degree of uniformity when it is first applied.

If possible, the soil should be applied at about the time the alfalfa seed is sowed and then harrowed in with the seed, but it may be applied a month or two before sowing the alfalfa or at any time afterwards and it is not absolutely necessary that it be harrowed in, although that is advisable.

If applied to a field where the alfalfa is already a year or two old the infected soil may be mixed with the soil of the field by harrowing or disking (the disks being set straight, so as to cut off the alfalfa roots).

The infected soil may be applied in any way to get it over the field—as by hand (throwing it from the wagon), with an equal gate seeder, if the soil is dry enough and sufficiently well pulverized or an any other way which may be found convenient.

The results obtained during the past year fully confirm the results previously reported by the Illinois station concerning the importance and value of inoculation for alfalfa. The information which we now have strongly indicates that if it is provided with the proper bacteria alfalfa can be successfully grown on any soil where both corn and red clover are successfully crops.

HILLSIDE BROODER HOUSE WITH FLOOR.

The Connecticut station brooder house is described by F. H. Stoneburn, which has proved very successful. The house is built on a side hill, and its essential feature is an elevated chick floor, which is 3.5 feet above the level of the alley along the side of the building. This arrangement is secured by taking advantage of the hillside for the level of the chick floor and digging out the space for the alley as much as necessary. If built on the level the author notes that special attention must be paid to securing good drainage in the alley, which would then have to be dug below the surface. The elevated chick floor effects a saving in the amount of heat required to maintain a given temperature, since it diminishes the enclosed air space, which must be heated, and brings the chicks near the ceiling, the warmest part of the room.

Tests have shown that in cold weather the temperature at the level of the alley floor was fourteen degrees lower than at the chick floor. By building on a hillside an amount of side wall exposed to the weather is considerably diminished which is an advantage from the standpoint of heating. The plan followed has a disadvantage in that the chick pens are low, and so it was rather inconvenient for the attendant to enter them when it was necessary. — Massachuetts Ploughman.

CARE OF TOOLS.

Farmers make a great mistake if they fail to provide a place where the tools can be stored carefully and kept from the weather. So many farmers allow their hired help to be careless with the tools when they are through with them, to throw them down in the field where they must take the sun and the rain; or if carried to the tool house at all, are left with dirt on them, so that they will rust and ruin. This ought not to be so. Every tool, as it has served its purpose, should be cleaned and put in the tool house in its place. It can then be readily found when needed, and will be fit for use. Carelessness with the tools means loss of time and money. A plow costs eight dollars; the hired man leaves it in the field; it rusts and the consequence is it requires a half day to clean it, for it refuses to turn dirt when rusty. The plow is injured, whereas, five minutes would have sufficed to clean it and put it away, thus keeping the plow uninjured and saving the wages of the hired man while there should have been a lot of work done with the plow. All the tools should be kept in order. Nothing should be laid away out of repair. It will save your temper as well as your cash, if a rule is adopted to care for the tools properly and keep them always ready for use. As soon as you are done with a mower, binder or harrow, put it under shelter. The small tools should be kept in a tool chest; they are then all together and ready for use. These are seemingly insignificant matters; but they count for much in the aggregate. Loss of time means loss of money and tools cost too much to be neglected in this way.—Mrs. Lou J. Duncan, in the Epitomist.

GOSLINGS PAY WELL.

Young goslings should be put on a lot where the grass is vigorous and tender, and should be given besides all the meal and shorts they will eat and some meat scraps. They are allowed to run in a half-acre lot until the flight feathers reach the root of the tail, then they are kept in a small enclosure with some shade and fed for about three weeks all the corn meal with one quart of meat scraps that they will eat in the morning and whole corn at night. They have all the water they will drink and a box of clear sharp sand.

When ready for market, they should be dressed carefully with the head on and leaving the flight feathers and about half the neck unpicked. They should bring from eighteen to twenty-five cents per pound and average nine pounds each. A goose that will lay fifty eggs a season is almost as profitable as the average cow. An extra profit is the feathers which amount to about seventy cents per ten goslings.—Massachuestts Ploughman.

A HANDY CONTRIVANCE.

To hold cow's tail while being milked, string a wire above and a little back of the cow and then take three or four short wires about 20 to 24 inches long and make a hook on each end, one small one to go on the wire and the other to hook on the tail.—Etna Burgress, in The Epitomist.

The Word "Jinrikisha."

The word jinrikisha comes from three Japanese roots, jin-riki-sha, meaning respectively man, power, carriage, but it is not of Japanese origin. So recently as 1870 the inconvenience of the slow, lumbering two-wheeled carts turned the thoughts of English residents to the ease with which the hardy natives could propel a lightly constructed vehicle, and one was invented, some say by a missionary, others by a newspaper proprietor's son. Ever since then the heavy carts have been entirely dispensed with.

The population of Chicago is now 2,272,700 people.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE.

MAYOR WEAVER, OF PHILADELPHIA.

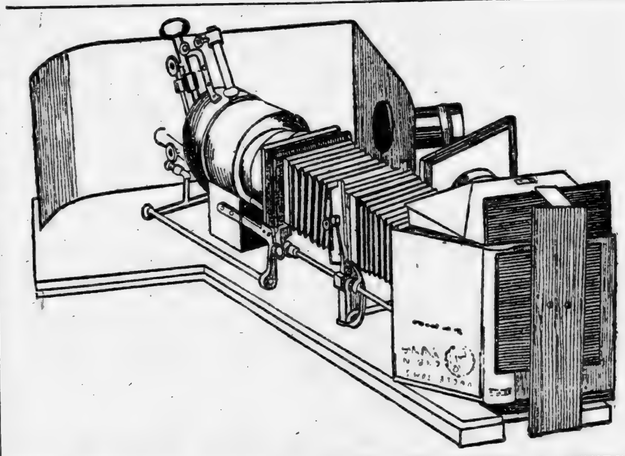
A "snapshot" taken during an automobile ride. Mayor Weaver's sensational attack on the gas lease "gang" has attracted the attention of the entire country.

SLIDES DISPENSED WITH.

New Projecting Apparatus For Illustrating Lectures.

A new form of lantern has recently made its appearance, which differs markedly both in its optical principles and in the results attained from the ordinary projecting apparatus which the lecturer is accustomed to use. Limited as it is to the utilization of slides only, the ordinary lantern renders it impossible to use directly illustrations from books, sketches, specimens and models. Photographs of these various objects must first be made, and from the negative a lantern slide prepared. Even though the resulting slide may be sharp and clear in every detail, it still presents the defect of presenting its subject in dead black and white tones. Attempts at coloring, although sometimes successful, are often the cause of many grievous errors on the part of the artist. The apparatus which we are about to describe, and which has been recently introduced by Philadelphia instrument makers, projects on a screen not only the image of a lantern slide, but reflects as well pictures in books, specimens of insects, or other natural objects, mechanical models and the like, and this all in the natural colors of the objects. The lecturer is thus enabled to make use of the countless illustrations in magazines and books, of an innumerable series of color prints, sketches, photographs, and of working models that can be shown in motion on the screen, as well as apparatus for experimenting in chemistry and physics, specimens of plants, flowers and moths, all in the delicate tints of the originals.

By the use of lenses, diaphragms and mirrors the object is illuminated and reflected on to the screen. By use of an illuminating lens, a cone of light from the condenser is projected upon the object, every part being uniformly illuminated. The lens is used either for spreading the light over the entire object or condensing it upon a small portion when a very brilliant light and special details are desired. When the lens is shifted toward the source of light, the rays are distributed over the entire object; when the lens is drawn toward the object, the beams condense and concentrate on the point desired.—Philadelphia Record.



NEW PROJECTION APPARATUS, DOES AWAY WITH LANTERN SLIDES.

The present Governors of Kansas, Minnesota and Oklahoma are country editors.

At Grahamstown, South Africa, a pair of ostriches were sold recently for $5000.

A SIMPLE TENT.

A tent can be made by children very easily and quickly without outside help. Get three old sheets or shawls, a rope and some safety pins, and follow this picture and description:

Tie the rope between two trees so that you may walk under it without touching your head. Throw a sheet or shawl over it. Tie four strings as long as yourself to each corner of the sheet (one on each corner). On the other end of each string tie a pointed stick. Drive these sticks into the ground as far from the rope as you can. The sheet will now make a good roof. Two more sheets are now used for the sides of the tent. Each sheet makes an end and one side.

THE TENT IN POSITION.

Use safety pins to pin up these sides. The hole at each end of the tent under the roof is necessary to keep it cool and comfortable. Most tents are very stuffy and hot, but this tent is as satisfactory an arrangement as can be made.—Indianapolis News.

A Financier.

Fritz Himmelsdorf, a butcher in a small Western town, kept his money on deposit at the one bank the town boasted. While not very well versed in the intricacies of banking, he was very proud of the fact that he possessed a bank account and never failed to write a check when he was compelled to pay out any amount, however small. One day, through some mistake, he drew a check for an amount somewhat in excess of his balance at the bank. Next morning William Jones, the collector for the bank, came into the shop where the butcher was chopping hamburger steak to the tune of "Ach, du Lieber Augustin," which he was very earnestly whistling.

"Mr. Himmelsdorf," said Jones, "you have an overdraft at the bank amounting to $4.03."

"Ach, iss dot so?" said Fritz, slowly. "Vait till I get my check book, Billy, and I gif you a check for it."—Vernon Wilder, in Harper's

An Essay on the Cat.

A little English girl wrote the following essay on a cat: "The cat is a square quadruped, has its legs at the four corners. If you want to please this animal you must stroke it on the back. If it is very much pleased it sets up its tail quite stiff, like a ruler, so that your hand cannot get any further. The cat is said to have nine lives, but in this country it seldom needs them all because of Christianity."

Her Qualms.

"Are you entirely satisfied with your alimony?" asked her friend.

"No. Sometimes I am afraid some of it may be tainted. I don't see how he can possibly earn as much legitimately as I am getting."

"If there is any question about it, why don't you accept less, and so enable him to——"

"Mercy sakes! What a silly thing you must think I am!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Fashion Notes

New York City.—Jaunty little Eton jackets make notable favorites of the season and are never more attractive than when worn by young girls. This one is so simple that it involves the least possible labor and skill in the making and at the same time is attractive and smart in the extreme. Illustrated it is made of taffeta with bands of the silk, cut bias and edged with tiny braid as finish and serves the purpose of a general wrap, but also would be suited to the costume, to linen, to mohair and to all seasonable materials. For the general wrap taffeta and mohair are perhaps the most fashionable of all materials at this season, but when used for the costume it can be made from anything that may be liked.

The jacket consists of the front, back and sleeves, and is fitted by means of shoulder and under-arm seams. The sleeves are loose and in elbow length so that the little garment can be slipped on with perfect ease over any waist that may be worn beneath.

For a girl of fourteen years will be required two and one-fourth yards of material twenty-one, two yards twenty-seven, or seven-eighth yard forty-four inches wide, with six yards of banding to trim as illustrated.

The Staple Bargain.

The sensible woman uses her reason on these occasions. She knows that it is folly to buy a gown which is already a little out of style. Unless a bargain can be worn at least a part of next season, it is no bargain at all. One must do a little looking forward. Is the reign of the pleated skirt beginning to fail? Will the popular broderie Anglaise be worn next year? Is the half-sleeve a fleeting fashion? If so, it is no economy to buy them at this late day. On the other hand, linen is a staple material, and a ... is in essentially a sty... it can be altered to s... quirements, even if ... exactly as it is.

Lingerie Blouse With Yoke.

The lingerie blouse ... one of the fashion... alone is it the sma... for the summer. Its ... tended through ... very dainty and ch... one is quite novel ... yoke that is shaped ... and which allows ... ments. In this instance ... lawn is combined w... lace, but all-over ... material embroidered ... serted or tucked ma... priate for the yoke, w... can be of lace or em... material worked ... stitches that always g... touch. The elbow ... ingly fashionable and ... pretty, if becoming. ... choice allowed betw... long ones, so that all needs ... supplied.

Both waist and yoke are made ... front and back portions. The ... is tucked in groups ... yoke, and the closing is made ... at the back. The ... tucked at their lower edges ... ished with stylish ...

A LATE DESIGN BY MAY MANTON

The quantity of material ... the medium size is four and ... yards twenty-one, three and ...

yards twenty-seven, or two and ... fourth yards forty-four ... with five-eighth yards of ... rial and three yards of ... tion.

Guimpes Are Fashionable.

The dress without a guimpe or a chemisette is an exception this season. The fashion is greatly to be encouraged not only for its daintiness and almost universal becomingness, but also for its coolness.

An Outing Hat.

There is no prettier outing hat than the roll-brim of soft duck or pique, trimmed with a silk handkerchief and a white bird or wings.

Veils Must Match.

One has to be very ... in these particular days. ... marily, it must match the hat. ... that is not all. The ... many of the new hats have to be ... into consideration in selecting a ...

The Empire Dress.

The quaint lines of the "Empire Dress" are singularly becoming to the slender and youthful figure. They ... best made with a detachable ...

...s Light for Country Homes.

...ll country homes, as well as ... cars, may be lighted by the ... light known— ACETYLENE ... 15—it is easier on the eyes than ... other illuminant, cheaper than ... gasoline, as convenient as city gas ... better than electricity and safer ... any.

...o ill-smelling lamps to clean, and ... chimneys or mantels to break ... light cooking it is convenient ... cheap.

ACETYLENE is made in the ... basement and piped to all rooms ... and out-buildings. Complete plant ... no more than a hot air furnace

PILOT Automatic Generators

...ke the gas. They are perfect in ...struction, reliable, safe and sim...

...Our booklet, "After Sunset," ...s more about ACETYLENE— ...e free on request.

...Dealers or others interested in ...sale of ACETYLENE apparatus ... write us for selling plan on ...PILOT Generators and supplies. ...t is a paying proposition for re...ble workers.

...CETYLENE APPARATUS MFG. CO., ...Michigan Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Write Quick FOR A Big Bargain

...Better advertise the South's Leading ...ness College, four scholarships ... ...young persons of this county at less than ... WRITE TODAY.

...LA. BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

...sident Jacob Gould Schurmann, ...rnell University, has received a ...ma appointing him a member for ... in the American Academy in ... This academy was founded in ... for the purpose of furthering the ...ncement of the fine arts and is ...ps the most prominent of its ... in the world.

...is said that the wife of M. Witte, ...Russian peace plenipotentiary, is a ...s—a fact that has closed many ... to him in Russian court and official circles and been a certain obstacle to him in his public career. The ... was originally married to one of ...own race, whom she divorced to ...y Witte.

...John Madden, chief justice of ...oria, has discovered a new plan of ...hing old offenders. He adds up ...eir previous terms and makes the ... their sentence. The other day he ...nced an offender to nine years ...one month—his aggregate record.

...is announced unofficially, but ... an authoritative source, that ...nor La Follette, of Wisconsin, ...relinquish the office of governor ... in September and go to Wash... as United States senator in Oc...

...Perkins, the New Hampshire mill... ...e, who died the other day, never ... anything swifter than a pair of ...

WRONG SORT

...pe Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and ...d May Be Against You For a Time.

...hange to the right kind of food ...t one from a sick bed. A lady in ...en, Ill., says:

...st spring I became bedfast with ...e stomach trouble accompanied by ...headache. I got worse and worse ... I became so low I could scarcely ...n any food at all, although I tried ... kind. I had become complete... ...scouraged, had given up all hope ...thought I was doomed to starve to ...till one day my husband, trying ...something I could retain brought ... some Grape-Nuts.

...my surprise the food agreed with ...gested perfectly and without dis... I began to gain strength at ...my flesh (which had been flabby) ...firmer, my health improved in ...way and every day, and in a very ...weeks I gained 20 pounds in ...t. I liked Grape-Nuts so well ...for 4 months I ate no other food. ...always felt as well satisfied after ...as if I had sat down to a fine ...st.

...and no return of the miserable ...omach nor of the headaches that ...to have when I ate other food. ...now a well woman, doing all my ...work again, and feel that life is ...living.

...pe-Nuts food has been a godsend ...family; it surely saved my life ...my two little boys have thrived ...derfully." Name given by Post... Battle Creek, Mich.

...'s a reason.

...the little book, "The Road to ...," in each pkg.

...ion Notes

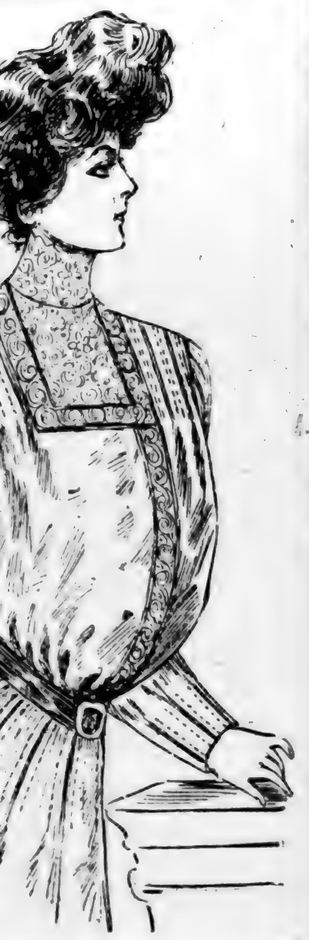
...simple material, and unless the ... is an essentially a style of the mo... can be altered to fit next year's ... your hands, even if it cannot be ... exactly as it is.

Lingerie Blouse With Yoke.

The lingerie blouse is the acce... one of the fashionable world. ... alone is it the smartest of all ... for the summer, its usefulness is ... lasted through the entire year ... very dainty and charming it is. ... one is quite loose in form, showi... yoke that is shaped on original ... and which allows of various tr... ments. In this instance sheer Per... lawn is combined with Valencien... lace but all over embroidery of ... material embroidered by hand or ... scroll or tucked muslin is quite a... quate for the yoke, while the ban... made of lace or embroidery or of ... material worked with the fa... stitches that always give a distinc... touch. The elbow sleeves are exc... ingly fashionable and are also ... pretty, if becoming, but there ... choose allowed between these and ... long ones, so that all needs can ... supplied.

Both waist and yoke are made w... at front and back portions. The w... is tucked in groups and joined to ... yoke and the closing is made invis... at the back. The elbow sleeves ... tucked at their lower edges and ... shed with stylish roll over cuffs.

...N BY MAY MANTON



...long ones are made with deep c... and puffed upper portions.

The quantity of material required ... the medium size is four and one-... yards twenty-one, three and one-...

...yards twenty seven, or two and ... fourth yards forty-four inches w... with five-eighth yards of all-over m... and three yards of insertion.

Veils Must Match.

One has to be very careful a... one's veil in these particular days. ... nearly, it must match the hat. ... that is not all. The eccentric shape ... many of the new hats have to be t... into consideration in selecting a v...

The Empire Dress.

The quaint lines of the "E... Dress" are singularly becoming to ... slender and youthful figure. They ... best made with a detachable tuck...

...ht for ...ountry Homes.

...country homes, as well as ... can also be lighted by the ... Known— ACETYLENE ... it is easier on the eyes than ... other illuminant, cheaper than ... as convenient as city gas, ... than electricity and safer ... any.

...ll-smelling lamps to clean, and ... chimneys or mantels to break. ... for cooking it is convenient ... daytime.

ACETYLENE is made in the ... ment and piped to all rooms ... out-buildings. Complete plant ... no more than a hot air furnace.

PILOT Automatic Generators

...the gas. They are perfect in ... construction, reliable, safe and sim...

...our booklet, "After Sunset," ... more about ACETYLENE— ... free on request.

Dealers or others interested in ... sale of ACETYLENE apparatus ... write us for selling plan on PILOT Generators and supplies ... is a paying proposition for re... workers.

ACETYLENE APPARATUS MFG. CO., ...Michigan Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Write Quick FOR A Big Bargain

...your name in the South's Leading ...ess College. Four scholarships are of... (this county at less than ...

GA. BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

...President Jacob Gould Schurmann, ...Cornell University, has received a ...ter appointing him a member for ... the American Academy in ... This academy was founded in ... for the purpose of furthering the ...vement of the fine arts and is ... the most prominent of its ... in the world.

...It is said that the wife of M. Witte, ...Russian peace plenipotentiary, is a ...—a fact that has closed many ...ors to him in Russian court and offi... circles and been a certain obsta... to him in his public career. The ... was originally married to one of ... own race, whom she divorced to ... Witte.

...Mr. John Madden, chief justice of ... has discovered a new plan of ... young offenders. He adds up ... previous terms and makes the ... serve now. The other day he ... an offender to nine years ... doubling his aggregate record.

...announced unofficially, but ... authoritative source, that ... La Follette, of Wisconsin, ... resign the office of governor ... September and go to Wash... as United States senator in Oc...

...Persons who New Hampshire mill... who ... the other day, never ... anything swifter than a pair of ...

WRONG SORT

Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and Hay Be Against You For a Time.

...change to the right kind of food ... from a sick bed. A lady in ... says:

"...became bedfast with ... trouble accompanied by ... I got worse and worse ... how I could scarcely ... at all, although I tried ... I did become complete... and given up all hope ... I was doomed to starve to ... day my husband trying ... I could retain brought ... Nuts.

"...the food agreed with ... perfectly and without dis... to gain strength at ... which had been flabby ... health improved in ... day, and in a very ... gained 20 pounds in ... Grape-Nuts so well ... as I ate no other food, ... as well satisfied after ... sat down to a fine ...

"...return of the miserable ... of the headaches that ... when I ate other food. ... well woman, doing all my ... and feel that life is ...

"Nuts food has been a godsend ... it surely saved my life ... boys have thriven on ... Name given by Pos... Battle Creek, Mich.

...book, "The Road to ... in each pkg.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 27.

Subject: Jeremiah in the Dungeon, Jer. xxxviii., 1-13—Golden Text, Matt. v., 10—Memory Verses, 8-10—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Jeremiah's enemies (vs. 1-4). 1. "Then." After the events referred to in chapter 37, where Jeremiah was delivered from the dungeon. "Shephatiah," etc. Some of Jeremiah's enemies who were seeking his life. "All the people." They had free access to him in the court of the prison. 2. "Life for a prey." A proverbial expression. To make one's escape with life like a valuable spoil or prey that one carries off; the narrowness of the escape, and the joy felt at it are included in the idea. He shall carry off his life as his gain, saved by his going over to the Chaldeans. Had Jeremiah not had a divine commission he might justly have been accused of treason, but having one which made the result of the siege certain he acted humanely as interpreter of God's will under the theocracy in advising surrender. 3. "Surely be given." This was a testimony that he constantly bore; he had the authority of God for it. He knew it was true and he never wavered or equivocated.

4. "The princes said." Their reasons were plain enough, but the proof was wanting. "Seeketh . . . the hurt." An unjust insinuation, for no man had done more for this people than had Jeremiah. His preaching was calculated to arouse them to a sense of their sins and cause them to turn to God. One of the commonest ways of injuring others is to misunderstand and misinterpret their motives, as Jeremiah's motives were maligned because it was possible for him to have done what he did with bad motives. When there are two possible motives for the conduct of another, it is not only a more charitable, but probably a more truthful judgment to impute the better motives. "Judge not that ye be not judged," should be written in capital letters, yea, in flaming letters, before us all.

II. Jeremiah in the dungeon (vs. 5, 6). 5. "King is not he." Zedekiah was a weak king. He had a conviction that Jeremiah was a prophet of the Lord, and yet he dared not oppose his statesmen, but yielded to their will without a question. An innocent man was thus sacrificed to their malice. These princes were wroth with Jeremiah (chapter 37: 15); "he had compared them to rotten figs" (chapter 24). But for him they would have had affairs all their own way, they were anxious to be rid of him.

6. "Then took they Jeremiah." Jeremiah was the butt of ridicule and scorn. He was put in the stocks, was publicly whipped, was misrepresented as an enemy, was imprisoned several times, but he kept right on. "The dungeon." Literally "the cistern." It was not a subterranean prison as that in Jonathan's house (chapter 37: 15), but a pit or cistern, which had been full of water, but was emptied of it during the siege so that only mire remained. Such empty cisters were often used as prisons (Zach. 9: 11); the depth forbade hope of escape. "Sunk in the mire." They evidently expected that he would die in that place.

III. Jeremiah's friend (vs. 7-9). 7. "Ebedmelech." The servant of the king. He probably was keeper of the royal harem, and so had private access to the king. Already even at this early time God wished to show what good reason there was for calling the Gentiles to salvation. An Ethiopian stranger saves the prophet whom his own countrymen, the Jews, tried to destroy. So the Gentiles believed in Christ whom the Jews crucified, and Ethiopians were among the earliest converts (Acts 2: 10; 8: 27-39). "Sitting in the gate." The gates of cities were the places where justice was administered. 8 "Went forth." The servant went immediately to the king. There was no time to lose, for if he delayed the prophet might perish. What a bold, courageous act this was. It ought to put many of us to shame.

9. "These men," etc. He must have been in the king's confidence or he would not have dared raise his voice against the action of the princes. The Lord can raise up friends for His people where they are least expected. "No more bread." That is, no more bread left of the public store in the city (chapter 37: 21); or, all but no bread left anywhere. This shows to what straits the city was reduced.

IV. Jeremiah rescued (vs. 10-13). 10. "King commanded." Zedekiah's better nature was stirred. "Thirty men." Not merely to draw up Jeremiah, but to guard Ebed-melech if the princes should oppose him. The king was determined that he should be rescued by force if necessary. Ebed-melech was rewarded for his faith, love and courage, exhibited at a time when he might well fear the wrath of the princes.

11-13. Ebed-melech took the men as the king had commanded and rescued Jeremiah. He let down into the pit some torn clothes and worn out garments and instructed Jeremiah to roll them around the ropes and place them under his armpits, so as not to suffer injury from the ropes when he was drawn up. Although Jeremiah was thus rescued from a terrible death, he was not set at liberty, but remained in the court of the prison. He was still in prison when the armies of Babylon took Jerusalem. He was found in chains and carried with other captives on the way to Babylon, but was released at Ramah, six miles from Jerusalem. Thus ended the prison life of the prophet. How long he was in prison it is difficult to determine, probably for years. The Lamentations which he wrote after the destruction of Jerusalem must have been his frequent meditation while in confinement.

There are two cinnamon harvests annually in Ceylon.

Jebeles Murdered.

Anniston, Ala.—By the verdict of the coroner's jury Thursday afternoon much credence is now given the theory that John Jebeles was murdered and is not a suicide as the story that was given out after the shooting Tuesday night. It will be remembered that Jebeles was killed in a bawdy house in the room of a woman, who was also shot. The inmates of the place say that he took his own life.

LOST 72 POUNDS.

Was Fast Drifting Into the Fatal Stages of Kidney Sickness.

Dr. Melvin M. Page, Page Optical Co., Erie, Pa., writes: "Taking too many iced drinks in New York in 1895 sent me home with a terrible attack of kidney trouble. I had acute congestion, sharp pain in the back, headaches and attacks of dizziness. My eyes gave out, and with the languor and sleeplessness of the disease upon me I wasted from 194 to 122 pounds. At the time I started using Doan's Kidney Pills an abscess was forming on my right kidney. The trouble was quickly checked, however, and the treatment cured me, so that I have been well since 1896 and weigh 188 pounds."

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists. Price, 50 cents per box.

Novelty in Statistics.

Statistics of all sorts and even of the most trivial nature seem to have a very considerable fascination for some people. A Mr. F. G., for instance, has taken the trouble to calculate that while Graef, a well-known German artist, was painting his portrait some years ago, over 20,000 strokes of the artist's brush were required to transfer his visage to the canvas. About a year and a half ago F. G. was again "oiled" by the late Charles Furse. Although this artist had an entirely different style from Graef, F. G. was surprised to find that the total number of strokes of the brush was about the same. It is unfortunate that he did not count the bristles in the respective brushes of the two artists, and the number of hours required for the work. Without these figures the bare number of strokes is of little value. By dividing the number of strokes by the number of hours and multiplying this figure by the number of bristles, the number of bristle points actually sweeping the canvas per hour could have been accurately determined. As it is the number of strokes unaccompanied by any data as to size of brush, time required or the pattern of the clothes he wore, is of little scientific value.

Wooden Pavements.

In view of the return to wood pavements in a small part of the streets of lower New York, certain facts as to wood paving tabulated in the Sanitary Record are of great interest. From these it appears that in provincial towns in England the creosoted soft wood pavement has a life of from twelve to fifteen years, and hardwoods from fifteen to eighteen years. At St. Pancras, London, where there is a traffic of 411,318 tons per yard of width per annum, the greatest wear of the Australian wood jarrah was 0.18 inch, or less than one-fifth inch per annum. The best wood for paving purposes, according to London experience, are the Australian karri and jarrah, while Australian and California gums are said to promise well.

Three Human Lungs.

Three human lungs—one white, one black and one gray—form an instructive exhibit in an Edinburg museum. The first came from an Eskimo, who breathed the pure air of the Arctic regions; the second from a coal miner, who inhaled much coal dust; the third from a town dweller, kept in city dust and smoke.

Vaccinating Chickens.

It has been discovered that fowls can be rendered immune from the ravages of cholera by means of vaccination with cultures of the cholera bacilli. The discovery will prove a great boon to poultry raisers, who often lose their entire flocks in a few days from cholera.

His First Shave.

The earliest known mention of shaving is in the Bible (Genesis xliv, 14): "And he (Joseph) shaved himself and came before Pharaoh." Shaving the beard was introduced by the Romans about 300 B. C.

Curious Ancient Law.

Many curious instances of old laws may still be found in England. In Chester the man who fails to raise his hat when a funeral is passing becomes liable by an old law to be taken before a magistrate and imprisoned.

Tip for Our Heiresses.

The true worth of a girl in Albania is sometimes readily estimated. When she desires to marry she collects all her money and mounts it on her head, so that observers may note her financial value.

China's Canals.

The canals which form a network throughout a great part of China abound in fish. The rice fields, which are irrigated with the water from these canals, make ideal hatching places for them.

Sugar Ages Wood.

A process has been invented by an Englishman of giving artificial age to wood. He replaces the sap of trees by beet sugar or saccharine.

Bonaparte's Long Speech.

While Charles J. Bonaparte, the new secretary of the navy, was connected with the Baltimore Reform League it was decided to investigate the conduct of a prominent federal officeholder. Friends of the crooked official learned this and decided to "pack" the council, so that the report might be voted down. Bonaparte listened attentively to the argument against the report, and then rose to give his own views, bitterly attacking the official and urging that the charges be immediately accepted. He saw, however, that his words would have little effect on that portion of his audience which sided with the accused man, so when he had finished his discourse he began over again, repeating his speech, word for word, pause for pause, gesture for gesture—not once, but a dozen times, until towards morning the friends of the accused official were fast asleep. Mr. Bonaparte and his associates then approved and adopted the report.

It is healthier at Panama than at New Orleans.

FITS permanently cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Coal has been discovered near Adrianovka in the Transbaikal.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c. a bottle.

The phosphate rock is found in pockets, not veins.

I do not believe Piso's Cure for Consumption has an equal for coughs and colds.—JOHN F. BOYER, Trinity Springs, Ind., Feb. 15, 1900.

The capital invested in electric lines of the United States is $2,167,634,000.

Yellow Fever and Malaria Germs

Are instantly killed by the use of six drops of Sloan's Liniment on a teaspoonful of sugar. It is also an excellent antiseptic.

The fisheries of Japan annually yield about 3,000,000 tons of fish.

RAW ITCHING ECZEMA

Blotches on Hands, Ears and Ankles For Three Years—Instant Relief and Speedy Cure by Cuticura.

"Thanks to Cuticura I am now rid of that fearful pest, weeping eczema, for the first time in three years. It first appeared on my hand, a little pimple, growing into several blotches, and then on my ears and ankles. They were exceedingly painful, itching, and always raw. After the first day's treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, there was very little of the burning and itching, and the cure now seems to be complete. (Signed) S. B. Hege, Passenger Agent B. & O. R. R., Washington, D. C."

Bread Is Radio-Active.

Sir William Ramsay believes that it is quite possible that in some cases bread is radio-active. He thinks that the radio-activity would not do any harm, as is shown by the presence of radium in the waters at Bath and at Wiesbaden. In both cases the water has to be drunk on the spot in order to get the full value of the cure. Sir William Ramsay thinks that this is partly due to the radio-active properties of the water. He is inclined to think that there are radio-active gases in the air. The "freshness" of the air at certain times, he believes, is due to their presence.

There Was No Danger.

A very stout old lady was recently passing a cab stand. One of the horses laid down his ears, and, with a vicious look, made as if to bite her arm.

The lady uttered a cry and hastily jumped aside, while she reprimanded the owner of the horse for his carelessness in allowing the animal to frighten her.

"'E won't bite you, mum," said the John encouragingly; then, seeing her still hesitate, he added, "Lor' you needn't be afraid; 'e's a vegetarian."

Mourn an Albanian Princess.

All Albania mourns the loss of the Princess Uirditese. She died of heart failure caused by the sight of the devastation created by the earthquake at Skutari. She was the best friend of the poor. Her brother has been a prisoner at Constantinople for sixteen years, as it is feared the Albanians might choose him to be their ruler.

Appropriate Change.

On the occasion of a cyclist's wedding at Epping, near London, the other day the bride and bridegroom rode to church on single machines and returned on a tandem.

FOR THE LIVER AND BOWELS
NOTHING CAN EQUAL
MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR
IT PROMPTLY CURES CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, INDIGESTION, SOUR STOMACH AND ALL DERANGEMENTS OF THE STOMACH AND BOWELS. 50 CENTS A BOTTLE AT ALL DRUG STORES.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

FOR WOMEN

troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and local soreness, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh.

Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in pure water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all

TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES

For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box.

Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.

THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

THE TURN OF LIFE

A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Many Dread Diseases—Intelligent Women Prepare for It. Two Relate their Experience.

The "change of life" is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

Every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active—and with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are all just so many calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried thousands of women safely through this crisis.

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and it will be furnished absolutely free of charge.

Read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with falling of the womb for years and was passing through the Change of Life. My womb was badly swollen; my stomach was sore; I had dizzy spells, sick headaches, and was very nervous.

"I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me and I have passed safely through the Change of Life, a well woman. I am recommending your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. Annie E. G. Hyland, Chestertown, Md.

Another Woman's Case.

"During change of life words cannot express what I suffered. My physician said I had a cancerous condition of the womb. One day I read some of the testimonials of women who had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it and to write you for advice. Your medicine made me a well woman, and all my bad symptoms soon disappeared.

"I advise every woman at this period of life to take your medicine and write you for advice."—Mrs. Lizzie Hinkle, Salem, Ind.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle it will do for any woman at this time of life.

It has conquered pain, restored health, and prolonged life in cases that utterly baffled physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

DATE 'EM

"THE SHOES THAT PUT ST. LOUIS ON THE MAP."

WEBSTER SCHOOL SHOES

When you buy a Pair of Shoes for your boy or girl, Write the Date in the lining, in ink.

Clover Brand SHOES

STAND EVERY TEST

Get the DICTIONARY

That is FREE with every pair of Webster's from size 11 up.

IF YOUR DEALER SAYS "NO" HE IS REFUSING YOU YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Wertheimer-Swarts Shoe Co.

LARGEST FINE SHOE EXCLUSIVISTS

ST. LOUIS, U. S. A.

NO CURE.—NO PAY.

This is our Guarantee on OXIDINE. If you have Chills and Fever, use it and get well.

Made in Regular and Tasteless Forms. Price 50 cts.

Manufactured by PATTON-WORSHAM DRUG CO., For sale by all Druggists. Dallas, Texas and Memphis, Tenn.

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.

NEW ORLEANS.

Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.

Am. 34, 1905.

25 CTS. FISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

THERE IS MONEY IN THE CORN STALK. Write for free catalog. I. A. Madden, Atlanta, Ga.

CONSTIPATION

"For over nine years I suffered with chronic constipation and during this time I had to take an injection of warm water once every 24 hours before I could have an action on my bowels. Happily I tried Cascarets, and today I am a well man. During the nine years before I used Cascarets I suffered untold misery with internal piles. Thanks to you I am free from all that this morning. You can use this in behalf of suffering humanity."

B. F. Fisher, Roanoke, Ill.

Best For The Bowels Cascarets CANDY CATHARTIC

THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y. 649

ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free catalogue to Dealers. BLELOCK MFG. CO., 315 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

THE FARMERS AND THE TRUSTS.

Of all producers the farmer is all hardest by the Trusts. They catch him coming and going. And the Trust lives and grows because of railroad rebates, the "protective" tariff, and national bank control of our money system. Evidently the remedy is to cut off these special favors which build up and perpetuate the Trust.

Tom Watson's Magazine,

"the Magazine with a purpose back of it," was established to teach the best way of abolishing these special privileges, and, hence, of rendering the Trusts powerless to rob the public. It is a big monthly magazine of 128 pages, with illustrations, cartoons, Mr. Watson's brilliant editorials, special articles, a serial story, novelettes, short stories and poems, by the world's best writers. Regular price, $1.00 per year; 10 cents the copy, at all news stands. Every farmer is interested in knowing the best way to cure the Trust evil and how to bring it about. Now in its second volume, Tom Watson's Magazine is firmly established, and its circulation is growing rapidly; but we want to add a hundred thousand subscribers to our list in the next month or two.

Send Us Three Names.

of reading farmers in your neighborhood, together with this advertisement and 25 one-cent stamps—or a silver quarter securely wrapped—and we'll enroll you for a four months' trial trip subscription. Or five of you may club together, sending a dollar bill and 25 good names and addresses, and get five trial trip subscriptions. Learn how to clip the Trust's wings. Address

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
No. 121 W. 42d St., New York, N. Y.
Room B 7. tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

FOR SALE!

A thoroughbred Jersey Bull, 2 years and 4 months old, weighs about 650 pounds. Apply to M. A. Killgore Clanton, Ala., Route 5. tf.

NOTICE!

There are 200 shares of stock of the Farmers Warehouse & Fertilizer Company of Thorsby, Ala., for sale. The board of directors have authorized the undersigned to sell these shares to all who desire to invest.

J. Bice, President
T. M. Driver
J. W. Hays.

We Club With

The New York World

THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken

For the autumn season now at hand the most valuable paper to you will be the New York Thrice-a-week world, because it offers you more at the price than any other paper published anywhere in the world.

This is a time of great events. We are having great wars and other changes of a stirring kind are occurring both at home and abroad. The Thrice-a-Week World comes to you every other day, except Sunday, with all the news, fully, accurately and promptly told.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

The Thrice-a-Week World always has a serial story running, and it is always a first-class story by a first-class author. The Thrice-a-Week World publishes better fiction than any other newspaper in the United States. Special attention is also given to markets, and there are many other valuable features.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf.

5000 TELEGRAPHERS NEEDED

Annually to fill the new positions created by Railroad and Telegraph Companies. We want YOUNG MEN and LADIES of good habits, to

LEARN TELEGRAPHY AND R. R. ACCOUNTING

We furnish 75 per cent. of the Operators and Station Agents in America. Our six schools are the largest exclusive telegraph schools IN THE WORLD. Established 25 years and endorsed by all leading Railway Officials.

We execute a $200 Bond to every student to furnish him or her a position paying from $40 to $60 a month in States east of the Rocky Mountains, or from $75 to $100 a month in States west of the Rockies, IMMEDIATELY UPON GRADUATION.

Students can enter at any time. No vacations. For all particulars regarding any of our Schools write direct to our executive office at Cincinnati, O. Catalogue free.

The Morse School of Telegraphy

Cincinnati, Ohio. Buffalo, N. Y.
Atlanta, Ga. LaCrosse, Wis.
Texarkana, Tex. San Francisco, Cal.

NEWSY GLEANINGS.

The Nile dam at Assouan has saved Egypt's cotton crop.

Norway still favors a monarchy, says the President of the Storthing.

A Michigan court has decided that a husband is the heir-at-law of his wife.

Within a few years the Steel Corporation will need 20,000,000 tons of ore a year.

Since the first of the year this country has imported $2,000,000 worth of automobiles.

A Kentucky woman, only thirty-three years old, has just acquired her ninth husband.

Horace C. Silsbury, inventor of the steam fire engine, is dead at his home in Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's extravagance is well known, and her house in Paris shows it in every way.

The telephone and rural free delivery of mail have increased Georgia farm lands from $10 to $100 an acre.

The Yaqui Indians, of Sonora, Mexico, tiring of the long, disastrous war against the Government, are now asking peace.

The New York Central Railroad has obtained the State's co-operation in its plans to abolish all grade crossings within fifty miles of New York City.

Of the wounded Russian soldiers treated at Harbin, 1200 were found to have mutilated themselves by cutting off the first fingers of the right hand.

Twenty-six school teachers at Chicago attached a tourist car in which they had traveled to Portland, Ore., claiming they had not been fed as well as agreed upon.

The annual report of Postmaster George H. Hibbard shows a revenue from the Boston district of $4,508,745 for the fiscal year ended July 1. The cost of clerk and carrier hire was $1,026,073, and of the rural free delivery service, $972,581.

No One Hurt.

Cullman, Ala.—Louisville and Nashville passenger train No. 2 was derailed one mile south of Cullman Friday. The train was delayed three or four hours, but there were no casualties.

Decatur, Ala.—S. T. Long, a prominent merchant of South Decatur, shot dead a negro named Alex Bowlen Friday morning. Bowlen had insulted him on this and former occasions. At a preliminary trial Mr. Long was acquitted.

Savannah has invented a pretty good word, which the Morning News hastens to use in explaining the defeat of its local baseball team. It was "outlucked" by the visitors.

TIMBER FOR SALE!

Over a hundred acres of Virgin Swamp timber for sale. Apply to T. J. Billingsley, Clanton, Ala. Route 3. tf.

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

ALL-DAY SINGING.

At Oak Grove church, 2 miles north of Jemison, on the 4th Sunday in August, we will sing principally in "Christian Harmony," but bring all of your books, and also a full basket with you. The singing will be conducted by R. J. Langston.

A LITTLE SINGER.

tf

Notice No. 26043.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 10, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz: Dalee Millar, Homestead Entry No. 35550, for the W. 1-2 of N. E. 1-4, E. 1-2 of N. W. 1-4, Section 10, Tp. 23 N. of R. 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Rebecca J. Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; C. Buck Arledge, of Jemison, Ala.; James Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala., Thomas Ellison, of Cloddy, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at
Montgomery, Ala., July 12, 1905.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on August 26, 1905, viz.: Isaac B. Martin, Homestead Entry No. 32916, for the S. E. 1-4 of S. E. 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23 N. of R. 13 East.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Zack S. Avery, Clayton Glasscock, Hubbard Glasscock, Norman Bradford, all of Jemison, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER,
7-13-05-6t Register.

FAVOR FEDERAL CONTROL

Life Insurance Men Have Interview With President at Oyster Bay.

SENATOR DRYDEN FRAMES BILL

Government to Be Asked to Take Over the Supervision of All Life Insurance Companies Now Governed by State Laws—No Opposition to the Movement Apparent at Present.

Oyster Bay.—President Roosevelt has pledged the full support of the Administration for the enactment of a law providing for Federal supervision of life insurance. The regular session of Congress, when it meets next December, will be asked to pass the necessary legislative measure.

This became known at the close of a conference at Sagamore Hill by the President, United States Senator John F. Dryden, from New Jersey, and James M. Beck, formerly United States Assistant Attorney-General. These men are considered as leading authorities on the subject of life insurance. Senator Dryden is president of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, of New Jersey; Mr. Beck is attorney for the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York.

President Roosevelt, it is known, expressed himself as heartily in favor of the proposed change. He touched on the subject in his last message to Congress when he said:

"The business of insurance vitally affects the great majority of the people of the United States, and is national and not local in its application. It involves a multitude of transactions, among the people of the different States and between American companies and foreign governments. I urge that Congress carefully consider whether the power of the Bureau of Corporations cannot constitutionally be extended to cover interstate transactions in insurance."

Senator Dryden, at the last session of Congress, introduced a bill in which were embodied the recommendations made by the President in his message. This measure, at the request of the Senator himself, was sent to the Senate Committee on Judiciary, where it remained when Congress adjourned. According to the plan decided on at this later conference Senator Dryden, when Congress meets again, will introduce a bill framed largely on the same lines as the old one, but containing additional provisions for the remedy of defects in existing legislation, since brought to light, and amended in some respect so as to meet constitutional requirements.

Senator Dryden arrived here on the 12.20 train, which brought several other visitors for the President. Mr. Beck had planned to arrive at the same time, but missed his train at Long Island City. Fifteen minutes later, however, he arrived on a special, which he had engaged on short notice and which made a record run to Oyster Bay. Senator Dryden and Mr. Beck took luncheon with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill.

"We discussed the question of Federal supervision of life insurance," said Mr. Beck, on his return, "and had a very satisfactory talk with the President on the subject."

"Will you say what the President's attitude on the question is?" Mr. Beck was asked.

"It would be presumption on my part should I propose to express an opinion on behalf of the President," Mr. Beck replied. "All that I can say was that our interview with him was highly satisfactory to us.

"There is not the slightest doubt in the minds of any of the men identified with the great insurance interests that the time has come to take supervision of them away from the States and lodge it with the Federal Government. I have heard no open dissent from that opinion from any quarter. The chief difficulty with which we are confronted lies in the framing of a measure which will meet with the constitutional requirements. There seems to be considerable difference of opinion among leading lawyers in this country regarding the constitutionality of a Federal life insurance law."

"Do you expect to be able to overcome this obstacle?" Mr. Beck was asked.

"Well, we would hardly undertake this work unless we thought we could frame a measure conservative enough to commend itself to the highest court."

Mr. Beck, when asked to outline the proposed legislation, said that in his opinion Senator Dryden's bill would meet all the requirements admirably and that all the great insurance companies favored the measure. This bill calls for the establishment of an insurance department in connection with the Bureau of Corporations in the Department of Commerce and Labor, which already is authorized to collect information regarding insurance companies doing an inter-State business.

One Ship of the Armada Home.

The Rusian transport Anadyr, which escaped capture by the Japanese, after the battle of the Sea of Japan, has passed into the Baltic Sea on its home voyage to Libau. This is the only vessel of Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet that has returned.

Finds Murderer After Years' Search.

After nine years spent in traveling 10,000 miles over three continents Antonio Carraciola discovered the assassin of his father in the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island, New York City.

Washington, D. C.—Chairman Shonts, of the isthmian canal commission, has gone to New York to arrange for the equipment of the steamers and railroad cars belonging to the commission with refrigerating apparatus. It is the purpose to insure an adequate supply of fresh meats and other staple foods to the employes on the entire line of railroad between Colon and Panama during the construction of the Panama canal.

SINKING STEAMER SAVED

New Shoreham, With Hole in Her Hull, Makes Run to Her Dock.

Engineer and Firemen Stick to Their Posts on Block Island Boat.

New York City.—The new Block Island passenger steamer, the New Shoreham, struck a submerged wreck during a fog in the Block Island harbor, and after a thrilling run of a mile and a half sank at her dock just as the last passenger got to shore.

With 125 passengers in terror, Engineer Quinlan stuck to his post with the water slowly filling the engine room.

When the boat reached the dock, Engineer Quinlan was standing waist deep in water. The gangplank was thrown out and the 125 passengers went ashore safely. The last man had scarcely stepped from the plank when the steamer careened and sunk, Quinlan being forced to climb a ladder to save himself from drowning.

The passengers were panic-stricken. Members of the crew endeavored to assure them that their only chance of safety was in keeping quiet. Captain Lawrence Dodd, in the meantime, had turned the boat toward New Harbor, giving the signal to the engineer to put on all possible power.

The steamer was the only one to reach the island that day. The sea was unusually heavy, the weather was bad and a fog hung over the entire Block Island Sound.

The New Shoreham, however, steamed on its usual schedule time, but the heavy sea and the fog were responsible for her going astray after the inland waters were reached and she went against the old mud scow that was sunk in the Sound recently.

The impact was followed by a panic on board. The passengers rushed to the guard rails. Demands were made for the lowering of boats to take them ashore, which only a mile and a half away could not be seen through the fog.

Members of the crew were sent throughout the decks to reassure the passengers that they would be landed.

There was a hole in the hull of the boat through which the water was pouring. All the pumps were in use, but the water was constantly rising. Engineer Quinlan ordered more coal when he, with his firemen, was standing knee deep in water.

The passengers above in the meantime had come to believe that their scare was a needless one. The boat went on through the fog, seemingly as if nothing had happened. Not one of the scores of passengers knew that below in the hot holds of the engine-room men were standing in water, which was rising inch by inch, to shovel coal into the furnaces.

No signal was given from above to cause alarm.

The boat made its mile and a half and drew up to the pier.

The passengers were urged to go ashore hastily. Just as the announcement was made to the captain that all were ashore the boat careened and went down.

The men below all got out safely. They were heroes of the situation. Engineer Quinlan was in the water to his shoulders before he left his post. The firemen had been no less courageous.

With the careening of the boat the water swept over the fire in the boilers, causing a steam that almost suffocated the men below. They climbed the ladders to the main deck, where they were met by Captain Dodd.

"Bully boys," he said. "You did great work. How can I compliment you? I was rushing down to find you. I was afraid that some of you had perished."

Five men who were down in the hold with the water rising up to their arm pits obeyed the captain's signals, and remained at their posts regardless of the dangers that they knew existed. The captain also knew it, for they had signalled him back.

The passenges scarcely realized it until they saw the vessel tip to one side and sink.

The New Shoreham was built in Boston, Mass., in 1901, and is owned by the town of Block Island. It has been plying between Providence and Block Island. A dispute, which has virtually become an issue in local political affairs, was raised over the payment due for the vessel.

A wrecking craft from New London was sent to aid in saving the steamer. The waves at the time were beating her against the rocks.

KILLS FIVE TO SAVE LIFE.

Georgia Woodsman, Attacked by Negroes, Uses Revolver Effectively.

Cordele, Ga. — Two negroes were killed outright and three fatally injured near Oakfield by a woodsman of the Oakfield Naval Stores Company named Malfis. In consequence of a quarrel with Malfis seven negroes waylaid him as he started on his rounds.

Three miles east of Oakfield he was confronted by the negroes, armed with clubs and other weapons. Malfis opened fire with a revolver. Two negroes dropped dead instantly and three others fell to the ground mortally wounded. By the time Malfis could reload the other two had fled.

British Fleet Off For Baltic.

The British Channel fleet, consisting of eleven battleships, eight cruisers and torpedo boats, sailed from Spithead for the Baltic.

Badly Mashed.

Anniston, Ala.—Claud Jones, a negro switchman, employed on switch engine No. 1698, was badly mashed in the yards of the Southern Railway Friday morning by the collision of two cars which he was trying to couple. He was taken to his home on Fifteenth and Cooper, where he was attended by the company's physicians. While not necessarily serious, the negro's wounds are very painful.

Thorsby, Alabama
Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed. . . . . .

Commercial Club OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N. HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOE

Thorsby Wine Co.
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props.

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wisham
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

Suicide at Coosada.

Coosada, Ala.—There was some excitement in this little community on Friday morning when it was learned that an old man named John Mullett had committed suicide. He lived alone in a little house near the depot, and was last seen alive Thursday afternoon. Some time during Thursday night he placed a pistol in his mouth and fired. The ball passed through and came out at the back of his head.

Situation in Corea.

Seoul.—It is rumored that the Russians in the northern port of Corea are withdrawing. The local food supply has been affected by the rains and is meagre for the population, the sea route being in the hands of the Japanese and the bridges over the Tumen river broken. It is not expected that there will be a battle south of Tumen. The Japanese army is confident and the weather is improving.

Bread Strike About Ended.

New York.—Three hundred extra policemen on duty for the past ten days guarding the district affected by the strike of east side kosher bread bakers were recalled to their station houses Friday. Ninety master bakers of Jewish kosher bread have signed the agreement presented to them by the strikers.

Boy Seriously Cut.

Birmingham, Ala.—B. Myers, a young white boy about 15 years of age, was seriously and probably fatally cut Friday morning by another young white boy, who it is understood is employed by the Alabama Fish Company.

Syrian Is Dead.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The unknown Syrian who was found in an old cotton house two miles south of the station of Moundsville in an unconscious condition Tuesday is dead. State Health Officer Sanders and several other physicians went to Moundsville, as the case was reported suspicious. Blood of the deceased was sent to Birmingham, and it was found to contain malarial germs.

Negro Taken from Mob.

Paris, Tex.—Andrew Dimvidder, a negro, was arrested here Friday for attempting to assault Miss Daisy Collins, aged 17. A mob took him from the sheriff and was about to lynch him when County Judge Love pleaded with them to await full proof. The mob agreed to wait twenty-four hours and returned the negro to the sheriff. He is in jail.

On Another Charge.

Anniston, Ala.—Will Curry, colored, who had just finished serving a sentence of 104 days on the streets of this city for obtaining liquor for a minor, was turned over to the Talladega county authorities Friday morning, where he will be tried upon the charge of disturbing public worship. Sheriff Edwards, of Talladega, came over to this city and took the negro to that places Friday.

Free Express Delivery Wanted.

Troy, Ala.—On Friday a petition to W. W. Hurlburt, superintendent of the Southern Express Company, was in circulation among the citizens requesting free express delivery in the city. The lack of this advantage is a long felt want in Troy, which from the volume of business done with the company it has been entitled to for a number of years.

Forced to Take Poison.

Pueblo, Colo.—Frank Ward, foreman of a yard gang at the Pueblo steel works, caused the death of his daughter, Frances, aged 16, by forcing her to swallow a quantity of poison and then committed suicide by using the same drug. Neighbors said Ward had been drinking heavily and had threatened to kill himself and the girl. Ward was a widower.

ANGELICA WINE!

Pronounced equal to the best made in Europe, by good judges of wine. Price $2.00 per gallon, discount for larger quantity. Guaranteed to keep. Address

A. P. R. DAHL,
tf. Calera, Ala

VOL III.

PEACE DE

The Japanese Have Division of Sakhal
ment of Mone
Indem

APS WILL RETURN

he Conference is Now at Treaty, Which Will S

Portsmouth, N. H.—The long and bloody war between Japan and Russia is ended. The terms of peace were settled by M. Witte and Baron Komura at the session of the conference Tuesday morning, and this afternoon preliminary arrangements for an armistice were concluded, and the actual work of framing the "Treaty of Portsmouth" was by mutual agreement turned over to Mr. De Martens, Russia's great international lawyer, and Mr. Dennison, who for twenty-five years has acted as the legal adviser of the Japanese foreign office.

The treaty is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

This happy conclusion of the conference which a week ago would have been shipwrecked had it not been for the heroic intercession of President Roosevelt was sudden and dramatic. For the sake of peace, Japan, with the magnanimity of a victory, at the last moment yielded everything still at issue. Russia refused to budge from the ultimatum Emperor Nicholas had given to President Roosevelt through Ambassador Meyer. No indemnity under any guise, but an agreement to divide Sakhalin, and reimburse Japan for the maintenance of the Russian prisoners, were his last words. They had been repeatedly reiterated in M. Witte's instructions, and in the form of a written reply to the Japanese compromise proposal of last Wednesday they were delivered to Baron Komura Tuesday morning.

M. Witte went to the conference declaring he was powerless to change a dot of an "i" or the crossing of a "t" in his instructions. Emperor Nicholas' word had been given not only to him, but to President Roosevelt, the head of a foreign state.

Psychological Moment Ushered In By Witte.

When Baron Komura therefore first offered the new basis of compromise Tuesday night (the complete renunciation of indemnity, coupled with a proposition for the reduction of Sakhalin at a price to be fixed by a mixed commission, consisting of representatives of the neutral powers—in fact, if not in words, the project offered by the President, M. Witte again returned a non-possumus. It was what M. Witte stated in his interview with the Associated Press the "psychological moment." M. Witte did not flinch. He expected a rupture as he expressed it afterwards; he was stunned by what had happened. Baron Komura gave way on all the disputed points. With the prescience that enabled the Japanese to gauge the mentality of their adversaries on the field of battle and on the sea, they had realized in advance that peace could be obtained in no other way. They had warned their government. President Roosevelt, it is said, also advised Japan that it better to meet the Russian position than to take the responsibility of continuing the war for the purpose of collecting tribute.

The Mikado at the session of the privy and elder statesmen Tuesday had sanctioned the final concession. When Baron Komura yielded the rest was mere child's play.

Japan Determined to Neutralize Sakhalin.

Articles 10 and 11 (interned warships and limitation of Russia's power in the far east) were withdrawn. It is agreed that only that portion of the Chinese Eastern railroad south of Changtfu, the position occupied by Japan, should be ceded to Japan. On all sides, once the deadlock was broken, wanted a "just and lasting peace." In that spirit it was decided practically neutralize Sakhalin, the country binding itself not to fortify the southern half of the island, and not assuming an obligation not to close the La Perouse strait between Japan and Hokkaido, which would

, Alabam
s Directory.

E, Commercial Cl
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIA
information furnished to p
who desire to locate in the

A. M. Johnso
Groceries and Delicates

J. J. STANL
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBER
General Merchandise

G. W. Freema
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, To
and Cigars.
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSB
General Merchandise

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Im
ments and "FLORENC
Wagons in stock at a
times.
J. K. ORR SHO

Thorsby Wine
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Pr

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and T
Articles.
LICENSED PHARMAC

E. H. Adams
General Merchand

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wis
Millinery and Notio

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, Pr
Good Beds and Meal

A Langville &
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in WAGONS and BUGG

C. L. Forsm
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 31 1905 NO. 23

PEACE DECLARED.

The Japanese Have Decided to Accept Division of Sakhalin Without Payment of Money, or Other Indemnity.

PS WILL RETURN INTERNED SHIPS

Conference is Now at Work on Elaboration of the Treaty, Which Will Soon be Completed.

Portsmouth, N. H.—The long and ...y war between Japan and Russia ...ded. The terms of peace were ...ed by M. Witte and Baron Ko... at the session of the conference ...day morning, and this afternoon ...iminary arrangements for an ...ance were concluded, and the ...al work of framing the "Treaty ...Portsmouth" was by mutual agree... turned over to Mr. De Martens, ...ia's great international lawyer. ...d Mr. Dennison, who for twenty-five ...rs has acted as the legal adviser ...the Japanese foreign office.

The treaty is expected to be com...ted by the end of the week.

This happy conclusion of the con...ence which a week ago would have ...n shipwrecked had it not been for ...e heroic intercession of President ...osevelt was sudden and dramatic. ...For the sake of peace, Japan, with ...magnanimity of a victory, at the ...moment yielded everything still ...ussia refused to budge ...the ultimatum Emperor Nicholas ...given to President Roosevelt ...ugh Ambassador Meyer. No in...nity under any guise, but an ...ment to divide Sakhalin, and re...burse Japan for the maintenance ...the Russian prisoners, were his last ...s. They had been repeatedly re...ted in M. Witte's instructions, ...in the form of a written reply to ...Japanese compromise proposal of ...Wednesday they were delivered ...Baron Komura Tuesday morning.

...M. Witte went to the conference de...ing he was powerless to change ...dot of an "i" or the crossing of a ...t in his instructions. Emperor ...holas' word had been given not ...to him but to President Roose...the head of a foreign state.

...chological Moment Ushered In By Witte.

...Then Baron Komura therefore first ...ed the new basis of compromise ...day night (the complete renun...tion of indemnity, coupled with a ...osition for the reduction of Sak...in at a price to be fixed by a mixed ...sion, consisting of representatives ...the neutral powers—in fact, if not ...words, the project offered by the ...sident, M. Witte again returned a ...possumus. It was what M. Witte ...ed in his interview with the As...ted Press the "psychological mo...t." M. Witte did not flinch. He ...ected a rupture as he expressed it ...rwards; he was stunned by what ...happened. Baron Komura gave ...on all the disputed points. With ...prescience that enabled the Jap...se to gauge the mentality of their ...ntaries on the field of battle and ...the sea, they had realized in ad...ce that peace could be obtained ...no other way. They had warned ...r government. President Roose...it is said, also advised Japan ...better to meet the Russian posi...than to take the responsibility of ...ming the war for the purpose of ...ecting tribute.

...The Mikado at the session of the ...ior and elder statesmen Tuesday ...sanctioned the final concession. ...Baron Komura yielded the rest ...mere child's play.

...ia Determined to Neutralize Sakhalin.

...Articles 10 and 11 (interned war...and limitation of Russia's pow...in the far east) were withdrawn. ...agreed that only that portion ...the Chinese Eastern railroad south ...Changchun, the position occupied by ...Japan, should be ceded to Japan. ...Besides, once the deadlock was ...broken, a "just and lasting ...ace" in that spirit it was de...cided practically neutralize Sak...halin, the country binding itself not ...to fortify its half of the island, and ...not assuming an obligation not to ...close the La Perouse strait between ...Japan and Hokkaido, which would bar Russia's commercial route to the Pacific.

The plenipotentiaries went further. They decided to add a new clause in the nature of a broad provision for mutual commercial privileges by which each country will secure for the other the benefit of the "most favored nation" clause, and the "open door."

The new treaty, therefore, will be a wonderfully friendly document of a character, almost, to raise the suspicion that the two countries have not negtoiated peace, but have ratified the basis of a future alliance. There is, however, no evidence as rumored that any secret clauses are to be appended to the present treaty.

Before leaving the conference building felicitations were exchanged with the President at Oyster Bay. Both Baron Komura and M. Witte telegraphed. The former confined himself to apprising Mr. Roosevelt of the conditions upon which peace had been concluded.

Witte Praises President.

M. Witte frankly laid the tribute at the President's feet. In his message he said:

"History will ascribe to you the glory," and added the expression of Russia's hearty appreciation of the President's generous initiative. Mr. Roosevelt replied with words of thanks and congratulations.

Then began the jubilation. M. Witte and Baron de Rosen returned to the hotel for luncheon. The Japanese had returned at the conference hall to take luncheon with Mr. Peirce. The news that peace had been concluded had preceded the Russian plenipotentiaries and such scenes of wild rejoicing have never before been witnessed in the state of New Hampshire as greeted them upon their arrival at the hotel. M. Witte, dazed at the sudden and happy termination of the conference, was fairly overpowered by the tremendous ovation he received. He could only express his gratitude by shaking the hands of everybody, and in response to the volley of questions fired at him as to the terms, he murmured "we pay not a copee and we get half of Sakhalin."

Later, in his room, when he had partially recovered himself, he declared that he could not have dreamed of such a victory, for, that he regards it as a diplomatic triumph of the first magnitude he makes no attempt to conceal. And that is the verdict here. The Russians are overjoyed at the result.

"We have had our Liao Yangs and Mukdens on land," they say, "and our Tsushimas on sea, but the Japanese have their Portsmouth."

Declared That M. Witte Has Outwitted the Japs.

Although M. Witte is not a diplomatist, they declare that he has out maneuvered the Japanese, yielding one by one to the conditions until he forced them into a corner on the main issue of indemnity and left them no escape except surrender or to convert the war into a war to collect tribute. The Russians declared that diplomatically the Japanese made their colossal blunder when they agreed to consider the conditions seriatim.

The Japanese correspondents plainly showed their disaffection with the terms during the afternoon. They stood aloof, silent in the midst of general jubilation for as the afternoon advanced the air was filled with the sounds of rejoicing. Bells were ringing in Portsmouth and in Newcastle, and the fleet in the harbor was adding to the din with their sirens and bells. One of the Japanese, however, gave the true note when he remarked:

"Tell me that the Mikado has approved it, and I shall be satisfied."

In that sentence is compressed the Spartan heroism of the Japanese nation, and later when Mr. Sato issued the offcial explanation of the reasons that moved the Japanese plenipotentiaries, and it showed that the Emperor had approved, there was a perceptible change in the feelings of the Japanese. Considerable disappointment continued to be manifested. Baron Komura followed the rule he has set himself and declined to make any statement. Mr. Takahira said:

"For the sake of humanity and civilization, and as we believe in the interest of both countries, and the world at large, we have made peace.

Japanese Contend That They Acted for the Best.

"The Russians may indulge in boasting now. They may call it a decisive victory, but we are confident that upon calm consideration the world will applaud our course. To yield on the question of our expenses of the war was the only road to peace. We had attained the object of the war, we had established our predominant position in Corea, we had obtained the lease to Port Arthur and the adjacent territory, we had obtained the Chinese Eastern railroad and the evacuation of Manchuria. We had even obtained important fishing rights along the Russian littoral. These covered the objects which we have kept steadily in view for nineteen months of bloody war. These objects insured, the resumption of the great works of peace we had planned. To have now set ourselves a new object—that of obtaining money from Russia to defray the expenses of the war—would have involved a continuation of the sacrifice of blood and treasure. At the end—what? We could not go to Moscow or St. Petersburg. The internal conditions in Russia had to be considered. Our very successes might have created conditions which would make it impossible to secure indemnity. Besides in the final analysis there was the recognition of the fact that to obtain indemnity a country must hold the other by the throat. That is the lesson of history. We renounced such a purpose that our people might return to peaceful work and that commerce and normal life of the world might proceed."

The work of drafting the treaty will probably be completed by the end of this week. It is expected that it will not be a difficult task, as the treaty, except for phraseology, is included in the minutes of the meeting.

Mr. De Martens has authorized Mr. Dennison to do work in his room at his hotel.

Enthusiastic Ovation is Tendered the Japs.

The whole truth they learned when Mr. Sato made the Japanese official announcement later in the evening. The great Japanese demonstration did not begin until after 6 o'clock in the evening, as the Japanese plenipotentiaries and their official secretaries remained at the yard during the afternoon. When it came it was even more remarkable than that for the Russians, for all present appreciated the sacrifices the heroic little nation had made for peace. The crowd which awaited them as they dashed up in an auto was even larger than that which greeted M. Witte. The cheering came in volleys. Again and again the crowd hurrahed and waved their hats. As the car came under the porte cochere, both plenipotentiaries gravely lifted their hats and held them in their hands as they passed through the line of cheering people to the elevator. Baron Komura and Mr. Takahira looked straight ahead and seemed almost embrassed by the ovations. Even the ringing cheers from all sides did not move them. Only the gravity of the day's work seemed to impress them. They felt the full responsibility which had been upon their shoulders. Solemnity was written upon their faces as they entered the hotel, and the sounds of jubilation greeting them on every side did not shut out from their thoughts the home country and the possible effects of the news of the sacrifice that had been made for peace. Neither plenipotentiary stopped to shake hands, but accompanied by Mr. Sato, they immediately went to their rooms.

"I'll be back in a moment," said Mr. Sato, as the elevator took him to the second floor, where he deposited in Baron Komura's room the precious records of the day's proceedings. When Mr. Sato entered the lobby a few minutes later with the official announcement, even the summer girls crowded in and pushed and sought to get on the inner circle. Mr. Sato fairly fought his way to the rear veranda and ascending the band stand read the Japanese statement in the same monotone in which all of his previous announcements have been made.

Jap Correspondents Can't Believe the News.

Near by the group stood the still incredulous Japanese correspondents. They waited for the last word to be read. It confirmed M. Witte's announcement that Japan received nothing for the cost of the war and gave up half of Sakhalin.

"We did not believe it this morning, said Mr. Fukotimi, correspondent for the Osaki Asahi, as he walked away, shaking his head. "Japan expected a great deal more than this. Division of Sakhalin was not to be thought of. It was ours by the blood of our soldiers and we should have kept it. Russia brought on this war, and should have paid for it."

He was interrupted by a reporter:

"But the Emperor ordered it."

"Yes," said one, "it's the Emperor's work."

The attitude of the group at the mention of the emperor's name immediately changed.

"Yes," assented one, "the Emperor has spoken, and Japan will obey. The Emperor is all-wise and Japan is satisfied."

The incident was a striking illustration of that wonderful devotion of the Japanese for their sovereign and of the implicit confidence they place in his every action. Disposed at first to criticise Baron Komura and Mr. Takahira for yielding, when they reflected that this had been done by order of the emperor, their criticisms ceased, and a few moments later some of the more conservative were commending the Emperor's magnanimous act.

News Received in London.

London.—The announcement that the Portsmouth conference had concluded peace was received in London just in time for brief bulletins to be printed in the Tuesday afternoon papers.

Sir Eric's first expression, after he had been handed the dispatch, was:

"It is simply extraordinary."

The foreign office, according to Sir Eric, had no idea that Japan intended to yield on all points.

Sir Eric Barrington also said that the treaty was released by the announcement of the decision of the Portsmouth conference, but that the terms would not be given out till the government had been officially notified of the result of the peace conference.

Jap Explanation.

Portsmouth, N. H.—The following statement was issued by Mr. Sato on behalf of the Japanese plenipotentiaries:

"The question of the final disposition of the island of Sakhalin and the reimbursement to Japan of her war expenses, have, from the first, been issues on which absolute divergence of views existed. The difference of opinion upon these points—not one, but both—has frequently threatened the existence of the conference. But his majesty, the Emperor of Japan, responding to the dictates of humanity and civilization, has in a spirit of perfect conciliation and in the interest of peace, authorized his plenipotentiaries to waive the question of reimbursement of war expenses, and has consented to a division of Sakhalin upon terms which are mutually acceptable, thus making it possible to bring the important work of the conference to a successful issue."

The official account of this afternoon's meeting was given by Mr. Sato on his arrival at the hotel. It is as follows:

"In the afternoon session of August 29 the conference discussed the details of the treaty of peace. It has been decided to entrust the drafting of the clauses to Privy Councillor De Martens and Mr. Dennison, legal adviser of the foreign office of Japan, with instructions to finish the work as soon as possible."

Roosevelt First Figure.

Berlin—Japan has won a great moral victory, Russia a great diplomatic one, and President Roosevelt becomes the first figure in international statesmanship, that is what Berlin thinks of the result of the Portsmouth conference.

Astonishment at the result was felt by the foreign office, as it was everywhere else. Certainly it was the first exclamation of one of Russia's principal bankers who was expecting a different outcome. That Russia would not have to pay any indemnity was at first scarcely believable. The Berlin stock exchange had been preparing for news of a rupture of the negotiations, and for consequent disorder in the market.

St. Petersburg Electrified.

St. Petersburg—The dispatches from Portsmouth brought the first news of the ending of the peace conference. The news came as an electrifying surprise, as official and diplomatic circles had been practically without hope of peace all during the day.

President Roosevelt and household received the joyful tidings with immense gratification.

The Australian jungle fowl, instead of a nest builds a huge earth mound, often fifteen feet in height, with a circumference of 150 feet. These mounds are under cover and are so enveloped in foliage that in spite of their size they can scarcely be discovered.

ITEMS FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

Renewed Litigation;

Henry B. Gray, of Birmingham, has filed quo warranto proceedings against the Louisville and Nasnville Railroad Company in the city court of Montgomery. He wants to know by what authority the Louisville and Nashville is operating a railroad from Montgomery to Decatur.

The proceedings were filed Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The answer of the Louisville and Nashville was made returnable before Judge A. D. Sayre on September 4.

Mr. Gray, who is a stockholder of the South and North Company, claims that the general assembly of 1854 gave a franchise to the South and North Railroad of Alabama, a domestic corporation, to operate this railroad, and that operation by the Louisville and Nashville is an ususrpation of the granted privilege.

Henry Byrd Caught.

Henry Byrd, the confessed murderer of his wife, Ellen Byrd, was caught hiding and skulking in the woods on the Griel place, five miles from town, Friday morning. The arrest was made by Deputy Sheriff S. S. Belser, assisted by J. Lee Walker, and Patrolmen D. F. Lowe and J. A. LaPrade.

"Yas, sah, I killed her. I killed her because I loved her. I wanted her ter come back ter me, an' she wouldn't do it and I shot her."

This was what Byrd told his captors. He met the woman in the road Saturday night as she left the home of her employer, Mr. J. A. Barnes. He says he begged her to come back to him, and when she refused he put the pistol to her head and pulled the trigger. He dragged her body to the ditch and partially covered it with weeds.

A Remedy Offered.

A woman in Sylacauga has heard that yellow fever "air regin'" in Montgomery and she writes to the "citty mayyor" to tell him she has an infallible remedy for it and to offer it to the city for a moderate price.

The letter is quite a literary gem. The Sylacauga woman was misinformed as to the yellow fever situation in Montgomery. She is on a hopeless quest when she seeks to sell Montgomery a remedy for yellow fever, for even if the city should ever be unfortunate enough to harbor another refugee with yellow fever, the disease would be fought out on the stegomyia mosquito theory. The Sylacauga correspondent of the mayor avers, however, that her remedy was the only one which stopped the fever in her home town when it prevailed some years ago. She does not in the least indicate the nature of her remedy, holding that information in reserve until the negotiations have gotten under way.

Executive Appointments.

C. T. Weatherly, of Benton, Lowndes county, was Saturday appointed a notary public and ex-offico justice of the peace by the Governor.

Other executive appointments Saturday were as follows:

Constable—J. B. Knight, of Elba.

Notaries Public—J. C. Travis, of Evergreen, A. S. Boyd, of Birmingham; Eugene Heilpern, of Montgomery, and J. A. Welsh, of Mobile.

Can Ride in Sleepers.

All passengers from Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham who expect to spend seven days out of Alabama will hereafter be given the privilege of boarding refugee sleepers. This modification of a quarantine regulation of the state which has been carefully enforced in the past was made Friday by State Health Officer W. H. Sanders. The order was issued Friday afternoon and copies were sent to the quarantine supervisors stationed at Mobile, Montgomery and Birmingham.

To Improve Grounds.

The special committee of the Capitol Building Commission, composed of State Treasurer J. Craig Smith and Dr. Thomas M. Owen, Secretary, have let the contract for grading and improving the South half of Capitol Square.

The work of filling in will begin at once, and as soon as possible thereafter the important work of landscape gardening will begin.

Will Be Settled.

No communication has been held between Governor Jelks and State Health Officer W. H. Sanders about the justice of Alabama quarantine officers interfering with through passenger traffic. The complaint of Governor Blanchard and Louisianians on this score, therefore, which threatens a controversy between him and Governor Jelks will be attended to by the latter himself unless the matter is later taken up with Dr. Sanders.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House,
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
Office Hours { 9 a. m. to 12 m. / 1 to 5 p. m.
CLANTON

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS.
PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!

To all Whom it May Concern:

I have brought the W. E. Thomas gin and grist mill, and will grind every Friday and will do my best to give perfect satisfaction. I will have two gins with 110 saws and two presses. I will soon move and will take my jack over there, so as to give my patrons a chance to raise good mules. Thanking all for past favors, I will do my best to merit your business in the future.

Respectfully,
tf. T. A. DRIVER.
Jemison Route 2.

LOST!

Dun Cow 10 years old and red heifer calf 1 year old. Cow is marked crop off each ear, underbit off right. Liberal reward given for return or informaion to
D. T. MELTON
tf. Verbena, R. F. D. No. 1.

WANTED!

A live agent in every beat in Chilton county to write life insurance for the Mutual Benefit Association of Georgia. Cheapest insurance on earth. Good pay to hustlers. Write
W. R. Jackson,
Division Agent,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

The Caterpillar

In silken suit of finest thread
So peaceful he lives out his days,
And never seems to care how gruff
He makes some people with his ways.

Of leisured life, he moves about
Inviting trust, none stops to pat
Him on the back, or smooth his hair;
He feels the slight, I'm sure of that.

Meandering down a lady's back,
Or snuggling in a shell-like ear,
He tries to win your confidence,
And yet inspires but silly fear.

A useless creature? Could we view
The Elf World in the time of storm,
I think we'd find that he supplies
The fairy folk with mufflers warm.

E. D. Pierson.

The HOLLOW FRAME

BY W. E. WELLS

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

I had just returned from a year's study in Paris and had set up a studio in New York city, when I met "Pop Brown," as he was always called. He was an artist that nature had never intended to be great, but who made a living painting sketches for advertising signs, sofa pillows or anything that would bring a dollar. He was a lonely old man, apparently having no relatives. In fact, he afterward told me that he had none, and seeking no friends. As our studios were on the same floor we met often and after a time for some reason which I could never explain became fast friends and we spent a good deal of time in each other's company. I was at the time working rather steadily, for me, on a picture that was intended for my masterpiece and sell for thousands of dollars, out of which I was to repay my father the money which he so liberally furnished me.

Considerable over a year passed by without anything unusual in the path of our friendship. I had finished my picture, but the critics had not, for every time they looked at it they seemed to find something worse to say about it and I, of course, found no one foolish enough to buy it at a large price. In fact, as I look back, I am certain that I never was born for an artist, but my father, because of certain rather clever drawings that I made when a boy, was certain that I was and it was to please him that I made the effort. While my picture was being flayed by the critics, Pop Brown was taken seriously sick, and as he had no friend but myself it seemed my duty to care for him, and I did so with the help of my man. He soon developed pneumonia, and the second day after went out of his mind. One thing that seemed to concern him during all his sickness, was an old frame containing a landscape, which was probably his work in his younger days. Again and again he asked for the frame, and told me not to let it go out of my possession, and now and then murmured something about it that I could not understand. The struggle with death only lasted a few days and the old man passed away. The day after his death a lawyer came to me with a will that Brown had made only a few weeks before he was taken sick, leaving me all his possessions. There was no cash that I could find and when I had disposed of his studio effects they hardly brought enough to pay the funeral expenses and buy him a neat gravestone. I disposed of all his things except the old frame, which I kept to remember my eccentric old friend because he seemed to value it so much during his sickness.

Affairs went on as usual for several months when I suddenly met my fate and fell in love. It is not necessary for me to burden you with the intricacies of my love affair, for although they were unique to me and Bessie the sweetest, best and loveliest girl in the world yet I doubt not that they were much the same as other love affairs. Suffice it to say that I met her at a swell reception and it was a case of love at first sight on both sides. She was the niece and prospective heir of a cantankerous old maid whose only object in life was money, but as my father was wealthy and I an only son, the aunt made no objection to the suit. In fact she did all she could to encourage it, and for once it seemed that the course of true love was going to run smoothly, when just after the engagement was announced the crash came. Father had invested heavily in some new mining stock that was expected to bring large returns, but the company failed and this brought on other failures until in a few months his entire fortune was swept away. The shock was too great for my father, and in three weeks he had passed beyond the trouble of this world and I was left alone. When I had settled the bills and sold nearly everything that father possessed, including the furniture of the old home, I found that all that I had in the world was less than $1,000 and ability to do practically nothing—paint a little, what knowledge of bookkeeping and mercantile life I had been able to pick up about my father's store and that was all.

Never intended to be great.

A day or so after the funeral I called upon Bessie, whom I had not seen since the service, and I was met at the door by the butler who told me the ladies were not at home. The same thing happened the next day and that night I received a note from the aunt saying that Bessie had changed her mind and that she returned my ring and presents and I might consider the engagement broken. I was dumfounded at first and then indignant and went to the house at once to demand an explanation, but I was denied an entrance as before. I returned home and wrote a wrathful letter to the aunt, accusing her with being at the bottom of the whole matter, which was true, this letter she never answered. But a few days later I received, through a trusted maid, a tear-stained note from Bessie, telling me the separation was the work of the aunt, as I had expected, who had decided that she should never marry a poor man, and if she did she would cut her off without a cent. Bessie assured me that while she had obeyed her aunt in sending back my ring and the rest, she still loved me, and that she was ready to do what I thought best, and if I arranged it, she would come to me and be married.

Picked it up and examined it.

For several months I struggled with the problem, being encouraged by sweet notes from Bessie, and seeing her a few times, for her aunt had come to believe that Bessie had given me up, and so had begun to relax her vigilance. A merchant in the same business that my father had been in, wanted to sell out because of his ill health, and he made me the first offer because of his friendship for my father. The price was $10,000 cash, which was hardly one-third of what it was worth. I obtained the refusal of it for six months and tried to borrow the money, but no one was ready to loan money on no security to an artist with no experience, no matter how good the investment might be. I was in despair and to intensify the burden, Bessie's aunt had selected a young man of wealth, whom she was determined that Bessie should marry.

As I marched up and down my small room, for of course I had given up my studio, trying to evolve some new idea, I ran full into Pop Brown's old frame that I had standing in a corner. The force of my impact knocked down the frame and the jar in falling caused it to fall apart, it having been poorly glued, and the picture fell out upon the floor. I picked up the pieces and laid them upon the table, but one of them slipped from my hand and fell to the floor again, and in falling it gave forth the sound of a hollow box falling. The sound was so noticeable that I picked it up and examined it. At first I could not find anything extraordinary in it, but when I rapped it on the table it still gave that hollow sound. Finally I noticed that the wood was joined and prying with my knife I opened a hidden pocket, which operated with a spring and four bank notes fell to the floor. These showed that Pop Brown had on deposit about $25,000 in four different cities, which now belonged to me, as his heir. To say that I danced with joy does not describe it at all. I hastened to the banks to see if it was correct and found that it was. I had no trouble in claiming the money, as I had carefully established my heirship when Brown died and a few days later found me in possession of nearly $25,000.

Of course it did not take me long to get word to Bessie, telling her of my find, and within a week we had made our arrangements and she escaped and we were married before any one knew anything about it. The old aunt raved, words could not express her wrath, and she disinherited Bessie, but it was too late. It did not take me long to decide that I was not intended for an artist and to close the offer made by my father's friend for his business. It was the only thing that I really knew anything about. I applied myself to it with all my power to make money, and now I am a rich man. Bessie's aunt has forgiven our marriage, since she has found that I have some money, and our second child is named after her, so I suppose we will get her money after all, as she has no one else to leave it to, and it all comes from Pop Brown's old frame.

LONDON HOUSES COME HIGH.

Large Sums Asked for Residences in the Metropolis.

In Park lane, the home of dukes and South African millionaires, it is impossible to buy a residence under £60,000; whilst for a house in Park street, which is not so "select," £30,000 is the minimum that is required. Berkeley square is another costly spot, and there is a house now for sale for which 40,000 guineas is being asked. In Mayfair and Belgravia there is scarcely a house that has not cost at least £10,000. Perhaps the district that combines both fashion and comparative cheapness in the matter of house value is Chelsea, where a good house can be bought for £3,000. But anywhere in Piccadilly or near Hyde Park the would-be house purchaser must be prepared to pay anything from £25,000 to £100,000.—London Tit-Bits.

Expressions Made to Order.

"A remarkable fact in my profession," said a photographer, "is that we portrait artists can give to a sitter any expression that is desired. A bland look, a noble look, a serene look—it is no trouble to us to put any one of these expressions on the most wooden face.

"The matter is achieved by the repetition of certain words. If you, for instance, came to me and said you wished to look distinguished I would pose you in a distinguished attitude and then I would get you to say 'brush' just before I snapped the shutter. For some inexplicable reason the pronounciation of the simple word 'brush' gives to the mouth an air of the most striking nobility and distinction.

"If you want to have in a photograph a look of serenity you must say 'bosom.'

"If you want to make your mouth look small say 'flip.' If you want to make it look larger say 'cabbage.'

"To have an expression of melancholy it is necessary to say 'kerchunk.'

"To have an expression of pride or hauteur it is necessary to say 'phoenix.'"—Chicago Chronicle.

The Law of Sale.

A specialist who has made a study of the mental attitude of the consumer toward the advertisers formulates what he calls the "law of sale" as follows: "Attention, properly sustained, changes to interest; interest, properly augmented, changes to desire, and desire, properly intensified, changes to resolve to buy." Often the reader passes through all these mental stages in the perusal of a single advertisement; sometimes the cumulative power of a series of "ads" is necessary to bring him to the final attitude. In either case the best means of attracting attention, arousing interest and intensifying desire is the first-class newspaper which covers a field no other medium can reach.—Philadelphia Record.

Value of System in Work.

It is wonderful to see how many hours prompt people contrive to make of a day; it is as though they picked up the moments which the dawdlers lost. And if you find yourself where you have so many things pressing upon you that you hardly know how to begin, take hold of the first one that comes to hand, and you will find the rest all fall in line and follow after, like a company of well-drilled soldiers; and, though work may be hard to meet when it charges in squads, it is easily vanquished if you can bring it into line.—Exchange.

To a Child.

The leaves talked in the twilight, dear;
Hearken the tale they told;
How, in some far-off place and year,
Before the world grew old,

I was a dreaming forest-tree
You were a wild, sweet bird
That sheltered at the heart of me
Because the north wind stirred.

How, when the chiding gale was still,
When peace fell soft on fear,
You stayed one golden hour to fill
My dream with singing, dear.

To-night, the self-same songs are sung
The first green forest heard;
My heart and the gray world grow young
To shelter you, my bird.

—Sophie Jewett, in Scribner's.

Sultan's Fortune in Diamonds.

Even should the sultan of Morocco be compelled to leave his country in a hurry as a result of present complications he will not do so in a penniless condition. Some time ago he sent to Paris a trusty messenger who invested nearly $5,000,000 in unset diamonds. These precious stones Abdul carries on his person continually, although in such a country that is rather a dangerous thing to do.

PINS FAITH TO BATTLESHIP.

Capt. Mahan's Conclusions Drawn from Battle of Sea of Japan.

Capt. A. T. Mahan, writing for Collier's on "The Battle of the Sea of Japan," discusses the value of submarine boats as exemplified by Admiral Togo's attacks upon the Russian fleet. He says:

To recapitulate: After allowance has been made for the demonstrated superiority of the Japanese in training and experience, it seems clear from Togo's use of his vessels, and from such details of the action as have so far been received, that the superiority of the battleship and of the gun, for the main purposes of naval warfare, has not been shaken. On the contrary, by an account attributed to a Japanese, it appears that the remaining Russian battleships, after the loss of the Borodino and in the subsequent confusion, though already much mauled beat off after dark, using their searchlights, two attacks by the whole flotilla of the enemy's destroyers, acting in two squadrons; and Japanese attacks have not heretofore, in this war, been found easy to repel. Should the official accounts confirm this, it will approach demonstration that uninjured battleships, manned by watchful seamen who keep their head, will in the long run suffer from torpedo attack only in the same proportion as military force suffers from other incidents of war. Let it be mentioned also that the torpedo vessel, from the delicacy of its constitution—a box of machinery—and from the narrowness of its coal supply, will always be most numerous and efficient in home waters. This advantage in this case fell to the Japanese, and it may have contributed to determine Togo's choice of position. This particular consideration shows that, in the broad view of naval policy, the function of the torpedo vessel is defensive, although its local action is offensive.

I have not seen any indication which to me seemed conclusive, or even probable, of the employment of the submarine in these engagements; but neither does there appear any certain reason why any one who so prefers may not atribute to them such amount of the damage done as to him seems likely.

Happy Love.

Since the sweet knowledge I possess
That she I love is mine,
All nature throbs with happiness
And wears a face divine.
The woods seem greener than they were,
The skies are brighter blue;
The stars shine clearer, and the air
Lets finer sunlight through.
Until I loved I was a child,
And sported on the sands;
But now the ocean opens out,
With all its happy lands.

The circles of my sympathy
Extend from earth to heaven;
I strove to pierce a mystery,
And lo, the clue is given.
The woods, with all their boughs and leaves,
Are preachers of delight,
And wandering clouds on summer eves
Are Edens to my sight.
My confidants and confforters
Are river, hill, and grove,
And sun, and stars, and heaven's blue deeps,
And all that live and move.

O friendly hills! O garrulous woods!
O sympathizing air!
O many-voic-ed solitudes!
I know my love is fair.
I know that she is fair and true,
And that from her you've caught
The changeful glories ever new
That robe you in my thought.
Grief, from the armor of my heart,
Rolls off like rustling rain;
'Tis life to love; but double life
To be beloved again.

—Charles Mackay.

Paying for Social Mention.

The expenditure that comes as the greatest shock to Americans who rent London houses and expect to break into royal society and tap the prince of Wales playfully with their fans is the amount of money it takes to get one's social activities "noticed" in the newspapers. To get the announcement that "Mrs. Rocks of New York has taken Lord So-and-So's Mayfair residence for the season" into the chief London daily and weekly journals costs more than $500. The fashionable Morning Post alone charges $25. The newspaper rule on this point is a hard and fast one and the only exception to it is royalty. This rule seems to an cutsider a good one. There's money in it for the newspaper and it keeps a lot of cheap peewee society out of the public eye.

Eyes and Sunlight.

Sunlight, as distinct from sun heat, is of benefit to human eyes. Unless refracted from white cliffs or stretches of sand, or by other means, it does not cause any impairment of vision, says the Chicago News. It is the natural provision of the sense of sight, and is in harmony with the natural period for work and pleasure—that is, the day. So soon as we introduce artificial light we deal with that which needs caution. A dim light injures vision, because the eye alters its shape to receive the feeble rays. On the other hand, a strong artificial light will produce inflammation of the eye surface and worse.

Father and Son Graduate Together.

Gallagher & Gallagher is the name of a new law firm in Cleveland, the members being father and son. Both are graduates of the same law school, which they entered together three years ago, just after young Gallagher left high school. They graduated together, were admitted to the bar at the same time and side by side took the oath yesterday. The father is 43 years old and the son nearly 22.

Senator on Investigating Tour.

Ex-Senator Cockrell of Missouri, now interstate commerce commissioner, and one of his colleagues on the commission will start for St. Louis and the southwest in July to make a study of transportation questions. This study will be exhaustive and will deal with important branches of the rate problem.

No Freemasonry in China

The installation of a grand master of the Chinese secret orders in the United States, popularly known as the "Chinese Freemasons," has aroused interest in the question of the connection between the Chinese secret societies and the Masonic body, says the Washington Star. Allusions to Chinese Freemasonry" appear periodically in the newspapers, though, according to the Cyclopedia of Fraternities, there is no such thing as Freemasonry among the Chinese.

The only Masonic lodges in China are in the foreign concessions at the seaports. Their membership is composed exclusively of others than Chinese and they are conducted under foreign warrants. The rites of the Chinese secret societies bear some resemblance to those of the Freemasons, which accounts for the popular supposition of a connection between the two. The similarity, though more apparent than real, is remarkable in view of the antiquity of both, and the impossibility of either to have been patterned after the other.

China is filled with secret societies, most of which have for their object the overthrow of the Tsing dynasty, with a pretended benevolent significance of the organization. The most powerful of these societies, the Kalao Hui, numbers more than 1,000,000.

The Cyclopecia of Fraternities contains an account of an initiation ceremony at a Chinese lodge in Spokane, Wash., at which four white men, Freemasons, were present by invitation. The lodge represented a benevolent branch of the Kalao Hui. There were references to the "immortal three," circumambulation, four stations at which questions were asked and answers returned, kneeling on crossed swords, tea drinking, burning incense, a traditional season of refreshment and signs in which the head and hands were unable to detect anything that resembled the Masonry with which they were familiar.

The same authority gives this account of the secret signs used by the Triad society, which was at the bottom of the Talping rebellion:

"Members always halt on entering a house, and then proceed with the left foot first. When sitting they place their toes together and spread their heels apart. They also recognize one another by the way they place their teacups on the table, and the manner in which they hitch their trousers. Their motto is 'Drive out the Tartar.'"

Treason is punished by lopping off the ears of a minor offender. The final punishment is beheading.

Stories of "High Society"

F. Leveson-Gower, long prominent in England, has lately published a volume of reminiscences, in which he tells the story of Princess Lieven: "What the princess chiefly suffered from was intense boredom, which amounted almost to a disease. If nobody called during the afternoon she would roll on the floor from ennui. On one occasion, when on her way from England, she got so much alarmed at the prospect of traveling from Calais to Paris alone that she offered a seat in her carriage to a respectable looking clergyman on board the steamer, which he joyfully accepted. When seated beside her he talked so incessantly as to drive her wild. She could only relieve her feelings by putting her head out of the window and screaming out to the wind, 'Il m'ennuie—il m'ennuie!' (He fatigues me.)"

In the '50's Mr. Leveson-Gower resided in St. Petersburg." He tells this story: "Oopposite to our house was drawn up a regiment called Paulovski, formed by the Emperor Paul, all the men having turned-up noses, and therefore resembling him. It seems it was the fashion here to compose regiments of men who have the same sort of features. The late emperor had recruits sent to him and told them off according to their looks. What childishness! There is one regiment of men all marked with the smallpox. This Paulovski regiment did one thing which amused me. Just before the cortege came up they all blew their noses with their fingers at the word of command, and this was in order that none of them might sneeze when the emperor passed, as their doing so would bring him bad luck!"

When Mr. Motley, the historian, was American minister to London he had trouble at his first dinner party. Mr. Leveson-Gower says: "At that time couples were sent in to dinner in pairs, but nobody's place was fixed. Unfortunately the Turkish ambassador was allotted to Lady Waldegrave, who did not care to have him as her neighbor. She consequently told him that his place was at the other side of the table. He, with oriental politeness, did as she bade him, and sat down opposite to her. This upset the whole arrangement. The couples wandered about the room like sheep that were being driven out of a field. Mr. Motley, who had every merit except a good temper, went into a passion, and I nearly died of laughing."

Brave Woman Saved Horses

Miss Emily G. Roebling, the youngest daughter of Charles G. Roebling, head of the Roebling corporation of Trenton, N. J., while sitting at her drawing-room window a few days ago saw flames coming from her father's immense stable. Miss Roebling rushed out and unaided rescued nine thoroughbred horses, says the New York Times. The gardener summoned the fire department.

When the first hose carriage turned into the yard the horses took fright at the steep incline to the barn and started to run away in the direction of the large conservatory where Mr. Roebling raises his valuable and famous orchids.

Miss Roebling, who is noted for her daring horsemanship, grabbed the off horse by the bridle and this turned the animal's head away from the glass house. By this time Miss Roebling was a full-fledged volunteer member of the paid fire department. She assisted in recoupling a burst length of hose and seemed to enjoy the wetting she got. The fire was put out with but $800 damage.

While the fire was in progress Miss Roebling worked as hard as any of the men. She had been used to horses from her infancy, and can mount and manage any of the animals her father keeps. When she went into the burning barn they were enveloped in smoke and were pulling at their halters. They all became docile under her hands, and when taken out allowed other members of the family to tie them to trees and posts.

After the fire Chief Allen congratulated Miss Roebling highly. He said that if she had not acted so promptly the animals would have been smothered. She said it was nothing, and went into the house to change her drenched dress.

Miss Roebling is a leader of the young social set in this city. She is an expert rower, horsewoman and golfer, and has won many trophies. Her father is the head of the house that built the first and second Brooklyn bridges, and her uncle is Washington A. Roebling, the engineer who lost his health because he would not trust the workmen to do the work in the air locks for the first Brooklyn bridge, so went down himself to superintend and caught the coffer dam fever. He is an invalid to this day.

All Love the Enthusiast

Enthusiasm in life is the great generator of sunshine. Without a living interest in the busy world and that sympathy of feeling which connects us with every other living being, we cannot infuse any warmth into our manners, or bring others into sympathy with us, says the New Orleans Times. Helen Keller, whose sunshiny soul is as sensitive to impressions as a delicate flower is to atmosphere, in her "Story of My Life," writes: "The touch of a hand may seem an impertinence, while that of another is like a benediction. I have met people so empty of joy that when I clasped their frosty finger tips it seemed as if I were shaking hands with a northeast storm. Others there are whose fingers have sunbeams in them; their grasp warms my heart."

It is as natural for us to be attracted toward sunshiny natures as it is for flowers to turn toward the sun. In spite of a life of almost constant illness, Robert Louis Stevenson charmed all who came under his influence by his spontaneous cheerfulness and absolute freedom from all shadow of bitterness or repining, comments Success. He found the keynote of each day in this simple prayer, born of his own inspiration: "The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man; help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us help to go blithely on our business all this day; bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored and grant us in the end the gift of sleep."

The Red Porch Chair

I love it, I love it, and who shall dare
To blame me for loving that red porch chair?
It isn't a graceful affair, but its size
Has made it a thing I shall always prize;
Some day it will probably tumble apart,
But at present its solidness gladdens my heart—
Would you know the cause? Last night I sat there
With her on my knees, in that red porch chair.

No little brother lingered near
The shaded porch, with listening ear;
She sweetly bent her head to give
The kiss that made me glad to live;
Her parents were both asleep inside,
And now and then she feebly tried
To make me believe it wasn't fair
For us both to occupy one chair.

I glibly cleared her qualms away
And stayed as long as I dared to stay;
She spoke of her weight, but I [illegible] smiled
And vowed she weighed no more than a child.
And we sat and sighed while the moments sped
Till my legs got numb and my [illegible] seemed dead.
But it's wonderful what a man can bear
When he holds a girl in a red porch chair.

'Tis past, 'tis past, and I think of it now—
Well, I can't find words to express [illegible] how,
'Twas there that we sat till I [illegible]
Although there were other [illegible] beside,
Oh, say it is folly and deem me weak,
But to-night again I shall feel her cheek
Pressed against my own as I hold her there
In that glorious little old red porch chair.

AN IRISH M

BY JOHN FRANCIS

"Ah, sweet Kitty Neil! rise up
Your neat little foot, will ye
Come, trip down with me to the Half the parish is there and
The sun is gone down and Shines sweetly and While all the Each

With
Her eye in the
The hand to
So she
And now
Each gay-hearted
And Pat
Somehow, when it
Now Felix Magee puts his
And with flourish so
With a cheer and a
The maids to Cheeks
Now
Search the world all
No such sight
Sweet Kate
Beaming
Your fairy
Nor feel his heart
Poor Pat foots
Subdued
The sign
"Dance

A Trust

By Roger

THE people of Melstone were not uncharitable, yet it would have been hard to find three persons who believed there was any good in Fred Wildburn. A rude, ungoverned child; a lawless, vicious youth; a reckless, dissipated man. In all his thirty years of life he had done no good thing that anyone ever remembered of him. The people of Melstone were a very moral sort of people, and did not hesitate to give this one Ishmaelite to understand the impassable gulf that lay between themselves and him, both in time and eternity. Perhaps it tended to improve his heart and temper; but I doubt it.

Among the inhabitants was a family of the name of Upton. From time immemorial there had been a feud between the Wildburns and Uptons, kept alive and aggravated by each successive generation. A great many years before a Wildburn and an Upton had married sisters, and through some kind of diplomacy on the part of Upton, his wife was made heiress to the paternal fortune, and the wife of Wildburn cut off with a paltry hundred dollars.

Later, Henry Upton had succeeded in getting the whole of a large legacy left by some distant relative, which should have been equally divided between Fred Wildburn and himself. Naturallly, this tended to widen the breach, and fearful and bitter were the vows of vengeance which Fred breathed against Upton.

Indeed, his ungovernable passion might have led him to some act of personal violence, but for one restraining influence.

Ten years before the commencement of our tale, when Fred Wildburn was about twenty years old, he had one of his wrists broken in a fight. He had himself provoked. His mother was and had been for years, a bedridden invalid, with an intellect weakened by long illness and abuse—for her husband drank heavily at times, and liquor made him wild and furious.

The broken limb was set by a surgeon in a neighboring town; but the prospect of payment being exceedingly small, he paid very little subsequent attention to his patient. It was warm weather, and the arm was badly swollen and bruised besides, and needed due attention. Good, charitable people, who gave munificently for the amelioration of the heathen thousands of miles away, turned with disgust from this heathen at their own doors. Timid women shrank from entering the house, because, perchance, Wildburn might be on one of his "rousings," and so the bruises became inflamed, and the danger that the limb would have to come off grew imminent. Fred wasn't used to bear pain, and raved fearfully, while the weak-minded invalid cried and fretted by turns, and Wildburn senior did more perseveringly than ever.

Into this pandemonium there came one morning a slight, delicate girl, bearing a little roll of snowy linen in her hands.

"I have come to dress your arm, Fred," she said, quietly, laying aside her white sunbonnet, and revealing her rather pale face, with soft, fearless brown eyes.

"Who sent you here, Bessie Upton?" asked the elder Wildburn, in a blustering voice.

"No one, sir. I came because I thought it right for me to do it. Frederick will lose his arm, unless it is cared for speedily."

"Let him lose it, then," was the gruff answer.

"Not if I can help it, sir!"

And the brown eyes were lifted fearlessly to his face.

Muttering something about "meddling neighbors," he seized his hat and staggered out of the room, and Bessie Upton set herself to the work of relief for the wounded arm.

It was a shocking sight, and the girl's lips grew just a little white as she stripped off the matted bandages, but her white fingers were steady and gentle as she carefully washed the inflamed limb in some liniment she had brought with her, and swathed it in soft linen carefully in the cool, soft bandages and brought for the purpose.

"Why, it doesn't feel like the same arm!" Fred exclaimed, when she had finished; and involuntarily he gave sonry in China

aster Kao Hui numbers more than 1,000,000 ... The Cyclopedia of Fraternities ... ains an account of an initiation cere... mony at a Chinese lodge in Spokane, Wash. at which four white men, Free... sons, were present by invitation. The lodge represented a benevolent ... of the Kalao Hui. There were ... references to the "immortal three," circumambulation, four stations at ... which questions were asked and an... swers returned, kneeling on crossed ... swords, tea drinking, burning incense, ... a traditional season of refreshment ... and signs in which the head and hands ... were unable to detect anything that ... resembled the Masonry with which ... they were familiar.

The same authority gives this ac... count of the secret signs used by the ... Triad society, which was at the bot... tom of the Taiping rebellion:

"Members always halt on entering ... a house, and then proceed with the ... left foot first. When sitting they ... place their toes together and spread ... their heels apart. They also recognize ... one another by the way they place ... their teacups on the table, and the ... manner in which they hitch their trou... sers. Their motto is 'Drive out the ... Tartar.'"

Treason is punished by lopping off ... the ears of a minor offender. The ... final punishment is beheading.

"High Society"

... of features. The late emperor had re... ... cruits sent to him and told them off ... according to their looks. What child... ... ishness! There is one regiment of ... men all marked with the smallpox. ... The Paulovski regiment did one thing ... which amused me. Just before the ... cortege came up they all blew their ... noses with their fingers at the word ... of command, and this was in order ... that none of them might sneeze when ... the emperor passed, as their doing so ... would bring him bad luck!"

When Mr Motley, the historian, ... was American minister to London he ... had trouble at his first dinner party. ... Mr Leveson Gower says: "At that ... time couples were sent in to dinner in ... pairs, but nobody's place was fixed. ... Unfortunately the Turkish ambassa... dor was allotted to Lady Waldegrave, ... who did not care to have him as her ... neighbor. She consequently told him ... that his place was at the other side ... of the table. He, with oriental polite... ness, did as she bade him, and sat ... down opposite to her. This upset the ... whole arrangement. The couples want... ed to sit about the room like sheep that ... were being driven out of a field. Mr ... Motley, who had every merit except ... a good temper, went into a passion ... and I nearly died of laughing."

an Saved Horses

... the men. She had been used to horses ... from her infancy, and can mount and ... manage any of the animals her father ... keeps. When she went into the burn... ing barn they were enveloped in ... smoke and were pulling at their hal... ters. They all became docile under ... her hands, and when taken out allow... ed other members of the family to tie ... them to trees and posts.

After the fire Chief Allen congratu... lated Miss Roebling highly. He said ... that if she had not acted so promptly ... the animals would have been smother... ed. She said it was nothing, and ... went into the house to change her ... drenched dress.

Miss Roebling is a leader of the ... young social set in this city. She is ... an expert rower, horsewoman and ... golfer and has won many trophies. ... Her father is the head of the house... that built the first and second Brook... lyn bridges, and her uncle is Washing... ton A. Roebling, the engineer who lost ... his health because he would not trust ... the workmen to do the work in the ... air locks for the first Brooklyn bridge, ... so went down himself to superintend ... and caught the coffer dam fever. He ... is an invalid to this day.

the Enthusiast

It is as natural for us to be attract... ed toward sunshiny natures as it is ... for flowers to turn toward the sun. ... In spite of a life of almost constant ... illness, Robert Louis Stevenson ... charmed all who came under his in... fluence by his spontaneous cheerful... ness and absolute freedom from a ... shadow of bitterness or repining. ... Emerson comments: Success. He found the key ... note of each day in this simple prayer, born of his own inspiration: "The ... day returns and brings us the petty ... round of irritating concerns and ... duties. Help us to play the man; help ... us to perform them with laughter and ... kind faces; let cheerfulness abound ... with industry. Give us help to live ... blithely on our business all this day; ... bring us to our resting beds weary ... and content and undishonored and ... grant us in the end the gift of sleep."

Porch Chair

She spoke of her weight, but I bravely ... smiled
And vowed she weighed no more than a ... child;
And we sat and sighed while the moments ... sped
Till my legs got numb and my feet ... seemed dead.

But it's wonderful what a man can do
When he holds a girl in a red porch chair.

'Tis past, 'tis past, and I think of it ... now—
Well I can't find words to explain just ... how,
'Twas there that we sat till I nearly died, ... Although there were other porches ... beside.
Oh, say it is folly and deem me weak, ... But to-night again I shall feel her cheek ... Pressed against my own as I hold her ... there
In that glorious little old red porch chair.

AN IRISH MELODY

BY JOHN FRANCIS WALZ.

"Ah, sweet Kitty Neil! rise up from your wheel—
Your neat little foot will be weary from spinning;
Come, trip down with me to the sycamore tree;
Hark! the parish is there, and the dance is beginning.
The sun is gone down; but the full harvest moon
Shines sweetly and cool on the dew-whitened valley;
While all the air rings with the soft, loving things
Each little bird sings in the green shaded alley."

... a bit o' red ... Kitty rose up the while,
Her eye in the glass, as she bound her hair, glancing;
'Tis hard to refuse when a young lover sues,
So she couldn't but choose to go off to the dancing.
And now on the green the glad groups are seen—
Each gay-hearted lad with the lass of his choosing;
And Pat, without rad, leads out sweet Kitty Neil—Somehow, when he asked, she ne'er thought of refusing.

Now Felix Magee puts his pipes to his knee,
And with flourish so free, sets each couple in motion;
With a cheer and a bound, the lads natter the ground—
The maids move around just like swans on the ocean.
Cheeks bright as the rose—feet light as the doe's—
Now coolly returning, now boldly advancing;
Search the world all around from the sky to the ground,
No such sight can be found as the Irish lass dancing!

Sweet Kate, who could view your eyes of deep blue,
Beaming humidly through their dark lashes so mildly—
Your fairy-turned arm, heaving breast, rounded form—
Nor feel his heart warm, and his pulses throb wildly?
Poor Pat feels his heart, as he gazes, depart,
Subdued by the smart of such painful yet sweet love;
The sight leaves his eyes as he cries with a sigh,
"Dance light, for my heart it lies under your feet, love!"

—National Magazine.

A Trust Fulfilled.

By Roger Canning.

THE people of Melstone were not uncharitable, yet it would have been hard to find three persons who believed there was any good in old Wildburn. A rude, ungoverned child—a lawless, vicious youth; a reckless, dissipated man. In all his thirty years of life he had done no good thing that anyone ever remembered of him. The people of Melstone were a very moral sort of people, and did not hesitate to give this one Ishmaelite to understand the impassable gulf that lay between themselves and him, both in time and eternity. Perhaps it tended to improve his heart and temper; but I doubt it.

Among the inhabitants was a family of the name of Upton. From time immemorial there had been a feud between the Wildburns and Uptons, kept alive and aggravated by each successive generation. A great many years before a Wildburn and an Upton had married sisters, and through some nice bit of diplomacy on the part of Upton, his wife was made heiress to the paternal fortune, and the wife of Wildburn cut off with a paltry hundred dollars.

Later Henry Upton had succeeded in getting the whole of a large legacy, left by some distant relative, which should have been equally divided between Fred Wildburn and himself. Naturally this tended to widen the breach and fearful and bitter were the vows of vengeance which Fred breathed against Upton.

Indeed, his ungovernable passion might have led him to some act of personal violence, but for one restraining influence.

Ten years before the commencement of our tale, when Fred Wildburn was about twenty years old, he had one of his wrists broken in a fight he had himself provoked. His mother was, and had been for years, a bedridden invalid with an intellect weakened by illness and abuse—for her husband drank heavily at times, and liquor made him wild and furious.

The broken limb was set by a surgeon of a neighboring town; but the bill of payment being exceedingly small was paid very little subsequent attention to his patient. It was warm weather and the arm was badly torn by several bruises, and needed daily dressing.

Good, charitable, pious people, who give munificently for the conversion of the heathen thousands of miles away, turned with disgust from the heathen at their own doors. Even women shrank from entering the house, because, perchance, old Wildburn might be on one of his "rampages," and so the bruises became inflamed and the danger that the arm might have to come off grew imminent. Mrs Wildburn wasn't used to bearing pain, and moaned fearfully, while the old man invalided and fretted and Wildburn senior drank more savagely than ever.

Then a pandemonium there came into it a slight, delicate girl, with a little roll of snowy linen in her hands.

"I have come to dress your arm, sir," she said, quietly, laying aside her bonnet and shawl, and revealing a sweet, pale face, with steady, dark-brown eyes.

"Who sent you here, Bessie Brandon?" asked the elder Wildburn, in a blustering voice.

"No one, sir. I came because I thought it right for me to come. Your arm will lose his arm, unless it is looked after speedily."

"Then let him lose it, then," was the surly answer.

"No, sir, I can help it, sir!"

The brown eyes were lifted fearlessly to his face.

Muttering something about "meddling women," he seized his hat and staggered out of the room, and Bessie at once set herself to the work of caring for the wounded arm.

It was a shocking sight, and the firm face grew just a little white as she took off the matted bandages; but the white fingers were steady and cool, and she carefully washed the arm, bathed it in some liniment she had brought with her, and swathed it nicely and carefully in the cool, soft linen she had brought for the purpose.

"There, it doesn't feel like the same arm," Fred exclaimed, when she had finished; and involuntarily he glanced at the other time realized, with a faint emotion of shame, to be almost as sadly in need of washing as the other had been.

When Bessie came the next day, she noticed that it was almost as white as her own.

Every day for four weeks Bessie visited the Wildburns on her errand of mercy, undismayed by old Wildburn, or the ridicule of her friends.

"I should have lost it, I dare say, if it hadn't been for you, Miss Bessie," Fred said, the last day she came. "I'm a miserable wretch, Heaven knows; but I shan't ever forget this," touching his arm.

"I am so glad I could help you," she said, gently.

"Well, you're the first one," he said, a little bitterly.

As I said, this was ten years before, and, though the years had brought many changes, the ameliorating influences had been few in the life of Fred Wildburn. The drunken father and invalid mother had both died, leaving Fred quite alone in the miserable, shabby old house where he lived. He had not improved with the years; on the contrary, he had grown more reckless and disorderly, until people said he was utterly and totally depraved, without one good impulse in his heart.

One thing had happened during these ten years. Bessie Brandon had married Henry Upton; but no one ever knew of the terrible night which Fred Wildburn passed when he heard of it.

"Nobody ever should know what a miserable fool he had been," he said, fiercely.

He need not have feared—his secret was safe—for no one ever was wild enough to suspect him of feeling or sentiment, particularly where the petted daughter of Squire Brandon was concerned.

Henry Upton was an honored and highly respected citizen. He was intelligent, educated and wealthy, and if he looked down from his sublime height of virtue and attainment a little contemptuously upon poor, miserable Fred Wildburn, it was certainly no more than his neighbors did. And if, by any possibility, there had been any little trickery or unfairness in the settlement of that legacy, he could easily excuse himself upon the plea that it would only be a curse to Wildburn if he had it, leading him into deeper debauchery, whereas he could use it wisely, and for the benefit of morality and religion. The fact that Wildburn did not see it in just that light was only another proof of his innate depravity, people said, piously.

Upton had a mill some four miles from Melstone, by the main road, but scarcely three by a cut across country. It was little more than a bridle path, though Upton sometimes drove through with his light drag. He started with it one wild, chilly December morning, promising his wife to return early if it came on to snow, as it promised to. It was piercingly cold, and the wind blew in fierce, fitful gusts all the forenoon. Just after noon it began snowing—not as usual, in fine, light particles, but with a wild, tempestuous force that carried all before it. Long before night the streets were blockaded, and the wind roared and shrieked up and down them like a madman.

Bessie Upton paced the floor of her pretty sitting room, more excited and nervous than she had ever been in her life before. She had, naturally, a cool, quiet temperament.

"If only he had not started," she said, anxiously; "if he saw the fierceness of the storm in season to stop at the mill, instead of attempting to brave it!"

The night came down early; but the mill owner came not, and his wife, though still anxious, had settled down to the belief that he would not come till morning.

Suddenly a loud neigh, falling between the pauses of the tempest, struck her ear.

"Henry has come now!" she exclaimed; and, catching up a lamp, she hurried to the side door.

Only a panting, terrified horse, the broken harness dangling from his foamy sides, met her appalled vision. For a moment she sank, dizzy and faint, in a chair. She was alone; her one servant, having gone away for the day, had been prevented from returning by the storm.

* * * * * *

Fred Wildburn was sitting over a smoldering fire, inwardly cursing the storm that kept him in. It was not a pleasant home—there was that excuse for him. The walls were dingy with smoke, the floor was bare and dirty, the chairs and tables were broken and dilapidated.

"How the wind blows! This is the third time——"

He paused suddenly, for, framed in the door, the wind and snow whirling madly about her slight figure, stood Bessie Upton.

"Great Heaven, Bessie!" he ejaculated, and then stood gazing at her in dumb amazement, while she closed the door, and came and stood before him.

"Frederick," she said, in her sweet, firm voice, "Henry is out somewhere in this storm. The horse has come home alone. If he came the forest road, he can never find his way home, and he could not live till morning in this storm. There is nobody I dare ask but you to go to him. It is a great deal to ask, I know; but I think I know your heart better than anyone else does, and I shall trust to your courage and bravery in this dreadful emergency."

A fierce spasm of pain crossed his face. Then he turned away without speaking, and took down his hat and coat, and they walked together to the door. He paused on the doorstep, looking wistfully down at her.

"How can you get home?" he said.

"It is dreadful, I know, Frederick"—nobody but she ever called him anything but Fred—"but I think I can get along," the wind nearly taking her from her feet as she spoke.

"If I might accompany you," he said, hesitating, and adding, "if you are not afraid of being contaminated."

For answer, she put her hands in his, confidingly.

While she lived, Bessie Upton never forgot the close, nervous clasp with which he held her hands; but he took her carefully and tenderly to her door, and then turned away into the storm and darkness.

One, two, three hours—and, oh, such long, interminable ages as they seemed!

"Perhaps I have sent him to his death, too," she moaned, sadly. "Oh, if I could only know and see just where they are!"

If she could, she would have seen a slight, determined figure, battling with the strength of a giant against the winds that disputed his progress step by step. Falling sometimes over prostrate trees, anon borne down by sudden drifts of snow, yet struggling on with unabated zeal, till he comes at last to a still, white figure lying across the path, entangled and held down by the debris of broken wheels and tree limbs!

Two hours later, when poor Bessie had nearly given them both up for dead, Fred Wildburn staggered into the room, and laid her husband at her feet.

"I have fulfilled the trust," he said, faintly, and sank down beside Upton, who was slowly rousing from the terrible chill and torpor that had overpowered him.

"Oh, Henry! he has fainted! And see!"

She grew suddenly white as she pointed to a small stream of blood that stained his shirt bosom, caused by a sudden hemorrhage from the lungs.

It was morning before they could get a physician there. Wildburn had laid in an unconscious state all night; but the flow of blood had ceased, and they thought it only the torpor of exhaustion.

"Poor Fred!" Henry Upton said, "there was some good in him, after all. I owe my life to his bravery, and I shan't forget it in a hurry. I have been thinking, Bessie, that I will take him into the mill, and see if I can't make something of him yet. I intend to reward him handsomely for this."

The doctor came at last; but his grave face told the story before he opened his lips.

"There is no chance for him to recover," he said.

A little after noon the dying man opened his eyes, and looked about him.

"Fred," Mr. Upton said, feelingly, "I've not treated you as I should have done in times past, and I didn't deserve this at your hands. I want you to forgive me, and——"

"Bessie—where is Bessie?" he interrupted, faintly.

"Here, dear Frederick, here."

And she took his hands in hers, and bent over him till he felt a warm tear splash on his face.

"Oh, Bessie! it's a miserable life, I know; but it's all I have to give, and I would give it a hundred times over to save you from sorrow," he said with a smile that glorified his coarse face. "It was my good right arm—the arm you saved for me, you know, dear. I told you I should never forget, and I never did! Nobody but you ever trusted to the good there was in me—little enough there was, I know," he said, dreamily, his voice growing suddenly weak.

Bessie was crying softly. He opened his eyes, and gave one long, eager look in her face, and in that wistful gaze Bessie Upton read the secret no one else ever knew or guessed.—New York Weekly.

Don't Insult the Hog.

When a man don't give his wife any money nor pay the preacher nor contributes a cent to build up his town or country, some people call him a hog, but that is slander—slander against the hog. The hog does pay. He pays the doctor, the preacher, the storekeeper, builds a new house for the wife, buys organs, pianos, buggies and sends the children away to school. Don't ever compare a mean, stingy man to a hog again.—Jewell (Kan.) Republican.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. F. E. TAYLOR.

Subject: Christ and the Multitude.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday morning, in the Greene Avenue Baptist Church, the Rev. Frederick E. Taylor preached on "Christ and the Multitude." The text was from Matthew, ix:35-38: "And Jesus went about all the cities and the villages," etc. Mr. Taylor said:

For nearly two years Jesus had mingled with the people of Palestine. He had visited their towns and villages, had seen life in all its different phases, and had been a source of blessing to all who sought His favor. He had witnessed the hollow mockery which passed for religion among the Pharisees and had burned with indignation as He saw the people receiving stones instead of bread from those whose duty it was to feed their souls. The whole nation had been astonished by His miracles, and after a year of comparative obscurity, He had entered upon one of popular favor. His popularity was now at its height, and thousands were found eagerly listening to the words of authority with which He spake. Notwithstanding His great popularity a careful observer would have noticed that instead of a look of triumph, His face indicated tender concern for the great multitudes which were continually seeking Him. He was beginning to realize more and more the awful need of the people, and His spirit was stirred within Him as He saw the possibilities for good among those who flocked to hear His words of life and peace.

Living in a great city, surrounded by thousands of men and women who are careless and indifferent about their earthly welfare, we are constantly facing the problem of how to reach and help those for whom Christ died. What was the attitude of Christ toward those unsaved masses? How did He seek to solve the problem of reaching them? Is there any way of our helping the people of our day and generation? These are some of the questions which we shall attempt to answer. I believe that when the church of God follows the example of the Master in His treatment of the masses, the masses will be reached and saved.

In the first place, I notice that Jesus was filled with compassion for them. "When He saw the multitudes He was moved with compassion for them because they were distressed and scattered as sheep not having a shepherd."

Compassion is the keyword to the life of Jesus Christ. We find the evangelists reporting instances of His compassion again and again. When a leper comes seeking health, Jesus, moved with compassion, puts forth His hand and with a touch restores him to his wonted strength and vigor. When the great multitude, filled with curiosity, followed Him away from their source of supplies and were without food, He is filled with compassion and creates food enough to supply their need. It was the compassion of Jesus that led to the healing of the two blind men near Jericho, and it was this same feeling that prompted the resurrection of the widow's son at Nain.

Not only in His acts of kindness, but in all His teaching we find that the spirit of compassion is dominant. The best known parables uttered by the Saviour are the parable of the Good Samaritan and the parable of the Prodigal Son, and compassion is the key word to both. The compassion of a Samaritan leads to the saving of an enemy, and it was this same spirit on the part of the father which made the home coming so sweet to the Prodigal.

This is the need of the disciples of Christ to-day. The multitudes are all about us. They are careless, indifferent, sinful; but only because they do not know the love of Christ. Deep down in their lives there is a hunger for something better, and in many cases men are groping after light on the pathway of life. The church can and should meet the need, but only a realization of the spirit of Christ to meet it will solve the problem.

If the great heart of the Master was moved with compassion for the multitudes of His day, what would He think—nay, what does He think—when He sees the vast multitudes in our great city who are going about as sheep without a shepherd? I believe that if we are true disciples of our Lord we will feel as He felt, and instead of ignoring or condemning those who know not Christ, we will leave no stone unturned until they come to know Him, whom to know is eternal life.

In the second place, I notice that Jesus saw a harvest ready for the reaper. He said, "The harvest truly is plenteous." He saw the possibilities among those who flocked around Him, and knew that among them there were many who could easily be led into the paths of righteousness. And this was characteristic of Christ. It is true that much of His time was spent in sowing the good seed of the kingdom, but it is also true that He was constantly finding opportunities to reap rich harvests of souls wherever He went.

He goes to the seaside and finds a harvest among the fishermen. He stops at a well side and reaps the first fruits of a splendid revival among the despised Samaritans. At the seat of custom He finds one who is to be an apostle and write down the good news for the Hebrew people. Wherever He went Jesus always found the fields white and ready for the reaper. And, brethren, I believe that those who possess the spirit of the Master will always find abundant opportunities for rich harvests of souls.

On one of these occasions Jesus said to His disciples, "Say not ye there are yet four months and then cometh harvest? Behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest." The trouble with us is unbelief in the possibility of a harvest here and now. Some time in the dim future we expect to reap, but the years pass on and the conditions grow less and less hopeful and golden opportunities are lost forever.

But I notice in the third place that Jesus not only saw a great need, but He told His disciples how it could be met. "The harvest truly is plenteous," said He, "but the laborers are few." Surely no one ever felt the need of laborers more than Jesus Christ. Face to face with thousands who yearned to know the way of life, and limited by His humanity, so that it was only possible to deal with a very few of those who came to Him, He felt the need of laborers as no other ever did. It is true that He had a band of chosen disciples to carry on the work that He began, but at this time they could not be trusted to do very much, as they themselves only knew the truth imperfectly.

Every true servant of God has felt his heart sink within him more than once, as, looking out over the multitudes, he has seen the great need for men and women, who, counting their lives not dear unto themselves, would lay them down at the Master's feet to be spent in loyal service for those who knew Him not. It is not necessary to discuss the need for laborers; this is so apparent that it needs no discussion. What we need to-day is to know the remedy and then apply it to the disease. More than one earnest minister of the Gospel has presented the needs of his field, and then supposed that the people would flock to his support, only to be sadly disappointed. No, the Master's way is the best way. He did not tell the disciples to go out and exhort the people to become laborers for Him; He sent them to the owner of the vineyard with a request that he send forth laborers into his harvest; "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He send forth laborers into His harvest." Prayer is the divine method, and I believe that more workmen have gone forth in response to definite, earnest petition offered by men and women who have felt the need for laborers than by the use of any other method. Let the members of the church begin to feel the multitudes without, let them begin to pray that the people may be saved, let them ask the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers and hundreds of those who are to-day within the very shadow of our churches will be led into the way of life.

And now, in conclusion, may I say that those who are led to pray for the multitude are usually led into a larger service on their behalf. Thirty years ago, says a recent writer in a religious paper, the region about London docks contained as large a population as any district in Africa. Back of the huge warehouses were innumerable courts and alleys filled with fog and dirt, and every horror of sight and sound and smell. It was a rendezvous for the lowest types of humanity. The wealthy and influential classes in this settlement were the rumsellers and gamblers. Children were born and grew to middle age in these precincts who never heard the name of Jesus except in an oath. Thirty thousand souls were included in one parish here, but the clergyman never ventured out of the church to teach. A young man named Charles Lowder, belonging to an old English family, happened to pass through the district just before leaving Oxford. His classmates were going into politics, or the army, or the bar, full of ambition and hope, to make a name in the world; but Lowder heard, as he said, "a cry of mingled agony, suffering, laughter and blasphemy coming from those depths, that rang in his ears go where he would." On his knees before his Maker he asked that help might be sent to those who were dying for the Water of Life. God graciously led him to see that the man who felt the need the most would be the one who could do the most for the people, and he gave up all plans for his life and went to labor among those for whom he had prayed. He took a house in the lowest slums and lived in it. He preached every day in the streets, and for months was pelted with brickbats, shot at and driven back with curses. He had unfortunately no eloquence with which to reach them; he was a slow, stammering speaker, but he was bold, patient and in earnest. Even the worst ruffian learned to respect the tall thin curate, whom he saw stopping the worst street fights, nursing the victim of Asiatic cholera and facing mobs bent on taking his life.

Mr. Lowder lived in London docks twenty-three years. Night schools were opened, industrial schools and a refuge for drunkards, discharged prisoners and fallen women. A large church was built and several mission chapels. His chief assistants in the work were the men and women whom he had rescued from the paths that abut on hell. A visitor said that the church differed from others in that "all were in such deadly earnest." Mr. Lowder broke down under his work and died in a village in the Tyrol whither he had gone for a rest. He was brought back to the docks where he had worked so long. Across the bridge where he had once been chased by a mob bent on taking his life, his body was reverently carried while the police were obliged to keep back the crowd of sobbing people who pressed forward to get a glimpse of "Father" Lowder, as they called him. No such funeral, says a London paper, has ever been seen in England. The whole population of East London turned out, stopping work for that day; the special trains run to Chiselhurst were filled, and thousands followed on foot, miserable men and women whom he had lifted up from barbarism to life and hope.

Charles Lowder had seen the multitude, the compassion of Christ had filled his heart, his prayer had been answered, and if he could have looked over the battlements of Heaven that day he would have realized that his labor had not been in vain in the Lord.

Joy.

True Christian joy is glorified joy, says the Apostle Paul. That is, it has the glory of Heaven shining upon it, filling, suffusing, transfiguring it, intensifying it. In other words, there is no other joy anything like so rich, so deep, so full, so blessed as the joy which comes with religion, which springs out of faith. "Believing we rejoice."

It is a joy, too, that rises above all sorrow and trouble. Suffering saints have often been the most joyful. "We rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, we are in heaviness." "As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing."

It is our duty to be joyful and our privilege to spread joy among others. It is also an effective means of commending the religion of Christ to others.

Take joy home,
And make a place in thy heart for her;
And give her time to grow, and cherish her;
Then she will come and sing to thee.

—G. B. F. Hallock, D. D.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR SEPTEMBER 3.

Subject: The Captivity of Judah. II. Chron. xxxvi., 11-21.—Golden Text, Num. xxxii., 23.—Memory Verses, 19-21.—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

1. Zedekiah's character and folly (vs. 11-13). 11. "Zedekiah." He was one of the younger sons of the good Josiah and uncle of Jehoiachin. He was a weak king, with no strength of character to do what he knew to be right. Anxious to follow the counsels of Jeremiah, but without courage to do so, he became the mere sport of factions, and at last was brought into ruinous conflict with Babylon against his own better judgment. 12. "Humbled not himself." Although Jeremiah repeatedly entreated Zedekiah to obey the word of the Lord, yet the king through the pride of his heart and for fear of offending his princes would not listen to the prophet's advice.

13. "Rebelled," etc. This was the height of folly. Had he possessed wisdom and courage enough to obey the words of Jeremiah and remain true to his allegiance to Babylon, Jerusalem might not have been destroyed. "Made him swear." Nebuchadnezzar had bound Zedekiah by a most solemn oath to keep the peace by fidelity to the conqueror who had set him on the throne. In Jer. 27:3 we find messengers from the kings of Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre and Zidon consulting with Hezekiah, perhaps concerting a plan to throw off the Babylonian yoke; and in Ezek. 17:15, Zedekiah is represented as sending his ambassadors into Egypt that they might give him horses and much people. Thus he seems to have laid broad plans for his rebellion, and in all this he was encouraged by the false prophets of his time (Jer. 28).

II. God's effort to save His people (vs. 14, 15).

14. "Trangressed very much." Here we see the vile depths into which Judah had fallen. All classes were corrupted. Restraint was thrown off and the people openly practiced all the heathen abominations, even polluting the house of the Lord.

15. "The Lord—sent to them." God did everything He wisely could to prevent His people from rushing down to their own destruction. He laid upon them several lesser evils as warnings. These were devastations of the country from which a few years would suffice to recover. Then Jerusalem was captured and part of its treasure removed, but the city was not destroyed, and the temple stood. Kings were made captive as a warning to coming kings. Prophets were sent to warn and entreat.

III. Judah utterly rejects the Lord (v. 16).

16. "Mocked," etc. Jeremiah was imprisoned, beaten and threatened with death; Urijah was put to death (Jer. 26:20-23). "No remedy." The nation had gone beyond all hope. The body was hopelessly corrupt. It is possible to sin too long, to sin away the day of grace. O sinner, awake, repent.

IV. Jerusalem destroyed (vs. 17-21).

17. "Therefore." Because of their great wickedness. "He brought—the Chaldees." The siege lasted about one year and six months. The fortifications were strong, and the defense was brave and skilful. The thud of the battering rams shook the walls day and night; archers made the defense increasingly hard by constant showers of arrows from the high wooden forts; catapaults of all sizes hurled stones into the town with a force as deadly as that of modern bullets, and darts tipped with fire kindled the roofs of the houses; mines were dug under the walls, and attempts at escalade by ladders were renewed at every favorable opportunity. "Who slew," etc. The siege was full of horrors. The city was reduced to the last extremity. Fearful pictures are presented by Jeremiah in his prophecy and in the Lamentations. The destructive fire of the besiegers was aided by a severe famine (Jer. 38:9), and all the terrible expedients had been tried to which the wretched inhabitants of a besieged town are forced to resort in such cases. Mothers boiled and ate the flesh of their own infants (Lam. 4:10; Ezek. 5:10); ladies in magnificent robes wandered about searching the refuse heaps for a morsel of food (Lam. 4:5-10). "No compassion." So hideous were the cruelties practiced by Oriental victors upon their captors that, were it not for the most convincing evidence in sculpture and inscription, where the perpetrators glory in their deeds, we should hardly believe it possible for men to treat their fellow creatures with such barbarity. When the assailants were once masters of the place an indiscriminate slaughter appears to have succeeded, and the city was generally given over to the flames. The prisoners were either impaled and subjected to horrible torments or carried away as slaves. "He gave them," etc. God permitted the Chaldeans to thus destroy Jerusalem. He might have done to Nebuchadnezzar's army what He did to Sennacherib's host.

20. "Carried he away." When the Chaldeans finally entered the city the king and his men of war fled, but they were pursued and captured. Zedekiah's sons were slain before his eyes; his eyes were then put out and he was carried to Babylon in chains. He was put in prison till the day of his death (Jer. 52:7-11). "To him and his sons." There were three kings after Nebuchadnezzar before Cyrus established Persian rule: Evil-Merodach (2 Kings 25:27), Neriglissar and Nabonidus.

21. "Fulfill the word." See Jer. 25: 11, 12; 29:10. "Enjoyed her Sabbaths." See Lev. 26:34, 35, 43. God had commanded them to let their land rest every seventh year, and because they had violated this command He now proposed to give their land a long Sabbath, or rest, for seventy years.

Open Cotton.

Gadsden, Ala.—A great deal of cotton is reported as being open throughout this section of the country. This is very unusual and is due to the severe drouth, which lasted for more than a month.

Nagasaki.—The British steamer Barlong and the Japanese transport Kingio collided at 10 o'clock last Tuesday in the Inland sea. The transport was sunk and 160 men were drowned.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

Clanton, Ala., Thursday, Aug. 31, 1905.

UNION CLUBBING LIST....

The Union And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
The Union And Home & Farm	1.00
The Union And Dixie Home	1.00
The Union Saturday News	1.25
The Union And Weekly Age Herald	1.25
The Union And Atlanta Constitution	1.25
The Union and Weekly Advertiser and Map of Ala., U. S. and World	1.50
The Union And Twice-a-Week Globe-Democrat	1.50
The Union And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
The Union And Tri-weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.50

If there are other papers you desire, call on us and get full list and rates.

DEATH OF JUDGE H. A. WILSON.

Hon. H. A. Wilson died very suddenly at his residence near Lomax on the evening of August 27 of paralysis of the brain. He was ill only a few hours when the end came. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. T. C. Marcus, to mourn his loss. The funeral was held at Clanton cemetery Monday afternoon, Rev. Parrish officiating. Mr. Wilson was one of the most widely known men in Alabama. He was born and reared in Talladega county, and early in life studied the law and for many years had a large practice in Birmingham. He has held several responsible federal positions, and at the time of his death was a United States commissioner. Some years ago he took charge of the Birmingham Times, a republican weekly, and had put it on a high plane with a large circulation over the state. The best epitaph any man can have was uttered by his neighbors at Lomax: "He was a good neighbor; there could be none better."

SUDDEN DEATH.

Joseph Johnson died Tuesday afternoon very suddenly. His death was caused by an overdose of morphine. As not 15 minutes before he took the fatal dose he had ordered a new suit of clothes, it don't seem as if he contemplated any such rash step, but miscalculated the dose of the fatal drug. He was in his 21st year and had bright prospects before him, as he was universally liked, the general expression being "Well, Joe was a nice fellow, and I'm awful sorry to hear of his death." May he rest in peace. He has gone "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

PROMPT PAY.

The following letter is a tribute to the promptness with which the British America Insurance Company pays its losses when they occur; no beating round the bush for a couple of months and then taking 60 days more unless the loser will submit to a discount.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 14, 1905.

Mr. W. C. Edler,
Agent British America Ins. Co.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:

I wish to acknowledge the receipt of $1,800 from the company which you represent and in which I insured through your solicitation. My loss occurred on July 4th and I recognize that a little delay was caused by the scarcity of adjusters, there having been some serious fires in Birmingham and other places about that time. The very day the adjuster appointed to investigate the loss, reported all clear to the company, it forwarded me the amount of my claim in full, and I am pleased with the prompt manner in which it does business.

Very truly yours,
W. M. WILSON.

tf

Open Cotton.

Gadsden, Ala.—A great deal of cotton is reported as being open throughout this section of the country. This is very unusual and is due to the severe drouth, which lasted for more than a month.

Nagasaki.—The British steamer Baralong and the Japanese transport Kingio collided at 10 o'clock last Tuesday in the inland sea. The transport was sunk and 160 men were drowned.

A combination of southern cotton oil mills is now talked of.

HIGHLAND.

Editor Union:

As I was one of the delegates from Chilton county to the State meeting of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America, held at Cordova on August 23, 24, 25, I wish to say a few words about the proceedings there. When, on the morning of the 23d, W. H. Conway, J. E. Robinson, J. W. Sorrell and myself arrived at Cordova, the streets of that town were full of delegates from all parts of Alabama. At 9 o'clock we all formed in double line and marched round through the town and out to the Christian church, which had the honor of holding the first state meeting of the Union in Alabama. We were greeted by appropriate songs; then the address of welcome was delivered by Hon. Pope Long, of Cordova, who said "he was proud that his town had the honor of entertaining us." The first day was spent in speaking. Among the speakers were H. T. Nations, of Cordova, and T. E. Pinegar, of Berry. The tables at dinner were filled with good things to eat, and the Union will sure hold the most tender feeling toward the good people of Cordova for the kindness shown by them at its birth, all the delegates being well cared for free of charge. After dinner we had singing and a speech by W. A. Merritt, of Lamar Co. R. L. Duckworth, of Georgia, arrived at 3 o'clock and was greeted with hearty cheers, and then he spoke two hours to an attentive congregation, and every one considered the time well spent. At night every delegate was assigned to a good home filled with brotherly love. Second day, we assembled at 7:30 a. m., and the doors were closed, and you all will have to guess at what was done there. But, listen, boys. The Union is coming. "A square deal and a square meal, with the farmer at the first table."

W. F. CULPEPPER.

MARS HILL.

Fodder is about pulled. Cotton is opening rapidly considering the wet weather. Some are picking now. G. W. Gothard is teaching a singing school here with J. P. Lowery assisting. There's an average of 50 scholars. This was the school started by A. E. Glassocck, who unfortunately was taken sick, and Mr. Gothard took his place. John Weeks and William Redding, the photographers of Randolph, were welcome visitors to our school Thursday. Davis Hodgins and son, Mr. and Mrs. G. Martin and others were welcome visitors Friday. J. N. Scott went to Montevallo Friday and brought back a new mowing machine and hay rake. He is going to save feed and make his own meat and his own fertilizer, and will make farming a paying vocation, not just from hand to mouth. Our farmers are interested in the organization of the F. E. and C. U. of A., and it is growing fast. Several of our folks went to the Oak Grove singing last Sunday and report a nice time. Prof. R. J. Langston carried the day in the "Christian Harmony" with the exception of one hour, which was devoted to "Singing for Joy," conducted by Charles Glasscock, Archie Glasscock and G. W. Scott. Mr. Langston lives near Fletcher and is a lover of the music in the old books, and we were glad to have him with us. Success to THE UNION.

DAD'S PLOW BOY.

THORSBY LETTER.

We are glad to hear that the P. C. Smith baby girl is recovering from its serious spell of sickness. The two daughters of Mr. Carl Larson are confined to their home with a slight attack of the slow fever. Mr. Sam Collins, our County Clerk, and Miss Cooley, of Clanton, visited our town last week. Mr. Charlie Raspberry was in town last week. Mr. James Bosworth, who has been visiting with his father for a week, has returned to Birmingham. Mr. Irwin and Miss Lily Carr are visiting relatives in Powderly, Ala. The Misses Simpson have returned from a two weeks' visit in Birmingham. Mr. Charlie Peterson and Mr. Sweny Howard were in Clanton on Saturday. Mr. Carlson is erecting a large barn on his tract of land just south of the city. Mr. Schive is preparing to move into his new residence, which is now completed. Our baseball team played with the Collins Chapel team on last Saturday. The score was 15 to 8 in favor of the Thorsby players. Rev. Moses is here from Lawrenceburg, Tenn. He delivered a sermon on Sunday afternoon in the Norwegian church. He will remain in town about two weeks. Rev. Clark spoke at the college hall on Sunday morning. Mr. Villadsen entertained company from Montgomery on Sunday. The cotton gin which the stockholders of the fertilizer factory and cotton warehouse recently purchased from Mr. Gentry has been moved into their factory which they purchased from Mr. Vallidsen, and they will be ready to gin in short order.

CHATTERBOX.

BEAT 9 ITEMS.

Editor Union:

Owing to the sickness of our baby we could not send our usual letter last week, but the baby is better now. Cotton is opening and picking is under way, but owing to the rainy weather but little fodder has been saved. J. W. Hayes attended the 3rd quarterly meeting on this (Chilton) circuit, held at Archer chapel, and reports good attendance, good services and an altogether good time. He says the brethren are to be greatly commended for their new church building. Uncle John and son, Walter Collins, were in Clanton last week on business. John Barrett and wife, of Stanton, visited relatives and friends here last week. Sam Pate and wife and her sister, Miss Martha Collins, visited Mrs. F. R. Collins Saturday. Charles R. Childress has bought him a fine mule and new wagon and gone to hauling. J. W. Riggins is putting up a new dwelling house and others are preparing to do so, which is an evidence of prosperity. Rev. Joe Gibson filled his regular appointment at Cedar Grove Saturday and Sunday. The services were well attended.

NIM ROD.

PINEDALE.

August 25, 1905.

Whereas, This day is the close of our school for the present year: and whereas, Prof. V. J. Gragg has accomplished so much for the upbuilding of our school and the improvement of our children; and whereas, we consider his work here a success not to be surpassed by any one. Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the trustees and patrons of the Pinedale school, tender our sincere thanks to Prof. Gragg for his earnest efforts, which have been crowned with such marked success. Be it further resolved, That this be read in school and a copy be sent to the County Paper for publication.

W. J. HEADLEY,
F. J. TEEL,
Trustees.

Editor Union:

In addition to the above resolutions, I desire to say a few words about the Pinedale school. Our school has been a success from beginning to end. We had an enrollment of 92 pupils, a great portion of them in regular attendance. Our commencement exercises were beyond our expectations, although it was a very rainy day and quite a number were prevented from being out for that reason, yet a goodly number of visitors were present and expressed their delight at what they saw and heard. As it was Prof. Gragg's last time to engage in school work as a teacher, the climax came when we were about to separate ourselves, to be his pupils no more. During the singing of "Shall we meet at home in the morning?" led by R. E. Jones, we pupils engaged in a general handshaking with our teacher, almost every pupil in school, as well as the teacher, being in tears. Even the older people of the audience could not refrain from joining with us. Thus we separated ourselves, going to our respective homes with the most kindly feelings manifested by parents, teacher and pupils. Success to our county paper.

W. W. JONES, JR.

RANDOLPH.

The present cool snap reminds us of the crisp days of autumn. We are pleased to have bright fair weather again after so much rain. Considerable complaint of cold in this community. Prof. N. A. Logan, of Montevallo, spent a night in town last week. The professor is an old Chiltonian, a fine music teacher. We were pleased to meet him. May his shadow never grow less.

Quint Meroney has been spending some days in town visiting his mother and sister.

Z. J. Jones and family visited friends at Fenwood Sunday.

J. C. Harrison is home again after spending several weeks in revival services.

W. Y. Nix, of Maplesville, was in town Saturday.

Miss Ervin, of Fenwood, visited her sister here Saturday and Sunday.

H. Honeycutt, one of the merchants of Centreville, spent Friday night in town.

Mrs. Josie Helton, of Fenwood, visited Mrs. Z. J. Jones last week.

Rev. I. Winsor, one of the former Baptist pastors of this place, was a pleasant visitor Monday.

Among our visitors Monday we noticed the popular merchant of Macedonia, J. P. Atchison.

Let the people read and think for themselves. By so doing be independent and free.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

PLEASANT GROVE.

Editor Union:

A few words in regard to our Sabbath school and singing society at this place. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the skilful management of our superintendent, J. S. Wright. He is a whole-souled worker in the Sabbath school. Our beloved teachers deserve much credit for their tireless efforts in training the little ones and leading them in the way of life. Our teachers are all lady teachers. Miss Fannie Cobb, teacher of the advanced class; Mrs. Lillie Franklin, teacher of the intermediate class, and Miss Lillie Franklin, teacher of the primary class. No boasting, but I believe we have as pretty little girls and boys as can be found anywhere and our grown girls are all first class. Miss Lizzie Lowery has spent part of the summer with us teaching instrumental music. She was the accompanist in the singing school conducted by the writer. Miss Anna Lowery has spent some days with us during our school. Miss Lizzie and Miss Anna were welcome visitors at this place Saturday and Sunday last. Miss Lizzie is a fine organist and Miss Anna is one of Chilton's sweetest singers. We had children's day at this place on Saturday last. The exercises began at 10:30 a. m. Song No. 33 in "Singing for Joy," was sung by the class. Then a short talk and prayer by the pastor, Rev. J. H. Thomas. Next, song No. 266 in "Singing for Joy," and then proceeded with the program of beautiful recitations and songs until 11:30. Judge Reynolds being present, by invitation made us an instructive speech in the way of advice to the children, young ladies and young men. My dear young people, Judge Reynolds' advice is worth taking, whereas he says "Prepare yourself for the position you aim to fill in life, for the time will come and now is when the public will recognize merit."

"And now is the accepted time, for slighted opportunities will never again pass this way." At 12 dinner was spread which was enjoyed by all present. At 2 p. m. the program was again taken up. We got through with the program about 3 p. m., after which we had a short song service, which was as follows: Miss Anna Lowery, by request, sang the beautiful solo, "Somewhere, Some Time," to a most appreciative audience; next Prof. N. A. Logan being present, made us a short talk and led a short lesson in music; then the song service was closed by the writer, and all were dismissed in order, asking the prayers of the good people that we may go on in this good work, and with best wishes to THE UNION and its many readers, I am yours very truly,

JAMES FRANKLIN.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Editor Union:

Mount Pleasant is a new school house about 3 1-2 miles from Clanton on the road to Thorsby. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Thomas' little infant died last Thursday and was laid to rest in Chestnut creek cemetery on Friday. The patrons of Mount Pleasant met last Saturday and discussed their school matters. They are on the lookout for some good teachers. Walter Foshee is erecting a new dwelling house. Mr. and Mrs. Collins spent last Sunday with Mr. Joe Logan and family. B. M. Maddox and wife and G. A. Zimmerman and wife visited their father-in-law (J. W. Sears) last Sunday. Mr. Editor, I want to congratulate "Just a Voter" and Hon. J. C. Fonville on their letters in last week's UNION; also Col. A. C. Smith on the stand that he has taken against the little (?) demmies of this county. I am glad to see THE UNION prosper as it does, in spite of the opposition of a few so-called republicans and democratic ringsters of Chilton. This community is shocked by the sudden death of H. A. Wilson and deeply sympathize with the bereaved family. He was a good neighbor and his community will miss him very much.

UNION MAN.

PLEASANT GROVE.

Editor Union:

I've seen so many letters in your paper from other places that I've decided to write one myself. I haven't any news only plenty of rain and very sorry crops, cotton especially. We have a good Sabbath school at this place and a nice class of little singers. Prof. J. M. Franklin taught a singing school here and we're glad to say that our young people improved very much in their singing. At the close of the school we had a concert which was highly enjoyed by all present. Now, our meeting began Sunday, and we hope this will be a grand meeting, one of the best we've ever had at Old Pleasant Grove. Success to THE UNION and its many readers.

GREEN HORN.

BEAT ONE.

Editor Union:

There is not much doing in Beat One except fodder pulling and fox hunting. Our health is good. Well, the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America is here to stay and growing fast. It is of the farmers, by the farmers and for the farmers, so come on, boys, all join and make a solid line.

HILL BILLY.

TAX NOTICE!

Assessor's and Collector's First Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County taxes of Chilton county for the year 1905, and assessing the taxes for the year 1906:

Kincheon, Beat 6, October 2.
Pletcher, Beat 8, October 3.
Dixie, Beat 8, October 4.
Shoults, Beat 7, October 5.
Maplesville, Beat 7, October 6.
Benson, Beat 3, October 7.
Macedonia, Beat 3, October 9.
Providence, Beat 2, October 10.
Jemison, Beat 2, October 11.
Mineral Springs, Beat 1, October 12.
Flint Hill, Beat 11, October 13.
Cane Creek, Beat 4, until 12 m., October 14.
Thorsby, Beat 9, October 16.
Clanton, Beat 4, October 17.
Cooper, Beat 10, October 18.
Verbena, Beat 5, October 19.

L. B. POUNDS,
Tax Assessor.
T. J. HUBBARD,
Tax Collector.

tf

NOTICE!

All overseers in Beat 2 are requested to work as much as four days on their roads between now and Circuit Court.

G. W. SCOTT,
J. H. MARTIN,
Apportioners.

tf

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alabama

Gelder's Restaurant,

Good Meals at Reasonable Prices.

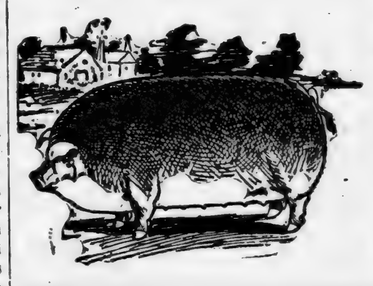
110 North 20th Street,
BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

A Great Combination Offer

We will furnish the Twice-a-Week issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

WITH

The Union

FOR

$1.50 Both Papers One Year Only $1.50

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is issued Semi-Weekly, eight pages or more, every Tuesday and Friday. It is Republican in Politics and has no equal or rival as a Great Modern Newspaper.

If you want all the news of the World's Fair, all the news of the national campaign, and all the news of all the earth, you must have the Globe-Democrat during the coming year.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Send us $1.50 To-Day and get your best home paper and the Greatest Newspaper of the World's Fair City, both for a full year. Address

The Union, Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

1011 First Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association

OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and contents and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightning. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of insurance known to man Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per cent.

Full particulars furnished upon application to

WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.
Spring Term—Third Monday in May.
Fall Term—Fourth Monday in No
Judge—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
Solicitor—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Clerk—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Spring Term—Second Monday in March.
Fall Term—Second Monday in September.
Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
Register—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.
First Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Second Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, first Monday November.

County Officers.
Judge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer—W. T. Callen.
Sheriff—J. M. Morgan.
Solicitor—J. O. Middleton.
Tax Assessor—A. C. Mims.
Tax Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—Alex Glasscock.
Third District—R. P. Kendrick.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
Hon. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would like published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd Sunday. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley R. F. D. No. 1.

Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st and 3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, 4th Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, 1st Sunday, W. M. Wood, clerk.

Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, 4th Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, 1st Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 2nd Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 1st Friday. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 3rd Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 2nd Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 4th Friday. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor, 3rd Friday before the second Sunday. J. Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. J. Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Service every 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 1[illegible] 3rd Saturday, Clanton.

Alamande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 4th—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 1st—First Saturday, Clanton.

Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 4th—First Saturday, Billingsley.

Boyeman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., 534—Saturday on or before full moon, Marbury.

Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M. 4th—Saturday on or before full moon.

Stanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M. 3rd—Tuesday on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.

Jemison Lodge—First and third Tuesdays.

Clanton Lodge, No. 304—Second and fourth Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and third Mondays.

Oneamo Tribe, No. 90—[illegible] Mondays after fourth Saturdays.

L. M. P. A.

Clanton Lodge, of Thorsby—[illegible]

J. H. Patton, Bachelor.

I. O. R. M.

G STORE, Cor. ... Ave ... 7th St.

...ead of The Procession.——

...othing, Hats, Shoes

...NITURE,

...URIAL NECESSITIES.

MULLINS,

... Alabama

Restaurant,

... Reasonable Prices

...rth 20th Street,

...HAM, ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM,

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.

PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,

Maplesville, Alabama.

...mbination Offer

...ish the Twice-a-Week ...ssue of the Globe-Democrat

WITH

...e Union

FOR

...rs One Year Only $1.50

...-Democrat is issued Semi-Week- every Tuesday and Friday. It is ... and has no equal or rival as a ...dern Newspaper. ...s of the World's Fair, all the news ... and all the news of all the earth, ...-Democrat during the coming year. ...S THE TIME. ... and get your best home paper, and ...r of the World's Fair City, both

Clanton, Ala.

...acobs & Bros., ...re and Rugs. ...OLE AGENTS— ...Elastic Book Cases and ...g Cabinets. ...king. ...RMINGHAM, ALA.

... Insurance Association ALABAMA. ...CIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE ...ple and for the People. ...County Branch ...d February 3, 1900.

WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

...ellings, outbuildings and contents ...t loss by fire, wind and lightning. ...nd most sensible method of insur- ...ost ...ars 43-100 of 1 per cent. ...l upon application to ...ACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

...B AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.

...g Term—Third Monday in May. ...l Term—Fourth Monday in No... ...L.

...—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee. ...r—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville. ...—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

...ing Term—Second Monday in ... ...l Term—Second Monday in Sep...

...cellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides. ...ister—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.

...Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

...ond Monday February, first Mon... ...April, first Monday June, second ...day July, second Monday August, ...Monday November.

County Officers.

...dge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds. ...easurer—W. T. Callen. ...heriff—J. M. Morgan. ...ector—J. O. Middleton. ...Assessor—A. C. Mims. ...Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

...st District—W. H. Conway. ...ond District—Alex Glasscock. ...rd District—R. P. Kendrick. ...rth District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

...f. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

...A. P. R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

...n. W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

...Pastors and clerks are cordially asked to send the editor any news regarding their churches which they would like published. Also if there are any errors in these notices please send corrections.

MISSIONARY BAPTISTS.

...Beth-Salem—Rev. J. E. Moore, 3rd ...day. E. B. Popwell, clerk, Billingsley. ...R. F. D. No. 1.

...Clanton—Rev. A. C. Swindall, 1st ...3rd Sundays. W. I. Mullins, clerk.

...Chestnut Creek—Rev. T. J. Deason, ...Sunday. H. A. Harris, clerk.

...Liberty Hill—Rev. S. Smitherman, ...Sunday. W. M. Wood, clerk.

...Macedonia—Rev. G. W. Freeman, ...Sunday. H. H. Armstrong, clerk.

...New Salem—Rev. S. Smitherman, ...Sunday. W. M. Pierce, clerk.

...Poplar Springs—Rev. A. L. Foshee, ...Sunday. J. J. McDowell, clerk.

...Union Point—Rev. A. L. Foshee, 3rd ...day. J. N. Miner, clerk, Clanton.

...Collins Chapel—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...Sunday. J. W. Littleton, clerk.

...Union Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...Sunday. R. S. Chandler, clerk.

...Pleasant Grove—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...Sunday. T. J. Headley, clerk.

...Mars Hill—Rev. J. H. Thomas, 1st ...day. G. W. Gothard, clerk.

Primitive Baptists.

...Bethel—Elder J. W. Howell, pastor; ...day before the second Sunday; J. ...Abernathy, clerk, Verbena.

...Rocky Mount M. E. Church—Rev. ...Carroll, pastor, 2nd Sunday. Song ...rvice every 2nd and 4th Sunday at... ...rooms. Prayer meeting every Wed... ...day night.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

...Clanton R. A. Chapter, No. 116— ...rd Saturday, Clanton.

...Amande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

...Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—First Saturday, Clanton.

...Century Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—First Saturday, Billingsley.

...Chairman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...304—Saturday on or before full ...n, Marbury.

...Jemison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Saturday on or before full moon, ...erson.

...Clanton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Tuesday on or before full moon, ...anton.

I. O. O. F.

...Friendship Lodge—First and third Sat...days.

...Clanton Lodge, No. 304—Second and ...th Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

...Black Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ...d Mondays.

...Eureka Lodge, of Thorsby— ...and fourth Saturdays.

L. M. P. A.

...Geronemo Tribe, No. 90—First ...third Mondays sleep. Visiting ...cordially invited. E. B. Patton, Sachem ...of R.; J. H. Patton, Scribe.

I. O. R. M.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 30, 1905, 8,065
Price same date, 10c.
Total receipts last season, 6,648.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

W. H. Bean was in Clanton Thursday.

Clerk Sam W. Collins and Miss Cooley visited Collins chapel Thursday and took in the meeting there.

John Mims, No. 1, brought this office some fine roasting ears last Friday. Come again, John. We're always glad to see you.

The architect having the court house and jail extension in charge was in Clanton Friday and submitted the plans to the commissioners for approval. There was a number of citizens there and all approved the contemplated changes.

I. B. Martin, Z. S. Avery, J. W. Avery and Norman Bradford, of Jemison, were in Clanton Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Arledge and Mrs. Dalce Miller were in town Saturday. "Buck" says that Archer chapel is up and that they held district conference in it, and extends his people's thanks to those who subscribed toward the building.

J. J. Owens, wife and daughter were in Clanton Saturday.

W. H. Gillespie and brother, J. H., of Fixico, were in town Saturday.

A. J. Glasscock and son were in Clanton Saturday.

J. G. Hayes was in town Saturday.

W. D. Z. Foshee was in Clanton Saturday. He has had trouble with his eyes and is compelled to wear glasses now.

R. C. Riggins was in town Saturday.

J. M. Grant, of Cooper; G. W. Ferrell, of Rockford, and C. T. Brown, of Texas, were visitors to THE UNION office Saturday.

J. W. Sears and B. M. Maddox were in town Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bates were in Clanton Thursday.

J. L. Vines was in town Monday.

James Franklin was a pleasant visitor Monday.

W. A. Hays and J. R. Collins were in Clanton Monday.

Mrs. J. P. Crumpton and children are visiting Mr. Crumpton's father, C. C. Crumpton, near Jemison.

Judge Reynolds went to Pleasant Grove by special invitation Saturday, and delivered one of his earnest appeals to the young people to make the best of their opportunities.

Downs & Littlejohn is the name of the new firm in the brick store on the west side of the railroad, J. B. Downs and Elbert Littlejohn. Their motto is: "Down with prices and little profits."

READ THIS.

Every man owes it to himself and family to master a trade or profession. Read the display advertisement of the six morse Schools of Telegraphy, in this issue and learn how easily a young man or lady may learn telegraphy and be assured a position.

Get on to J. C. Jones' new "ad" in this issue. Go and look at his stock of goods at prices that will surprise you. They are so cheap.

J. F. Thomas was a pleasant visitor Wednesday.

W. I. Mullins has in a car load of "Studebaker" Wagons. When you buy a wagon, get one that you know is good. Let the sellers of these new makes "try them on the dog first."

A tramp who would not work, but wanted to take his food by force, was up before Judge Reynolds on Monday and now he'll have to work about the balance of this year. Expensive eating for Mr. Tramp that time.

You all know the "Florence Wagon" Well, J. C. Jones has them for sale at his store. Also other desirable things.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

G. B. Blalock and Miss Bettie Driver. Walter T. Abbott and Miss Fannie C. Johnson.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

tf

A NEW DISCOVERY.

A great improvement, the Dixie Liver Regulator, does not gripe nor sicken, and cures Constipation, Heartburn, Vertigo, Dyspepsia, Kidney troubles and Lazy Liver. For sale by all Dealers and by Shelby Drug Co., Calera, Ala. tf

TIMBER FOR SALE!

Over a hundred acres of Virgin Swamp timber for sale. Apply to T. J. Billingsley, Clanton, Ala. Route 3. tf.

ANGELICA WINE!

Pronounced equal to the best made in Europe, by good judges of wine. Price $2.00 per gallon, discount for larger quantity. Guaranteed to keep. Address

A. P. R. DAHL,
tf. Calera, Ala

FREE to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
to
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Under and by virtue of a commission issued to me on the 28th day of August, 1905, by the Hon. L. H. Reynolds, Judge of the Probate Court for Chilton County, Alabama, I, H. I. Honeycutt, the Commissioner named in said Commission, will proceed to sell at public outcry, for cash, at the Court House door in the town of Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama, to the highest and best bidder for cash, on SATURDAY, THE 30TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1905, the following described real estate, for the purpose of a division among the joint owners thereof, to-wit:

"Beginning at the north east corner of a certain lot south of and bordering on Second avenue marked on the official map of the town of Clanton 'W. M. Wilson & Bro.' and west of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and running thence east along Second avenue 40 feet; thence south 210 feet to the lot marked on said map 'E. Y. McMorries'; thence west 40 feet; thence north 210 feet to the point of beginning."

Also the following lot or parcel, to-wit: "Beginning at the south east corner of the lot on the west side of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad marked on the official map of the town of Clanton 'E. Y. McMorries University school' and running thence west 160 feet; thence south 80 feet; thence east 40 feet; thence south 280 feet; thence east to the right of way of the Louisville and Nashville railroad; thence north to point of beginning."

Also the following lots or parcels of land: "Beginning at the north east corner of the lot marked on the official map of the town of Clanton 'E. Y. McMorries University School,' on the west side of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and running thence west 30 feet; thence north 60 feet to the lot of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co.; thence east 30 feet to right of way of the Louisville and Nashville railroad; thence south along said right of way to the point of beginning."

"Beginning at the south west corner of the lot marked on the official map of the town of Clanton 'E. Y. McMorries University School' and running south 20 feet; thence east to within 160 feet of the right of way of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company; thence north 20 feet to the south line of said E. Y. McMorries University School lot; thence west along said line to the point of beginning; all of said land is in the town of Clanton, west of the Louisville Railroad."

Given under my hand this the 28th day of August, 1905.

H. I. HONEYCUTT,
8-31-05-3t Commissioner.

NOTICE TO OVERSEERS.

Please do your duty on the roads in Beat 9. Give them 5 days' work between now and next circuit court.

R. D. CHILDRESS,
J. R. COLLINS,
tf Apportioners.

PROGRAM OF CHILTON COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

To Be Held at Isabella September 15-16, 1905.

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exercises, Prof. J. Toi. Williams.

10:30. Welcome address, G. L. Speer; response by County Superintendent J. W. Moore.

11. "Ends to Be Accomplished by Teachers' Institutes," R. E. R. Hicks.

11:30. "Teacher's Preparation for Class Work," H. A. Harris, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2 p. m. "Value of School Entertainments," V. J. Gragg, Miss Janie Roebuck.

3. "School Discipline," institute.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises.

9:30. "How May Patrons Help Their Teachers?" W. B. Speer, Miss Etta Roper.

10. "Requisite to Successful Teaching," R. E. Sessions, Mrs. W. B. Speer.

11. Educational address, Hon. S. J. Bowie.

There will be conveyances for those coming by rail to Maplesville and Thorsby. This being the last institute of the year, all teachers are earnestly requested to attend.

J. W. MOORE,
G. L. SPEER,
R. A. RASCO,
H. L. DAVIS,
tf Educational Board.

THE FARMERS AND THE TRUSTS.

Of all producers the farmer is hit hardest by the Trusts. They catch him coming and going. And the Trust lives and grows because of railroad rebates, the "protective" tariff, and national bank control of our money system. Evidently the remedy is to cut off these special favors which build up and perpetuate the Trust.

Tom Watson's Magazine,

"the Magazine with a purpose back of it," was established to teach the best way of abolishing these special privileges, and, hence, of rendering the Trusts powerless to rob the public. It is a big monthly magazine of 128 pages, with illustrations, cartoons, Mr. Watson's brilliant editorials, special articles, a serial story, novelettes, short stories and poems, by the world's best writers. Regular price, $1.00 per year; 10 cents the copy, at all news stands. Every farmer is interested in knowing the best way to cure the Trust evil and how to bring it about. Now in its second volume, Tom Watson's Magazine is firmly established, and its circulation is growing rapidly; but we want to add a hundred thousand subscribers to our list in the next month or two.

Send Us Three Names.

of reading farmers in your neighborhood, together with this advertisement and 25 one-cent stamps—or a silver quarter securely wrapped—and we'll enroll you for a four months' trial trip subscription. Or five of you may club together, sending a dollar bill and 25 good names and addresses, and get five trial trip subscriptions. Learn how to clip the Trust's wings. Address

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
No. 121 W. 42d St., New York, N. Y.
Room B 7. tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

FOR SALE!

A thoroughbred Jersey Bull, 2 years and 4 months old, weighs about 650 pounds. Apply to M. A. Killgore Clanton, Ala., Route 5. tf.

NOTICE!

There are 200 shares of stock of the Farmers Warehouse & Fertilizer Company of Thorsby, Ala., for sale. The board of directors have authorized the undersigned to sell these shares to all who desire to invest.

J. Bice, President
T. M. Driver
J. W. Hays.

We Club With
The New York World

THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken

For the autumn season now at hand the most valuable paper to you will be the New York Thrice-a-week world, because it offers you more at the price than any other paper published anywhere in the world.

This is a time of great events. We are having great wars and other changes of a stirring kind are occurring both at home and abroad. The Thrice-a-Week World comes to you every other day, except Sunday, with all the news, fully, accurately and promptly told.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

The Thrice-a-Week World always has a serial story running, and it is always a first-class story by a first-class author. The Thrice-a-Week World publishes better fiction than any other newspaper in the United States. Special attention is also given to markets, and there are many other valuable features.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together one year for $1.50. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf.

5000 TELEGRAPHERS NEEDED

Annually to fill the new positions created by Railroad and Telegraph Companies. We want YOUNG MEN and LADIES of good habits, to

LEARN TELEGRAPHY AND R. R. ACCOUNTING

We furnish 75 per cent. of the Operators and Station Agents in America. Our six schools are the largest exclusive telegraph schools IN THE WORLD. Established 20 years and endorsed by all leading Railway Officials.

We execute a $250 Bond to every student to furnish him or her a position paying from $40 to $60 a month in States east of the Rocky Mountains, or from $75 to $100 a month in States west of the Rockies, IMMEDIATELY UPON FRADUATION.

Students can enter at any time. No vacations. For all particulars regarding any of our Schools write direct to our executive office at Cincinnati, O. Catalogue free.

The Morse School of Telegraphy

Cincinnati, Ohio. Buffalo, N. Y.
Atlanta, Ga. LaCrosse, Wis.
Texarkana, Tex. San Francisco, Cal.

Come and Be Pleased.

PRICES AND TERMS upon which we are selling the most beautiful and attractive goods of the season will certainly please and surprise you.

The styles on which fashion has stamped her approval for the coming season are now shown with newest materials.

A Full line of Star Brand Shoes.

Men's and boys' Shoes.

Full line of Gents' Furnishing Goods.

Ladies' and children's Jackets, Skirts and Ready-to-Wear Hats.

Anything you want in Dress Goods, Hardware, Saddlery and Florence Wagons.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, Alabama.

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Alabama.

Statement of

The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama.

(Chilton County Branch.)

President: W. M. Wilson, Clanton. Sec.-Treas. Wallace C. Edler, Clanton.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 7, 1905.

In the five and a half years that this Association has been in existence, it has levied seventeen (17) assessments to pay twenty-six (26) losses, viz: Lightning, 1; wind, 4; fire, 21. The total of the seventeen assessments was $2.36¼ per hundred dollars, being an average yearly assessment of 43 cents on each hundred dollars of insurance per annum.

W. M. WILSON,
President Chilton County Branch.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 7th day of August 1905.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
tf. Judge of Probate.

Academic Pedagogical
Scientific
Commercial Industrial
Domestic Musical
Artistic

Alabama Girl's Industrial School.

MONTEVALLO, ALA.

REV. FRANCIS H. PETERSON, A. M., D. D., President

Session Begins, Thursday, Sept. 14th.

Tuition free; living expenses $92.00 per session. For information address president.

DISPATCH PRINTING CO.,

Blank Book Makers and Lithographers. County and Office Supplies a Specialty.

Ask for Estimates.

2113-2119 Morris Ave., BIRMINGHAM, ALA

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

FARM AND GARDEN

MAINTAINING FERTILITY.

There is no country which possesses more fertile soils than are found in the United States. These soils have been produced from the best kind of materials and in ways that have developed in sections the highest degree of fertility. "These soils," writes Prof. Henry Snyder in the Iowa Homestead, "contain certain reserve plant food of greater value than the combined mineral wealth of the country. How can this soil wealth be best conserved and utilized. This problem concerns not only the farmer of the Middle West, but also the entire country, because soil fertility is the chief asset of a nation. It is the belief of the writer that these soils have not yet reached their maximum productiveness, and that both larger yields and better quality of crops will be produced during the next generation. This will be accomplished by improved methods of cultivation, rotation and improvement of crops, and judicious use of farm manures.

"Experience has shown that it is not economical to attempt to produce the same crop too frequently upon one piece of land. Some of the most fertile soils of the West have been temporarily reduced in crop producing power because of a one-crop system. The effect upon the soil when corn or wheat is grown continuously is quite pronounced. When soils are continually under the plow they readily lose their stock of vegetable mould known as humus.

"When the humus decays, nitrogen, one of its component parts, is liberated and dissipated. Experiments at the Minnesota station have shown that when wheat is grown continuously there are excessive losses of nitrogen from the soil; for every pound removed by the crop there are four pounds lost through decay of the humus.

"When grains are grown in a rotation with clover and corn, and the corn is given a dressing of farm manure, the loss of nitrogen is checked and new stores of humus are added to the soil. A good rotation necessitates the keeping of live stock so as to utilize the farm crops to the best advantage and to produce manure. Rotation of crops on a soil of average fertility results in an increase of five to eight bushels per acre of wheat and twenty-five bushels per acre of corn.

"The unique chemical composition of most of our western soils, which are mildly alkaline in character, prevents the humus from forming injurious acid products. Farm manures, rotation of crops resulting in the introduction of humus, will do more to keep up the fertility than any other treatment."

JUDGING LIVE STOCK.

Stock judging is a skill naturally possessed by some and it is a science that the breeder and feeder should understand. The agricultural colleges are giving practical instruction in judging live stock that is one of the most fascinating studies of the college, as it includes the knowledge of improved stock breeding. The students visit many prominent breeders of the different breeds and at the State fairs and at the Chicago International they test their judgment and skill.

Professor Ferguson of the Michigan Agricultural College gives the following rules to his students:

1. Have confidence in your own powers.

2. Concentrate your thoughts on the breed and breed type of the animals you are working upon.

3. Do not hurry. Take time to decide. Having done so, stick to it. "Be sure you are right, then go ahead."

4. If possible watch the class as it comes into the ring. There is often something about the style and carriage of the winner which marks him out as he walks.

5. Take a minute to look over the lire from as near the centre as possible in order to get a general idea on conformation.

6. Then pass slowly clear around the ring, inspecting each animal from front and rear.

7. Never be satisfied without using your hand in addition to your eyes. Appearances are often deceitful.

8. In handling always work from front to rear. With cattle work on the right side, approaching the animal from behind.

9. First pick out the winner of the class; then use it as your standard in placing second and third.

10. When first is placed, briefly sum up its strong points.

11. Look for characteristics and most common breed defects.

12. Pay no attention to either the men with you or the crowd around you. Your business is with the animals.—American Cultivator.

FACTS ABOUT COWS AND THEIR MILK.

The matter of quality of the milk of cows has been pretty well settled by tests in this country, and English authority is in agreement with us, as shown by deductions from their own experiments, as follows:

1. "That when a cow is in full milk and full flesh she will give her normal quality of milk for at least a limited time, even though the quality and quantity of food be very deficient.

2. "That when in good condition a cow will take off her body whatever is deficient in food, in order to give her normal quality of milk.

3. "That an extra supply of nutritious food, at all times increases the quantity of milk, but the percentage of fat is not in any way improved by it; if anything, the tendency is the other way.

4. "That an extra supply of nutritious food almost invariably very slightly increases the solids not fat of the milk. That a ration poor in food ingredients has a very slight tendency to reduce the solids not fat in milk, but has little appreciable effect on the fat.

5. "That with a poor ration, a cow in full weight will lose carcass weight, while on a rich diet she will gain weight.

6. "That although the percentage of fat in a cow's milk may vary daily, we at present seem unable to control these variations or to account for them.

7. "That for limited periods, up to one month or thereabouts, all ordinary quantities and qualities of food seem to have no material effect on the quality of the milk.

8. "That some foods exercise a material effect in raising the melting point of butter.

9. "That the aim of all producers of milk, butter or cheese, should be to feed what will give quantity, in moderate amount and of a mixed nature, and the produce will be the best that the cow can give.

10. "That extra quality must be looked for by improving the breeds, and judicious selection, rather than by any special foods or methods of feeding.

11. "That the variations in the percentage of fat in a cow's milk are caused by something, but what that something is we at present do not know, though if we did we might be able to influence the quality."—Indiana Farmer.

THE QUEEN BEE.

The queen is a fair and stately bee, differing from the workers both in shape and color. She is longer than a honey bee by one-third, and somewhat longer than a drone, but not quite so big around.

The queen is treated with the greatest respect and affection by the bees. A circle of her offspring often surround her, testifying in various ways their dutiful regard, offering her food from time to time, and all of them politely backing out of her way, to give her a clear path when she moves over the combs. So strong is the feeling of the workers for the queen, that if for any reason she is removed the whole colony is filled with consternation and dismay. Her death, when it is too late in the season to raise another queen, means the final extinction of the colony.

A good queen will sometimes lay from two to three thousand eggs a day, or nearly the weight of her own body, and continue doing it for weeks in succession. At the beginning of the season the queen lays eggs in the worker cells. She walks over the combs, puts her head into each open cell as she comes to it, as though to discover whether it is occupied or is in fit condition to receive an egg. I have watched how faithfully she goes about her work, from an observatory hive, for hours.

The queen only stings other queens and seeks only to kill her rivals. She may be handled to any extent without fear of being stung. She has also great tenacity of life as well as longevity.—F. G. Herman, in American Cultivator.

STRAW IS VALUABLE.

Our father dumped the straw almost anywhere. If they even thought of the conservation of forces, certainly straw did not figure as a factor therein. It was just as valuable then as now for feeding purposes, and yet seldom was it judiciously combined with the winter's hay for forage. Today we are as careful of its preservation as we are of hay, even though we may have no opportunity to ship it to the paper mills. It is safe to say that oat or rye straw, when properly cut and cured, is equal to one-third or one-half the same quantity of hay. This should no longer be regarded as a by-product, but as a primary source of income. And now that we are coming more and more to cut oats in the green, it will be seen how important is this bulky crop to the farmer. It may be fed as hay or turned into ensilage, cut or uncut. The use of green oats is hardly yet out of the experimental stage, but enough is well known to warrant the caution. Do not wait for the kernel to harden before cutting. With the kernel in milk and only the faint hint of yellowing stalk is the time for harvesting. Chemical tests have demonstrated this.—G. A. Smith, Massachusetts Plowman.

The Malay states produce about seven-tenths of the world's supply of tin.

THE PAID COMPANION.

Disadvantages A-Plenty in This Woman's Calling.

The Work So Eagerly Grasped at When First Offered is Often Given Up in Disappointment--Experiences of Several Girls--The Woman Who Drinks and the Obnoxious Family Servant.

AMONG the fields of work for women there is perhaps none in which conditions are more varying than that which goes under the comprehensive title of companion. A "companion" sounds as if it must be something delightful. The young woman starting out in the working world of a large city like New York without capital, experience or talents, has often a shrinking from the business world and longs to hide herself in some quiet cultured home, where she may make herself useful and agreeable, and also earn sufficient pay to dress herself suitably, and perchance amass a modest bank account.

What simpler, then, than to be companion to a delightful old lady, who is rich but lonely, to whom a bright presence will give hourly pleasure, and for whom it will be equal happiness to perform the services of a daughter? Or, perhaps, the young woman is fond of children and hopes to be mentor and friend to a growing girl whom she may assist to form good tastes in literature, art and music.

She sees herself in the future accompanying a sweet young girl to concerts, to lectures, and later on to "parties" in the light of a chaperone. And doubtless there are such positions in the world, but they are not as a rule long vacant in New York, nor are they filled through newspaper advertisements or agencies. Indeed, the experience of several young women in this city has not been particularly encouraging to those desirous of seeking a living in this calling, although sometimes the outward appearance of their situations is entirely satisfactory. Still, when so much of the companion's comfort depends on the personality of her employers, the success of such a position is necessarily difficult to guarantee.

A well-known employment agent was asked what her experience had been in supplying women for the position of companion. She shook her head dubiously.

"Not one in fifty turns out satisfactorily, so that I have given up trying to supply anything but teachers and secretaries. When a girl doesn't get on at home and can't do anything else, she thinks she can easily get from $30 to $50 a month as companion to a rich New Yorker. I have had the most hopeless looking girls apply to me, and sometimes very attractive ones, but, unless one of my customers has asked me to look out for some one for her to fill that post, I do not bother with them.

"Sometimes ladies want a trained nurse, and sometimes they want a woman who is musical. I have sent six or eight girls in succession to one customer, only to have them all rejected after trial. They are too proud or too lazy or snippy, or some other thing, and finally the lady gives up in despair. Then just when she has decided to take in a poor relation, along comes to me the very woman, and it is too late. Anyway, if you can't get on with your own flesh and blood, I don't see how you can expect strangers to agree with you, and that's true of both employer and employe in this capacity."

One young girl who had spent her life in a small town came to New York with the idea of seeing something of the world. She answered an advertisement in a reliable paper, and soon was employed as companion to an elderly lady, who was about to go abroad. What delightful visions filled the girl's head, of sightseeing, of voyaging, of little excursions in the wonderful countries of Europe! The lady was a widow, handsome, well dressed and, although the salary offered was only $15 a month, the applicant was too eager for the experience and travel to hesitate at that. Her duties were to be light. She was to be more like a friend and accompany her employer everywhere. "I will give you some clothes, my dear," said the lady, touching the young woman's simple tweed gown with politely scornful fingers, "and, of course, I shall take a maid."

DISENCHANTMENT.

In six months they returned from their travels, having visited France, Italy, Switzerland and, most briefly, England. The companion could hardly wait to land, so eager was she to leave her position, and she testified willingly to the drawbacks of such work. Her "lady" had proved herself selfish, vain, jealous and ill-tempered, but, worse than any of these miserable petty faults, was the failing of drink, which the innocent young woman had at last discovered after many embarrassing happenings.

"But did you not enjoy yourself at all?" the girl was asked.

"Indeed I did, for a day or two at a time, but just as soon as I got to know people—and Mrs. B—— always impressed people at first so that we met everybody—we promptly moved on to another place. She seemed afraid of letting me enjoy myself at all, and seemed to care very little for sightseeing or anything but dressing up and playing cards. Then she gave and lent me the most hideous gay clothes which she expected me to wear, and which were not at all suitable for any one in my position, and made people misunderstand it entirely, so that I had to bear many annoyances by having to explain why I could not join young parties and leave Mrs. B—— behind. Then she was always taking little 'nips,' as she called them, and flying into a violent temper for nothing afterwards, but I never guessed that she took too much until the ship's doctor told me on the voyage home. She wouldn't stay more than a week in England because some friends of mine were going to be there, and she thought I might have too good a time for a companion! No more such positions for me!"

An older girl with, perhaps, less patience, took a post as companion and chaperone to a girl of fourteen (whose father was much engaged in business and whose mother had died when she was very young). The young woman found the girl charming and sweet, the father considerate and polite, the house was handsome and her quarters were all that could be desired. But she was not happy, and could not endure it for more than a month, owing to the obnoxious presence of a privileged Irish servant, who had held undivided sway over the household for ten years, and was not ready to give in to the newcomer. Several battles had taken place between them, which had reduced the child to tears, finally dried on Bridget's shoulder, while the companion retired discomfited. Too spirited to put up with dictation from such a source, and conscious that Bridget was more indispensable to the family happiness than herself, the young woman gave up $40 a month and a comfortable home, and tried again. After a succession of harrowing trials as companion to nervous and physical wrecks from drink and various diseases she gave up her idea and went into one of the prominent hospital training schools as the easier life of the two.

Another young woman became companion and mother's help in a large family of children in a Jersey suburb. She loved the children, made them love her, and was very happy with them, but the lack of freedom and the isolation told upon her, and at the end of a year she was glad to take up her neglected knowledge of stenography, which would give her time and opportunity to see her friends, with some prospect of advance in the future—which her other position did not possess.

"What did you do in that family? Did you teach the children?" she was asked.

"No, except one hour in the morning. The eldest one went to school, the baby was absolved from study, and the middle three had a governess for seven months. From May to September I gave them all an hour's German in the morning, and the rest of the time I helped their mother to keep their clothes in order and to do the housework. They were awfully good to me, and I loved every one in the house, and cried heartily to leave them, but I didn't feel that I was doing for them that a superior nursemaid or chambermaid could not have done, and I wanted a change."

There are other examples of experience in this situation that come to mind. One girl is very happy and contented as companion to an old lady. Her chief duties are to drive daily with her employer, to help her keep house, to arrange the flowers, to play chess and backgammon every evening, to read aloud, and do little odds and ends of mending that are not worth sending to a dressmaker. It sounds dull, but she does not find it so, being a domestic little person and readily made happy by an occasional evening at the theatre or by being allowed to have a friend in for dinner, and these favors are by no means rare in this warm-hearted household.

But to succeed at all as a companion one must have talents of no mean order, and the question that agitates the graduate's mind is whether it is worth it. Tact of infinite proportions, patience, even temper, unselfishness, which is only another name for tact, and good health are essentials. So are a neat appearance, good manners, a light step and a pleasant voice. It is not easy to spend hours reading aloud from dull books, but neither is it unworthy work to make the days brighter for some lonely woman who has no one who loves her enough to give freely the service for which the companion is paid.

And, after all, the situation resolves itself to this: that very few normal pleasant people have need to hire a companion, and if such a person is needed there must always be some disadvantage to overlook. The question is, has the applicant the courage and patience to fill the breach cheerfully? If not, she had better try some other work less exacting and nerve-racking.—New York Post.

Busy Jurors.

"Your Honor," said a juryman, just before the beginning of a trial, "I see a juror in New York the other day, who happened to be a cotton broker, was allowed to transact business in the jury box."

"Yes," replied the judge with a smile, "I noticed that."

"Well, your Honor, why can't I be allowed to attend to business while serving as a juror?"

"What is your business?" asked the court.

"I'm a blacksmith, your Honor."

"All right, you can shoe a few flies!"—Yonkers Statesman.

WOMAN'S WORLD

NEW NEEDLE WORK.

White serges, mohairs and linens are indispensable in a young girl's wardrobe. A coat suit of one or the other of these with a fine lingerie blouse is suitable for almost any occasion, says the Boston Traveler.

A new thing in taffeta petticoats is to have them made on a jersey yoke of the same shade. This insures perfect fit over the hips, which is well-nigh impossible with the silk gathered or plaited onto the band.

A pretty idea in the making of all-over shirt waists is to run one, two or three nip tucks between the rows of embroidery. For this purpose it is necessary to select a design with sufficient space between the motifs to admit of the tucking.

With three scraps of heavy linen and the merest amount of trouble a girl can make herself such a set of collars and cuffs as disports itself with airs in a smart shop. The collar is a two-inch hem turned up on the right side, mind you, and stitched with whatever color is chosen for the decoration of the collar which decoration consists of French knots in groups of three. The cuffs are the same, of course. These are so easily made that it would be worth while to do several, say one in blue knots, one in green and one in red, for matching-up purposes.

Now is the time to get out English eyelet work, if by good luck one has a mother who spent her leisure making this beautiful stuff. Nothing is more elegant. Whole gowns and coats are made of it, it is introduced in the form of yokes and plastrons and employed on the bebe hats with which the pretty girl sets off her charms. One girl has been so lucky as to find rolled up in a forgotten trunk yard upon yard of lovely handwork, done by her mother during a long sea voyage.

Now that kid belts are so popular, the girl who has to count her pennies as well as her blessings can utilize the tops of long-wristed gloves to make very satisfactory ones. Especially desirable to wear with summer gowns are those made of white and light tinted, undressed kid. Fancy cut beads or sequins grouped into conventional designs will cover the joinings as well as embellish the belt.

BUTTERFLY BOWS.

In the way of bodice trimming, in connection with a high girdle, nothing daintier and airier than a big butterfly bow could be devised. This bow is made of lace, white or colored, in width from four, five to six inches. The first step is to form the body of the insect with some white wadding, and then to cover it with a fine white cambric. Cover that again with some of the lace and with a heavy white silk twist cross-strap the body from its head to the fine-pointed end of the body. Make then three fans of the lace, that is, take the lace and divide its length into three sections. From the bottom or straight edge of each lace division slope off enough lace so that when each section is gathered and drawn up the sections will all three be widest in the middle and taper down on each side. The middle section is to be sewed into a tight little bunch of gathers at the body head, while the other two sections, representing the wings of the insect, when gathered are to be drawn down to the insect's side, none of the stitches showing. If the side wings are required to be in two parts, it is very easy to slope the side pieces of lace a second time so as to double the wing effect, for each time a slope is made it gives the effect of a separate lace part. A fine lace wire like a thread may be sewn on near the edge of the lace and manipulated into shape. Place the head lace, point upwards, at the bust line, and fasten it to bodice with pearl pins. Spread out the side wings and fasten them also to the bodice and over the top of the belt. The end of the insect's body will then fall on the middle line of the high belt.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

JAPANESE SILK AND CHINESE SILK.

As between the two nations in the Far East which produce silk, the manufacturers in the United States need to give the closest attention to China. The silk industry of Japan is highly developed. It represents science and the most progressive business methods. The silkworm in Japan is a well-groomed creature. The Japanese worm is not hatched unless the egg containing it passes scientific examination. Nothing is left to chance. The mulberry leaves fed to the worms are grown upon trees scientifically cared for and protected from disease and pests. There is no loss in the growth of the trees, the hatching of the eggs, or the feeding of worms which do not produce. In China much is left to chance, because the father of the present producer did not know any other method. While the mulberry trees are cared for carefully in some lines, are fertilized and cultivated and stripped of their leaves in the autumn to give them a longer rest in the short winter, there is no protection for them from worms and other pests, of all this loss and these dr which would in time ruin business if not corrected. grade raw-silk product of C better than similar grades in and probably than in any oth try. The Chinese silkworm ally produces the largest qua the finest silk of any silkworm country.—Consul George E son, Amoy.

SOME THINGS TO OBSE

To be a gentlewoman is w of us desire, says Cynthia Gr

All of us may not acquire wealth or education but any us may become a gentlewoman, is the whole story.

Not a week ago I saw standi a street corner waiting for a well-dressed, handsome woman looked the gentlewoman, but ly she turned the tip of her over her teeth to clean them had left home without brushi teeth.

You have seen women take the hair a hairpin and with their scalp a vicious little dig may have been a hair out of there may have been a—the numberless reasons why the may have needed that attention the gentlewoman does not allow self such liberties in public.

"I'll be comfortable even if not a gentlewoman," snaps so

The gentlewoman is quite co able. She merely straightens hair and makes herself com and "ready" before she leaves

The gentlewoman is dain speech. She avoids vulgarisms speaks quietly and sincerely.

The gentlewoman is dain speech and laughter. She laughs roughly. And you will that she does not cover her with her hand either in speak laughing. This is one of the common of the undainty things women do, this fumbling with fingers about the mouth face chin. Keep the hands away from face. If they had been needed talking they would have grown the mouth.

HARD WOOD FLOORS

The hard-wood floor is co tively a new feature in the and it is not altogether strang housekeepers may not always just how to care for them. A many treat them as they do sweeping them with a broo broom, which is intended wel to take the dust out of the of a carpet, but not to polish wood floors. The same woman treats her hard-wood floor in way would refuse to sweep a piano with a broomcorn broo fear of scratching its polished face; she would probably take cotton flannel duster and wi the dust, and then she would should do with her floor. The convenient way of doing is to a soft cotton flannel rag for the the dust is easily removed f polished floor in this way.

Such a broom is also ver sweeping down walls, ceilings er duster accomplishes this more successfully. A number such broom comes should be ready so that when one may the laundry another may take place. Painted doors may be treated with a cloth wrung out of way, even when in a state of bing brush, and if not too dirty look almost as well as if scrub and certainly cleaner than if bed with a common mop.—The moner.

INFLAMMABLE FLANNELE

Surely the days of inflam flannelette should be specially bered. The death not almost dren who have been fatally by the ignition of this material is simply appalling. The wear flannelette has again and again posed children to the same if their night dresses were soa spirit. The fabric catches fire easily and burns with the in tense flame as alcohol, and the are not readily extinguished. quest, was held the other day body of a little boy, two years He was left to play in a room his mother was absent. He a flannelette nightshirt. The had not left the room long w heard screams and found the flames. He was terribly burn the poor little fellow died hours of the occurrence." the sort of heartrending constantly appearing in the pers. One coroner alone has that last year he held no less inquests on children who had burned to death, and a large tion was due to flannelette The Lancet.

Young farmers can borrow from the government at three cent in Norway.

No unvaccinated person can Norway.

MENTINA GONZALES, OF CENTRAL AMERICA, RESTORED TO HEALTH, PE-RU-NA THE REMEDY

Clementina Gonzales, Hotel Pro- Guatemala, C. A., in a recent letter 247 Cleveland Ave., Chicago, Ill.,

"I took Peruna for a worn-out con- tion. I was so run down that I ld not sleep at night, had no ap- te and felt tired in the morning. tried many tonics, but Peruna the only thing which helped me the least. After I had taken but ty bottle I felt much better. I tinued its use for three weeks and completely restored to health, was able to take up my studies n I had been forced to drop. re is nothing better than Peruna ild up the system."—Clemen- Gonzales.

dress The Peruna Medicine Co., of- mbus, Ohio, for instructive free litera- on catarrh.

. Ami, of the Geological Society Canada, believes that diamond ith is hidden between the Great es and Hudson's Bay.

Permanently cured. No fits or nervous- after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great ve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

rmer Archduke Leopold has become a ate in the Swiss Army.

s. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children thing, soften the gums, reduces inflamma- allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c. a bottle vernor Stokes, of New Jersey, favors tion of bachelors.

ure Piso's Cure for Consumption saved life three years ago.—Mrs. THOMAS RON- , Maple St., Norwich, N.Y., Feb. 17, 1900 ndon has over 115 miles of tram-

Avoid Yellow Fever.

the great antiseptic preventative, n's Liniment. Six drops of Sloan's nment on a teaspoonful of sugar will yellow fever and malaria germs.

ohn Jacob Astor owns twenty-two auto- biles.

LT RHEUM ON HANDS

ired Agony and Had to Wear Bandages the Time—Another Cure by Cuticura.

nother cure by Cuticura is told of by Caroline Cable, of Waupaca, Wis., in following grateful letter: "My husband ered agony with salt rheum on his nds, and I had to keep them bandaged the time. We tried everything we could get, but nothing helped him until I d Cuticura. One set of Cuticura Soap ntment and Pills cured him entirely. his hands have been as smooth as possible ever since. I hope this letter will be means of helping other sufferers."

rich, retired New York business has been chosen first reader new Christian Science church ety-sixth street and Central park t, the finest edifice of all in M dy's cult. He is Edwin T. H d, who has been a student in w York Christian Institute und Augusta E. Stetson. Mr. Hatfi the son of a noted New York c an who officiated for twenty-th rs at the Seventh Presbyter rch.

Rural 'Phones.

here are said to be nearly fifty t rural telephone lines in Cr county, Kansas, owned by fa

SENATOR SULLIVAN

Says He Has Found Doan's Kidney P valuable in Treating Sick Kidney on. Timothy D. Sullivan, of rk, Member of Congress from ith New York District and on the Democ leaders of York St strongly re mends D Kidney Pills

Senator van writes: It is a ure to endo remedy Doan's K Pills, ha d them of the greatest val minating the distress caused b ney's, and in restoring those o a condition of health. My wi your valuable remedy gratifying as that of s y friends. Yours truly. gned) TIMOTHY D. SULLI ster-Milburn Co., Buffalo. le by all druggists. Pr per box.

WOMAN'S WORLD

RK. and linens ing girl's e or the e lingerie st any ocation.
ats is yoke ics pers well gather g of all two the rows ign with motifs

linen trouble a of The collar up on the ed ch fall on high belt.—

D CHINESE

ions in the ese silk, the United States
s attention to try of Japan
It represents aggressive bus-silkworm in nest creature s not hatched
ing it passes

Nothing is ullberry leaves
e grown upon d for and pred pests. There h of the trees gs, or the food
o not produce ft to chance,
he present pro-ny other meth-ery trees are some lines are ed and stripped autumn to give the short winection for them

from worms and other pests.
of all this loss and these dra which would in time ruin business if not corrected.
grade raw-silk product of better, than similar grades in and probably than in any oth
try. The Chinese silkworm ally produces the largest quan
the finest silk of any silkworm country.—Consul George E. son, Amoy.

SOME THINGS TO OBSE

To be a gentlewoman is of us desire, says Cynthia Co

All of us may not acquire wealth or education, but any us may become a gentlewoma is the whole story.

Not a week ago I saw standi a street corner waiting for a well-dressed, handsome woma looked the gentlewoman, but ly she turned the tip of her over her teeth to clean them had left home without brushi teeth.

You have seen women tak
the hair a hairpin and with their scalp a vicious little dig.
may have been a hair out of there may have been a—the numberless reasons why the may have needed that attentio the gentlewoman does not all self such liberties in public.

"I'll be comfortable, even not a gentlewoman," snaps s

The gentlewoman is quite c able. She merely straightens hair and makes herself com and "ready" before she leaves

The gentlewoman is dain speech. She avoids vulgariti speaks quietly and sincerely.

The gentlewoman is dain speech and laughter. She laughs roughly. And you will that she does not cover her with her hand either in speak laughing. This is one of the common of the undainty thing women do, this fumbling wi fingers about the mouth, fac chin. Keep the hands away fr face. If they had been nee talking they would have grow the mouth.

HARD WOOD FLOORS.

The hard-wood floor is co tively a new feature in the and it is not altogether strang housekeepers may not alway just how to care for them.
many treat them as they do sweeping them with a bro broom, which is intended well to take the dust out of the of a carpet, but not to polish wood floors. The same woma treats her hard-wood floor way would refuse to sweep piano with a broomcorn broo fear of scratching its polish face; she would probably take cotton flannel duster and w
the dust, and this is exactly w should do with her floor. Th convenient way of doing it is t soft cottonflannel bag for the too dust is easily removed polished floor in this way.

Such a broom is also use sweeping down walls, though no duster accomplishes this more successfully. A num such broom covers should b ready so that when one must the laundry another may ta place. Painted piazzas may treated with a covered broom way, even when in need of a ing brush, and if not too dir look almost as well as if sc and certainly better than if had with a common mop.—Th moner

INFLAMMABLE FLANNEL

Surely the days of inflam flannelette should be speedily bered. The death roll amon dren who have been fatally by the ignition of this perilous is simply appalling. The wea flannelette has again and ag posed children to the same of their night dresses were so spirit. The fabric catches easily and burns with the s tense flame as alcohol, and the are not readily extinguished, quest was held the other day body of a little boy, two ye
He was left to play in a room his mother was absent. He a flannelette nightshirt. The had not left the room long w heard screams and found the flames. He was terribly burn the poor little fellow died w hours of the occurrence."
the sort of heartrending pa constantly appearing in the pers. One coroner alone ha that last year he held no less inquests on children who ha burned to death, and a large tion was due to flannelette ig
The Lancet.

Young farmers can borrow from the government at th cent in Norway.

No unvaccinated person can Norway.

ENTINA GONZALES,
CENTRAL AMERICA,
RESTORED TO HEALTH,
PE-RU-NA THE REMEDY

Cleantina Gonzales, Hotel Pro-
Guatemala C. A., in a recent letter
26 Cornwall Ave., Chicago, Ill.,

*Peruna for a worn-out con-
I was so run down that I not sleep at night, had no ap-and felt tired in the morning.
tried many tonics, but Peruna the only thing which helped me least. After I had taken but bottle I felt much better. I ued its use for three weeks and completely restored to health, was able to take up my studies
I had been forced to drop.
is nothing better than Peruna uild up the system."—Clemenonzales.*

The Peruna Medicine Co., of bus, Ohio, has instructive free literaon catarrh.

[illegible] Geological Society, [illegible] discovered that diamond is hidden between the Great and Hudson's Bay.

[illegible]rrh cured. No fits or nervous-[illegible] after use of Dr. Kline's Great [illegible]. $2 trial bottle and treatise free
[illegible], Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

[illegible] Adolphe Leopold has become a [illegible] the Prussian Army.

Mother's Soothing Syrup for Children
[illegible] the gums, reduces inflamma-
[illegible] pain, cures wind colic, 25c. a bottle

Senator Stokes, of New Jersey, favors
[illegible] of governors.

Piso's Cure for Consumption saved
[illegible] many years ago.—Mrs. THOMAS ROB-
[illegible] St., Norwich, N.Y., Feb. 17, 1900

[illegible] has over 115 miles of tram-

Avoid Yellow Fever.

The great antiseptic preventative,
Liniment. Six drops of Sloan's on a teaspoonful of sugar will yellow fever and malaria germs.

[illegible] Astor owns twenty-two auto-

RHEUM ON HANDS

Agony and Had to Wear Bandages
Time—Another Cure by Cuticura.

[illegible] cure by Cuticura is told of by [illegible] Cable, of Waupoca, Wis., in [illegible] grateful letter: "My husband [illegible] agony with salt rheum on his [illegible] and I had to keep them bandaged [illegible] time. We tried everything we [illegible] but nothing helped him until he Cuticura. One set of Cuticura Soap, and Pills cured him entirely,
[illegible] have been as smooth as pos-ever since. I hope this letter will be [illegible] of helping other sufferers."

[illegible] noted New York business [illegible] has been chosen first reader in [illegible] Christian Science church at [illegible] and Central park,
[illegible] finest edifice of all in Mrs.
[illegible]. He is Edwin T. Hat-[illegible] was once a student in the [illegible] Christian Institute under [illegible] E. Sutton. Mr. Hatfield
[illegible] son of a noted New York cler[illegible] who officiated for twenty-three [illegible] at the Seventh Presbyterian

Rural 'Phones.

[illegible] are said to be nearly fifty dif-
[illegible] rural telephone lines in Craw-[illegible] county, Kansas, owned by farm-

SENATOR SULLIVAN

Has Found Doan's Kidney Pills
[illegible] in Treating Sick Kidneys.

Timothy D. Sullivan, of New Member of Congress from the New York District and one of the Democratic leaders of New York State, strongly recommends Doan's Kidney Pills.

Senator Sullivan writes:

It is a pleasure to endorse a remedy like Doan's Kidney Pills, having [illegible] them of the greatest value in [illegible] the distress caused by sick
[illegible], and in restoring those organs
[illegible] condition of health. My experi-[illegible] your valuable remedy was [illegible] satisfying as that of several [illegible] friends. Yours truly.

TIMOTHY D. SULLIVAN.

[illegible]-Mahorn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.
[illegible] by all druggists. Price, 50
[illegible] per box.

TO CLEAN BRASS.

To clean very dirty brass, scrub with a nailbrush, dipped in powdered bath-brick dust and paraffin. Even the most tarnished brass can be cleaned in this way. Polish with the dry dust and a soft duster.

FURNISHING THE KITCHEN.

In furnishing a kitchen one may make the mistake of having too many utensils and too many patented contrivances. The average servant girl, who is only used to the simplest and most ordinary utensils at home, will invariably leave the patented things on the shelf and use any common makeshift.

THE BEDROOM.

Now that all wash goods are offered for sale, the shopper is tempted to purchase lengths of flowered organdie or dimity for bedroom curtains. A charming cottage bedroom, hung with a wallpaper all huge yellow roses, was made still more charming by curtains of organdie in which the yellow rose design was repeated, but in much paler tones. In fact, the effect was as if the roses on the walls cast their shadows on the sheer white curtains. The idea is worth studying and adapting to other flower rooms.

REMOVING INK STAINS.

Ink stains may be removed from white goods with lemon and salt. Cover the stain with fine salt, squeeze the lemon juice on it, and rub between the hands. A second application will be necessary when the ink is obstinate. Ink may be removed successfully from colored clothes by soaking them in sweet milk. Mildew will usually disappear if soaked in sour milk, and then washed in the usual manner. Chloride of lime will also remove mildew stains, but it must be well diluted and carefully used.—The Pilgram.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.

Good housekeeping is surely an art, for besides seeing that every room in the house is perfection in every detail, window curtains always fresh and clean, floors spotless, not a fleck of dust anywhere, everything at hand for the toilet—the service must be faultless, your maid in a neat black gown, white apron, stiff white collar and cuffs, her manner deferential when she opens the door for you or waits upon you at the table.

The cooking, of course, has to be delicious, the kind that melts in your mouth, the washing must be unquestionable, and the ironing a picture in itself. All these things and many more are simply parts of good housekeeping, and if a woman is able to carry on and control a house of her own in the right kind of way, her work is inferior to no man's and she deserves just as much credit and oftentimes a great deal more.—American Cultivator.

RECIPES.

Chicken Rolls.—Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add a pinch of salt, a little pepper and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Mix with this one cupful of minced chicken; add one-third cupful of milk and thicken with a little flour. Mould into rolls or croquettes and fry in hot fat. Serve with a white sauce seasoned with lemon juice.

An Excellent Ice.—Here is an excellent ice. Slice bananas and sprinkle the slices with lemon juice. Place on the ice for an hour, then mash with a wooden spoon, and stir into the mixture three-quarters of a cup of powdered sugar and the beaten whites of two eggs. Freeze for five minutes, and add a pint, more or less, of whipped cream, and a cupful of chopped English walnuts, from which the skins have been removed.

A Tomato Dish.—An Italian dish of tomatoes is described in Good Housekeeping. Select not too ripe tomatoes and cut off about a quarter of an inch from the blossom end, using a very sharp knife. Scoop out part of the pulp and fill the tomato cup with well-washed and soaked rice, in which has been mixed a little chopped parsley, a pinch of several pungent herbs, salt, red pepper and a good portion of olive oil. Bake the tomatoes in a deep baking dish in seasoned olive oil, two-thirds of a cup to nine tomatoes. Cook in a moderate oven until the rice is quite tender, and the skins of the tomatoes begin to wrinkle. Serve hot with a little of the oil in which they were baked.

Rich Sago Pudding.—Here is a recipe for the favorite pudding of a housekeeper of the last generation, who served it to her family after the simple Sunday dinner customary in her day: Soak six heaping teaspoonfuls of sago in a quart of sweet milk for five hours. Then add a quart of boiling milk. Cook till soft. Beat the yolks of six eggs in a pudding dish with a teacup of sugar and a little nutmeg. Then when the sago is soft stir it into the eggs and sugar. Bake twenty minutes. After the pudding has been set away to cool beat up the whites of the six eggs until they are a stiff froth and fold into them three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Spread this meringue over the top of the pudding and brown it in the oven. A little jelly is sometimes spread over the pudding before adding the meringue.

A Sliding Boat.

The sliding boat of M. de Lambert, a French inventor, is designed to avoid friction by skimming on the surface of the water, and it is made to do this by inclined planes fixed under the boat at carefully regulated distances apart and at an angle determined by many trials. When at rest the weight is supported on two narrow parallel floats resembling certain Asiatic canoes, the sliding planes sinking just beneath the surface. A light weight model of wood and aluminum is twenty feet long and ten feet wide between the inclined planes, and while it weighs 1,200 pounds, it requires a motor of only twelve horse-power, although other boats of the capacity need motor of sixty to 100 horse-power. As the boat is started the planes rise on the water, where they are supported by a thin layer of air, and easily glide along at fifteen to twenty-two miles per hour.

A Story of Pearls.

There is a romantic story attaching to the great rope of pearls worn by the Princess Fredericka of Hanover, at recent functions. They are magnificent specimens and very old. Centuries ago a princess of the house loved them so that they were buried with her. But in process of time the great grief of her relatives grew gradually fainter and fainter until they began to whisper what a shame it was that such glorious jewels should be wasted. Then one day the princess' tomb was opened, the pearl necklace taken from her neck. But the pearls were spoilt; they had lost their luster and beauty. Their new owner wept over them and dreamed about them, and her dream told her that three generations of lovely women would have to wear them before their luster returned. Three lovely princesses did wear them and they are now pearls without peers.

Father John of Cronstadt.

Father John of Cronstadt, whose extraordinary influence over the czar, no less than his propaganda against the revolutionaries, continually rouses the ire of the secret committee, is 86 years of age. In personality he answers to the description of the average Russian peasant, only in his case abstemiousness has wrought a refining effect on his features. He is short of stature, with a somewhat florid complexion, and his small, twinkling gray eyes have that furtive appearance characteristic of the Russian working classes. In spite of his great age he is remarkably active, and his long brown hair is untouched with silver. Father John was once esteemed a miracle worker, but it is said he has lost his reputation since the ships he blessed were sunk and the men he blessed were killed in battle with the Japs.

Shot a Rare Butterfly.

In the British museum is a rare butterfly, which was obtained in a most unusual way. Probably no other butterfly in any collection in the world was taken in the same manner. On the steamship bound to Sydney, New South Wales, several men were amusing themselves by shooting at a mark with a revolver. Just as one man was about to shoot he noticed a remarkably large butterfly fluttering toward the ship. When it hovered above the dock he fired and actually managed to hit it. The insect fell to the deck, considerably mangled. The creature was so beautiful, even in its mutilated condition, that the pieces were carefully collected and finally they reached a British entomologist, who found that it was a specimen of an entirely new species never before seen by the scientific world.

Aged Physician's Advice.

A famous physician, now hale and handsome at 75, sums up his half century of medical practice and observation in these simple rules of health: "Be temperate in all things, in matters of amusement or study as well as in regard to foods and drinks. To be temperate in all things, however, does not imply that one must be a prohibitionist about anything. Don't be afraid to go to sleep, for sleep is the best restorer of wasted energies. Sleep a certain number of hours every night and then remember that a short nap during the day is a safer rejuvenator than a—cocktail. Don't worry either about the past or the future. To waste a single hour in the regretful past is as senseless as to send good money after that which has been irrecoverably lost."

Significance of Thunder.

In the season of thunderstorms it is interesting, if not exactly profitable, to read an ancient interpretation of them. The Prognostication Everlasting of one Leonard Digges, published in 1856, tells us that thunder in the morning denotes wind; at noon rain, and in the evening a great tempest. He goes further still, and declares that "Sunday thunder should bring the death of learned men, judges and others; Monday's the death of women; Tuesday's plenty of grain; Wednesday's bloodshed: Thursday's plenty of sheep and corn; Friday's the slaughter of a great man and other horrible murders; Saturday's a general pestilent plague and great dearth."

Kitchener's Ruse.

Since it has been decided that Lord Kitchener shall be supreme in the military affairs in India an anecdote of the Khartoum expedition has come to light. One evening as the general's forces neared Khartoum a dervish spy was discovered in camp and taken to headquarters for examination. Information as to the enemy's position and plans was of the highest importance, but neither the richest bribes nor the direst threats could elicit one word from the prisoner; he affected to be both deaf and dumb. Scarcely was his hearing over—if hearing it can be called—when another spy was led in, who proved equally obdurate. They were led away bound and placed for the night in a well guarded tent. About half an hour later a third spy was dragged in, who also would reveal nothing, and was finally placed in the tent with the others. Soon the guard outside heard a murmur of voices from within; the dumb spies had found their tongues, but it was impossible to hear their talk distinctly or to understand it. An hour or more passed, then the door of the tent was thrown open and the third spy appeared and asked to be conducted to headquarters. It was the sirdar, who in disguise had discovered all he needed to know. Lord Kitchener always takes the greatest pains to make himself master of the vernacular of any country to which he is sent. He seizes every opportunity of talking with the poorer folks until he speaks like a native.

Inventor of the Watch.

A monument has just been erected in Nuremberg to Peter Henlein, inventor of the pocket watch.

Henlein was so worried by his wife who accused him of witchcraft because of the many hours he spent in solitude trying to perfect his invention, that he took refuge at the home of a married daughter, where he quickly disposed of one of his persecutors by soundly thrashing him. Because of this he was sent to prison, and there he perfected his invention.

A few years later he was tried for murder, but settled the matter by paying an indemnity to the family of his victim and taking refuge in the convent of the Carmelites, where he remained till his death in 1540, continuing his manufacture of watches, which enriched the order he had joined.

No Royal Race Suicide.

There are no signs of race suicide in the British royal family. Victoria had four sons and five daughters. King Edward is the father of six and the baby boy born to the Prince and Princess of Wales the other day makes an even half dozen for them, five being sons. The other stems have done as well—the Empress Frederick eight and her son, Emperor William, seven; Princess Alice, six, and one of her daughters, the empress of Russia, five; Prince Alfred and Princess Helena, five each; Princess Beatrice, four; Prince Arthur, three, and Prince Leopold, two. The Cumberland and Cambridge branches are equally prolific.

Garibaldi's Death Request.

Garibaldi left directions in his will for the cremation of his body, but his wishes were overruled by the Italian government. The soldier's instructions were minute and perhaps a bit self-conscious. "Facing the sea, you shall erect a pyre two meters high, built of acacia wood, myrtle and other aromatic trees and plants growing at Caprera. On this lay a sheet of iron, on which shall be placed my body, dressed in the red shirt. A handful of the ashes place near the coffins of my daughters, Rosa and Anita." The rest were to be blown away by the winds as seeds of liberty for other parts of the world.

Brazil's Only Ambassador.

The elevation of Brazil's representative at Washington to ambassadorial rank and the appointment of Don Joaquin Nabuco to that post jointly constitute an incident of much importance. Brazil has no other ambassador abroad. In the regard of that republic and its people the relations of the country with the United States overtop in consequence of other foreign connections. The selection of such a man as Senor Nabuco, who is a genuine leader in his own country—an orator and scholar, as well as statesman—to be the first ambassador to this country proves a disposition on the part of the Brazilians to seize and signalize the opportunity presented.

Queen Alexandra's Voice.

Queen Alexandra of England is, like most women, ill at ease on the rostrum. Her voice is low and sweet, with just the suspicion of foreign accent about it. There is almost pathetic note in its tones that lingers in the memory hauntingly. However, all her subjects loyally declare that she is a most charming speaker and that the foreign tinge is but an added charm to the voice.

The London City Council is likely to establish a system of automobile ambulances.

STOP, WOMAN!

AND CONSIDER THE ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers a great many years.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides a man does not understand—simply because he is a man

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me."

"Roasted" a Duke.

The Duke of Norfolk's dislike of pompousness has given rise to many stories. A school treat was being held in Arundel park, his splendid ancestral home, and the duke was crossing one of the lawns, when a teacher, unaware of the duke's identity, rushed across to him and shouted: "Come off the grass at once! It is the people like you whose behavior get parks shut to the public!" On another occasion, it is said, the duke went to a convent to preside over a gathering. The sister who opened the door thought the unobtrusive stranger was seeking assistance and gently told the duke there was nothing for him!

MOZLEY'S LEMON ELIXIR.

Is not a new and untried remedy. More than ½ of a Century attests its wonderful curative and health-giving properties, and serves to show that it has no equal as a cure for Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick-Headache, and all other ills arising from a TORPID LIVER.

Being strictly a vegetable compound, it has no harmful or even unpleasant effects. Its action is gentle but none the less thorough—cleansing the stomach and bowels of all impurities, and toning up the entire system to a healthy condition—leaving the person feeling good, because every organ is made to perform its part perfectly.

50C. AND $1.00 A BOTTLE. ALL DRUG STORES.

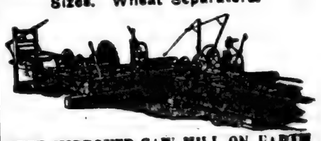
"One Dose Convinces."

Pollock-Stephens Institute.
Birmingham, Ala.
Select Day and Boarding School for Girls.
Opens Sept. 27th.
Catalogue on application. Address
Madame Catherine Deschamps Elford, Principal.

TULANE UNIVERSITY of LA.
NEW ORLEANS.
Full courses in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in Engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar Chemistry. Many scholarships in the academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,
THE REGISTRAR, Gibson Hall.
Am. 35, 1905.

Dyspepsia,
TRADE MARK.
SICK HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION
Promptly and Permanently Cured with
Crab Orchard Water
A century's experience with successful results is the best testimonial. Sold by all druggists.
Crab Orchard Water Co.,
LOUISVILLE, KY.

Avery & Company
SUCCESSORS TO
AVERY & McMILLAN,
51-53 South Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga.
—ALL KINDS OF—
MACHINERY
Reliable Frick Engines, Boilers, all Sizes. Wheat Separators.



BEST IMPROVED SAW MILL ON EARTH.
Large Engines and Boilers supplied promptly. Shingle Mills, Corn Mills, Circular Saws, Saw Teeth, Patent Dogs, Steam Governors, Full line Engines & Mill Supplies. Send for free Catalogue.

DYSPEPSIA
"Having taken your wonderful "Cascarets" for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to "Cascarets" for their wonderful composition. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year."
James McGune, 109 Mercer St., Jersey City, N. J.
Best for The Bowels
Cascarets
CANDY CATHARTIC
THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP
Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good, Do Good, Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.
Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y.
ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC
FOR WOMEN
troubled with ills peculiar to their sex, used as a douche is marvelously successful. Thoroughly cleanses, kills disease germs, stops discharges, heals inflammation and local soreness, cures leucorrhœa and nasal catarrh.
Paxtine is in powder form to be dissolved in pure water, and is far more cleansing, healing, germicidal and economical than liquid antiseptics for all
TOILET AND WOMEN'S SPECIAL USES.
For sale at druggists, 50 cents a box.
Trial Box and Book of Instructions Free.
THE R. PAXTON COMPANY BOSTON, MASS.

BEAUMONT COLLEGE
HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.
There is absolutely no other school for Women and Girls in the South, if anywhere, offering so extensive a curriculum; thus, the greatest benefits for the smallest outlay. Most approved modern improvements—Electric Lights, Hot Water heating, Complete outfit of Bath-rooms, etc., etc. Grounds of forty acres, by universal consensus, the most uniquely beautiful School Grounds in America. Offers to the ambitious thorough preparation for the great universities. Col. Th. Smith, A. M., Pres. (Alum. Univ. Va.)

Dropsy CURED
Gives Quick Relief.
Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

WANTED—Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not living with any tribe, (2) of men who were drafted in Kentucky, (3) of mothers of soldiers who have been denied pension on account of their 2nd marriage, (4) of men who served in the Federal army, or (5) the nearest kin of such soldiers or sailors, now deceased.
NATHAN BICKFORD, Attorney, Washington, D. C.

NEEDLES, SHUTTLES, REPAIRS. FOR ALL SEWING MACHINES. Standard Goods Only. Free Catalogue to Dealers. BLEDLOE MFG. CO., 913 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

BILIOUS BILIOUS BILIOUS
OXIDINE IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR BILIOUSNESS, MALARIA, CHILLS AND FEVERS
Made in Regular and Tasteless Forms. For sale by all Druggists.
Manufactured by PATTON-WORSHAM DRUG CO., DALLAS, TEX. AND MEMPHIS, TENN.
PRICE 50 CENTS.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed
To cure, or money refunded by your merchant, so why not try it? Price 50c.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Of General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Madman Played Havoc.

Girard, Ala.—With a piece of heavy piping in hand, secured by wrenching loose the water works fixtures in his cell, Gube Beard, a man of unsound mind, defied Marshal Perry, and it was some time before the officer could recapture his prisoner.

Beard made a desperate attempt to destroy the jail and came near wrecking the building. It required almost superhuman strength to twist loose the piece of water works pipe leading to the sink in his cell. The tops are very hard to untwist, even when a wrench is used, and great wonder was expressed at Beard's feat. He smashed the windows and everything else in his reach and was in a terrible rage when the officer went to the jail to give him breakfast. The marshal was warned not to enter the jail, as people on the outside had seen him smash the windows and heard his cries, and thought at first he was armed with an iron bar. Beard was finally persuaded to shut the door o. his cell, and when he did the door was locked from the outside by means of a lever.

He at once began to curse in a fearful manner, saying that he had been tricked and was separated from his "tools." When the officer entered the jail his attitude changed completely and he complained of feeling ill. He eats and sleeps but little, and his condition daily grows worse. It is supposed that he will be sent back to the Alabama insane asylum, where he was sent a few months ago, and from which institution he escaped.

Selma's Library Inspected.

Selma, Ala.—A committee composed of some of the most prominent citizens of Ensley visited Selma Friday morning to make an inspection of the Carnegie Library building in this city.

The inspection is being made for the purpose of examining the different library buildings so that they can adopt or recommend the plans of the building that they think will be best suited to their city for a public library. This is considered a wise step by many in this city who are interested in public libraries, and will no doubt result in Ensley securing a building that will be well suited for the purpose and one that will please the citizens of that city.

Recently Andrew Carnegie has answered a request from Ensley and has appropriated a certain sum for the building of a public library in that town. The committee of citizens who have the matter are now about ready to start to work on the construction of the building, but before doing so it was considered best to have a committee to inspect the different Carnegie library buildings before work was started, so that the inspection of the other buildings would help them in the selection of plans for the building that they would erect. The committee were shown over the Carnegie library building and their stay was made as pleasant as possible.

Cotton Suffers in Tuscaloosa.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The cotton crop throughout this section is suffering very materially from the unusual conditions of the weather. It is estimated that in this county the crop has deteriorated at least 15 per cent during the past thirty days and that the crop will be only 65 per cent as large as last year's. Thus far very little picking has been done, both because of insufficiency of labor and the very wet weather. There seems to be a disposition on the part of the farmers to hold what cotton has been picked, expecting to get better prices. The rains have made a wonderful improvement in the late corn crop, and there will doubtless be a very large harvest.

A Negro Tragedy.

Demopolis, Ala.—On Friday night about 8 o'clock a tragedy occurred on Franklin street across the railroad from the Lister Hotel, in which a negro named Glover was shot dead for beating a negro woman. T. P. Sampson, a printer for the Demopolis Printing Co., attempted to interfere when the brute made at him with his club. Sampson ran into the hotel to get a gun, and by that time a colored brakeman appeared on the scene and fired three shots at Glover, one of which passed through his stomach, from which death resulted instantly. It was all over before the officers could get to the scene, and upon learning the facts from the eye witnesses Chief of Police H. A. Monnier told the negro brakeman who did the shooting that he had done his duty and could go on with his train. The negro woman was carried to Dr. Goodloe's office, where her wounds were dressed. Her skull was crushed and both arms broken, and she will probably die.

Cutting Affray.

Troy, Ala.—News was received here Friday of a serious cutting affray in Josie beat, this county. Henry Reeves and Walter Townsend in a fight used knives on each other, and both were seriously caryed. It required twenty or more stitches to sew up the wounds inflicted upon Townsend and about a half dozen to sew up those of Reeves. The cause of the difficulty has not been learned.

Burglary Anticipated.

Mobile, Ala.—When A. J. Roh opened up his store, corner of Adams and Bayou streets, Friday morning he made a peculiar discovery. Hidden away beneath a counter he found a negro boy named Willie Curtis, alias Freeman. When asked how he happened to be there he said a negro man had sent him in the store Thursday night. He was told to hide until the store was closed and then to open a door for the man, so he could enter and rob the place. The boy said that after he hid away he went to sleep and forgot to wake up. A deputy sheriff was sent for and the boy taken to jail. Here he gave the name of Alphonse Ryan as the man who sent him into the store. Ryan was afterwards apprehended, and is also in jail.

Robbed by Negroes.

Huntsville, Ala.—J. T. Neil, a farmer who resides three miles from the city, was held up in his orchard Fridey afternoon by Jim Robertson and Mary Garth, a negro man and woman, and robbed of all the money in his pockets, amounting to about $45. The robbery was planned with deliberation, evidently, and was carried off without a hitch. Mr. Neil is quite an old man, and the combined attack of the man and woman was too much for him to fight against. The negroes had been discharged by Mr. Neil, and they returned to his place and found him alone working in his orchard.

Find Burglar in Room.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—On Friday morning the Misses Montgomery and a young lady visitor residing on Twenty-third avenue and Fourth street were awakened to find a man in the middle of their room trying to strike a match. One of the young women screamed, when the intruder disappeared through an open window through which he had entered the room. For some time watch was kept by young men who have rooms in the upper story. The burglar returned later to the window and was trying to enter, when the watchers in trying to catch him made too much noise and he escaped. He was pursued, but disappeared in the darkness.

Shot From Ambush.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—S. M. Black, one of the mos t substantial citizens of this county, was shot and very seriously wounded Friday night. From what can be learned it seems that Mr. Black was in his yard, when he saw a man loitering around his homestead and commanded him to holt. The man made no reply, when Mr. Black began shooting. The unknown man returned the fire, the ball entering Mr. Black's groin. The wound is of a very serious nature and may cause death. Deputy Sheriff Latham has gone to the scene to make a thorough search for the guilty party.

Hanged In Cell.

Cullman, Ala.—The first hanging that ever occurred in this city took place Saturday between the hours of 10:30 and 11 a. m., when Willian Lepsic took his own life in the county jail. About ten years ago he came to this county and settled near Hanceville, with a good and faithful wife that he brought from Hanover, Germany. They lived happily together for some years, but finally the grim reaper came around and claimed his first choice. Later on he wedded Mrs. Fred Grunt, a grass widow, and for nine months he has been unhappy.

Old Road Disappearing.

Oak Bowery, Ala.—The work of dismantling the old Lafayette Railway goes steadily on. The large crew of hands engaged in taking up the track passed here this week, and is now within seven miles of Opelika, where all the material is being delivered. The farmers along the line finally had the injunction withdrawn upon a compromise of $3,700 damages, which is to be paid when the road is entirely dismantled. There are numerous speculations in regard to the rebuilding of a new road upon the old grade, but nothing definite is known.

Fever Among Cattle.

Opelika, Ala.—Veterinary Surgeon M. F. Jackson announces that there is considerable Texas fever among the cattle and that within the past two months he has treated a large number. When treated in the early stages of the disease Dr. Jackson states that the number of fatalities is small. Symptoms of the disease are abrupt falling off in quantity of milk given, loss of appetite, the dropping of the ears and general restlessness, and lated high fever develops. If allowed to reach this stage the death rate is much larger.

Badly Wanted.

Mobile, Ala.—B. R. Slaughter is badly wanted at Bay Springs, Miss., for embezzlement of funds from section hands of the Mobile, Jackson and that place to the amount of $1,000. A reward of $200 has been offered for his apprehension.

Editor Johnson Dead.

Cullman, Ala.—Judge John A. Johnson, widely known as the oldest editor in the state of Alabama, died at his residence Thursday.

Havana, Cuba.—President Palma on Friday signed the bill passed by the house July 21 and by the senate August 12 for the liquidation of the remaining half of the revolutionary soldiers' pay.

YELLOW FEVER NEWS.

The Latest Reports From the Infected District.

New Orleans, La.—The fever situation at 6 p. m. Monday was as follows: New cases, 45; total cases to date, 1,787; deaths, 5; total deaths to date, 260; new foci, 18; total foci to date, 420; cases under treatment, 181.

The daily record shows a continued diminution in the number of cases. Monday is usually a very heavy day, the figures for the past three months being in the sixties, so today's record is a source of gratification, following upon the low record of Sunday. Of the deaths, one was a child in Algiers, and the others were down town. One is Sister Mary Engelhesta, of the convent of Perpetual Adoration, on Marais street, and her case was not reported until her death. It is the first from that institution, though there have been several cases in that neighborhood.

There was nothing startling in the news from the country. Acting on the request of the people of Natchez, Surgeon Guiteras will be sent there tomorrow by Dr. White. This morning Surgeon von Ezford left for Leeville, and Surgeon Guiteras made another trip to Patterson, to inaugurate a fumigation campaign under the new auspices prevailing there. The people of Lake Providence want to depopulate the town of negroes, owing to the prevalence of the fever among that element, and ask for tents to house them in on the outskirts.

Outside Reports.

Reports from the country tonight are:

Patterson—Six cases.

Eighth Ward of Jefferson Parish—One case.

Shrewsbury—One death.

Kennor—Four cases.

Hanson City—Two cases and one death.

Donaldsonville—One case.

This is a new development and is traced to Port Barrow across the bayou.

Port Barrow—One case.

St. Rose—Three cases.

Pecan Grove—One case.

Good Hope plantation—One death.

Waveland plantation, south of Patterson—Six cases.

Bellesein plantation (previously called DeLizen), west of Patterson—Four cases.

Gulfport reports one new case, and Mississippi City none.

Natchez makes no report of new cases, the people deciding to await the arrival of an expert before accepting the statement that there is yellow fever.

Escatawapa, Miss., near Moss Point, reports four cases.

Panic at Leeville.

Dr. Deveron, the physician of the state board in charge at Leeville, in the course of a report on the situation there says:

"I found things worse than Dr. Stark could have seen them a few days before. The people were in a panic. They had no medicine, no doctor, and they were dying from too much experimenting with different remedies which they thought might do. I find that more than half the population of 500 people are sick; they are distracted and many are on the verge of lunacy from fright and grief."

Confidence has been restored among them since Dr. Deveron's arrivel, and he now has two assistants, and half a dozen nurses, and the people of Thibodeaux have sent down a boat load of provisions.

Holt and Kohnke Clash.

Quite a controversy has developed between City Health Officer Kohnke and Dr. Joseph Holt, at one time president of the state board of health. Dr. Holt in the course of an address before a meeting, passed some severe strictures on the city health officer, who when he read the papers, wrote him asking if he had been correctly quoted. Dr. Holt made a rather warm reply, in the course of which he said:

"You are evidently trying a bluff game, but whether so or not, you can pop your whip and wade in, for I make to you neitner apology nor explanation."

To this Dr. Kohnke made response, in which he told him politely that he should have ascertained the correctness of his impressions before giving them public utterance.

Dr. Holt had several thousand copies of Dr. Kohnke's first letter and his own thereto struck off, and generally distributed in the city. Dr. Kohnke has written a letter to the public giving all correspondence and concludes with this statement:

"The heat of battle of this community against a common enemy affords the opportunity for the improper exhibition of personal antagonism and individual preference against which those who are busily engaged in serious work find little time to defend themselves. At the proper time it will be shown that the health officer acted promptly, properly and vigorously in the emergency presented. Until then fair-minded men will reserve their judgment."

Crowds Detained at Cairo.

Cairo, Ill.—Crowds of through passengers were detained Sunday at the central station because they were not supplied with permits and a guard was placed over them until they could be sent on their way. A number of arrests were made of persons who were trying to evade the quarantine officers. A lady arrived on a steamer from Memphis Sunday en route to Indianapolis. She had no permit and her train did not leave till in the morning. She was permitted to go to a hotel and was pledged to stay inside of the place until her train departed. Many similar cases were experienced.

The editor of the Paducah Register arrived from the north Saturday night without a permit. He was allowed to go to a hotel last night on condition he would leave the city Sunday morning. A car containing thirty people bound from Chicago to Paducah arrived late Saturday night, and their train was held for several hours. It is said they were abusive to the inspectors and were locked in the car by the guards until the train pulled out this morning.

Situation at Natchez.

Vicksburg. — Physicians of the Natchez board of health at noon Sunday examined and pronounced as yellow fever two patients, a white woman and a negro man. Examining further, five negroes convalescent from yellow fever were found in the northeast end of town, together with seventeen suspicious cases of sickness, thirteen of which are undoubtedly yellow fever. The infection is traced to a negro woman who came from New Orleans on uly 19th. Lake Providence, La., reports five new cases, making a total of fifteen.

Mississippi Will Not Quarantine.

Jackson.—No state quarantine will be established against Memphis. Governor Vardaman and Secretary Hunter, of the state board of health, have thoroughly satisfied themselves from a personal investigation that no yellow fever exists in that city, and a clear bill of health is given.

Decatur Quarantines.

Decatur, Ala.—Decatur has quarantined against Mississippi and Louisiana and against Tennessee on a straight line north of Corinth, Miss., on account of yellow fever. The quarantine went into effect at noon Sunday. No person from the sections named will be permitted to stop in Decatur without a health certificate.

Refugees Evade the Law.

St. Louis, Mo.—The constabulary of St. Louis, East St. Louis and St. Clair counties patrolled the Mississippi front Friday night in vain efforts to locate a steam launch bearing the name of Eva Alma, which passed the quarantine station without stopping Thursday night. The launch is believed to be the same one that kept towns along the river from Memphis to Cape Girardeau in a state of uneasiness, it being reported that the occupants were yellow fever refugees. It is reported from Jefferson barracks that United States soliders have captured the launch and the refugees were taken off and placed in quarantine.

Must Have Immigrants.

Birmingham, Ala.—Col. R. A. Mitchell, president of the Dwight Cotton Mills, of Alabama City, and vice-president of the Alabama State Immigration Society, said that the society was determined to have plenty of immigrants, and have them quickly, as the state was certainly very much in need of them. Some of the other organizations of the state, said Colonel Mitchell, whose object is to promote immigration, have displayed a feeling of hostility toward the society, as if the society were in some way working against them. This, said Mr. Mitchell, is an entirely erroneous idea, and the Alabama State Immigration Society will be glad to co-operate with these organizations in securing immigration and do all in their power to accomplish this end.

Nashville Open to Refugees.

Nashville, Tenn.—At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce Thursday there was a lengthy discussion held on the yellow fever situation, and it was decided to send out to the commercial bodies throughout the South a statement that this city was not and never had been closed against the inhabitants of infected cities.

King Edward is an omnivorous newspaper reader, and on many occasions has shown himself to be a good friend of the press. He keeps a number of albums for clippings.

Washington, D. C.—A report came from Detroit Saturday which makes an entirely new slate for cabinet reorganization. It brings a new name into discussion. This new story is to the effect that Trewin H. Newberry, a former mayor of that city, is to be made postmaster-general, and that he will assume the office when the present incumbent, Mr. Cortelyou, is promoted to the secretaryship of the treasury.

Troops May Go to Tracy City.

Nashville, Tenn.—Discussing the mining trouble at Tracy City, Governor Cox said Saturday night that the Third regiment, N. G. S. T., now in camp at Harriman, is under orders to be in readiness to start for the scene of trouble promptly upon receipt of instructions. It is understood that cars are being placed on the railroad sidings near the camp to await the troops.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

OLAF SCHIVE,
Watchmaker And Jeweler
Horn's Drug Store
Full assortment of Watches, Jewelry, etc. All repair work guaranteed.

BEATEN NATIONS SLOW PAY.

Modern Instances Where War Indemnities Were Demanded.

The paying of an indemnity is comparatively a new thing. Before the Napoleonic wars nations seldom fought but for the sake of conquest. The winning party took whatever it wanted in territory or in certain rights, but did not insist upon an indemnity.

During the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the map of Europe was changed frequently, but the amount of money paid in indemnities was very small. Napoleon conquered a large part of Europe, invented all kinds of wonderful kingdoms and provided kings by recruiting them from his own dear family. But that was the worst that befell those countries, and besides clothing and feeding Napoleon's soldiers and going without English goods the conquered countries did not suffer otherwise financially. Nowadays, as nations do not go to war to conquer territories, they have to be repaid in some other way, and as a rule the victors ask for full payment for their expenses.

The older way, however, was the safer one, for in many modern instances the conqueror does not get his money. It is extremely hard, you know, to get money out of a bankrupt State. In 1877, when Russia had beaten Turkey, she asked an indemnity of $160,000,000, the exact amount of the cost of the war. Today, in the year 1905, Russia has not yet received half of that sum. In 1896, when Turkey nearly conquered Greece, she began by asking $50,000,000. But King George's family kindly interposed and the amount was reduced to $10,000,000, but half of that sum has not been paid to date.

In 1866, when Prussia, to the great astonishment of most of the interested spectators, beat Austria and her five allies, she not only asked for the amount of money the war had cost her, but asked also for a few extra millions to punish Austria for the trouble she had given her. Although the war lasted only two months, Austria had to pay $32,500,000.

Indemnities have been paid in smaller wars in Asia. China has had to pay on many occasions, and does not seem to be any poorer for it. But the one enormous indemnity which is far ahead of any other ever demanded was the one France had to pay to Germany in 1871. And the wonder was that France, exhausted by a warfare almost entirely on her own territory, was able to pay the milliard francs in a few years. The indemnity was much more than the war actually cost the Germans, but let us not forget that Germany had to settle an old score. Napoleon probably had cost them just as much. A great amount of the French indemnity has not been used yet, and the purpose for which Bismarck used it principally was to develop the secret service of the German empire.—Washington Post.

How to Know Bugs.

At the seventeenth annual meeting of the Association of Economic Entomologists, held recently in Philadelphia, the society recommended the general adoption of a uniform nomenclature for certain insects, these names being the ones internationally current among scientists. These insects, among scientists. There inforth be known as follows:

American cockroach, Periplaneta americana L; bedbug, Klinophilos lectularia L; boll-weevil, Anthronomus grandis Boh; carpet moth, Tricophaga tapetzella L; gypsy-moth Porthetria dispar L; house-fly, Musca domestica L; San Jose scale, Aspidiotus perniciosus Comst; silkworm, Bombyx mori L; tomato-worm, Phlegethontius sexta Joh.

With these names in mind, it is claimed that any bug on the scientists' lists may be readily recognized.—Harper's Weekly.

Birmingham, Ala.—J. B. Griffin, the young man who was arrested, tried and convicted before Judge Feagin the other day on a charge or stealing for the purpose of getting food for his wife and baby, has been released, and has gone to work for the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company. Superintendent Griggs, of the Alabama Great Southern Railroad, as soon as the matter was brought to his attention declared that his company would no longer prosecute the charges.

Commercial Club OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacco and Cigars.
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOES

Thorsby Winery —Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST.

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wishart
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

, Alabama
s Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABL
information furnished to parti
who desire to locate in the So

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatesse

J. J. STANLEY
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE.

MRS. MARY R. RASBERRY
General Merchandise.

G. W. Freeman
SHOES, ETC.
Soda Fount, Cold Drinks, Tobacc
and Cigars.
Fine Line of Shoes.

W. N HORNSBY
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.
"MOLINE" Farming Implements and "FLORENCE" Wagons in stock at all times.
J. K. ORR SHOES

Thorsby Winery
—Co.—
Lofthus & Bromberg, Props

A. HORN
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.
LICENSED PHARMACIST.

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Mrs. M. E. Wishart
Millinery and Notions

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals.

A Langville & Son
BLACKSMITHS
and HORSESHOERS
Dealers in
WAGONS and BUGGIES

C. L. Forsman
Brick Yard.

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. III. CLANTON, ALA., SEPTEMBER 7 1905 NO. 24

E PEACE TREATY.

Historic Document Has Received Signatures of the Envoys

EMONY SHORT AND SIMPLE.

Sun Shone Brightly After Being Hidden for Three Days.

Portsmouth, N. H.—The peace ty was signed at 3:52 p. m. on esday. M. Witte was the first to t his signature.

Both Russian and Japanese mis- on their arrival at the navy were received at the entrance of building by Admiral Meade, while companies of marines command- by Major Moses rendered military ors.

Baron Komura, accompanied by Min- Takahira and Mr. Dennison, left 2:48 in an automobile for the navy d. They were greeted by the sts of the hotel gathered on the anda to witness their departure.

on Komura, pointing at the shining n, said, smilingly:

"It is a good omen for peace."

M. Witte, accompanied by Baron Rosen and Mr. Plancon, left the el for the navy yard at 2:30 o'clock. e rain which had been falling in rents for half an hour previous to time suddenly ceased and the n which had not been visible for ree days shone forth.

Text of the Treaty.

The peace treaty opens with a pre- ble reciting that his majesty, the peror and autocrat of all Russias, his majesty, the emperor of Jap- desiring to close the war now sub- ing between them and having ap- inted their respective plenipotentia- s and furnished them with full wers which were found to be in m, have come to an agreement a treaty of peace and arranged as lows:

Article 1—This article stipulates the reestablishment of peace and ndship between the sovereigns of two empires and between the jects of Russia and Japan respec- ly.

Article 2—His majesty, the emperor Russia, recognizes the preponderant erest from political, military and nomical points of view of Japan in empire of Korea and stipulates Russia will not oppose any meas- for its government, protection or trol that Japan will deem necessary ake in Korea in conjunction with Korean government, but Russian jects and Russian enterprises are enjoy the same status as the sub- ts and enterprises of other coun- es.

Article 3—It is mutually agreed the territory of Manchuria be multaneously evacuated by both Rus- and Japanese troops, both coun- es being concerned in this evacua- n, their situations being absolutely ntical. All rights acquired by pri- e persons and companies shall re- n intact.

Article 4—The rights purchased by ssia in conformity with the lease Russia of Port Arthur and Dalny, gether with the lands and waters jacent, shall pass over in their en- ety to Japan, but the properties and hts of Russian subjects are to be spected and respected.

Article 5—Russia and Japan engage mselves reciprocally not to put ob- acles to the general measures which shall be alike for all nations), China may take for the develop- nt of the commerce and industry of Manchuria.

Article 6—The Manchuria railway all be operated jointly between Rus- and Japan at Kouang-Tcheng-Tse. e two branch lines shall be em- oyed only for commercial and indus- l purposes. In view of Russia ning her branch line with all rights quired by her convention with China the construction of that railway, pan acquires the mines in connec- n with such branch line which falls er. However, the rights of pri- e parties or private enterprises are be respected. Both parties to this ty remain absolutely free to under- e what they deem fit on expropriat- ground.

Article 7—Russia and Japan engage mselves to make a conjunction of branch lines which they own at ang-Tcheng-Tse.

Article 8—It is agreed [illegible] of the Chinese railways with a view to [illegible] commercial traffic between [illegible] without obstruction.

Article 9—Russia cedes to Japan the southern part of Saghalin island as far north as the fiftieth degree of north latitude, together with the [illegible] depending thereon. The right of free navigation is assured in the bays of LaPerouse and Tartare.

Article 10—This article recites the situation of Russian subjects on the southern part of Sakhalin island and stipulates that Russian colonists there shall be free and shall have the right to remain without changing their nationality. Per contra, the Japanese government shall have the right to force Russian convicts to leave the territory which is ceded to her.

Article 11—Russia engages herself to make an agreement with Japan, giving to Japan subjects the right to fish in Russian territorial waters of the sea of Japan, the sea of Okhotsk and Behring sea.

Article 12—The two high contracting parties engage themselves to renew the commercial treaty existing between the two governments prior to the war in all its vigor, with slight modifications in details and with a most favored nation clause.

Article 13—Russia and Japan reciprocally engage to restitute their prisoners of war on paying the real cost of keeping the same, such claim for cost to be supported by documents.

Article 14.—This peace treaty shall be drawn up in two languages, French and English, the French text being evidence for the Russians and the English text for Japan. In case of difficulty of interpretation the French document to be final evidence.

Article 15—The ratification of this treaty shall be countersigned by the sovereigns of the two states within fifty days after its signature. The French and American embassies shall be intermediaries between the Japanese and Russian governments to announce by telegraph the ratification of the treaty.

Two additional articles are agreed to as follows:

Article 1—The evacuation of Manchuria by both armies shall be complete within eighteen months from the signing of the treaty, beginning with the retirement of troops of the first line. At the expiration of the eighteen months the two parties will only be able to leave guards for the railway, fifteen soldiers per kilometre.

Article 2—The boundary which limits the parts owned respectively by Russia and Japan in the Sakhalin island shall be definitely marked off on the spot by a special limitographic commission.

Car Thief Caught.

New Orleans, La.—Officer Ackerman, of Boylan's force, discovered a negro in the act of emerging through a broken window of a caboose of the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad, which was standing on the tracks of the company at the corner of Press and Robertson streets. The negro had a sack on his shoulder and the officer gave chase, when the negro dropped the sack and escaped. In the sack were eight brass journals, valued at $25, which had been stolen from inside the car, the negro having broken open the window and entered. A description of the thief was furnished the police, who are now earnestly seeking him.

Tracing Taylor's Thefts.

New Orleans, La.—The publication in the Picayune Friday morning of the picture of the negro thief, Taylor, who was arrested by Detectives Dartonio and Holyland last week, may probably lead to other charges being made against the accused. Friday forenoon Joseph Calderoni, proprietor of a grocery store at the corner of Teche and Newton streets, in Algiers, accompanied by a neighbor named Gastano Domino, called at the detectives' office and stated that from the picture they identified Taylor as a negro who about a month ago was seen around the store, acting in a very suspicious manner. The following night Caldernori's store was burglarized and robbed, and he feels confident that Taylor had something to do with the robbery.

New Orleans, La.—After an absence of nine days Detectives Stubbs and Kenner, who went after Walter E. Coleman, one of the men accused of robbing box cars of the Illinois Central Railway, returned to the city Friday at 11 a. m. with their prisoner.

Saw Battle of Waterloo.

A Belgian woman, Mme. Rolland, of Senuffe, attained her 104th birthday on June 12. She is credited in Belgium with being the only surviving witness of the battle of Waterloo, having been seated on a wall in the neighborhood of the battlefield during a part of the engagement. Last year, when the French monument to Waterloo heroes was unveiled on the battlefield, Mme. Rolland was allotted a place of honor as the most noteworthy spectator present at the ceremony.

Under a new law Illinois, during the next two years, will spend $50,000 in building good roads to serve as samples of what is desirable in that respect.

THE CANAL ISSUE.

Consulting Board Meets to Discuss Level or Lock Plan.

FINAL ACTION WITH CONGRESS.

Experts Will Report to Commission, Which Will Lay the Matter Before President Roosevelt.

Washington, D. C.—Eminent engineers of America and Europe met Friday upon the call of President Roosevelt to investigate and make recommendations as to the type of canal that is to connect the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. by the executive order made last June, a board of consulting engineers was constituted, consisting of Gen. George W. Davis, Alfred Noble, William Barclay Parsons, William H. Burr, Gen. Henry L. Abbott, Frederick P. Searns, Joseph Ripley, Isham Randolph, all American engineers; Henry Hunter, named by the British government; Herr Eugene Tincauser, named by the German government; M. Guerard, named by the French government; M. Quellenec, consulting engineer Suez canal, and J. W. Weicker, named by the government of the Netherlands. It is this board which was appointed to assemble Friday at the offices of the isthmian canal commission. The members were met by Chairman Shonts, who in a few words appropriate to the occasion expressed the belief that good results would follow their deliberations.

Only a Recommendation.

The board of consulting engineers had referred to it all the data that had been collected by the commission bearing upon the subject of a type of canal. This data may be sufficient for the board to determine whether the canal should be constructed with locks or should be a sea-level canal, and if the former should be recommended then details as to the character of locks will be taken under discussion. The recommendations of the consulting engineers was not final, but was made to the isthmian canal commission, which in turn will use its own judgment in a report and recommendations to the president. The final conclusion as to the type of canal will be settled by the president and congress. In calling the board of consulting engineers together the president directed that in case there was a difference of opinion among members of the board there should be minority reports. It was also stated that the board might visit the isthmus before making its final report if it should be deemed necessary.

The board of consulting engineers did not have referred to it detailed questions of engineering connected with the construction of the canal after the type that has been determined. Beyond making recommendations as to the type of canal, whether locks or sea level, together with suggestions as to the method of constructing the lock canal, its duty as defined and understood by the commission ceased.

Shonts the Whole Thing.

The executive work of the isthmian canal commission was much simplified by the retirement of Mr. Wallace as chief engineer. Previous to that time the duties of the commission as an executive body were distributed between Chairman Shonts, Chief Engineer Wallace and Governor Magoon, Chairman Shonts having a general supervision of the work of the other commissioners. Wallace was a member of the commission, but when John F. Stevens was made his successor as chief engineer he was not made a member of the commission, but was employed by Chairman Shonts, and the engineering and construction work is under the direction instead of general supervision of Chairman Shonts. Chief Engineer Stevens, unlike Mr. Wallace is not a member of the executive board of the commission. While the engineering work of the commission will be under the immediate supervision of Chief Stevens, he will be assisted by a committee of engineering consisting of Generals Haines and Ernst, Admiral Endicott and Major Harrod, who are also members of the commission.

Such problems of a technical character as Chief Stevens desired to be worked out and upon such subjects as he desired advice were submitted to the committee of engineers. The problems which will be submitted to the engineering committee will not be numerous until after the type of canal has been determined, although it was expected that the board which met Friday would avail itself of the experience and advice of the engineering committee on account of the connection which the latter had with the canal since the United States government took hold of the enterprise.

A New Battleship.

Quincy, Mass.—The new 16,000-ton battleship Vermont, built for the United States government by the Fore River Ship uilding Company, was successfully launched. The battleship Vermont is one of the largest and most powerful ships of war that has been constructed for the United States navy. She is of 16,000 tons burden, with a length of 450 feet and extreme breadth of 76 10-12ths feet. She will be required to steam eighteen knots an hour for four consecutive hours.

Muscat Dispute Ended.

New York.—Announcement that the Muscat dispute between Great Britain and France had been settled was made Thursday by the secretary of Chief Justice Fuller, of the supreme court of the United States, who has recently been at The Hague as a member of the permanent international council in adjudication upon this matter. Justice Fuller arrived here on the steamer Oceanic.

The dispute relates to the right of certain traders to fly the French flags in the Persian gulf, upon which Muscat is situated. Details of the settlement were not made public.

day one o fthe speakers described the peasant agitation in the province of Saratoff and Samara, saying that there were tens of thousnds of men supplied with arms and that an enormous peasant movement was being organized for the autumn. A force of Cossacks and infantry has been sent to Terijoki.

Tidings After Nine Years.

New York.—There has been a strange sequel to the mysterious kidnaping nine years ago of pretty Rosie Cohen, an East Side girl. The girl's mother lives in Orchard street, and was surprised Thursday by the visit of an unknown man, who called the mother to the door and after telling her he knew the present whereabouts of her daughter thrust a recent photograph of the girl into her hands, and with the remark, "She's changed her name and it's no use for you to try to find her," disappeared.

In the winter of 1896 the girl, nearly 5 years old, was playing in the street in front of her home, when a man was seen to creep up, placed his hand over the child's mouth, caught her up in his arms and fled. The police worked on the case for a long time without success. The mother was heart-broken and gave up hope of ever knowing her child's fate.

When the man visited Mrs. Cohen she pleaded with him for knowledge of the girl's whereabouts, but he refused.

"She would not be happy here," he said; "she's doing all right and has forgotten you. She has changed her name. Now, just forget her and don't try to find her. It won't do you any good."

The police were at once notified and are inclined to believe the man, having found the mother, intends demanding a ransome.

American Money for Russia.

New York.—American bankers are now prepared to float a great Russian loan, and it is now stated that as a matter of fact financiers in this city have had the terms of a Russian loan in mind for five months past and the Russian government has known that upon the conclusion of peace it could raise money here.

Hitherto the foreign bankers have taken the first step in raising money for the combatants and American bankers were asked to associate themselves with the foreign houses. But the American firms will this time, it is understood in financial circles, ask London, Berlin and Paris to take part in the new loan.

The exact size of the new loan is, of course, not known, but some estimates place the figures at $100,000,000.

It was believed abroad that another Japanese loan would be floated here, and as in the case of Russia's borrowing, local bankers will for the first time take the initiative. No estimate of the amount is given.

Spread of Cholera.

Berlin.—The spread of cholera from two localities on the river Wetchsel five days ago to twenty-nine cases in twelve localities extending from the Baltic to the river Warthe, 150 miles south, and its appearance in Hamburg has given an unpleasant thrill to the people of Germany, for it may mean a long and steady, as in 1882-93, to prevent the disease from getting beyond control. In those years it is estimated that 800,000 persons died in Prussia from cholera.

New Flowing Well.

Beaumont, Tex.—The Higgins paraffine well No. 5, in the West Liberty field, seven miles northwest of Dayton, midway between Beaumont and Houston, has come in a flowing well, with a capacity of 1,500 barrels a day. The bringing in of this well marks the opening of a new field in Texas, with a product of lighter gravity than the old oil districts. Increased impetus has been given to prospecting in that district. Oil quotations unchanged.

COTTON REPORT

Department of Agriculture Gives Out Monthly Estimate

MARKET WEAKENS RAPIDLY.

Sensational Decline Follows, Although Average is Almost 3 Points Under Last Month.

Washington, D. C.—The monthly cotton report of the Department of Agriculture issued at noon Tuesday is as follows:

The crop estimating board of the bureau of statistics of the Department of Agriculture finds from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the bureau that the average condition of cotton on August 25 was 72.1, as compared with 74.9 on July 25, 1905; 84.1 on August 25, 1904; 81.2 on August 25, 1903, and a ten-year average of 73.0.

The following table shows the condition of the cotton crop by states:

States.	Aug. 25 1905.	Ten Year Average.
Texas	70	66
Georgia	77	76
Alabama	70	73
Mississippi	69	76
South Carolina	75	76
Arkansas	72	74
Louisiana	62	75
North Carolina	76	79
Indian Territory	80	77
Tennessee	81	78
Oklahoma	82	73
Florida	77	79
Missouri	86	80
Virginia	76	84
United States	72.1	73

Sensational Decline in Cotton Market.

New York.—A sensational decline in the prices of cotton futures followed the publication of the government monthly cotton report Tuesday. The report showed the average condition of the crop to be 72.1 per cent. Prior to the report the market had been very nervous, but generally firm, and just before the report was issued prices were about 10 to 13 points net higher, with October 10.80, December 10.89, and January 10.95. Within fifteen minutes after its publication October was down to 10.35, December to 10.40 and January to 10.50, or a break of nearly half a cent and a net decline as compared with last Friday of 31 and 36 points.

LATEST FEVER NEWS.

New Orleans, La.—The fever situation at 6 p. m. Tuesday was as follows: New cases, 32; total cases to date, 2,111; deaths, 2; total deaths, 294; cases under treatment, 330; cases discharged, 1,487.

The comparatively light report of Tuesday compared with the large list of new cases Monday lends further color to the deduction of Tuesday that the arrest of one physician on a charge of failing to report three cases has had a good effect.

The Country Cases.

Lake Providence and Tallulah, in the northeastern part of the State, each have twenty cases.

Other country reports are:

Patterson—Eleven new cases, two deaths.

Kenner—Two cases, one death.

Hanson City—Eight cases.

Jefferson Parish—Estelle plantation, three cases; Woods plantation, three cases.

St. Charles Parish—St. Rose, one case, two deaths; Pecan Grove, one death.

St. Bernard Parish—Terre Aux Boeuf, two cases; Verret, one case; near slaughter house, five cases.

Physicians Resent Imputation.

The depression which Monday's unexpected leap in new cases caused gave way to a feeling of intense satisfaction today when there was renewed evidence that yellow fever here is almost completely under control.

Caruthers is Dead.

Atlanta, Ga.—Atlanta's only yellow fever case resulted fatally shortly after noon on Tuesday. The patient, J. C. Caruthers, who arrived from Pensacola last Friday and who was sent to the detention hospital, several miles from the city, died after an attack of yellow fever of a pronounced type.

No other cases have reached here and none is expected with the vigorous precautions that have been taken to exclude even suspicious cases from outside points.

In the army of the Haitien republic chairs are provided for the use of sentries when on duty.

Professional Cards.

Attorneys.

William M. Adams,
Attorney-at-Law,
CLANTON.
Office, Adams Place. Practices in all Courts. Long time loans negotiated on Improved Farm Lands.

A. C. Smith. J. O. Middleton.
Smith & Middleton,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Practice in All Courts.
Office 6th St., Opposite Court House
CLANTON.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON
Office at
Clanton Drug Store CLANTON

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
Office Hours 8 to 12 a. m.
1 to 5 p. m.
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

In addition to our Complete Stock of DRUGS Etc.
You will find a full line of
SCHOOL BOOKS, STATIONERY, ETC. SEEDS.
PAINTS OILS and GLASS.
CLANTON DRUG COMPANY

NOTICE!

To all Whom it May Concern:

I have bought the W. E. Thomas gin and grist mill, and will grind every Friday and will do my best to give perfect satisfaction. I will have two gins with 110 saws and two presses. I will soon move and will take my jack over there, so as to give my patrons a chance to raise good mules. Thanking all for past favors, I will do my best to merit your business in the future.

Respectfully,
tf. T. A. DRIVER.
Jemison Route 2.

WANTED!

A live agent in every beat in Chilton county to write life insurance for the Mutual Benefit Association of Georgia. Cheapest insurance on earth. Good pay to hustlers. Write

W. R. Jackson,
Division Agent,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

LOST!

Dun Cow 10 years old and red heifer calf 1 year old. Cow is marked crop off each ear, underbit off right. Liberal reward given for return or informaion to

D. T. MELTON
tf. Verbena, R. F. D. No. 1.

Love and Lightning

Love built a cottage of delight
Where summer blooms were bright'ning,
But, flash on flash came lightning bright
And so love fled the lightning!

(Well! Well!—
How sad to tell!
But love will not with lightning dwell.)

He passed from all the singing rills
To misty heights—I wonder;
But—earthquake thunder shook the hills,
And so love fled the thunder!

(Well! Well!—
How sad to tell!
But love will not with thunder dwell.)

Then love in deserts made his home
Where not a voice reproved him;
Birds fed him fruits and honeycomb,
And even the lions loved him!

(Well! Well!—
How strange to tell!—
That love should with the lions dwell.)
—Atlanta Constitution.

THE BELLRINGER'S HEROISM

BY W. D HORNADAY

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Jose stood at the window of the bell-ringer's loft of the great cathedral and looked down into the city to the adobe building that marked the spot where lived the one he loved. His thoughts were not altogether pleasant as he viewed the magnificent panorama that was spread out before him. He remembered the incidents of the previous night at his meeting with Anita on the Alameda. How vividly he recalled the conversation that set his brain afire with the possibility of losing her. Could she have meant it when she told him that he was not brave? Did she love Enrique, the commandant of the Rurales? If not, why had she taunted him last night when he urged her to marry him? Had she not told him that it is only the brave who are deserving of the fair, and when he had charged her with being in love with a soldier, had she not confessed that Capitan Enrique Bosalez had played bear under her window for many nights?

"Do you love him?" Jose had asked.

The only answer was a shrug of the pretty shoulders of his adored one. The hot Latin blood surged through the veins of Jose. Dark thoughts filled his mind. Then came a calmness. He remembered that he was connected with the clergy. To be sure he did not wear the vestments and say the prayers of the good padres whom he served, but he regarded himself as belonging to their class. Was not he the bell-ringer in the great cathedral? Had not his father and his father's father been bell-ringers before him? He would not bring disgrace upon his sacred calling by committing a rash deed. He would give up Anita to the brave commandant. Did she love the capitan? That was the question that Jose wished he could answer to his own satisfaction. He could hardly believe that Anita would trifle with any one's affections. She was doubtless honest in her belief that her love was for Capitan Enrique and not for poor Jose, the bell-ringer.

Jose had left her the night previous with doubt in his mind as to her love for him. It was now early morning and the chimes of the bells were still echoing in the distance when Jose leaned out of the window of the bell-ringer's loft and breathed deep draughts of the fresh morning air that blew in from the mountains. Did he long to be brave that he might come up to the standard of Anita's thoughts of Capitan Enrique? No such thought was in Jose's mind. He did not belong to the recognized class of the brave. That was left to the soldiers. He looked down into the street below and watched the women as they left their homes and hurried silently along and entered the worship room of the great edifice to attend early mass. He knew that Anita would be among them. Many, many mornings had he stood at this same window and watched his loved one as she left her home and wended her way to the cathedral to offer up her daily prayer. Perhaps it was not altogether right and proper, but many love signs had passed between them as she passed along the street below. On this morning there was such a soreness in his heart that he thought only to get a glimpse of her and then he would go back to his task of sounding the chimes over the city. The first rays of the rising sun were just beginning to glint over the mountains and reflect themselves upon the scattered clouds that hung above their tops when Jose saw Anita leave her home and walk towards the place of worship. He welcomed the smiling nod of recognition that she gave to him, her upturned face being to Jose the very light of his existence. Could he give her up? She passed into the portals of the cathedral. Over at the military barracks the reveille was being sounded. Perhaps Capitan Enrique would be waiting to receive from Anita a word of love as she entered her home upon her return from her devotions. Dressed in his bright-colored uniform, was it any wonder that Anita lost her heart to the brave commandant, mused Jose.

Looked down into the city.

Suddenly, there was a creaking and crackling sound overhead. The sight that met Jose's eyes when he looked up chilled his heart. The heavy cross piece which had held upright the great bell for these many long years had given way to the ravages of time and wood worms and had broken square in its center. The bell, with its enormous weight, was sagged and swaying and threatening to drop at any moment. In its downward plunge it would land in the very front of the chancel. Its fall would mean the death of probably several worshipers, particularly at that hour. Jose's first thought was to give the alarm. To do this he must reach the ground before the bell could fall. There was but one way down, and that was by the ladder that followed the narrow opening directly underneath the great bell. Without a moment's hesitation Jose sprang for the ladder and went down it with the agility of one long experienced in such descents. The safety of the worshipers depended upon his quickness. He had no thought of the danger that threatened his own life. He reached the stairway that led into the large worshiping room when there was a terrific crash above him.

"You are my brave Jose."

"The great bell has fallen," he cried. "Fly for your lives."

His words of warning caused the worshipers to rush pellmell from the place, and a moment later, with a crash that shook the old structure, the bell with its enormous weight tore through the narrow opening, bringing down stone and timbers with it and filling the room with dust.

Friendly hands removed the debris from the stunned and torn body of Jose. Anita, dry-eyed and perfectly composed, was at his side giving directions for his care. Taps were being sounded at the military barracks hours later when Jose recovered consciousness. He looked about him in a dazed way. A soft hand stole into his and a voice spoke in accents low and sweet:

"You are my brave Jose."

Perpetrated by Lawson.

Thomas W. Lawson was once visited in his Boston office by a young woman who came laden with all sorts of college diplomas and gilt edge references. It so happened that Mr. Lawson needed a temporary secretary, and engaged her on the spot. When, later in the day, the young lady handed Mr. Lawson a number of letters that he had dictated, they were chiefly remarkable for their hideous orthography. He called the girl's attention to her blunders, whereupon she replied with a giggle:

"Really, now, I think I must have been bewitched."

"Quite so," said Mr. Lawson; "some fairy must have cast a bad spell over you."—Success.

Judges Display Wisdom.

The judges at a Nevada (Mo.) baby show gave every child a prize. As the mothers of the babies were all there, they didn't care to do otherwise.

NO JOKE TO BE A GIANT.

Things of Comfort for Ordinary Men Are Uncomfortable for Him.

George Auger, the giant from Cardiff, Wales, is a freak who will testify to the drawbacks of the life he leads. In his own words, "It's no joke to be a giant." Auger is only 23 years of age, yet he has attained a height of 7 feet 8 inches and a weight of 320 pounds. His great size is a constant trouble to him.

When he stops for the night at a hotel it is necessary for the management to see that three beds are placed side by side in his room, so that when he retires he may be able to rest by stretching his huge frame across them. All doors are too low for him and unless he constantly has in mind the fact that he must bend before he enters a room he receives a stinging blow as a reminder and his headgear suffers considerable damage. It is said that he spoils three hats every month in this way.

Then, too, his bulk is so unwieldy that he can not ride in a cab with any degree of comfort, and is forced to patronize the trolley. He is obliged, however, to remain on the platform, because it is so difficult for him to squeeze through the door. He has to be careful about what chairs and sofas he sits upon, for fear they will give away beneath his weight.

All of Mr. Auger's clothes must be made to order. His gloves must be No. 15 and made large enough to cover hands measuring ten inches from wrists to finger tips and five inches across.—Leslie's Weekly.

The Bachelor's Hard Lot.

It is hard to be a bachelor in America. The President abuses you in a few well-chosen words. The women of the country hold a congress and debate upon you. Even the Senate joins in the fray. Senator Beveridge, through the medium of a Philadelphia paper, has been telling the bachelor what he thinks of him. President Roosevelt chastised the unhappy man with whips, but the Senator takes to scorpions. "You are nobody," says he, genially, "if you are merely an individual. Both Nature and society have use for you only as one of a pair. If your arm is not strong enough to protect a wife, and your shoulders not broad enough to carry aloft your children in a sort of grand gladness, you are really not worth while." This doubtless is so. And yet the fathers whom one occasionaly meets in the street carrying aloft their children do not seem to be feeling a very grand gladness. That probably is their mistake. When Presidents and Senators puff matrimony like this, we realize how much valuable exhortation we lose by making a bachelor our Premier.—London Telegraph.

A Maid of Honor In Fact.

The late Lady Bloomfield was a maid of honor and published a book of reminiscences relating some very intimate incidents of her years at court. The result, the London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian tells, was that the queen forbade her ladies to keep dairies while they were in waiting, and from that rule grew one of the neatest repartees that the heart of the profesional diarist could desire. A young lady who had just been appointed a maid of honor was receiving congratulations at a party, and her host said: "What an interesting journal you can keep!" The girl told him that journal keeping was forbidden, and the answer was: "But I think I should keep one all the same." "Then," said the girl, "whatever you were you would not be a maid of honor."

Infant Monstrosities.

The so-called "man-boys" are characterized by extraordinary development in infancy. In respect to mere physical growth history gives us many instances of rapid development. We read in the "Natural History" of Pliny that Euthimedes had a son who grew to four and one-half feet in three years.

Phlegon says that Craterus, the brother of King Antigorus, was an infant, a young man, a matured man, an old man and married and a father before he was 8 years old. It is also recorded that King Louis II. of Hungary was born so long before his time that he had no skin, was crowned in his second year, reigned in his tenth year, had a full beard in his fourteenth year, married in his fifteenth year, was gray at 18 and died at 20.—New York Sun.

In the Old Counthry.

Rushes that grow by the black water,
When will I see ye more?
When will the sorrowful heart forget ye,
Land of the green, green shore?
When will the field and the small cabin
See us more
In the old counthry?

What is to me all the gold yonder?
Her that bore me is gone;
Knees that dandled and hands that blessed me
Colder than any stone.
Stranger to me than the face of strangers
Are my own
In the old counthry.

Vein o my heart, from the lone mountain,
The smoke of the turf will die!
And the stream that sang to the young childer
Run down alone from the sky;
On the doorstone, grass—and the cloud creepin'
Where they lie
In the old counthry.
—Westminster Gazette.

Visits Alaskan Tribes.

Accompanied only by Indian guides and interpreters, Dr. George B. Gordon, curator of the section of American archaeology and general ethnology of the Free Museum of Science and Art of the University of Pennsylvania, will spend the summer among the wild tribes of unexplored Alaska. Dr. Gordon, who is to travel more than 6,000 miles, is being sent out by the department of archaeology to bring back specimens for the museum.

EVIL OF PRESENT DAY.

Mental Faculties Greatly Disturbed by Noise.

"Noise, in my judgment, is one of the most powerful and most successful disorganizers of the mental faculties in the world," said a thoughtful citizen to a representative of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and when we reflect on the enormous increase in noises of all kinds, we will probably be convinced that the time is rapidly coming when the race will be in no small danger mentally on account of noise. Progress is noisy; necessarily so, I suppose. But when I speak of progress of the noisy type, I, of course, mean material progress. We can't build, in a material sense, without making noise. Intellectual progress even is not always along quiet lines. But I was thinking of noise in a lighter aspect. Have you not noticed how some men become mentally reckless on account of loud talking? Have you not noticed that children will sometimes shriek themselves into a highly nervous state? They become mentally disorganized on account of the noise they make. I was a rather close observer of a man at a game of baseball the other day. He started to yelling gently and gradually worked his way up to the altitude of the shrieking rooter. Before that game ended that fellow was as mad as a March hare. He had been crazed by his own voice. Noise is a dreadful distractor, when you come to think of it, and the trouble about the noisy 'rooter' at a ball game is that in driving himself to the madhouse he is likely to take a few other fellows with him."

DOG DEALER'S HARD LUCK.

Pup He Thought Worthless Turned Out First Class.

I am an unscrupulous dog dealer. I had for sale a very fine Irish terrier His mother cost me $500 and his sire cost $750. I thought their get, my pup, now a year old, worth $200, and so advertised him.

I was incensed by an offer of $10 over the 'phone.

Party never saw the dog, and said any good ratter would do him (this I had claimed for mine); he did not care for pedigree, breeding or cost of parent dogs.

A bright idea struck me. I knew a curley haired alley dog I could get for 25 cents. I told the fellow I would accept the $10 offer. He asked me to meet him at depot with the dog. He was going home on a suburban train. I met him with the curly-haired alley dog, on which, by the way, I had an option, but at 50 cents, not 25 cents, as I expected. My customer sneered when he saw the dog, but handed me a $10 note.

I smiled when I thought of my joke. Next week I received a postal card from my customer that read: "Your dog is the best ratter I ever saw. He caught forty-two rats the first two days. He is worth all you advertised him at, $200. I would not sell him for $300.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Kentucky Yarn.

Out on the veranda of a little Kentucky hotel several "colonels" were sipping mint julip and telling yarns about the weather.

"When Ah was up in thaw mountains, sah," said a lanky old gentleman, "it began to rain one aftahnoon and before thaw shower was ovah thaw was fish all ovah thaw ground. Bass, trout and carp fell right out of the clouds, sah."

The old gentleman who was rather corpulent placed his glass on the table and said:

"Cunnel, that thah was a pretty good yahn, but it don't tech thaw experience I had fohty miles south of Frankfort. Why, sah, it began to rain thah one day and fish came down by thaw ton. But that isn't thaw strangest of it. A thundah stohm arose, th' lightnin' struck thaw field, fried thaw fish just as nice as if they were fried in youah own kitchen an'—"

But the other "colonels" fled.

Prof. Wiener and the Peasant.

Prof. Wiener of Harvard university tells a story illustrating the non-talkative disposition of the Russian peasant. While traveling recently in Russia he found himself for a whole day in the company of a peasant.

"Where did you come from?" asked the peasant by way of greeting.

"From America," replied the professor.

Toward evening, when the journey was nearly completed, the peasant asked: "And where are you going?"

The professor replied: "To Moscow."

These two bits of information were about as much as the peasant's brain could hold.

Forbidden Guest.

The following verse from a recent poem on "Our Christmas Guests" discloses a delicate little hint:

Come from that darkened corner! You're the imp who in my ear
For thirty years has whispered, with feverish lips of fear,
That the thing to get was money, the stuff that men most prize;
Don't think I'm longer blinded by the glamor of your lies.
For you're a mighty liar, and the thing to keep is health,
And it has a value greater than all your boasted wealth;
And another one is honor, and some more are truth and right;
I can hardly bear your presence amongst my guests to-night.

Prizes for Inventors.

Among the prizes offered by the Paris Academy of Science to inventors is one of $20,000, founded by Pierre Guzmann, which is to go to the person who finds a way of communicating with the inhabitants of another planet. Another prize—the Breant—awaits anyone who discovers an infallible remedy against Asiatic cholera.

Written Appeal to Rat

Over on the west side of the city a long row of old fashioned dwellings has been torn down this spring to make way for some modern business buildings. While they were being demolished the contractor in charge was approached one day by a workman, who handed him a soiled and worn envelope which had been found among the brick and plaster.

The faded inscription, "Mr. Gray Rat," prompted the contractor to read the letter. It ran:

"Dear Mr. Rat: Although we realize that our house is greatly honored by your presence and that of your exceedingly numerous and sprightly family, we feel that it is selfish of us to expect to have a monopoly of your society, and we would humbly suggest that you vacate our premises and select as your abode the residence of our neighbor, number 127, which we are sure you will find a pleasant and profitable place. With most sincere assurances of our deep esteem, believe us, most respectfully yours,
"THE SMITH FAMILY."

The laborer was puzzled, but the contractor, after struggling with his dim boyhood recollections, was able to explain it. There is, or rather there used to be, a sort of tradition that the tenant of a rat infested house were to write a note to the rats couched in terms of extreme politeness, requesting them to go elsewhere and post it in a rat hole, the rats will oblige.

The contractor remembered when back in his childhood days in a country town writing just such a note politely asking a rat family to transfer their attentions to a neighbor who had been vindictive, and firmly believing, on their temporarily disappearing, that it was the note that did it.

The contractor took the letter home to show his small boy that letters to Santa Claus were not the only epistles, and that there were other places besides chimneys which could serve as mail boxes.—New York Sun.

Human Neck Easily Broken

